Cruelty To Animals Will Be Prevented

STRONG LOCAL SOCIETY ORGANIZED FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS AND BEASTS—STIRRING APPEAL OF MONTREAL LADY—REPORTS OF CRUELTY WILL BE INVESTIGATED.

The Belleville branch of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been established upon a permanent basis and all interested in the care and protection of animals should enroll themselves in the society and help along the good work. A nominal membership fee of fifty cents per year has been fixed and all citizens are eligible for membership. Cases of cruelty to animals reported to Inspector T. D. Ruston or Chief of Police Newton will be promptly investigated and action taken. The officers of the Belleville branch are as follows:

President—His Honor Judge Wills.
Secretary—Mr. W. H. Nugent.
Treasurer—Miss Ruby Milburn.
Chairman of Executive—Mr. Wm. Carnew.

The activities of the society will be extended to the district adjoining Belleville and branches established.

A Montreal lady, writing to the Star of that city upon the work of the society, makes the following strong appeal:

"A great deal has been said of late years about our humanity, our civilization, our British love of fair play, but, do we always practice what we preach? "Charity begins at home." So does humanity. We are, all of us, painfully familiar (or is it indifferently familiar?) with the sight of the silent, patient misery of worn-out and crippled horses, toiling day after day, year after year, over-worked and under-fed, their faithful services rewarded only by blows and ill-treatment. Is this a sample of our boasted civilization; our idea of fair play and justice?

"The instances of cruelty to animals on our streets are so frequent and apparent no one can fail to see, but very few of us realize the full extent of animal suffering. We do not see the deep sores and bruises hidden beneath collar and saddle the lacerated mouths and torn lips of the horse driven by a merciless and ignorant driver whose only idea of driving consists of a never-ending pulling, tugging, twisting and jerking of the steel bit in the horse's sensitive mouth.

"We little realize the needless cruelty inflicted upon cattle and poultry in shipping, the suffering from overcrowding, from hunger and thirst and injury in transit.

"Few of us have any idea of the number of stray waifs of the animal world thrown out on the streets by owners who have grown tired of their "pets." But most of us have seen the look of hopeless anguish, of desperate anxiety in the eyes of a lost dog, alone in a hurrying city, friendless and terrified—and we have wished we could help. It is cases such as these the S. P. C. A. works for; it is cases such as these that need our help, yours and mine.

"The city of Boston has twenty S.P.C.A. inspectors, while Montreal, a city of about the same population, has but six. None of us can pass by and say, "It is not my business." The protection of the birds and beasts in our care and daily service is a duty none of us can shirk,—or should want to shirk."

A great deal of literature of an instructive nature is issued by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, including the following:

"How to Kill Animals Humanely."
"The Cat, its Care in Health and Disease."
"About Poor Puss."
"Old Rhymes and New."
"Bird Boxes and How to Make Them."
"The Dog, Hints on its Care.'

Income Tax Returns Extended For Another Month

GREATER TIME NEEDED TO MAKE RETURNS—MANY LIABLE TO TAX ABSENT FROM COUNTRY—RETURNS MUST BE MADE BY MAY 31.

OTTAWA, May 1—Orders have been sent out from the Finance Department extending the time for filling income tax returns for the whole Dominion to May 31. Mr. R. W. Breadner, Commissioner of Taxation, told your correspondent tonight that this action had been taken on account of the fact that a number of persons liable to the tax are absent from the country and because greater time is needed to secure returns from Great Britain, Holland and other European countries.

"It was impossible for many firms with head offices overseas and branch offices in Canada, to file returns and therefore the extension of time has been granted. All the data required to fill out the papers could not be obtained on this side of the ocean. Many insurance, mortgage and financial companies were in this situation. The act gave the Minister power to extend the time if found necessary, but if the returns are not in by May 31, Mr. Breadner says that the penalties clause will be rigidly enforced.

"How have Canadians in Canada acted with respect to the filing of returns this year?" he was asked.

"I must say that the Canadian people as a whole, have filed their returns exceedingly well this year," answered Mr. Breadner. "This measure has not been taken for them, but because of the absentees as I explained."

Great Mineral Prospects In Manitoba

WINNIPEG, May 1.—Within the next five years the development of the mining country of Northern Manitoba will be of such a nature that it will have become the greatest mining district in Canada, said J. E. Hammel, of Toronto, one of the original owners of the Flin Flon copper mine. Work to cost one quarter million dollars will be done on the Flin Flon property this year, he said, and will be spent in sinking two shafts to a 500 foot level in order to find out the physical character of the ore, a proceeding that must take place before mining on a larger scale is commenced. Mr. Hammell said that before a return on the money invested in the mine could be gained, ten million dollars would have to be spent in development work, including the erection of a smelting plant. The mine was recently sold to a syndicate representing English, Canadian and American capital and Mr. Hammell is satisfied that there will be no hold up on this score. Mr. Hammell stated that he was practically certain that the company would be able to guarantee an output of at least 2,000 tons if not 5,000 tons of ore blister copper per day to take effect three years from now. This guarantee would be forwarded to the Provincial Government which was under obligation to construct a railroad 80 miles in length into the mining district to handle the output, which will cost approximately $2,700,000 to be handed over when completed to the National Railways for operation.

LONDON, May 1.—Italian Premier in a memorandum to Lloyd George detailed Italy's economic needs especially for corn and asked Great Britain for a credit loan of twenty-five millions sterling to purchase goods in England. Russian Reds Occupy Baku

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, May 1.—Russian Bolsheviki occupied Baku, an important port on the western coast of the Caspian Sea and the centre of a very important oil field on April 28, it was officially announced this morning.

CLEANSING PORTS OF THE RADICALS

LONDON, April 30—Quietly and unostentatiously the Government is cleansing London and other big English ports of radical elements. There is as yet nothing of the nature of a general round-up in the movement, but numerous arrests are made daily, most of the prisoners being Russians who are deported in batches of twenty or so whenever steamboat accommodation is available.

A veritable panic has consequently seized the foreign denizens of London's East Side who are scattering to less wide-awake cities in order to avoid the slow-moving but inexorable sweep of the Government's dragnet.

The Stephnew Borough Council today protested formally against the "wholesale deportations of inoffensive alien Jews," but the Home Office replies that ten per cent. of the deportees are undesirable because of their criminal records, while the remainder are "conventionists," who during the war elected to return to Russia rather than serve in the British amy. Five hundred of these it is averred, quietly returned, but the Home Secretary declared that inasmuch as they did not consider England worth fighting for they cannot be permitted to reside in the United Kingdom.

The police net is also taking in many suspected Bolsheviki, as well as alien profiteers.

Attack Sir Adam and Power Commission

Shortage of Power the Subject of Manufacturers Complaint at the Annual Meeting

TORONTO, May 1.—Sir Adam Beck, the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario and the city were the subject of vigorous attacks at the meetings of the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Toronto branch at their meetings at the King Edward Hotel. The former were assailed on account of the shortage of power and alleged violation of contracts and the city on account of the propsal to tax manufacturers' dividends and the "crushing taxation" now imposed.

It was the first annual meeting of the former association, born on October 6th, 1919. Mr. J. R. Shaw, Woodstock, vice-president presided at the meeting and following his address the election of officers took place when Mr. Shaw was elected chairman and Mr. W. C. Coulter vice-chairman.

The report of the secretary, Mr. H. Macdonald said that three new branches were organized during the past year, one each at Niagara Falls, Peterboro and Brantford, making five branches, with a total membership of 1,241 of whom 910 were in Toronto.

USED REVOLVER TO DEFEND HIS WIFE

Parry Sound, April 30.—The trial of Irvine McArthur of Toronto, on a charge of shooting Edward Gollinger in the leg at South Magnetawan, on March 1st, took place here this week before District Judge F. R. Powell, under the Speedy Trials Act.

McArthur, whose home is in Toronto, owns a summer residence at Magnetawan, and Alonzo and Edward Gollinger are employed as sectionmen on the Canadian National Railway. There has been bad blood between the two families for some time, McArthur and his sister having made complaints against the Gollinger brothers to various persons and officials, which led to trouble.

On the day of the shooting McArthur and the Gollinger brothers had an altercation on the railway, and according to the evidence of the defence McArthur was severely beaten. McArthur's wife and sister saw the assault and rushed to his assistance, Mrs. McArthur taking a .38-calibre revolver with her, which she gave to her husband. It was alleged both women were being roughly handled by the brothers when the shot was fired, it is alleged, in self-defence by McArthur, who was in a dazed condition and fearful that his wife and sister would be seriously injured.

The case was tried by the District Judge without a jury, and he seemed to be satisfied that the Gollingers were the aggressors and wholly to blame for the fracas. The verdict was an acquittal for McArthur, who was given the benefit of the defence that he used the gun to defend his wife, who was being beaten.

Mr. W. L. Haight, Crown Attorney, who prosecuted for the Crown, asked for a stated case as to the question chiefly as to the matter of the justification McArthur had for using the gun. The application was deferred for decision. Mr. O'Donnell of Toronto defended the accused.

DEATH OF WELL-KNOWN GRAND TRUNK OFFICIAL

The death occurred on Wednesday of Mr. J. E. Duval, general superintendent of car services, Grand Trunk Railway. News of his death will come as a surprise to a wide circle of friends in the railroad and general commercial field, as it followed a very brief illness.

Mr. Duval, who was sixty years of age, entered transportation service in 1884 at Coteau Landing, Que., as agent and operator on the Canada Atlantic Railway—now part of the Grand Trunk. In 1902 he left the service of the Canada Atlantic to take up the position of chief inspector with the Board of Railway Commissioners. In 1906 he organized the Canadian Car Demurrage Bureau, and was manager of that bureau until 1913, when he was appointed general superintendent of car services, Grand Trunk Railway System. In February, 1917, he was appointed to the position of general superintendent of transportation, Grand Trunk Railway System, and on this office being abolished in 1919 on the re-organization of the Grand Trunk operating department, he again assumed the title of general superintendent of car services.

Mr. Duval's duties brought him into close touch with the leaders in the commercial field and he enjoyed a wide popularity. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Miss Gladys Duval and two sons, Mr. Maurice Duval, of New York, and Mr. Edwin Duval, of Montreal.

Land Where Noah's Ark Rested Reported In Throes of Revolt

LONDON, May 1.—A revolution has occurred in the Republic of Azerbaidjan and the old Musavat party Government has been overthrown, says a wireless despatch received from Moscow. The despatch adds that power is now in the hands of the Azerbaidjan Provisional Military Revolutionary Committee, and that Baku appears to be in its hands. The despatch says the committee has appealed to Moscow for assistance against the Allies.

Azerbaidjan, lying in the extreme north-western portion of Persia, and including a part of Armenia, has an area of about 40,000 square miles. It is inhabited by Persians, Armenians, Tartar-Turks, Kurds and Arabs. The country is mountainous, but in its valleys, wheat, maize, rye, cotton, hemp and tobacco are grown. It was reckoned one of the most productive regions of Persia. Tabriz and Urumiah are among its chief cities. Mount Ararat, 17,000 feet above sea level, and on which Noah's Ark is reputed to have landed, is the highest peak in Azerbaidjan.

Carranza May Have To Flee From Mexico

REBELLION GATHERING STRENGTH AND SPREADING OVER MEXICO — INFORMATION REACHES WASHINGTON THAT PRESIDENT CARRANZA IS PREPARING TO LEAVE MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, May 1—Information, regarded as of the most reliable character, has been received in Washington to the effect that President Carranza is preparing to flee from Mexico.

The Government was so much impressed with this intelligence that it is understood to have sent instructions to Federal agents along the border to closely watch for the appearance of Carranza.

Would Get Asylum

The information reaching here indicated that Carranza might leave Mexico by way either of Vera Cruz or the American border. That it has a sound basis is not doubted.

What would be the course of the United States should Carranza seek to cross the international boundary into this country or arrive on a ship at an American port is not known. The supposition is that he would be given asylum.

Revolution Spreads

The advices concerning Carranza's reported plans for flight, taken in connection with other information reaching Washington, indicates that the revolutionary movement which began in the State of Sonora, has become widespread and is likely to become successful. Every day brings news of some fresh revolt against Carranza's authority.

Chihuahau City, one of the largest cities in Northern Mexico, with a population of 40,000 is now in the hands of the revolutionists.

STRIKING GAMBLERS ASK FOR HIGHER WAGES

Agua, Prieta, Mexico, April 30.—One of this city's largest industries has been closed by a strike, and the public is clamoring that the trouble be ended without delay. The strikers are the dealers in the various gambling houses—the men who turn the roulette wheels, the men who preside at the crap games, the men who deal monte and the men who deal at the stud-poker and the faro games. They have been receiving $10 a day but this morning decided they could not live on that wage and demanded a raise to $15 a day, with the privilege of "eating out of the drawer." When their demands were refused, they struck.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

"THE MIRACLE MAN"

Tonight will be the last chance for Belleville people to the see "The Miracle Man" at Griffin's, George M. Cohan's Broadway success of the same name, based upon the famous story by Frank L. Packard is the basis for the fascinating theme which the picture unfolds. Besides being an absorbing entertainment of the highest order it is a drama with an amazing soul—beautiful, thrilling and intensely appealing. Larry Semon in a new comedy titled "the Head Waiter," a beautiful Outing Chester reel, and the British Canadian News Graphic are also being shown on the same program.

J WARREN KERRIGAN AT PALACE

In his new photoplay, "Prisoners of the Pines" J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen at the Palace tonight. Kerrigan is seen as Hillaire Latour a light-hearted, care-free young fellow who has spent his life in the woods as a trapper. But one day he saw a lumberman who had a huge gold watch chain that fascinated the simple-minded Hillaire, who forthwith made up his mind that if he ever was to own a chain of similar value he would have to forswear his familiar occupation and adopt that of a lumberjack. Even his lowly start as a "Swamper" does not discourage Hillaire. He brings to everything he does a buoyancy of spirit and a perpetual cheerfulness that makes him a favorite with his rough fellows of the lumber camp and it is only when he has finished his season's work and emerges from the towering pines with his pay check in his pocket, ready to return to his beloved and impatient Rosalie, that he starts to learn that the mere capacity to earn money is as nothing when compared with the art of keeping it because Hillaire falls a victim to the human wolves that inhabit the nearby towns and his dream of seeing his Rosalie is ruthlessly shattered when he wakes up and discovers that he has been robbed of his every cent. It is then that the sturdy character of the young fellow manifests itself and he sets his grim jaws and starts out to earn another pay check. "Prisoners of the Pines" abounds with thrills and screen sensations one startling situation following a precedent one with lightning-like rapidity. Three other reels embracing comedy Topical and Travelogue are also being shown on the same program.

FAMOUS ENGLISH MELODRAMA

A thrilling shipwreck and rescue by means of the breeches buoy forms the climax of Maurice Tournier's new production, "The Life Line" which will be shown at Griffin's this Monday and Tuesday. It was adapted from George Sims' famous melodrama of the sea. "The Life Line" is said to provide a smashing story in Mr. Tournier's well known masterful style. The stage play was first produced in London more than twenty years ago, but like another of Mr. Sim's works "Lights O' London," it is still fresh in the memory of theatregoers. The story centres around Jack Hearne, the Romany Rye, young, romantic leader of a gypsy band, who is really the heir to Cragsnest, a fine old English estate now being occupied falsely by his half-brother, Phillip Royston. How Jack, with the aid of some characters of the London underworld, regains his inheritance and wins the love of his faithful Ruth forms the theme of the picture. A brilliant hunt in which scores of lords and ladies take part, a thrilling rescue from a burning theatre, and the final episode of the saving of Ruth from a ship being beaten to pieces on the rocks in a storm are the high spots of the picture. "The Life Line" is said to provise gripping entertainment and to be interpreted by a fine cast including Seena Owen, Jack Holt, Pauline Stark Tully Marshal, Lewis Cody and Wallace Berry.

"Fatty" Arbuckle appears on the same program in a funny two reel comedy, "Back Stage." Gaumont World Wide News and other plays of merit will also be shown on the same program.

BARRIER OF BLOOD

Sessue Hayakawa, one of the real masters of screen characterizations, is seen to admirable advantage in his latest photodrama, "The Man Beneath." Dr. Chindi Ashutor (Hayakawa) was a high-caste Hindu with centuries of orienta lthought behind him. Kate Erskine a bonnie Scotch lass with generations of hardy ancestors as her forbears. The Hindu loves Kate, while the Scotch girl had to admit to herself that she reciprocated, that love recognized neither caste, creed nor race. Around this theme revolves a story of black-hand intrigue oriental mysticism and exciting dramatic situations which hold the spectator in suspense to the final scene. The Japanese star does some convincing acting in his quiet, masterly way, a manner that is too rare among screen actors. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a new comedy "The Rajah. The closing chapter of the "Fatal Fortune" serial featuring Helen Holmes and other varied attractions of interest are also announced for exhibition on the same program.

STAGE VERSION OF GLAD PLAY

There is enormous local interest in the "Pollyanna" engagement at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday, May 5th. matinee and night. Eleanor H. Porter's popular "Pollyanna" stories have brought gladness to hundreds of thousands over the world. The comedy based upon them by Catherine Chishlom Cushing not only preserves their quaint incidents and their radiant optimism that teaches the true joy of living but it also visualizes the glad girl herself to the delight of the multitudes who have read about her. Probably no character of fiction in many years has so firmly gripped the affections of the people, young and old, as Pollyanna Whittier. This lovely young apostle of gladness, who is all the more adorable because she is unconscious that she is conveying a message, is depicted in her lonely orphanage and happy radiant young womanhood. There is so much sorrow in the world's affairs just now that the joyous optimism of this glad-hearted play is hailed with morbidity, Pollyanna Producing Co. brings here an excellent company. The favorite characters of the "Pollyanna" stories are depicted by Lolita Westman, who plays the title role, and will be supported by Pacie Ripple, Wallace Robberts, Earla Elverson, Audrey Wood, Wm. Daly, Augusta Durgeon, Peter W. Macguire and others.

The advance sale everywhere has been enormous and is very significant of the universal growth of the "Pollyanna glad sipirt.

MRS. ANNAS H. ABRAHAM

A worthy tribute was yesterday paid to the late Mrs. Annas H. Abraham, by citizens generally who gathered in large numbers to pay their last token of respect to the departed. The body was conveyed from the family residence on Elmer street to Holloway Street Methodist Church where the pastor Rev. A.H. Foster conducted an impressive service and in his remarks spoke eulogistically of the departed and the devoted Christian life she led. Four generations of the deceased were represented at the funeral. During the service, Miss S. Walton rendered an appropriate solo, the accompaniment being played by Miss W. Pearce, organist. The choir assisted in the service. At Belleville cemetery the interment took place. The bearers were grandsons of the deceased, namely, Charles A. Ostrom, Warren Brown, Gordon Brown, George, Roy and Harold Ketcheson. The following floral tributes were mute expressions of sympathy:

Flowers—Pillow — "Mother" from family.

Wreath—"Grandma" grandchildren

Wreath—D. M. Waters, Mrs. Rankin and Jessie.

Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ostrom Mrs. C. H. Vermilyea, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ostrom and Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Sinclair.

LIEUT. H. E. MATTHEWS

The remains of Lieut. H. E. Matthews, B. Sc., M. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Matthews of Trenton, whose death was announced last week, as taking place at Wassillia, Alaska, arrived in Trenton on Tuesday, April 27th and the funeral took place from the residence of the parents on Wednesday afternoon. Interment was made in Lakeport cemetery near Colborne Rev. Cranston, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church officiated at the home and grave. Trent Lodge A.F. & A.M. of which deceased was a member had charge of the funeral and the solemn Masonic burial service was performed by the large number of the fraternity, who were present in full regalia. Trenton G. W. V. A. also attended in a body to pay their last respects to a comrade in arms during the war and as a worthy Canadian citizen during life. Some forty motors were in the funeral procession. The large number present at the funeral and the many beautiful and costly floral emblems of love and respect showed conclusively the high place the deceased held in the estimation of his fellow citizens. The pall-bearers were Messrs H. E. McClung, W. B. McClung, O. Alyea, J. Kenny, W. W. Miller, C. Wilkins.

Mr. A. Tarrance, representing the S. C. R., Kingston, was at the funeral in behalf of the Militia Department.

A Desire To Eat What You Want

How Stomach Can Be Restored to a Vigorous, Healthy Condition

Not to be limited in diet, but to eat whatever he pleases is the dream of every dyspeptic. No one can honestly promise to restore any stomach to this happy condition, because all people cannot eat the same things with equally satisfactory results. It is literally true that "what is one man's food is another man's poison." But it is possible to so tone up the digestive organs that a pleasing diet may be selected from articles of food that cause no discomfort.

When the stomach lacks tone there is no quicker way to restore it than to build up the blood. Good digestion without rich, red blood is impossible and Dr. Williams Pink Pills offer the very best way to build up and enrich the blood. For this reason these pills are especially good in stomach trouble attended by thin blood, and in attacks of nervous dyspepsia. Proof of the value of Dr. Williams Pink Pills in even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble is given by Mrs. S. Merrison, Varney, Ont. who says:—"I shall always feel indebted to a friend who mtatgfoPuai , rfiosforro fHMq . 'D advised me to use Dr. Williams Pink Pills, I had been a sufferer for upwards of twelve years with stomach trouble which resulted in a general weakness of the whole system. My meals always caused me great discomfort, and at times I would go hungry rather than undergo the suffering which followed meals. I was constantly taking something or other recommended for the trouble, but without finding a cure, and often the trouble kept me in bed when I should have been about doing my housework. My friend, who had had a similar attack came to see me and urged me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills which had cured her. I got a supply at once and began taking them, and soon found relief. By the time I had used eight boxes, I was again enjoying the best of health, and with a good appetite and a stomach restored to normal. Had I known of this medicine earlier it would have saved me years of suffering, and I urge any who may be in a similar condition to try these pills at once."

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIFE CONVICTS GUESTS AT A SING SING DINNER

Ossing, N. Y., April 30—Seventeen life sentences in Sing Sing Prison were guests at a dinner in the residence of Warden Lewis Lawes, given by William Perry, who was released today after serving 15 years of a life term. Perry's sentence was recently commuted by Governor Smith after the prisoner's politeness while serving in the warden's house had attracted the attention of the Governor's military secretary, who investigated the case and interceded in his behalf. The prisoners were permitted to cross the road from the prison to the warden's residence after they had given their word of honor not to attempt to escape.

GROWING DEAF WITH HEAD NOISES? TRY THIS

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catrrhal Deafness of if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears, go to your druggist and get 1ounce of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 teaspoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils open, breathing becomes easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with Catarrhal Deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE

The Trent Valley Baseball League met at St. Lawrence Hall, Madoc, recently and delegates from Deloro, Tweed, Havelock, Sulphide, Madoc and Belleville were present.

After much discussion the league decided to affiliate with the O.A.B.A. in the intermediate series, which will give the winners or the team which the league may choose to represent them the right to play off in the semi-finals for the intermediate championship of Ontario. Mr. Ward Patterson, of Peterboro, was present in the interests of the O.A.B.A. He stated that the Ontario Association has at present a membership of over 6,000 while this year the association has application for admittance from 24 different leagues.

The following officers were elected:

President—S. E. Wright, Deloro.

1st vice president—Wm. Cross, Madoc.

2nd Vice-President—F. Lancaster, Havelock.

Sec.-Treasurer—Harry Soanes, of Tweed.

Executive—The officers and one representative from Sulphide, G. H. Cotton; Belleville, R. Colling, and Deloro, R. A. Elliott.

The league used the C. O. league book and followed out their constitution in nearly every case. The handsome trophy presented by the present president was won by Tweed last year and should be an incentive to each team competing during the coming season for them to get the winner's laurels.

WIN FOR QUEEN ALEXANDRA

The second round of the public school baseball league (including the Academy) was played Friday evening Ann Street school and Queen Mary of West Belleville met on the latter's grounds in a very fast and exciting game of ball. The brand of ball served up speaks well for Belleville's senior teams of the future. Queen Alexandra has a splendidly balanced team of heavy hitters and with the battery, "Chuck" Jeffrey and R. Merriman, working as they are now, will be a very strong contender for the cup. "Bases" Weir of Queen Mary pitched well, but his team lacked the ability to bunch their hits off the Jeffrey twisters. Ann street won by the score of 9 to 3, and will meet St. Michael's Academy next Friday.

Y.M.C.A. BOWLING

The final Bowling game of the regular schedule on Friday night proved to be a win for the Bowlers by the excellent score of 2165 to 1891 for the Ritchie Company. The Ritchie team put up a good score in their first string but dropped badly in the next two, while the Bowlers, with a fair score in the first string put up two excellent scores and came out with a very wide margin their favor. The Bowlers have a postponed game with the Steel Company to be played Saturday night and should they bowl as well as they did Friday night, they will win their section over the G.T.R. Office who at present look like winners with a grand total of 8125.

MAPLE SUGAR MAKING.

Art Learned From the Indians by Early Settlers.

The making of maple sugar and syrup has become but a memory in the recollection of residents in many of the older parts of Canada where even the woodlots have given up their places to cultivated fields. The industry is still, however, an important one over large areas in Quebec, and to a less extent in Ontario and the provinces down by the sea.

Sugar making from the maple, which is confined entirely to this continent, had a very early beginning. Before the advent of the white man the Indian had learned to extract and concentrate the sap of the maple tree. On the approach of spring the trees were gashed with the tomahawk in a slanting direction and beneath the opening made was inserted a wooden chip or spout to direct the fluid drop by drop into the receptacle resting on the ground. The sap was caught in a birch dish and boiled in earthen kettles. The small quantity of dark, thick syrup this made, was the only sugar available to the Indians, and is stated by early writers to have been highly prized.

The early settlers from the Old Land learned from the Indians the art of sugar making, and indeed followed for many years their crude methods of manufacture. Even yet primitive equipment and methods are stated to be used in back sections of the country that turn out their annual crop of dark, inferior syrup and sugar.

For perhaps a century the white man followed very closely the primitive methods of the Indians, save the substitution of iron or copper kettles for vessels of clay or bark. In the early days before the timber acquired much value the axe continued to be used for tapping the trees, the sap was caught in wooden troughs and conveyed in buckets on the shoulders with a sap yoke to a central point to be boiled. No sugar bush was fully equipped without snowshoes, which were frequently found necessary in gathering the sap. The boiling was done in large iron kettles suspended from a pole in the open woods in a sheltered location with no protection from the sun, rain or snow or the ashes, falling leaves, moss and bits of bark that were driven about by the wind.

The maple products made by this crude method were strong in flavor, dark in color and variable in quality.

Until about fifty years ago there was little improvement made in the methods of sugar makers; but since that time the advance has kept pace with that in other branches of agriculture until it has become a more or less highly organized commercial industry.

An early improvement was the substitution of the auger for the axe in tapping, coopered buckets took the place of the birch bark "caso" or hewn sap trough, while the kettle gave way to the exaporating pan, which has, in latter years, developed into the modern evaporator with corrugated bottom and separate compartments. Not alone for the conservation of the life of the tree, but also for the cleanliness in sugar making, the wooden spout has almost disappeared in the most advanced sections, in fact the tendency now is toward the use of metal in every article of equipment with which the sap, syrup or sugar comes in contact. Furthermore, the increasing cost of labor is being met by the ingenious inventor, who has provided facilities for taking full advantage of the law of gravitation in handling the fluid, which in a well-equipped plant flows of its own accord from the collecting tank to the storage vat, from thence to the evaporator and, when boiled to a proper consistency, into the receiving can. Indeed where the profile of the sugar orchard will permit of it, pipe lines are laid to conduct the sap from outlying collecting centres to the camps where evaporation takes place.

With all the advance that has taken place in manipulation, sugar making has not lost its romantic side. "Sugaring off" at the sugar camps in the woods is still looked forward to by young and old, who regard the event as a social feature affording rare enjoyment. The tramp to the woods on a spring day, the aroma of the escaping steam, the partaking from a wooden paddle by means of a chip-like scoop, the hot syrup just on the verge of solidifying into sugar, or the tasting of the "wax" that has been allowed to harden on the clean snow, all serve to inspire the reminiscent story-teller and to awaken the amorous instincts of the budding youths. Such was the sugaring off of decades ago, and such it is to-day, where sugar orchards are operated for from two to four weeks in the spring in certain sections year after year.—J. B. Spencer in Canadian Forestry Journal.

Tribute to Our Fliers.

"Out of a population of eight millions no less than 11,000, or one in 800 of the population, took part in Britain's great war in the air. In Canada the people have played a very large part in obtaining supremacy for the Empire. No country of its population provided so many pilots."

This tribute to the remarkable record in aviation that Canada achieved during the war was made by Mr. Frederick Handley Page, inventor of the celebrated Handley Page bombing machine, during an address to the Canadian Club in Toronto. Mr. Handley Page foresees great possibilities for commercial aviation in Canada, owing to the large number of trained pilots available and through the possession of the natural resources essential for airplane manufacture. He stated that commercial aviation in England had been accepted as practical and highly satisfactory, pointing out that not a single accident had occurred in 83,000 miles of aerial travel, during which 4,200 passengers and 49,000 pounds of freight had been carried.

The Roman signal for battle was the unfurling of a red flag. The white flag is a token of peace in every part of the world.

TUXIS BOYS AND TRAIL RANGERS BY Firelighter

C S E T

WHAT SHALL A BOY READ?

Every Tuxis Boy or Trail Ranger has at some time asked himself this question. He has had a quiet afternoon or evening and has been looking around for something to read. Of course, there are some boys who scarcely ever read anything, but they are the exception today.

What a boy reads is a very important part of his life and every C.S.E.T. boy should ask himself what he is going to read the next chance he has.

In the Juvenile Court of Ottawa last month two boys were brought before the Judge on the charge of stealing and house-breaking. These boys had been before the Court a number of times before and all attempts to change their ways of life had failed. They will probably be sent to the Industrial School as a result of their last offences. The cause of their downfall was the reading of cheap novels of a vicious kind. The wild stories in the books made such an impression on them that in time they tried to carry out some of the ideas of which they read.

An amusing thing happened in Toronto a few weeks ago. Five boys were brought before the magistrate for throwing snow balls at a street car full of people. This, of course, was a rather thoughtless way to spend spare time. The magistrate began to question the boys to see how much they knew about the world in which they lived. He asked "Where is St. Petersburg?" "In the United States." "Where is Cairo?" "In Brazil." "Who was King Edward's Father?" "King Alexander." "What Was Sir Wilfred Laurier?" "King's Adviser in London.' The magistrate before letting the boys go on suspended sentence said: "A very serious crime has been committed against you boys by your not getting an education in this country where it is given free.

Did you get the full meaning of what the judge said? The boys had been arrested for an offence against society, but the judge said: "A very serious crime has been committed against you boys," by society!

Read! Read! What shall I read? Turn to this column next week and I will give you some suggestions as to good reading for boys.

—Firelighter.

WAVE OF VICE SWEEPING OVER WORLD

Hamilton, May 1—His Lordship Bishop Clark sounded a deep note of warning when, in his address to the 34th annual meeting of the diocesan board of the W. A. to the M.S.C.C. of the Church of England, he alluded to the "great wave of vice and crime which is sweeping over the country and world today." His Lordship said: "I believe that the cause of this can be traced directly back to the homes. I do not think that parents are taking the same interest in their children as they used to do. Where are family prayers nowadays? Who ever hears of scripture reading in the home? Those great words 'wife' and 'home' and 'mother' are losing their meaning." Another reason was that the laity had to go outside the church for fellowship. Members of the congregation did not fulfil their duties to their fellow-members, and there were too many sets and cliques. His lordship said that he himself had come across a case in this diocese where a young couple had come to a parish and had not received one visit from any member of the congregation of the church in two years. Another woman had to find her friends by joining a bridge club because she had found none in the church.

The Best Medicine For Little Ones

Thousands of mothers state positively that Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine they know of for little ones. Their experience has taught them that the Tablets always do just what is claimed for them and that they can be given with perfect safety to children of all ages. Concerning them Mrs. Joseph Therrien, St. Gabriel de Brandon, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I know of for little ones. I thought I would lose my baby before trying the Tablets but they soon made him healthy and happy and now I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams MedMicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TRAVELLING CLINICS

Plans are rapidly assuming shape for the actual application of the provincial health programme of the Nova Scotia Red Cross Society, the chief features of which will be the institution of two travelling clinics which will tour the province during July and August for the purpose of carrying the gospel of good health into the most remote districts of Nova Scotia.

These clinics are to be organized on a semi-military basis and will carry with them trained specialists with operating room outfit and complete equipment for removing tonsils and adenoids and the correction of other medical defects found in school children in the remote districts of the province; a dentist and chair and outfit for cleansing and putting in hygenic condition the mouths of school children unable to get such service; a tuberculosis specialist, who will co-operate with the family doctor in helping to determine the diagnosis where the local physician seeks advice; an eye specialist to give advice or to fit and prescribe lenses where they may be advisable; a nursing corps, to assist the doctors in their operative procedures, some training to go into the homes of the tuberculosis to establish such sanitary reforms as may be required; some of the doctors and nurses to be trained in health teaching.

ROUND ROBIN OF M.P.P.'S.

Members of the Ontario Legislature have presented Premier Drury with a "round-robin" demanding more money for their services. The sessional indemnity, now $1400, should be boosted to $2500, according to the demand of the M.P.P.'s, which shows that the value of their public services, according to their own appraisal, is $1100 more than their pay checks register. Premier Drury's example of cutting down his own salary, apparently, has not had the effect anticipated. While there is no doubt that the M.P.P.'s feel that they need the money, it is questionable if Ontario needs so many M.P.P.'s. Boss Drury should lay off a few, get the chores finished up, and go home for a spell.

CATHOLIC WELFARE WORK.

Following up and extending their welfare work for the service man during the war, the Knights of Columbus are now engaged in a broad educational program, which a writer in America, a Catholic weekly, considers the greatest Catholic welfare work at present under way. The organization has set out to fill "the need for free supplementary schools which men and women can enter unhampered by arbitrary requirements," and is "preaching the gospel of increased usefulness, and providing the tools for applying its lessons." The Knights have about fifty schools in operation in larger cities. In Boston alone three thousand men are being trained for better jobs and being schooled in the fundamentals, and the total enrolment is nearing the 200,000 mark. There are five hundred scholarships open to all, and "Kellys and Kapliskis rub shoulders in classrooms, precisely as they did in the K. of C. huts overseas and at home." It was while the organization was doing welfare work in France that it first gave its attention to the problem presented by the service man returning empty-handed without a job. It was realized that there were tens of thousands of young men who would come back handicapped by a lack of mental equipment for the strenuous competition confronting them, but endowed with the tremendous ambition born of their experience. At first the work was confined to ex-service men, but it has since been broadened to take in women and civilians, the latter paying a small fee. The war is over, and—

> "This movement is essentially a peace movement. The curriculum is designed to meet the needs of peace problems. Vocational and civil-service training are the long suits, and if there is anything military about the system, it is merely in the discipline. An M.P. whistle signals the periods during the sessions. The Knights have no trouble whatever with their students. They are seldom late, always glad to be corrected, because they have realized in the service that time is the essence of the fight for place and comfort. When they waste time they know they are wasting their own resources, not another's. 'These men,' said a K. of C. school principal who, during daylight, is head of one of New York's largest public schools, 'have more discipline than the average university class; much more. They had plenty of leisure in the army to make up their minds about what they wanted to do once they got back home. They were positive patriots. They are not complaining about opportunities missed during their service. They have their chins firm for progress. The fact that they got everything free just as they did overseas in the K. of C. huts does'nt hinder their ambition, but strengthens it. And that's a new angle on human nature.'
> "The men are given regular examinations, and certificates indorsed by State educational authorities are issued. The classes are usually held in a K. of C. building, or in a school building employed during the day for young pupils. The most attractive feature of the schools is that a man can enter them without any qualifications whatever. He selects his subject, whether he be ex-service man or not, and he 'goes to it.' The only difference is that former service men pay nothing; ordinary civilians must pay a nominal fee. The Knights have actually turned out accomplished auto-mechanics in twenty-five weeks. They have taken a foreign-born lad who checked hats for an indifferent living during times of peace, and made him a radio-telegrapher in six months. As a semi-parasite the foreign-born lad made about fifteen dollars a week. As a radio-telegrapher he make fifty. In addition he receives a training in English and an understanding of the American Constitution, by which he is governed, for the Knights are strong on teaching the Constitution. The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and all other veterans' associations have co-operated with the Knights in their educational work. Before 1920 is ended it is planned to have 150 schools in operation and an enrolment of 300,000. And the best feature of the work is that it will be permanent. Now the women have entered it. They are taking to the business courses, learning how to be accountants, stenographers, commercial lawyers. They are teaching all these subjects and more; and the work is promoting community interest that will go far to solve the problem of what is known as 'Americanization.'"

A Heavy Burden
(Buffalo Express)

There are various estimates as to what the new bonus scheme would cost the Dominion. The total would be at least $600,000,000 and it might be over $1,000,000,000. That would be a heavy burden to a nation of only eight million persons, even if it were not added to an already heavy war debt.

(Buffalo Courier)

A Philadelphia paper says that the fact that nearly all the incorporated cities whose reports have been tabulated by the sensus bureau show increases of population is "gratifying" But is it gratifying if most of the increases have been made at the expense of the rural regions?

A Worth While Job
(Boston Transcript)

A pessimist and an optimist were discussing life from their different view points. "I really believe," said the former, "that I could make a better world myself."

"Sure!" returned the optimist; "that's what we are here for. Now let us get to work and do it."

Wild Life Sanctuaries
(Toronto Star)

A deputation from the Essex Wild Life Association waited upon the fish and game committee of the provincial legislature yesterday, and urged the establishment of sanctuaries for the protection of wild life. It was suggested that certain marshes and other districts be set aside, in which birds and animals would live free from molestation. Among other recommendations the deputation asked the government to extend monetary assistance for the work being carried on in the interests of wild game by Mr. Jack Miner, who has spent thousands of dollars for that object.

All the objects for which the deputation pleaded are most estimable ones. Without such sanctuaries as those referred to the wild life of Canada is in danger of extinction. We all know what happened to the big game of the west before the establishment of the Dominion reserves and what a wonderful change has since been effected. In the ten years during which these sanctuaries have been maintained wild game has become almost too plentiful in some districts. Moose, caribou, deer and goat are very common indeed in the vicinity of Banff, whereas they were rapidly disappearing before the Rocky Mountain park was made their inviolable refuge. In Ontario there is need of similar protection.

Half-Witted Drivers
(Toronto Star)

There are some, who cannot drive safely—who so handle their cars that sooner or later the tragedy happens. They do not mean to kill anybody, but they drive in such a way that they are forever putting it up to the people to get out of their way and keep from under their wheels. A motor car in the hands of such a person is a dangerous engine, and likely at any moment to become a murderous one. Anybody can drive a car but half-wits should be prevented from doing it. It will become necessary to cancel the right of men to drive cars who have been shown to be deficient in the good sense that the job calls for. Until wild driving is vigorously punished, without the slightest regard for pull and influence, there will be a steady increase in the number of these tragedies as the population grows and as cars multiply in number.

West End of a Boy?

The proofreader on a small Western daily paper was a woman of great precision and extreme propriety. One day a reporter succeeded in getting into type an item about "Willie Brown, the boy who was burned in the west end by a live wire."

On the following day the reporter found on his desk a frigid note asking "Which is the west end of a boy?"

It took only an instant to reply: "The end the sun sets on of course."

THE POET'S CORNER

ENGLAND COMES

George H. Maitland

It is not that the flow'rs more sweetly there
With comlier hue in quaint old gardens throng,
Nor that the nightingale in notes more rare
Bestrews a lovlier April dusk with song.

It is not that the hedges and the bees,
The burgeoing verdure of a softer spring,
Or gentlier-whispering winds in greener trees
By thrice-more-magis brooks a-blossoming—

It is not these that thrill me, nor grey walls,
With statlier-lived grace as years unfold,
Nor battlemented castles, nor great halls,
Rich with old tapestries and armor old;

But this! That still the heart of England burns,
And still the torch of England's wrath flames bright,
And England's strength to England's hand returns,
And England's ships to England's stroke lend might.

When little peoples, with great ills beset,
Hold back the tyrant from their cherished homes,
The fire of England's anger kindles yet;
Still rings the age-old answer; "England comes."

HANDSOME BUILDINGS.

A Few Facts That All Canadians Should Know.

Owing to the fact that the tower of the new Parliament Buildings has not yet been constructed, the temporary main entrance to the House of Commons is at the western end of the building. The walls are lined with tyndall limestone which was quarried in Manitoba and brought from there to Ottawa in huge blocks. The surface has been tooled or "crandalled," giving it a very effective appearance; the stone is gray with a slightly creamish tint, thus taking away from the coldness of a stone interior. Intricate patterns made of thousands of fossils are traced and in some cases a perfect section of a shell can be seen, presenting the curves of an Ionic capital or part of the vertebra of some prehistoric animal. Because the building was commenced during the war (1916) it was impossible to obtain the well-known Belgian black marble, but a satisfactory substitute was found in the Province of Quebec where, before the war, very little of this marble had been quarried. The marble stairway in the foreground leads up to the House of Commons lobby or rotunda. The supporting arches to the floor above form a cloister while the ceiling is pierced and opened to the daylight. Where the arches spring from the piers they are decorated with carved bosses which take the form of caricatures of statesmen of the past and present. There was at one time considerable unfavorable and rather uncalled for criticism of these "gargoyles." On the arch facing the main door to the Commons Chamber is a carved head of Sir Robert Borden and facing him is the "gargoyle" of Laurier. The doors opening into the various rooms from here are oak ornamented with linen fold panelling.

New Bridges In Quebec.

Work has begun on the construction of the bridge across the Bastiscan river, which will complete the Montreal-Quebec Highway. The bridge will be 1,211 feet in length and 18 feet in width, and according to contract will be ready for traffic on June 1, 1920. The Provincial Department of Public Works has also a number of other bridges under construction, among them being the Metabouthchouan Bridge, which is one of the most important under the control of the Quebec Government. It is expected that next summer about seventy-five bridges of all sizes will be built under the supervision of Ivan Valee, engineer of the Quebec department.

Fruits of Old.

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten in England were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII.'s time were raspberries or strawberries or cherries grown in England, and we do not read of the turnip, cauliflower and quince being cultivated before the sixteenth century.

REVICTUALING LEBANON.

Depots Opened to Sell the Foodstuffs at Reasonable Prices.

A Beirut, Syria, despatch to the Christian Science Monitor reads:

The Government which is concerning itself with the revictualing of Beirut, has decided to take similar steps for the benefit of the Lebanon at the same time. Depots have been opened in the principal Cazas, where flour and the most necessary foodstuffs, such as rice and sugar, are being sold at reasonable prices fixed by the revictualing service.

These efforts of the Government to assist the population were extremely necessary, and praiseworthy, but it is a matter for regret that certain depots have been intrusted to individuals who were formerly in the Turkish service and who, profiting by their position, assumed the role of monopolists of foodstuffs. It is with a sense of relief that the populations of certain villages have learned the news that a few of these men are to be dismissed.

The representatives of the press at Beirut were recently invited to the house of Col. Nieger, administrator-in-chief of the western zone. The colonel announced to them that the French troops had taken possession of several of the principal strongholds of the Bekaa, without any untoward incident. The French troops, he said, had only taken this action after an agreement between the French military authorities and the representatives of the Sherif, and had resulted from an intelligent understanding between the two parties, for the assurance of unity and order in the government of the country.

The press representatives were later received by Gen. Gouraud, at the new Seraiah. The general explained to them that he regarded the press as one of his principal collaborators and that he counted upon it to help him in the work of unification, appeasement, and pacification, which he had come to undertake in the country. He declared that he should not ignore the difficulties in the situation consequent upon the diversities of beliefs, and remarked that if all the Syrians would put aside their personal interests, in favor of the general good, aiming at a common end, and following a common plan, they would succeed in forming a strong and prosperous nation.

The Beirut press, he said, should not, by its actions, gainsay wise and zealous people in Damascus, who were also working for the reorganization of the country. They should not render the task more difficult. The general stated that he was disposed to lend all his support to the press, and he trusted they would reciprocate.

To Keep Standing Cars Warm.

At London, Ont., the Public Utilities Commission has installed at the curbside on principal streets several outlets. At these outlets connections can be made for electric heaters by automobile owners to prevent freezing of radiators and water-circulating systems when cars are parked along the curb. E. V. Buchanan, general manager at London, Ont., has proposed the installation of such outlets throughout the downtown section, each outlet to be protected by a locked cabinet and key rented to automobile owners at $5 per year. A record will be kept of the owners' car numbers so that inspectors passing along the streets can detect any user of the service who has not made the required deposit.

Plague of Red Squirrels.

A queer thing that occurred during the summer of 1868 was a plague of red squirrels in Ontario. They appeared by hundreds and created so much damage amongst the fruit, particularly pears, that my particular job was to shoot them, says a correspondent. The little red rascals would nibble away at the fruit till they got to the seeds, which they would pick out and eat, then drop the other half of the pear to the ground. As much as a peck to a bushel of fruit would be seen in a heap around the base of the tree.

Young Harley was home for a few days from a cruise with the merchant marine. "Well," said the man from the home town, genially, "how have you been enjoying maritime life?" "I haven't been enjoying it at all, sir," answered the youngster, blushing, "she broke the engagement.

FARMER FOUND DROWNED

Kingston, Ont., May 1.—Michael Carroll, a prominent farmer of Sheffield township, was found drowned in Stingston Lake. He left his home last Friday, stating that he was going to repair a fence in the rear of his farm and his disappearance remained a mystery until his body was recovered. He was 57 years old and a bachelor.

Secret of Greatness.

It is Emerson who somewhere says that the average run of men fret and worry themselves into nameless graves, while here and there a great unselfish soul forgets itself into immortality.

Many hundred years before, a much wiser man had said: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it."

A rather cryptic utterance; so contradictory in sound that the majority of men pass it by unheeding.

But now and then there comes a man who, sensing its truth, harnesses his life to it, forgetting every selfish thought and purpose.

Often he knows himself to be a little man; or, at best, only medium-sized.

But the world, beholding the marvel of his influence, remembers him and calls him great.—Bruce Barton, in Red Book.

One Weak Spot.

"It is surprising," the famous lawyer observed with a sigh ,"how one will sometimes lose a case despite everything one can do. Now, take that client of mine who was just sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary." "You thought he should have been acquitted?" "Well, I defended him," was the modest reply. "What was he accused of?" "It was charged that he had stolen a watch." "And you couldn't save him?" "No, I riddled the testimony of the prosecution's witnesses; I showed that my client was a man of unblemished character; I proved an alibi by five unimpeachable witnesses, and I made the speech of my career to the jury, but they returned a verdict of guilty." "You astonish me! What was the reason?" "Well, I'm bound to admit that there was one weak spot in our defence, and the prosecuting attorney made the most of it. You see they found the watch in my client's pocket."

Out of Turn.

Mr. Jenkins was sedate and strongly disliked making what he was pleased to term an exhibition of himself. In fact he was a highly respectable partner in a big contracting firm of decorators and, having on one occasion secured a large contract, he advertised for workmen. A large number of applicants stood outside the premises the following morning, and as Jenkins made his way to the office door dressed in his working clothes, he glanced at the waiting crowd with a keen, critical eye by way of summing them up. As he was about to enter the office after scrutinizing the man nearest him a long, strong arm shot out and Jenkins, seeing about a dozen shooting stars and comets at once, found himself on his back in the muddy road and heard a voice crying: "None o' your tricks, mate, take your turn."

His Advertisement.

The angler tackled the manager of the country hotel angrily. "What do you mean by luring visitors here with the promise of fine fishing?" he said. "There isn't a bit of fishing here. Every brook has a sign warning people off." "I didn't say anything about fine fishing, sir," said the manager calmly. "If you will kindly read my advertisement again with more care you will see that what I said was 'Fishing unapproachable'."

Carlyle's Grit.

In 1835 there occurred on incident which would have deranged an ordinary man. Thomas Carlyle was living at No. 5 Cheyne row, Chelsea, near London, says an exchange. He had not earned a penny, says he to himself, "by the craft of literature for twenty-three months." Yet with the push of a tiger he was ploughing his way through his "History of the French Revolution." The first volume was finished. It had taken him five months to write. He loaned the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. On a certain morning Mill called upon Carlyle, his face as white as ashes. After two hours of awkward fumbling Mill managed to tell it—he had left the priceless manuscript on a desk and the, housemaid had taken it to light the morning fire in the grate! Carlyle was like a stricken man. But one day, as he sat humbly at his window, he saw cheery bricklayers building a house, brick by brick. He burst into tears and, sobbing like a child, he cried: "I, too, can bring back thought by thought!" He did. He recalled all of the manuscript and rewrote it. What torture!

Villages Restored.

Villages in the vicinity of St. Quentin, France, are literally rising, Phoenix-like, from their own ashes. Confronted by a lack of stone and building materials, the artisans have established a big grinding machine in which the debris of the shell-shattered houses is remade into mortar.

Increases Cost of Living.

One of the explanations of the high cost of living in the Philippines, as given by a complaining native, is that the tribesmen who were formerly content to appear in a breech cloth are now compelled to wear trousers by order of Uncle Sam.

Customs returns for April show an increase of more than $6,000,000 over April, 1919.

Permit Cottagers To Import Liquor

License Board Recognizes Summer Residences as Dwellings

According to a ruling made by the Ontario Board of License Commissioners under which the Ontario Temperance Act is administered, those having Summer homes in the Provinces whether they be citizens of the United States or Canadians, are entitled to import liquor from Montreal to such homes in the same way as persons permanently domiciled here. This announcement doubtless will create no little interest among our neighbors to the South who reside in places near the Ontario border and who own or lease Summer cottages on this side of the line.

When asked for a definite statement as to the attitude of the commission to this question, the chairman, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, explained that they recognized the right of the individual to have two homes—his ordinary or permanent place of residence and a Summer home—and, therefore, regarded both residences as places in which he was entitled to have and use liquor secured from Montreal or any other legal source. It would be necessary, of course, for him to observe the other regulations applying under the Ontario Temperance Act. Mr. Flavelle stated that it did not matter whether the permanent place of residence was located in Ontario or in Detroit, Buffalo or any other American city.

The chairman said further that the owner or tenant of a Summer cottage would be entitled to store liquor in such dwelling and, if he did not wish to take the risk of having it stolen, might place a caretaker in charge. He could not legally remove the liquor to the caretaker's dwelling or any place other than his own private home.

Many United States citizens owning cottages at Crystal Beach, Grimsby, in the vicinity of Windsor and elsewhere in Ontario have been making inquiries as to the legality of importing liquor to these Summer residences. The ruling announced will serve to dispel their doubts on the subject and, it is expected, will add not a little to the popularity of many of the places in question from the viewpoint of those with long thirsts.

MILLION DOLLARS IN GIFTS FOR THIS PAIR

New York, April 30.—The richest reporter in the world married one of the prettiest girls in New York at the biggest wedding of the season here late yesterday. The principals of this superlative affair were Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., 21, eldest grandson of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, and who now works on a New York daily, and Miss Rachael Littleton, 20, sister of Martin Littleton, prominent attorney. Five thousand invitations were issued for the ceremony in St. Thomas' Church. Seven hundred guests were expected at the reception in the Vanderbilt home on Fifth Ave.

The bride received gifts valued at more than $1,000,000, among them a diamond tiara, presented by General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, parents of the groom, which is said to be worth $300,000.

FIVE KILLED IN RAILWAY COLLISION

Sanbern, Mich., April 29—Five persons were killed and twelve injured when passenger trains Nos. 516 and 517 on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad met in a head-on collision near here early today. The accident was said to have been caused by misinterpretation of orders. Four cars were wrecked and both engines.

Those killed were: Edward Clarke, L. S. Fuller and E. C. Larson respectively conductor, engineer and fireman on Train No 516; A. Feltz of Winona, Minn., and E. W. Augestine, Pioneer, Ohio.

STRIKE OF GAMBLERS IS THE LATEST

Agua, Prieta, Mexico, April 30.—One of this city's largest industries has been closed by a strike, and the public is clamoring that the trouble be ended without delay. The strikers are the dealers in the various gambling houses—the men who turn the roulette wheels, the men who preside at the crap games, the men who deal monte and the men who deal at the stud-poker and the faro games. They have been receiving $10 a day but this morning decided they could not live on that wage and demanded a raise to $15 a day, with the privilege of "eating out of the drawer." When their demands were refused, they struck.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.

Projects of This Kind Now on Foot in Alberta.

The co-operative store as a means of beating the high cost of living is in favor in Alberta just now. No other practical way of bringing down the prices or lessening the average family budget has yet been found, and there is a growing feeling that something might be done by a scheme of collective shopping, which, either in the form of cheaper prices or profit-sharing, offers some possible hope of making a dollar go farther.

Projects of this kind are now on foot in Edmonton, Calgary, and Lethbridge, with a likelihood of them all taking definite shape this spring or summer. In Edmonton the idea originated with the Railwaymen's Union, which has carried on a co-operative coal buying scheme for the past year. This initial experiment worked out very well, and it is now proposed to extend it, the railwaymen being joined in the larger scheme by a number of other workers' groups. The civil service of the Provincial Government had in mind an organization of its own, but has now united with the railroad workers, and the Dominion civil servants, city employes, Street Railway Union, letter carriers, firemen, School Teachers' Alliance, Great War Veterans, and local branches of the United Farmers have also taken up the idea and pledged their support.

The scheme has gone so far that stock is now being subscribed, each shareholder taking not less than $20 or more than $100. A retail store is to be opened, beginning with staple provisions and gradually adding other lines until a full departmental store business has been established. Regular market prices will be charged, but each shareholder will receive dividends from the profits of the enterprise on the basis of his own monthly purchases.

In Calgary a co-operative association is under way as a citizens' move against the H.C.L., and articles of incorporation are being prepared. A store for the merchandizing of foodstuffs will be opened as soon as $12,500 has been subscribed, and an authorized capitalization of $25,000 will be applied for. Each member of the association in this case will be required to pay a membership fee of one dollar as well as his stock at ten dollars a share. Some of the country points around Calgary will also be included in the operation of the scheme.

Labor interests are the movers in the Lethbridge scheme. With the same general complaint against rising costs, the workingmen of the city have put their heads and their purses together and now have a co-operative store proposition pretty well worked out. They are leaving it open to the public, however, and if the scheme carries through it will probably be on a fairly general basis.

Canada's Trade Growing

A steady growth of Canada's trade in the twelve months ending February 29th last, is indicated in a statement issued by the Bureau of Statistics. Total imports for the year ending February 29 were $993,570,100; while in the previous year it was $35,266,472.

Total exports for the twelve months ending February 29 last were $1,246,341,600, as against $1,216,316,432 in the previous year. The duty collected on imports amounted to $177,766,266 in the past twelve months, as compared with $159,061,948.

During the twelve month period just ended, Canada imported from the United Kingdom goods to the value of $106,605,527 as compared with $74,806,773 in the previous twelve months. Exports to the United Kingdom were $507,091,477 during the year just ended, as compared with $546,790,141 in the previous year, a decrease of approximately $40,000,000. Imports from the United States totalled $764,185,943 during the past twelve months, which was approximately the same as during the previous twelve month period. Exports to the United States were $455,665,517, an increase of about $2,000,000 over the year ending February 28, 1919.

"Dance Men."

The "danceman," evolved from the "footman" through a generation of cabaret hunting society leaders, is the latest addition to the smart matron's retinue.

The danceman is required to be good looking, to wear clothes well, dance better, and above all to be of a character that guarantees the respectability of the lady employing him.

He follows his patron at a distance of a yard or so, sits a few feet away from the tea table, moving only when requested by madame to take a turn around the hall.

As it is not considered good form to speak to the danceman, Paris matrons are at last able to devote their attention to acquiring the fanciful steps without incurring the displeasure of their husbands, because a paid servant is not considered a man.

No Canadian Veto.

In the House of Commons recently Hon. N. W. Rowell stated that the Canadian Government was not aware that the British House had been prevented from arriving at a decision on the sending of a mission to the Vatican because of fault on the part of the Dominion to give their views on the matter. The Government, he said, had been invited to give its views and conformed with this request on December 6, 1919. The Government had not sufficient information to justify its offering advice on the matter.

$1465 F.O.B. CHATHAM WAR TAX EXTRA GRAY-DORT

When the Gray-Dort was designed, our engineers had two definite orders.

"Build an economical, simple, low-priced car."

"Build a light car at least 50% stronger and finer and greater value than light-car purchasers have been getting."

The original Gray-Dort was built to these orders. Every improvement and refinement since that time has been in line with this policy.

And yet the price is only $1465. Note what you get in to-day's Gray-Dort for $1465.

A big motor—3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke—finely finished and smooth running. A forty-pound crankshaft, against the usual twenty-five pounds or so. Three-ringed pistons, instead of two-ringed. Cellular radiator, instead of tube and finn. Newly improved Carter carburetor. Improved Connecticut ignition. The starting and lighting system is Westinghouse, a big-car feature.

We designed a bigger and better rear axle for light cars—and we are having it built exclusively for the Gray-Dort here in Chatham. We solved the spring problem in the same way—and you'll realize what we've done when you see the long, cantilever rear springs of the Gray-Dort. We've set a new standard of safety by using Thermoid brake-lining. We've increased safety by building a steering gear 50% bigger and stronger. We've put in a bigger gas tank—and put it in the rear, with a vacuum feed system.

Your comfort in driving or riding has been attended to. With a shorter cowl, there is more room in the driving department. There are several inches more leg-room in the tonneau. The side-curtains open with the doors. You sink into the seats at the most comfortable angle. The top is really a one-man top. The gears can be shifted with two fingers' pressure. The emergency brake is now on a lever. The instruments are handy.

The Gray-Dort is just as outstanding in appearance. Its lines are the lines of the really fine big cars—reduced in proportion. It has big car style. There is not a line nor an angle which is extreme. And it has what no other car ever can have—the wonderful Gray-Dort finish which had its beginning 60 years ago in our body plant.

There are other style touches—many of them new this year. French-pleated upholstery. A hood with many long, narrow louvres. A particularly smart top, hand-tailored in our own shops. Lamps raised to a new location. Short, smart cowl. Straight top-edge to the body.

So much does the Gray-Dort dominate the field, that our production, doubled this year, will probably not meet the demand. We would advise you to see the Gray-Dort dealer now.

PRICES

The Gray-Dort 5-passenger car, finished in Gray-Dort green and black, and with standard equipment, is $1465 f.o.b. Chatham. War tax extra.

The roomy 2-passenger roadster is the same price.

The Gray-Dort Special

For the man who wishes something a little extra in his car, we have built the Gray-Dort Special. Maroon body, with brown rayntite top. Plate-glass rear window. Gipsy curtains. Rookie tan wheels. Motometer. Tilting steering wheel. Real leather upholstery. Mahogany instrument board. Just the touches which lift this car above the ordinary. $150 extra on the standard.

And the Ace!

The Gray-Dort Ace—the most beautiful light car of to-day. Sapper green body with handsome California top to match.

Trouble lamp and bull's-eye flashlight. Electric cigar lighter. Rear-vision mirror. Plate-glass windows. Over-size grooved-tread tires. This is the de luxe car for the man who does not wish to pile up a tremendous operating cost. $255 extra on the standard.

THE MIDDLE CLASSES.

People of Great Britain Want a Definition.

Some considerable correspondence has been published recently by the London Mail on the question "Who Are the Middle Class?" Among the scores of contributions an amusing item was submitted by Charles J. Norris, chairman of the Chiswick Educational Committee, who began by saying that the most startling fact brought out by the enquete was that hardly two correspondents agreed on the definition of the subject. Mr. Norris then proceeded:

"Salaries, banking accounts, professions, trades, social standing, gentility, are words that figure largely in the correspondence, but, so far, no one seems bold enough to describe the Middle Class as 'A Class of Snob.' And it is because of the difficulty of finding lines of strict demarkation between the so-called working classes at one end of an artificial scale and the Upper Classes at the other that the Middle Classes have evolved into a Class of Snobs.

"Consider the case of a head clerk at £1,000 a year and a clerk at £250 per annum, both in the same firm, living in the same district, in parallel roads. One pays a rental of £80, the other £30; but it is not preposterous to suppose that these two men, with their lifework a common object, would find pleasure in social intercourse at the end of the day.

"Not so, however. A curt 'Morning, Smith,' is all the junior receives when they board the same train or tramway car. Only when an election is approaching does Smith realize how important he is, for then his senior condescends to call on him and says, 'We, Smith—you and I of the Middle Classes—are in danger; we must sink or swim together.' This is merely snobbery, symptomatic of the Middle Classes.

"Education also has its snobbery in the Middle Classes. A mother said to me recently: 'I hope Freddie won't win a scholarship to a secondary school. My eldest boy, since he has been to —— school, looks down on his parents and will not associate with his former companions. He is a perfect snob.'

"Not long since the name of a famous biologist was mentioned in conversation and a young secondary teacher who held a pass degree remarked, 'Oh! he can't be any good; he is only a F.R.S. and hasn't taken a degree.'

"Politics apart, it is refreshing to notice labor's robust antagonism to snobbery.

"'We don't care," says Labor, 'who your father is; we don't care who your relations are, or what your banking account it. What we do care about is: What are you doing to help on the progress of the world?' And so long as Labor adopts this attitude it is making the work of educationists easier.

"The Middle Classes, made up of dozens of sub-classes, are really so many centres of irresponsible forces, the resultant of which it is difficult to determine. Not until these sub-classes are merged into one homogeneous whole, from which all trace of snobbery has been deleted, can the Middle Class—the yeomen of old—become once again the backbone of England."

Keeping House In England.

In what we now regard as the happy days before the war the domestic life of middle and upper-middle class English people was built upon a foundation of cheap fuel, cheap food and cheap labor, says Mrs. C. S. Peel, in the North American Review. In families of moderate means it was usual to pay cooks from $120 to $170, house-parlormaids $90 to $140, parlormaids $120 to $150, housemaids $90 to $140, "between-maids—that is young girls helping cook and house-parlormaid—$60 to $90 per annum. People in such circumstances employed one, two, or three or even four servants who lived in and were content with an outing every other Sunday and once a week. The sum spent on food in such households varied from about $2.50 to $3.50 per head per week, $3 being an average figure. There was a plethora of charwomen who asked 60 cents a day and their food. Job servants were plentiful at wages varying from $2.50 to $3.50 a week living in, and in the case of cook $3.25 to $5 per week. Milk then cost eight cents instead of 22 cents per quart, bread 10 cents as against 18 cents per quartern, butter 32 to 41 cents instead of 60 cents per lb., sugar 6 cents against 14 cents per lb., while meat from 16 cents to 28 cents per lb. then is now from 28 to 62 cents per lb.

Have Always Made Bread.

The word bread is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "bracon," to bruise, to pound, which is expressive of the ancient mode of preparing the grain, says an exchange.

Bread was not introduced into Rome until five hundred and fifty years after its foundation. Pliny informs us that the Romans learned this, with many other improvements, during the war with Perseus, King of Macedon. The armies on their return brought Grecian bakers with them into Italy, who were called "pistores," from their ancient practice of bruising grains in mortors. The Greeks ascribe the invention of bread-making to Pan; but the Chaldeans and Egyptians were acquainted with it at a still more remote period. In the paintings discovered in the tombs of Egypt the various processes used by them in bread-making are distinctly represented. Bread from wheat was first made in China in 2000 B.C.

Antiques.

A visitor going through a rug factory stopped beside an Armenian who was busy plying his shuttle. "You make antique rugs, too?" he inquired presently. "Oh, yes," was the grinning reply. "Dis rug when hees finished is two hundred years old."

TURKISH FEMINISTS.

Played Important Part In Plots Against Old Regime.

The day of the latticed window and the veiled woman has by no means passed in Turkey, though the feminist movement, as we should term it, dates back farther than one might suppose, says Gertrude Emerson in Asia. Certainly the revolution of July 24, 1908, when Sultan Abdul Hamid was forced by the Young Turk Party to proclaim the long-delayed constitution, and when Turkey first began to think in terms of modern institutions, went a long way toward initiating social freedom for the women of Turkey. Back of that coup, however, lay many years of careful preparation, of education, of secret propaganda, in which women had already played their part. Some day the records may be laid bare, but it is still unwise to talk too openly in Turkey. Thirty years of censorship, of secret agents scurrying through the empire to report back to the Great Ear at Yildiz Kiosk in Stamboul any shadow of "treachery," were not calculated to produce anything but trickery with which to meet trickery, astuteness with which to match power. The espionage system made it impossible for men to come together without being watched, and it was the women who carried back and forth thousands of letters for the Young Turks and for the Society of Union and Progress. The wives of these men saw to it that messages were delivered to their friends whom they met by chance, as it were, in the bazaars or shops, and they, in turn, passed on the information to their husbands. Women were even sold as slaves into the households of important officials who it was necessary to win over to the cause, and later were bought back again when their work was finished. The Turkish law does not permit women to be arrested for political action, but sometimes they paid the full price of courage. Just after the ex-Sultan, who had accepted the constitution only to introduce a period of reaction blacker than any that had preceded it, had left his palace for the last time on the way to exile, a newspaper published the report of how he had murdered a beautiful Circassian in the palace. Among initiated circles it was known how, in his harem, a certain Circassian had used her beauty and charm to good effect in the subtle interests of the Young Turk Party. Even the Sultan's own sister worked secretly against Abdul Hamid, whom she always referred to as the Usurper. Probably the first woman actually to be admitted into the Young Turks organization was Refeka Hanoum, daughter of Kiamil Pasha, who refused marriage at eighteen in order to devote all her energies toward bringing about a higher freedom for her oppressed sisters. Among this little group of daring women, Haledeh Hanoum, who has since assumed the role of Turkey's leading feminist, early showed herself one of the leading spirits.

The Ports of Finland.

Conversation in Abo, one may readily believe by report from Finland, is finding daily food in the superior claims of that town over the town of Hango to become the important winter harbor of Finland, and conversation in Hango is equally busy with the superior claims of Hagno over Abo. Abo, Hango, and Helsingfors are Finland's three ice-free winter ports, which means that ice breakers are necessary to keep them open, and the statistics of the past are said to prove that the trade of the future will provide both Abo and Hango with all the shipping they can handle. But both harbors need improvement, and each town evidently feels that its own harbor should be attended to first. The larger sea-going steamships, for example, cannot now enter Abo, and the townsfolk naturally feel that the project for making their port a first-class harbor should be put through as soon as possible; but the townsfolk of Hango are arguing that the many islands surrounding Abo make the work of ice breaking much more expensive than in their own harbor, and that Hango is, therefore, the port that should logically receive first attention. Nor, one may believe, is Hango as enthusiastic as it might be over the possibilities of a ferry from Abo to the Swedish harbor of Kapellskar, something over 130 miles away, and also under discussion as the possible terminal for a new railway line in Sweden. As a matter of fact, the shipping interests insist that the state should deepen all three harbors, Helsingfors, Abo, and Hango, and provide powerful enough ice breakers to keep them open.

Sea Otters.

Prohibition of the killing of sea otters in Alaskan waters has been extended to November 1, 1925. It is hoped that in the meantime this valuable fur-bearing species, which was pursued almost to extermination, will gain somewhat in numbers.

The fur of the sea otter is the most beautiful and most costly of all peltries. Long before the discovery of America the mighty tycoons of Japan clothed themselves with its shimmering velvet. Early explorers found the natives of the Aleutian islands and the Puget Sound region commonly wearing sea otter cloaks, which they parted with for a trifle.

THE CONNECTING LINK WHICH NEVER FAILS

WHO PAYS ON CHECK LOST IN THE MAIL?

VANCOUVER—Who pays when a certified cheque is lost? This is the question raised in a peculiar action brought by John Allen, Vancouver carpenter, against the Merchants Bank. Mr. Allen asks for $3,000 which he says belongs to him and is being unlawfully detained by the bank.

It appears that in July of last year Thomas P. McConnell, of Victoria, drew the cheque on his current account at the Merchants Bank and had it certified. He handed it to Allen's Victoria Agent, the firm of Day & Boggs, which in turn sent it by registered mail to Vancouver. The letter and cheque never reached Allen and he presumes that they were lost in transit.

Allen alleges that he demanded payment of the amount from the bank and tendered an indemnity bond to protect the bank against any loss which might be sustained.

He states that he also tendered the bank a statutory declaration that he had not and would not endorse the cheque or negotiate it or authorize anybody to negotiate it, but that the bank has persistently neglected and refused to pay the amount but continues to retain it, as he claims, without color of right. He points out that he has been deprived of the use of the money for all these months and demands not only the $3,000 but damages for such deprivation.

My own was probably as deplorable a case as could be found, yet it yielded to "Orange Lily" treatment and today I am a well woman.

"Orange Lily" is a simple, natural, common-sense remedy that you apply yourself. To go to drinking harmful drugs for troubles such as ours, is like trying to cure a sprain with pills. The only right and effective treatment is a strictly local application like "Orange Lily."

"He didn't know that you would not be there till it was too late to decline the invitation," said Susan.

"And what was she like? Tell me."

"Well she was rather pretty, I must own."

"Tell straight on about her, can't you? Come, do, Susan. How many times did you say he danced with her?"

"Once."

"Twice, I think you said."

"Indeed, I'm sure I didn't."

"Well, and he wanted to again, I expect."

"No; I don't think he did. She wanted to dance with him again badly enough, I know. Everybody does with Dick, because he's so handsome and such a clever courter."

"Oh, I wish! How did you say she wore her hair?"

"In long curls—and her hair is light, and it curls without being put in paper. That's how it is she's so attractive."

"She's trying to get him away! yes, yes, she is! And through keeping this miserable school, I mustn't wear my hair in curls! But I will; I don't care if I leave the school and go home, I will wear my curls! Look, Susan, do—is her hair as soft and long as this?" Fancy pulled from its coil under her hat a twine of her own hair, and stretched it down her shoulder to show its length, eagerly looking at Susan to catch her opinion from her eyes.

"It is about the same length as that I think," said Miss Dewy.

Fancy paused hopelessly. "I wish mine was lighter, like hers!" she continued mournfully. "But hers isn't so soft, is it? Tell me, now."

"I don't know."

Fancy abstractedly extended her vision to survey a yellow butterfly and red-an-black butterfly, that were flitting along in company, and then became aware that Dick was advancing up the garden.

"Susan, here's Dick coming; I suppose that's because we've been talking about him."

"Well, then, I shall go in-doors now—you won't want me;" and Susan turned practically and walked off.

Enter the single-minded Dick whose only fault at the gypsing, or picnic, had been that of loving Fancy too exclusively and depriving himself of the innocent pleasure the gathering might have offered him, by sighing regretfully at her absence—who had danced with the rival in sheer despair of ever being able to get through that stale, flat, and unprofitable afternoon in any other way; but this she would not believe.

Fancy had settled her plan of emotion. To reproach Dick? Oh, no, no! "I am in great trouble," said she, taking what was intended to be a hopelessly melancholy survey of a few small apples lying under the tree; yet critical ear might have noticed in her voice a tentative tone as to the effect of the words upon Dick when she uttered them.

"What are you in trouble about? Tell me of it," said Dick, earnestly. "Darling, I will share it with you and help you."

"No, no; you can't! Nobody can!"

"Why not? You don't deserve it, whatever it is. Tell me, dear."

"Oh, it isn't what you think! It is dreadful—my own sin!"

"Sin, Fancy! as if you could sin! I know it can't be."

"'Tis, 'tis!" said the young lady, in a pretty little frenzy of sorrow. "I have done wrong, and I don't like to tell it! Nobody will forgive me, nobody! and you above all will not!... I have allowed myself to—to—fl—"

"What—not flirt!" he said, controlling his emotion, as it were, by a sudden pressure inward from his surface. "And you said only the day before yesterday that you hadn't flirted in your life."

"Yes I did; and that was a wicked story! I have let another love me, and—"

"Good G—! Well, I'll forgive you—yes, if you couldn't help it—yes I will. Did you encourage him?"

"Oh, oh, oh—I don't know—yes—no Oh, I think so."

"Who was it?"

A pause.

"Tell me."

"Mr. Shinar."

After a silence that was only disturbed by the fall of an apple, a long-checked sigh from Dick, and a sob from Fancy, he said, with real austerity:

"Tell it all—every word!"

"He looked at me, and I looked at him, and he said, 'Will you let me show you how to catch bullfinches down here by the stream?' And I wanted to know very much—I did so long to have a bullfinch! I couldn't help that—and I said, 'Yes!' and then he said, 'Come here.' And I went with him down to the lovely river, and then he said to me, 'Look and see how I do it, and then you'll know. I put this birdlime round this twig, and I go there,' he said, 'and hide away under a bush and presently Mister Bird comes and perches upon the twig, and flaps his wings, and you've got him before you can say Jack'—something? Oh, oh, oh, I forget what!"

"Jack Sprat," mournfully suggested Dick through the cloud of his misery.

"No, not Jack Sprat," she sobbed.

"Then 'twas Jack Robinson," he said, with the emphasis of a man who had resolved to discover every iota of the truth, or die.

"Yes, that was it. And then I put my hand upon the rail of the bridge to get across, and—that's all."

"Well, that isn't much, either," said Dick, critically, and more cheerfully. "Not that I see what business Shinar has to take upon himself to teach you anything. But it seems—it seems there must have been more than that to set you up in such a dreadful taking?"

He looked into Fancy's eyes. Misery of miseries!—guilt was written there still.

"Now, Fancy, you've not told me all!" said Dick, rather sternly for a quiet man.

"Oh, don't speak so cruelly! I'm afraid to tell now! If you hadn't been harsh I was going on to tell you all: now I can't!"

"Come, dear Fancy, tell; come, I'll forgive; I must—by heaven and earth, must—whether I will or no; I love you so!"

"Well, when I put my hand on the bridge, he touched it—"

"A scamp!" said Dick, grinding an imaginary human frame to powder.

"And then he looked at me, and at last he said, 'Are you in love with Dick Dewy?' And I said, 'Perhaps I am,' and then he said, 'I wish you weren't then, for I want to marry you with all my soul.'"

"There's a villain now! Want to marry you!" And Dick quivered with the bitterness of satirical laughter Then, suddenly remembering that he might be reckoning without his host: "Unless, indeed, you are willing to have him—perhaps you are," he said with the wretched indifference of a castaway."

"No, indeed I am not!" she said, her sobs just beginning to take a favorable turn toward cure.

"Well, then," said Dick, coming a little to his senses, "you've been exaggerating very much in giving such a dreadful beginning to such a mere nothing. And I know what you've done it for—just because of that gypsy-party!" He turned away from her and walked five paces decisively, as if he were alone in a strange country and had never known her. "You did it to make me jealous, and I won't stand it!" He flung the words to her over his shoulder, and then stalked on apparently very anxious to walk to the colonies that very minute.

"Oh, oh, oh, Dick! Dick!" she cried trotting after him like a pet lamb, and really seriously alarmed at last; "you'll kill me! My impulses are bad—miserably wicked—and I can't help it; forgive me, Dick! And I love you always; and those times when you look silly and don't seem quite good enough for me—just the same, I do, Dick! And there is something more serious, though not concerning that walk with him."

"Well, what is it?" said Dick, altering his mind about walking to the colonies; in fact, passing to the other extreme and standing so rooted to the road that he was apparently not even going home.

"Why, this," she said, drying the beginning of a new flood of tears she had been going to shed, "this is the serious part. Father has told Mr. Shinar that he would like him for a son-in-law, if he could get me—that he has his right hearty consent to come courting me!"

CHAPTER IV

"That is serious," said Dick, more intellectually than he had spoken for a long time.

The truth was that Geoffrey knew nothing about his daughter's continued walks and meetings with Dick. When a hint that there were symptoms of an attachment between them had first reached Geoffrey's ears, he stated so emphatically that he must think the matter over before any such thing could be allowed, that, rather unwisely, on Dick's part, whatever it might have been on the lady's, the lovers were careful to be seen together no more in public; and Geoffrey forgetting the report, did not think over the matter at all. So Mr. Shinar resumed his old position in Geoffrey's brain by mere flux of time. Even Shinar began to believe that Dick existed for Fancy no more—though that remarkably easy-going man had taken no active steps on his own account as yet.

"And father has not only told Mr. Shinar that," continued Fancy, "but he has written me a letter, to say he should wish me to encourage Mr. Shinar if 'twas convenient!"

"I must start off and see your father at once!" said Dick taking two or three vehement steps to the east, recollecting that Mr. Day lived to the west, and coming back again.

"I think we had better see him together. Not tell him what you come for, or anything of the kind, until he likes you and so win his brain through his heart which is always the way to manage people. I mean in this way: I am going home on Saturday week to help them in honey-taking. You might come there to me, have something to eat and drink and let him guess what your coming signifies, without saying it in so many words."

SAYS PHILIPPINOS AND NOT THE IRISH

London, April 30—The United States Irish resolution was brought up in the House of Commons and drew several pointed questions. Ronald McNeill, Unionist member for Canterbury division for Kent, asked the Government if it had "any official information regarding a manifesto to be issued at Washington by an organization known as the Philippine Commission for Indepedence, in which it was maintained that American belief in the principle of self-determination would be demonstrated more impressively by conceding the repeated demands made for independence by ten and a half million inhabitants of the Philippines than by passing resolutions in the Senate expressing sympathy with the cause of Irish independence," and whether "as a mark of respect for the United States Senate" the House of Commons would be enabled to follow the precedent set by the Senate by moving a resolution in support of the Philippine demand for self-determination.

Andrew Bonar Law, replying for the Government, said he had no information on the question, which did not seem to be one in which the British Government was concerned.

Numerous other questions followed and Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader asked whether it was not better for each country to leave the other alone.

WIFE MARKET REFLECTS HIGH COST OF LIVING

London, April 30—Lord Dewar, just returned from travels in Central Africa, reports that the high cost of living is reflected even in the wife market among African natives. Four spearheads was a good price for a wife in pre-war days, but now eight spearheads is considered low. In cattle districts a wife now costs eight cattle, instead of four.

Professional Cruelty

"The trouble with this tooth" said the dentist, probing it with a long, slender instrument, "is that the nerve is dying."

"It seems to me, doctor," groaned the victim, "that you ought to treat the dying with a little more respect."

Barn and Silo Roofed with Brantford Asphalt Roofing.

Resists Fire, Sheds Water, Wears Long

Flying sparks and embers from a burning building often cause roofs near by to catch fire, especially in a dry, hot season. Under like conditions, roofs covered with are in no danger from flying embers, because any that fall on Brantford Asphalt Roofing die out harmlessly. Build a bonfire on a roof of Brantford Asphalt Roofing and the fire will not spread and the boards underneath the roofing will be protected in a surprising manner.

If a fire starts in the interior of a building Brantford Asphalt Roofing acts as a retardant and keeps the fire from spreading. Fire chiefs and insurance companies endorse its use in the most congested cities.

Brantford Asphalt Roofing does not absorb water, but sheds the heaviest rain with ease. Acid proof and alkali proof. Reliable, durable, economical. Three weights—60 lb., 70 lb., 80 lb. per square.

Brantford Rubber Roofing is the same quality as Brantford Asphalt, but has a smooth, rubbery surface instead of the sand. It is particularly suitable for verandah decks and floor coverings. Three weights—40 lb., 50 lb., and 60 lb. per square.

Leatheroid Roofing

Slightly lower quality than Brantford Rubber Roofing. Used for same purposes. Has a leathery surface. Exceptionally good roofing at a low price. 35 lb., 45 lb., and 55 lb. weights.

Standard Mohawk Roofing

is made of the same materials as Brantford Asphalt Roofing, but is lighter in weight. A thoroughly reliable roofing at a low price. Tested for years and has given entire satisfaction. Sanded on one side. One weight—40 lbs. per square.

Climax Sheathing Paper

A tough kraft paper coated with high-grade asphalt. For making buildings damp-proof and wind-proof. Also for roofing temporary bunk houses, lumber camps, etc.

HUNTING WILD HORSES

ROPING THESE ANIMALS PROVES EXCITING.

Thousands of Them Roam the Northern Wilds of the Province of British Columbia, and Adventurous Men Have Found It Profitable to Drive a Whole Band of Them Into a Corral.

IN the vast and sparsely settled territories marked on the map of Northern British Columbia as Peace River, Cassiar, Cariboo and Lillicoet, bands of horses roam wild. The number cannot be estimated, but a guess can be hazarded, based on the number captured in recent years. I should place the figure at between two and three thousand.

Eighty per cent. of the horses owned by Indians to-day in these districts have either been caught wild; or are colts of wild mares captured a few years ago. Strictly speaking, these animals are not wild, but feral. That is, they are descended from tame horses which escaped from their owners, and have deteorlated until to-day they are mostly undersized and lack the staying power of the horse bred in captivity, though extremely hardy. They vary from 650 to 1,150 pounds in weight, though a few will be bigger.

The foundation stock of these feral horses is believed to have strayed away from the Spanish expeditionary forces in the days of Cortez, and gradually made its way north. The native American horse, scientists agree, disappeared many hundreds of years earlier, and the Indians and Mexicans had not even a tradition left of their existence. Historians relate that the natives were amazed at seeing men riding on horses, mistaking them for some weird semi-human creatures of the Centaur type.

Coming to comparatively recent times, the British Columbia wild horse received hundreds of new members in the days of '98 and '99, when the gold rush to the Klondyke was at its height. Pack trains with anywhere from ten to two hundred horses were strung out over hundreds of miles of country, and as these thousands of horses had to be turned out to graze every night, it was inevitable that many should escape the daily morning round-up.

Possibly because he is a descendant of a "civilized" ancestor, the feral equine is extremely wary of man, and a difficult animal to capture.

In February, 1916, in partnership with Joe Graves, I set out to round up a bunch of wild horses, in the neighborhood of Youngs Lake, East Lillooet, about forty miles north of the Canadian Pacific Railway, line. Joe had hunted wild horses for several years, and knew the country like an open book.

Like most other wild gregarious animals, horses do not wander far afield unless the band becomes too large for its feeding grounds, or they are frightened away. They roam at will throughout the summer and fall months, selecting the shady timbered lands where flies and mosquitoes are scarce, but in winter, they come down to the meadows and frozen swamps where the grass is long and easy to paw from under the snow.

In Youngs Lake district, there is a chain of scattered meadows, stretching over thirty miles, and it was on one of these meadows that Joe took me to the hunt. We were riding strong well-fed horses, and we set out prepared to stay away two or three days if necessary. We left Joe's homestead early on a bright sunshiny morning, with the thermometer registering fifteen above zero, which is comparatively warm for that part of the country. We rode easily for several hours before coming suddenly on a band of nine horses feeding in a little "pothole," or small meadow hidden in the timber. The horses saw us and were off at a gallop in a trice. Spurring our mounts we started in pursuit, and for an hour we kept them going at full speed, following their well-beaten trail. At the far end of a long narrow meadow, Joe pulled up his horse and said: "Guess we'll have something to eat now, and let our horses rest awhile. Those 'cayuses' (the Indian word for horses, but generally used by white men to denote an inferior animal), will only go a couple of miles further on, and will stop and rest too. But they won't get anything to eat there, while ours can get a feed here where there isn't much snow."

As Joe had surmised, we came upon the wild band only a short distance from the meadow. They were standing about, resting.

Two of them did not get away to a good start, and my partner waved me back. I soon saw he was going to try to catch up to the laggards and lasso one of them. Spurring his horse furiously, he was soon within roping distance. Uncoiling his lariat, he circled it over his head, ready for a throw at the right moment. Suddenly he stood up in the stirrups and flung the noose neatly over the wild horse's neck.

The captive fought frantically for a couple of minutes, but Joe's horse was trained to the business, and there could only be one end to the struggle. The wild horse jumped, plunged, bucked, twisted and turned. The rope around his neck was gradually choking him. Suddenly he reared. That finished him. Joe's horse jumped forward, dragging the other off his feet and stretchign him full length on the snow. Then, with Joe keeping his rope lariat taut, I sprang to the ground and in a minute had the prostrate animal helpless with a half hitch around a hind foot, and the other end of a short length of rope tied around his neck. With only three feet to stand on, the brute was at our mercy. We dragged him to a tree and tied him there securely, to be further attended to after we had captured the rest of the band.

That was the only horse we roped on this chase.

Another method of catching these horses that is fairly successful, is the placing of a running noose, suspended over a small limb and attached to a solid tree. This trap is set along a trail used by the wild horses, and as soon as one of them gets his head into the noose, he springs forward and draws the rope tight around his neck. We drove the band along at top speed for seven or eight miles. They followed a trail till they come to a meadow where Joe had built wings that lead into a corral where we could get the whole bunch.

The thing worked out exactly as Joe had said. The preceding summer he had built two long fences that tapered in the form of a V, terminating in a high corral. Apparently the horses did not notice the fences until these were less than twenty yards apart and by that time we were so close up to them, galloping and shouting, that they were afraid to turn back, and rushed right into the corral.

There were three colts and two yearlings in the bunch we had rounded up. The older animals were worth from ten to fifteen dollars apiece, unbroken, and could sell for twice that amount after being ridden once or twice. The yearlings and colts, Joe decided to brand and turn out again with his tame horses. He kept the older animals until the summer, when they brought from $30 to $40 apiece. —P. W. May Amend B. N. A.

Two current developments are emphasizing Canada's progress toward nationhood. One is the despite announcement from London that Canada is to have a minister plenipotentiary in Washington; the other is an intimation from the Canadian Government that the Imperial Parliament is to be asked to amend the British North America Act (Canada's Constitution) so that future amendments may be made by Canada without reference to the Imperial Parliament.

The request that Canada should have the right to amend her own constitution arises not from any specific issue, but from a recognition that in theory the present situation does not conform with the idea of "equal nationhood," now being promulgated. So long as the Canadian constitution can only be changed by an act of the British Parliament Canada's status is technically that of a colony and nothing more. In practice, however, for many years the attitude of the Imperial Parliament has been that any request for a change in the B. N. A. act would be granted at once and no questions asked, with one proviso, that the request be reasonably unanimous as far as the different parties and sections of Canada were concerned.

The proposal now is that the Canadian Parliament can itself make these changes provided all the provincial legislatures agree to them. It will be seen that this is a more stringent regulation than even the difficult provision under which the United States Constitution can be amended. But the problem which makes absolute unanimity of all the provinces in Canada necessary is Quebec. Under the B. N. A. act certain rights to Quebec, granted when the province was conquered and ceded from France were perpetuated, and Quebec has always felt that she was more certain of justice and the continuation of her "rights" when in the hands of a British Parliament than she would be if thrown on the mercies of her neighboring provinces in Canada. Consequently the proviso that all provinces must agree to proposed changes means chiefly that the other eight provinces must not be allowed to "put anything over" on Quebec. The proviso will of course similarly safeguard any other province.

Though there has been no clamor for changes in the B. N. A. act, it is possible important changes in it may follow its Canadianization. For example, defenders of the Canadian Senate have always declared there was no use agitating for its abolition because the Imperial Parliament would never consent. Similarly it was said the Imperial Parliament would never consent to the abolition of court appeals to the Privy Council. If now it becomes possible to abolish the Senate and appeals to the Privy Council by Canadian action alone, it will be up to the advocates of these measures to show how earnest they are.

Testing Engines.

The tractor, like the passenger automobile, or the truck, has for its most important feature the engine. This must always be given a most thorough test. There are several tests which a new machine is ordinarily put through preparatory to its being offered for sale.

First of all, the engine is run under some power other than its own. Then it is run under its own power, under load. While this is being done the final adjustments are made and a reading made.

Many companies do not make tests on perhaps more than four per cent. of their passenger cars. This is not necessary, because such a vehicle is not driven under full load.

An apparatus, known as the Prony brake, is an important instrument in determining the brake horsepower the engine is developing, and also to impose a continuous load on the engine, so as to test it. Brake horsepower is the power delivered at the flywheel, or at the power take-off pulley, if the engine is mounted in the chassis.

With the Prony brake it is possible to transform the power at the flywheel into force that may be measured with a scale in pounds, so that the engine efficiency may be determined.—Illustrated World.

Must Sell More and Buy Much Less

Sir John Willison Says That Trade Figures Disclose Unsatisfactory Situation

With the publication by the Department of Customs of Canadian figures for March and for the fiscal year ending with March, a highly unsatisfactory situation is disclosed, according to a statement issued today by Sir John Willison, president of the Canadian Reconstruction Association. Sir John pointed out that the excess of exports of Canadian produce over imports of merchandise for consumption was only $174,975,922, as compared with $296,738,004 in the fiscal year 1918-19, and $376,517,109 in 1917-18. Indeed the favorable balance of exports of Canadian produce over imports of merchandise for consumption is the lowest since 1914-15. An even more startling fact is that during the months of February and March of this year, imports of merchandise for consumption actually exceeded exports of Canadian produce. During March such excess amounted to more than $49,000,000. In this connection the Reconstruction Association president said:

"When it is remembered that our obligations abroad—representing interest on Canadian borrowings, payments to non-Canadian shipping interests and insurance companies remittances from residents in Canada to other countries, expenditures by Canadian travellers abroad, re-purchase by Canadians of Canadian property and securities formerly held outside this country, and Canadian credits to foreign buyers—amount at the present time to between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 per month, the seriousness of the situation will be realized. On this basis our exports during March fell short by something like $75,000,000 of paying our current bills.

In view of this situation the exchange discount on Canadian funds is not surprising and indeed, such discount may increase unless there be a sharp reduction of Canadian buying especially in the United States. There were only three months during the last fiscal year in which exports of Canadian produce exceeded imports of merchandise for consumption by as much as $25,000,000. During the other nine months we have balanced national income with national spending only by the sale of Canadian Securities in the United States and the mortgaging of Canadian wealth and resources to United States investors; and we paid a substantial premium to such investors to increase their already large mortgage on this Dominion. The present condition of our international account calls for drastic reduction in the purchase by the Canadian people of imported commodities if disaster is to be avoided."

May Day Demonstration Not Up To Expectations

PROGRAM OF RADICALS FALLS SHORT OF ADVANCE NOTICES — NO SERIOUS DISLOCATION OF INDUSTRY — HOLIDAY IN ENGLAND — TORONTO SOCIALIST DEMONSTRATION A FIZZLE.

LONDON, May 1.—Eight million workers are estimated to have participated in Great Britain's observance of May Day by taking the day off, parading and speech-making, but there were no interruptions to the nation's essential public services, probably partially due to the fact that Saturday is normally a half-holiday.

The move to impede railway traffic through the "work to the rules" policy proclaimed by the London and Liverpool Railwaymen's locals proved a fiasco, not a single instance of a hold-up due to this attempt to enforce the workers' demand for increased wages, unauthorized by the executive of the unions being reported.

The feature which gave more promise of distinguishing the day was the inauguration of an overall-wearing campaign similar to that in Canada and the United States by the Middle Class Union, calculated to cut down the price of clothing. The union's officials appeared at their offices this morning garbed in denim and issued appeals to the membership of the union to emulate their example.

Miners, factory hands, shipbuilders, dockers, builders, painters, engineers, agricultural workers and municipal employes made holiday and joined in locally-organized demonstrations or went to see the season's opening cricket matches, but no disorders were reported up to three o'clock this afternoon.

In London, several thousands paraded through the west end to Hyde Park headed by a contingent of former service men. They swarmed about twelve platforms from which 72 speakers made polyglot appeals for the betterment of working conditions, enthusiastically hailed the successes of the Russian Soviet government and declared that abhorrence at "the atrocities committed by the capitalist governments."

RED FLAG TORN DOWN

Chicago, May 1.—Petty radicalism only was in evidence throughout the mid-west today. Although officers generally were prepared for any "Red May Day" outbreak, they found little to excite them.

In Chicago, a red flag bearing the inscription in yellow "Hurrah for the Soviets," was nailed to a school flag pole. Lieut. John Dixon climbed the pole to supplant the red flag with the American colors. The event was turned into a patriotic meeting with several hundred spectators cheering and singing.

50 HURT, 300 ARRESTED

Paris, May 1.—First violence was recorded in France's May Day twenty four hour strike here late today.

Thirty policemen and twenty laborites were injured when workers tried to force police lines at the Place de la Republique.

About 300 persons were arrested.

Later Deputy Blanc was injured while leading a small procession of workers toward the Bourse. Police dispersed the demonstration.

TORONTO SOCIALISTS

Toronto, May 1.—The May Day celebration of Toronto Socialists in Queen's Park was a very quiet affair. Less than 200 people had congregated in disjointed groups by 3 o'clock when George Willishaw mounted the steps of the bandsand north of the Parliament Buildings and called the crowd together. Fully one-half of these were detectives, Provincial and Dominion police all in plain clothes.

Just before the speaking started a worker went among the crowd offering to sell a book entitled "Red Europe or the Real Facts About Russia," which he claimed was edited by a member of the British House of Commons. He met with no success, however, and a plainclothesman declared that if he were selling a book of recipes on how to make vodka his sales would be unlimited.

WINNIPEG PARADE

Winnipeg, May 1—Winnipeg's protest parade today turned out to be more or less of a "flivver." Instead of 40,000 which the O.B.U. organizers of the demonstration predicted would march, not more than 5,000 were in line. Manufacturers and employers generally report no dislocation of industry as result of "general holiday" all large shops and factories operating as usual.

NO DISTURBANCES IN U. S.

Washington, May 1.—The general strike called for May Day failed to materialize in so far as reports to the Government department showed.

The strike situation throughout the country is better than it has been for weeks, according to Hugh Kerwin, director of the Bureau of Conciliation Labor Department.

Kerwin was in possession of reports showing that in the week ending last night fewer strikes were reported to the Department than in the previous two weeks.

Outlaw Strike Still Costs Million a Day

WASHINGTON, May 3—The "outlaw" railroad strike still is costing nearly $1,000,000 a day, which the taxpayers will have to make good because of the five per cent guarantee of the Esch-Cummins law, it was estimated here.

Thousands of workers still are absent from their jobs and unhandled freight is piling up in all big cities, reports showed.

Railway union officials however, said the strike is dying down, despite the fact that 300 quit work Thursday in the Buffalo yards.

"The situation is getting better every day," said President Timothy Shea, of the brotherhood of railway firemen.

"The men see that the new railroad Labor Board is preparing to deal promptly with their demands. The Board will render a decision within six weeks unless I am much mistaken. The union officials will be able to conclude their arguments before the Board early next week."

Arguments of the railroad officials must be presented after union chiefs finish.

Capitalize Graves Of War Heroes

PARIS, May 1.—The most flagrant of deliberate battlefield profiteering appeared in the form of an advertisement in a Paris newspaper offering for sale Apremont Forest, the scene of some of the most heroic battles fought and won by United States troops in their Meuse-Argonne offensive.

The owner frankly announces that he wishes to capitalize the graves of fallen heroes. He states:

"This forest was the scene of famous fights throughout the war. Numerous historic points can be utilized for tourist purposes."

Americans in Paris expressed hot indignation at this callous irreverence toward a shrine sacred to thousands of bereaved parents. Every yard of the forest is bathed with the blood of the United States divisions which in September, 1918, stormed the German line.

Members of the American Legion here strongly urge that the Paris Legion purchase the forest and preserve it for posterity as a monument to the 10,000 United States dead lying near by in the cemetery of Romagne.

Says Low Tariff Would Hit Labor

TORONTO, May 3.—At the 20th annual meeting of the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, considerable exception was taken by Mr. S. R. Parsons to the 7 and a half per cent. war duty placed on certain importations, as Mr. Parsons contended that this duty had put the manufacturers in a wrong light with the public. He added that it was one of the hardest impositions ever put upon the manufacturers for it gave the opponents of tariff an argument to the effect that there is high tariff, when in reality, as he viewed it, there is only a small tariff. Statistics had been prepared to show that the average tariff on importations is slightly less than 28 per cent., including the war duty. This, he went on to point out, does not mean that the average protection is 28 per cent., for many of the manufacturers are obliged to import much of their material from the United States and as they have to pay duty on material, it cuts down their measure of protection. On the whole, he declared, it works out in such a way that the protection is very low, and in some cases it drops as low as 5 per cent. Mr. Parsons referred to the fact that there is a strong agitation under way in favor of free trade, or a marked lowering of tariff from its present basis, but he wanted to point out in this connection that any marked lowering of the tariff would be a dangerous thing, not only to the industries, but to the workers of Canada.

WOULD CLOSE FACTORIES

"In the interests of the working men," he went on, "I must point out that anything approaching free trade for Canada would mean that a large number of factories would have to close and every factory which closes means workmen thrown out of employment. There are a large number of United States firms which have branch factories in Canada, and they do not hesitate to say that if Canada gets free trade they will close their Canadian factories and do their business in Canada from their home factories. If any changes are made approaching free trade, it will mean that half of Canada's industrial population will be thrown out of work, and at least 1,000,000 workers would be affected, and the only result of that would be such a slump that the country could never recover from it in the history of any person here today."

Soldier Bonus Bill Held Up In Congress

There May Be Nothing Done This Session—Republicans Balk

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Soldier aid legislation in Congress faced indefinite delay, due to failure of House Republicans, meeting in caucus Friday night to endorse the bonus bill as reported from the Ways and Means Committee.

Outspoken dissatisfaction against several features of the measure broke suddenly in the Republican ranks. As a result all plans to force the bill through the House Monday have been abandoned.

Republican leaders admitted it probably will be impossible to pass the measure through both Houses before the Congressional recess early in June. Some members predicted no bonus legislation will be passed this session. Rep. Good, Iowa, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, declared the bill must undergo many modifications if it is to be passed by this Congress.'

The caucus after four hours of heated debate, adjourned to meet again, probably the latter part of next week, on the call of Chairman Towner, Iowa.

Pioneer Days Will Be Recalled

Historic Pageants Will Mark 250th Anniversary of Hudson Bay Co.

With Indian fur brigades and York boats loaded with peltries on the Red River, council fires burning at Lower Fort Garry and the smoke of the peace pipe scenting the air, the romance of wilderness days will live again at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company which will be inaugurated in Winnipeg, May 3.

Sir Robert Kindersley, G.B.E., latest of the distinguished line of Hudson's Bay Company governors, will be present from England, and will take part in the river pageant and in the subsequent street pageants which will be held successively in Edmonton, May 6-8; Calgary, May 11-13; Vancouver, May 15-19, and Victoria, May 21-24.

The Red River pageant, which promises to be one of the most interesting historical spectacles ever staged in Canada, will start from the site of old Fort Garry, early capital of the company's once vast empire and about which Winnipeg grew, and pass down stream eighteen miles to Lower Fort Garry. Tricked out in bravery of paint, feathers and beaded buckskin, Indians from a dozen tribes will man York boats and canoes in fur brigade formation. To do honor to the company to which their ancestors paid loyal allegiance Indians will come from the shores of Hudson Bay James Bay, Lake Superior fur country northern Saskatchewan, from the prairies and from the Rocky Mountains, Athabasca and British Columbia.

A flotilla of freight boats piled high with bales of furs will trail in the wake of the York boats in charge of factors and trappers in pioneer costumes. As it glides in long procession through a countryside famous in Hudson's Bay traditions, past the site of old Fort Douglas, the scenes of Lord Selkirk's Red River settlements and the battlefiel of Seven Oaks where Governor Semple and twenty men fell in conflict with their rivals of the Northwest Company, the pageant will seem to sail out of the past of 250 years ago.

When it reaches Lower Fort Garry whose stone buildings and battlemented stone walls still preserve the picturesqueness of early days, two ancient cannon at the gate will boom a salute from their rusty throats. Within the walls of the old stronghold where the first treaty was signed between Canada and the western Indians in 1871, Governor Kindersley will seal anew the ancient friendship between the Redmen and the Company by smoking the calumet of peace. The pipe, especially designed for the occasion, will bear carved upon its stem the toems of all the tribes and will be presented to the governor as a souvenir. Sir Robert will confer upon each of the braves a medal struck in honor of the anniversary and at a council at which the Indians will squat upon the ground in a wide semicircle, will reply to orations by the sachems and chieftains. After the speeches, the Indians will present a wampum belt to the governor in ratification of their pledges of fealty, and will partake of an old-fashioned feast.

Street pageants will be held in the other four cities. Floats will picture romantic episodes in the companys history and the development of the West and in the parades will appear Indians trappers, cowboys, dog teams, Red River carts, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Government Officials and civic bodies. In all the cities, moving pictures taken on a special expedition which spent seven months in the north and illustrating every phase of the fur trade, will be exhibited free to the public." During the pageants it is expected the five cities concerned wil declare holidays.

14-Year-Old Tells Tale Of Murder

Reveals How Two Came to Deaths—Man Shot and Robbed

MONTREAL, May 2—Paul Hecko, fourteen years of age, under a charge of manslaughter in another case, was the chief witness heard at Ste. Scholastique, Qeu., on Saturday when Arman Beauregard, sixteen years old, appeared before the court on a charge of having murdered James Brooks at Montfort last December.

Mrs. Brooks wife of the murdered man, was in court, and identified a wrist watch, knife, gun and various other articles as having belonged to her husband when he went on the hunting trip which ended in his death.

Hecko gave a long account of the alleged murder to Judge Goyette of Hull. He identified Armand Beauregard as the person with whom he went to Montfort. He said that he bought a $20 rifle and Beauregard gave him some cartridges. It was with this weapon that Hecko stated that he had killed a boy, in regard to which he is now under a charge of manslaughter. The two agreed to run away.

The went to Montfort and after leaving the train they stopped overnight at a small rest place on the highroad. Then Brooks came along. Later they went to another shack and Brooks followed them. Hecko said that Beauregard wanted to shoot him as he was about to enter but Hecko dissuaded him. In the morning, Hecko stated, Beauregard shot Brooks and rifled the body, threatening to kill Hecko unless he helped him. Later they returned to Montreal and sold the rifle and other articles taken from Brooks. Witness said he had not confessed before because he was frightened of Beauregard.

No Blunder Was Made At The Dardanelles

TORONTO, May 3—A first hand account of Gallipoli campaign was given at the luncheon of the Empire Club in the King Edward Hotel by Brig.-Gen. J. Penry Davey, C.M.G., who was on active service during the whole of the war as principal chaplain to His Majesty's Imperial Forces.

Caustic comment on the criticisms of arm-chair tacticians was made by General Davey, who said that their characterizing the Dardanelles campaign as a blender was the greatest mistake the critics at home had made during the whole war. The presence of the British and French forces on the Peninsula necessitated a supply of German and Austrian troops to reinforce the Turkish armies. In the early days of the war when things were looking very black on the western front, if the enemy could have taken his troops from Gallipoli he would have made at the least a much speedier and further advance into France and would have had much better chances of winning the war.

General Davey reviewed in considerable detail, with the aid of two maps the whole Dardanelles campaign from the time of landing in April, 1915 to the final evacuation in January, 1916. Always the British troops were pitted against vastly superior numbers of the enemy, and the feat of defending themselves against the flower of the Turkish army was accomplished at a heavy toll of life.

The difficulties of evacuating the Peninsula were even greater than those attending the landing, but the padres had promised that they would not leave until every dead soldier was buried and this was done.

Afterwards General Davey served in Egypt up to El Arish and in France at the third battle of Ypres, which ended in the capture of Passchendaele, and the first battle of Cambrai. He was with General Gough's staff as principle chaplain of the Fifth Army during the great retreat of that army in March, 1918. General Davey was mentioned six times in despatches and for his distinguished services was awarded the C.M.G.

Come to Griffin's this Wednesday, matinee or night and welcome the glad girl who has brought so much happiness into the world. "Pollyana" comes to Belleville after an extended engagement of two weeks at the Grand Opera House, Toronto.

WHAT IS ROMANY RYE?

"Romany Rye, one who sympathizes and associates with the gypsies, understands their language and knows their customs." That's what the dictionary says about the title Jack Holt bears as the romantic hero of Maurice Tourneur's new production "The Life Line" which is being shown at Griffin's to-night and Tuesday. And that describes him quite completely. He is the half-brother of an English lord, cheated of his estate by the present owner. He has taken up the life of gypsies and is their leader when the story opens. However, meeting the girl of his heart makes him determined to secure rightful heritage and he sets out to do it. He goes through several exciting adventures, being nearly burned to death in a theatre fire, thrown bound and gagged into the Thames, and rescuing his sweetheart off a sinking vessel by means of a breeches buoy before he accomplishes his purpose. The picture is declared to be rare entertainment, and Seena Owen, Pauline Stark, Tully Marshal, Wallace Beery and Lewis Cody help to make it so. "Fatty" Arbuckle is appearing on the same program in a very funny 2-reel comedy titled "Back Stage," three other attractions of merit are also announced for presentation on the same program.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA

"The Man Beneath," Sessue Hayakawas new photoplay is a drama which emphasizes in a powerful way the ban of blood which stands between the amalgamation of the Eastern and Western races. Dr. Chindi Ashutor, (Hayakawa) a famous Hindu specialist falls in love with Kate Erskine, a Scotch girl. Although she really loves the oriental, Kate realizes that marriage would make them both outcasts. Ashutor rescues Jimmie Bassett, the fiance of Mary Erskine, Kate's younger sister, from a band of black hand spies by putting Bassett into a state of coma resembling death, during a sea voyage from India to Scotland, and having him apparently buried at sea. The spies who are on board are deceived but subsequently discover that Ashutor substituted a dummy for Bassett's body. Trailing Bassett to Scotland, they are about to carry out the vengeance of the society, when Ashutor frustrates their plans. The means which he uses are tinctured strongly with oriental mysticism and esoteric influence and develops a situation that ends in a thrilling climax. The final scene between the Hindu and the Scotch girl shows Hayakawa in one of those quiet and tersely emotional scenes of which he is a master. The photography and settings are superb, while the story grips with its mystery and rapid sequence of action. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a highly amusing comedy titled "The Rajah." The closing chapter of the 'Fatal Fortune" serial has also been arranged for presentation in addition to the above feature offering.

Military Sunday At St. Thomas Church

Imposing Church Parade of Local Military Units

The first annual church parade of the 15th Argyll Light Infantry since re-organization after the war was held yesterday to St. Thomas Anglican Church and was largely attended. The parade was witnessed by a large number of citizens and the men in uniform presented a very smart appearance very creditable to their training.

In addition to the members of the Argyll Light Infantry the following branches of military service were represented:

Royal Air Force and Royal Naval Air Force.

34th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery.

Lts.-Cols. S. S. Lazier, L. W. Marsh, D. Barragar.

Great War Veterans, Officers Canadian Expeditionary Force.

High School and Public School Cadets and Boy Scouts.

The parade was under the command of Lieut. Col. Roscoe Vanderwater D. S. O., Commander of the Argyll Light Infantry, with Major S. E. Carman, and Capt. and Adjt. D. Thos. McManus.

Forming up at the Armories the parade marched to the church and after the service reformed and marched along Bridge street to Charles, down Charles to Victoria avenue, to Front and Bridge disbanding at the Armories.

On the return to the Armories from the church the battalion was accompanied by Major the Venerable Archdeacon Beamish Chaplain of the Argyll Light Infantry.

The drum and bugle bands of the battalion and the Boy Scouts accompanied the parade.

The excellent appearance and fine marching of the Boy Scouts and Cadets was a feature of the parade and elicited much favorable comment.

W. A. S. M. Hayes was in command of the Scouts.

The church was filled to its utmost capacity and special music appropriate to the occasion was rendered under direction of Organist and Choir Master Prof. Wheatley.

The Chaplain's Message

Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, Chaplain of the Argyll Light Infantry, preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon, very practical and instructive, taking his text from 1 Corinthians, 16: 13: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

Archdeacon Beamish extended a cordial welcome to the military representatives present, expressed hearty commendation at the evidences of revival of military activity for the defence of the Dominion, the Empire and the cause of right, justice and religious liberty. His message was voiced in the words of the text "quit ye like men, be strong." The great need of the day was the development of moral courage, the world was disturbed by abnormal conditions, unrest was manifest everywhere, there were cleavages in society and in the nation, cleavages of interest and class. In the strain and stress of everyday life, the struggle for existence, uncertainty, instability, unrest and general clashing of interests there was need for moral courage and steadiness. We must not be like the cynic who said, "The world is out of joint, and cursed spite that I was ever born to set it right." We must have moral courage, strength, personality and power which are necessary to carry the world through the maelstrom of unrest. It takes moral courage to face conditions as they are today and no matter what our vacation may be from the highest to the lowliest, play our parts like men. Needless optimism is not the essential required, what is needed is divine courage to enable us to play our parts like men.

Moral courage comes from faith and makes men strong.

Spiritual forces won the great war in the faith and courage of the soldier that right must triumph over might.

Faith has won great victories since the world began and right will always win the day for God is God and answers the prayers of those who have faith. Spiritual faith knows no defeat and triumphs in the end over every obstacle.

Courage comes from discipline and the law of life is sacrifice. Through sacrifice we attain the fuller and more abundant life. Discipline develops the character and purpose ready to meet all emergencies. The undisciplined nature is the sport of circumstance.

Faith, discipline, individuality and conviction are necessary to a life of the fullest service. The cause of all the world unrest was that men do not know what they want and lack real definite conviction and purpose.

Canadian soldiers were purified and ennobled by the experiences of war which had developed personality and initiative. Learn to be a person, said the Chaplain, self-reliant, and independent, an individual force in the world recognizing fellow men as brethren and all working harmoniously for the highest ideals.

A Word to the Boys

In closing Archdeacon Beamish had a special message for the boys in uniform, the Boy Scouts and Cadets present.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." His message to the boys was contained in the word WATCH:

W—for Words that were pure, honest and right.
A—for Actions, upright, clean and dependable.
T—for Thoughts full of heart interest for others.
C—for Companions chosen carefully.
H—for Hearts full of affection for parents and love of home as the centre of all good in life.

There was no better discipline than military training, physically, morally and spiritually.

The Personal God

The personal relation to the personal God was the summing up of his message to all present by Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, who urged all to develop their spiritual side and get close to the feet of the living Christ, the Perfect Man. Strength comes from God and the Elder Brother, strength to live a life of unselfishness and service, taking up our cross daily.

Parade Echoes.

Representatives of the Air Forces who took part in the parade were: Lieuts. Douglas Reid, "Ted" Yeomans, L. H. Wrightmeyer, A. S. Quick and French.

Officers in the parade were: Lieut.-Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., Capt. D. Thomas McManus, Adjt., Major S. E. Carman (commanding battalion), Major S. E. Vermilyea, Major A. L. Major Rev. Archdeacon G. R. Beamish, Chaplain A.L.I.

A notable feature of the parade was the number of officers who had been decorated for outstanding acts of courage and special service to the Empire on the field of battle. These included Lt.-Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., Major E. O. Keeler, M.C., Major A. L. Johnson, M.M., and Lieut. W. C. Jack, who has the enviable distinction of having been singled out on three different occasions for Royal honors, with the D.C.M., the M.M. and added Bar.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

On Sunday, May 2nd, 1st Belleville Troop Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs attended Garrison Church Parade, under command of W. A. S. M. Hayes, headed by their new bugle band which was very efficient, considering the short time it has been organized, also the necessity of having one or two more drums. The 15th Battalion kindly loaned an extra drum for the occasion. If some gentleman would like to help the band, there is room for an extra drum. This would greatly aid the Scouts and they would be better equipped for parades.

Women Spectators Fought Police At New York Wedding

Bride's Veil Torn While She Struggled To Enter Church

Four thousand well-dressed women massed on the sidewalk and steps of St. Thomas Church to view the Vanderbilt-Littleton nuptial party, got beyond the control of the police on the arrival of the bride in her automobile at 4 o'clock, and before Captain John W. O'Connor and Lieutenant Patrick McCarthy, in command, of the fifty policemen present, could regain control of the situation, the frantically curious women fought with one another in their efforts to get close to the bride.

So great was the crush about the sides of the canopy, which stretched from the curb to the south entrance of the edifice and through which the bride and her brother, Martin W. Littleton entered, that the bride's veil, which was said to be twelve feet long became tangled in a group of women, who had managed in the excitement to force their way under the canopy, and before her maid could gather up its folds it was slightly torn. Fashionable spring hats were crushed and gowns ruined in the confusion which followed the rush of the women. No less than two dozen women slipped under the sides of the canopy during the time the policemen were endeavoring to force back the throng of women and flanked the bride on both sides as she hastily made her way across the carpeted sidewalk and up the stone steps to the vestibule of the church.

To add to the troubles of the policemen, about five hundred women, who had taken up positions on the sidewalk, on the east side of Fifth Avenue, opposite the church, broke through the thin police cordon formed there, and despite the heavy vehicle traffic up and down the thoroughfare, grouped around the bride's automobile, many of them fighting for vantage points on the running boards and on the mud guards.

CHIROPRACTIC TEACHES THAT

Sciatica, female diseases, hip-joint disease, constipation and piles are the result of luxations in the lumbar vertebrae. Diseases of the lungs, heart, liver and stomach are produced by luxated thoracic vetebrae which impinge nerves proceeding to those organs. Many ailments of the head and face have their origin in displacements of the cervical vertebrae.

Whether we have a headache, too much heat (fever), constipation, dysentery or any other disease, the cause producing it must be adjusted.

Luxations of spinal vetebrae are caused by innumerable and various accidents—as heavy lifting falls, wrenches, train wrecks, etc.

While it is true that vertebrae of the spinal column are so interlocked by their articulating processes that complete luxations without fracture seldom occur; subluxations, slight displacements where the two articulating surfaces have lost only in part their natural connection, are much more common; in fact are of daily occurrence. These are not the complete dislocations known by the medical profession; yet a knowledge of them has done more to explain the time-worn question, 'What is the cause of diseases?" than all doctrines advanced by medical schools from the time of Hippocrates to the present day. Woodley and Woodley vs. Sadler and Wingrove, Tuesday, 7.30, Alleys Nos. 2 and 3.

Sulman and Martin vs. ——. Tuesday, 8.30, Alleys Nos. 2 and 3.

The total score will be recorded and at the end of the first round the eight high pairs will be drawn in an elimination final.

The Bowlers on Saturday night repeated on their Friday night performance and put up a score of 2190 to the Steel Company's 1972 thus winning the section. The G. T. R. Office Team who had looked like winners for their section had a total of 8125 while the Bowler's grand total was 8177. The Bowler's Friday night fixture was their best game to date as their first two scores were not very high. It was hardly expected that they would put up two such good scores in succession and they deserve great credit for the way they fought for the finals. Their Captain, Mayor Riggs, was unable to be with them in these two games but he deserves credit for getting together such a well balanced team. The Office team who was nosed out for the section started out very strong in this league and still hold the high score for one match of 2199, but they dropped down in each game since that and are now 52 points behind the Bowlers. The Saturday night game was as follows:

FOOTBALL.
G.T.R. vs. Ontario School for Deaf.

This match was played on the Pine Street grounds on Saturday afternoon before a large crowd of spectators. The railroaders won the toss and chose the strong wind behind them. By good combination and dribbling the ball was kept around the School boys' goal. Several corners were forced but none turned to account, the wind making it hard to judge the kicking. After twenty minutes of play Harvey scored for the Trunk with a good shot. The boys from the O.S.D. made several good runs but could not beat the G.T.R. defence. From a pass from Lancaster, Gorman scored the second goal for the Trunk. Half time came with a score of 2—0.

On changing ends the O. S. D. did the most pressing and put in many long shots, which Knott saved. By nice footwork they at last got close in goal and scored by drawing the goalkeeper out. After this the game became very keen on account of the O. S. D. boys trying hard to equalize. A couple of players were hurt and the game stopped for a few minutes. On resuming the Trunk came near scoring, the backs having to give a corner, which, however, was cleared.

During the last five minutes the O. S. D. boys did all the attacking, but could not notch a second goal, and the game ended with a score of 2 to 1 in favor of the G. T. R. The boys from the school are a fast lot of players and were beaten by experience and combination.

The Trunk have a good team and would like to arrange a game with Albert College and the Great War Veterans. The line up of the G. T. R. team on Saturday was: Goal, J. Knott; backs, W. Eves, A. Johnson; halves, H. Grant, J. Griffiths, C. Summers; forwards, W. Harvey, J. Gorman, H. Robinson, A. Knott, G. Lancaster.

WINNIPEG FALCONS GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Antwerp, May 3—The Falcons of Winnipeg, winners of the Olympic hockey championship, were presented with diplomas and commemorative medallions at the close of the first series of events in the Seventh Olympiade.

The ceremony consisted of presentation of diplomas to point winners and of medallions commemorative of the Olympic games to all competitors in the hockey and skating contests. The Olympic gold and silver and bronze medals are to be presented when completed through the various national embassies.

TORONTO OSLERS STRONGER

"More hitting power" was the cry of the followers of Osler city senior ball champions when they were trying to solve the shoots of "Lefty" Goyer, the Belleville southpaw, when fighting for the Ontario ball flag last fall. Oslers lacked the punch in the bat bag to beat Goyer. They admit it themselves today and realize it. If they had come through with any sort of a clout in the game at Scarboro Beach and at Peterboro they would have entered the finals.

This year the Oslers are going to have the punch and every department will be strengthened.—Toronto Star.

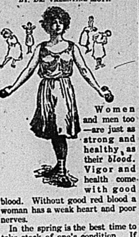
Strong Women
BY. DR. VALENTINE MOTT.



Women and men too—are just as strong and healthy as their blood. Vigor and health come with good blood. Without good red blood a woman has a weak heart and poor nerves.

In the spring is the best time to take stock of one's condition. If the blood is thin and watery, face pale or pimply, if one is tired and listless, generally weak, a Spring Tonic should be taken. An old-fashioned herbal remedy that was used by nearly everybody 50 years ago is still safe and sane because it contains no alcohol or narcotic. It is made of roots and herbs and called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If druggists do not keep it in tablet form, send 50 cents for a vial to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

PROSPECTOR DISAPPEARS

Prince Rupert, May 3—"Baldy" Salinas well known prospector who after many weary months of search discovered the valuable silver property of the Spanish Group at Alice Arm, has disappeared. No trace of his whereabouts can be found and his friends are anxious. Salinas is a Spaniard, young, short and swarthy. Long before Alice Arm blossomed forth as a boom silver camp, his unbounded faith in the district kept him prospecting through the hills. Despite privation and solitude, his courage never flagged. Finally, he struck a rich vein. Today the Spanish Group is decidedly worth owning. But the owner has been missing for weeks. He wandered away after a prolonged illness from influenza. Stacked in sacks at the Spanish group is enough silver ore to yield a modest fortune.

NO ORIENTALS ALLOWED

Vancouver, B. C., May 3—"No Orientals are desired in Stewart." So states a sign placed conspicuously on the wharf at Stewart, B. C., by the Stewart Citizens' Association officials who assert that they are looking to the welfare of the town, according to Mr. Morris Soskin, who has just arrived here from Stewart. Mr. Soskin says there is every indication that there will be a great influx into the town this summer. Special vessels have been chartered to carry machinery to the mines there. Many old Alaskan miners are on the scene.

"We'll do it, dearest. But I shall ask him for you, flat and plain, not wait for his blessing." And the lover then stepped close to her and attempted to give her one little kiss on the cheek, his lips alighting, however, on an outling tract of her back hair, by reason of an impulse that had caused her to turn her head with a jerk. "Yes and I'll put on my second-best suit and a clean collar, and black my boots as if 'twas Sunday. 'Twill have a good appearance, you see, and that's a great deal to start with."

"You won't wear that old waistcoat will you Dick?"

"Bless you, no! Why, I—"

"I didn't mean to be personal, dear Dick," she said, apologetically, fearing she had hurt his feelings. "'Tis a very nice waistcoat, but what I meant was, that though it is an excellent waistcoat for a settled-down man, it is not quite one for" she waited, and a blush expanded over her face, and then she went on again) "for going courting in."

"No, I'll wear my best winter one, with the leather lining, that mother made. It is a beautiful, handsome waistcoat inside, yes, as ever anybody saw. In fact, only the other day I unbuttoned it to show a chap that very lining, and he said it was the strongest handsomest lining you could wish to see on the king's waistcoat himself."

"I don't quite know what to wear," she said, as if her habitual indifference alone to dress had kept back so important a subject till now.

"Why, that blue dress you wore last week."

"Doesn't set well around the neck. I couldn't wear that."

"But I shan't care."

"No, you won't mind."

"Well, then, it's all right. Because you only care how you look to me, do you, dear? I only dress for you that's certain."

"Yes, but you see I couldn't appear in it again very well."

"Any strange gentleman you may meet in your journey might notice the set of it, I suppose, Fancy, men in love don't think so much about how they appear to other women." It was difficult to say whether a tone of playful banter or of gentle reproach prevailed in the speech.

"Well, then, Dick," she said, with a good-humored frankness, "I'll own it, I shouldn't like a stranger to see me dressed badly, even though I am in love. 'Tis our nature, I suppose."

"You perfect woman!"

"Yes; if you lay the stress on 'woman,'" she murmured, looking at a group of hollyhocks in flower, round which a crowd of butterflies had gathered like females round a bonnet-shop.

"But about the dress. Why not wear the one you wore at our party?"

"That sets well, but a girl, of the name of Bet Taylor, who lives near our house, has had one made almost like it—only in pattern, though of miserably cheap stuff—and I couldn't wear it on that account. Dear me, I am afraid I can't go now!"

"Oh, yes; you must. I know you will!" said Dick, with dismay. "Why not wear the one you've got on?"

"What! this old one! After all, I think that by wearing my gray one Saturday, I can make the blue one do for Sunday. Yes, I will. A hat or a bonnet, which shall it be? Which do I look best in?"

"Well I think the bonnet is nicest more quiet and matronly."

"What's the objection to the hat? Does it make me look old?"

"Oh, no; the hat is well enough; but it makes you look rather too—you won't mind me saying it, dear?"

"Not at all, for I shall wear the bonnet."

—"Rather too coquettish and flirty for an engaged young woman."

She reflected a minute. "Yes, yes. Still, after all, the hat would do best hats are best, you see. Yes, I must wear the hat, dear Dicky, because I ought to wear a hat, you know."

PART IV—CHAPTER I

Dick, dressed in his "second-best" suit, burst into Fancy's sitting room with a glow of pleasure on his face.

It was two o'clock on Friday, the day before Fancy's contemplated visit to her father and for some reason connected with cleaning the school, the children had had given them this Friday afternoon for pastime, in addition to the usual Saturday.

"Fancy it happens just right that it is a leisure half day with you. Smart is lame in his near-foot-afore, and so, as I can't do anything, I've made a holiday afternoon of it, and am coming for you to go nutting with me."

She was sitting by the window with a blue dress lying across her lap, and the scissors in her hand.

"Go nutting! Yes. But I'm afraid I can't go for an hour or so."

BACK TO THE LAND.

Potatoes at six dollars per bag and other necessary articles of diet in proportion may arouse thoughts of resentment and anxxiety, but they also arouse thoughts of the necessity of meeting the high cost of living by practical methods. Back to the land should be a very popular cry just now when everything eatable which comes from the ground commands such high prices. The war gardens or backyard gardens must again be cultivated to the limit and production increased to the fullest extent possible in order to cope sanely and intelligently with present conditions. During the war increased production was encouraged by the municipality even to the extent of plowing up vacant lots and back yards for garden purposes. A survey should be made at once by the municipality of all available resources in vacant land for agricultural purposes and plans made to help citizens to raise as much garden stuff as possible.

Increased production is more necessary now than ever, and every citizen should give this matter earnest thought and plan to aid in a general movement to produce foodstuffs. Indignation meetings and proposed boycotts are but temporary measures at best and the only effective way to cope with the steady climb in the price of necessities is by increased production, and the backyard garden and vacant lot proposition if taken up vigorously will go far to ameliorate conditions fast becoming unbearable.

WHEN THE OLD BOYS RETURN.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific in Canada and the United States, and in many distant lands, Belleville Old Boys and Belleville Old Girls are receiving glad messages of good cheer that in July there will be a gathering of the Clan Belleville in the good old city of their birth and childhood associations at which all who can will be present to exchange reminiscences and live again the days of Auld Lang Syne when we were all boys and girls together. Already preparations are being made for the trek back home for the great occasion of meeting so many friends whom the march of time has separated by many weary miles. The Home Folks are making every preparation for a joyous re-union, and no one will miss this occasion who can possibly be present. The intervention of the war caused an interruption in these festive occasions, but all who have ever attended an Old Boys Reunion in Belleville know that it is the last word in sociability and entertainment and the true get-together spirit. The stories of long ago, the scenes, some changed, some the same as of yore, the pranks played, the old swimming hole, and all the many revered spots of childhood and young man and womanhood—school days and early ambitions—how good it is to live them all again!

Love of the Old Home Town is firmly rooted in all of our hearts, and is expressed very appropriately by Edgar A. Guest, the "poet of the people," in his verses on "The Home Town Paper," as follows:

It's like a smiling, friendly face,
It's like a voice you long have known,
You see it in some distance place
And rush to claim it for your own.
The paper from your old home town
Has bridged the long and dreary miles
And with it you can settle down
Among familiar tears and smiles.

It speaks for every friend you know.
It tells of scenes you yearn to see;
It brings back days of long ago
And tells of joys that are to be.
And as you run its columns o'er
Your yesterdays come trooping back;
You fancy you're at home once more,
And golden seem the letters black.

Its speech is one you understand,
It tells of griefs that you can share,
It brings you, in that foreign land,
Glad messages to banish care,
There, among scenes and faces strange,
The old home paper seems to be
The faithful friend that doesn't change,
A friend that you are glad to see.

I know not just what heaven is like,
Nor just what joys beyond life's tide
Await for me, when death shall strike
And I shall reach the other side.
But this I know when I have gone
To dwell in realms divinely fair,
My soul will yearn to look upon
The old home paper over there.

With the Poles on one side and the Japs on the other hammering away at them, the Russian Bolsheviks are beginning to clamor for Peace Soup.

Toronto has gone back to rice and spaghetti since potatoes joined the luxury class. Another excuse for the restaurants to serve smaller portions at higher prices.

Ontario Legislators have joined in the general demand for more wages, but if they would busy themselves in earnest efforts to lower prices they might produce conditions wherein higher wages would not seem so necessary.

May Day, 1920, was planned as the occasion of a demonstration in force by the Radicals, or Reds, as they are called, the world over. The demonstration was a fizzle, for the deep common sense of the people rises above the weird fantastical theories of radicals who believe that many words and little work can solve all the problems of this disturbed old world.

OTHER VIEWS

Divorce and The Clergy
Toronto Star

One Ottawa Senator wants the divorce business left in the hands of the clergy, but his reasoning looks faulty. The clergy's practical monopoly of the marriage business is based on the theory that marriages are made in Heaven but there's no such idea regarding the location of the place where divorces are manufactured.

British Pluck
Calgary Herald

There is a note of optimism in the new British budget that sounds well. If Britain is able to do all that Austen Chamberlain hopes within the next year there will be no question as to her world position. As before the war she will stand pre-eminent in both finance and industry.

Well, why shouldn't bachelors be taxed. Most of them are making as much money as the man who has to support a wife and family. Legislators need more revenue; those who have most should give most. Nevermind the spinsters, but tax the bachelors.

THE POET'S CORNER

THE ISLAND OF THE NIGHT

Samuel Minturn Peck in Boston Transcript

Whether the moments lag or fly
'Neath cloud or shine at toil or play;
Whether our schemes go right or wry
As wears along the moiling day
There comes at last an hour that's blest
At last God speeds the parting light
And human hearts awhile may rest
Upon the Island of the Night.

The wings of Peace are as the dusk,
Her breast is like the evening sky,
Her breath is as the scent of musk
Afloat where sleeping blossoms lie;
And there's the home of Peace but where
Sweet Darkness soothes the aching sight
And human brains are reft of care
Upon the Island of the Night?
I love the daylight-tide; yet oft
I weary—weary of its face;
Winsome songs there are and soft,
But silence owns the tenderest grace;
And if I must have sound, give me
The murmur of the breeze in flight
Wafting the voice of Memory
Across the Island of the Night.

Beauty there is that needs no ray
Save that mild lustre of the stars,
And loveliness the glare of day
With bolder radiance but mars;
So there are hopes with shyest gleams
That even the eye of Dawn would blight;
And such the fairy-footed dreams
That haunt the Island of the Night.

"Let there be light!" God said, and then
Beholding all that was revealed
Within the anguished breasts of men
How much there needed to be healed—
He sent the balm of dusk below
And kindly hid the wounding light
That human hearts sweet rest might know
Upon the Island of the Night.

JUDGMENT WENT AGAINST UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS

Regina, May 1—Judgment was rendered in the Court of King's Bench by the three judges who were appointed to exercise the university powers conferred by the University of Saskatchewan Act upon the Lieutenant-Governor in the matter of the dismissal of Professors McLauren, Hogg, and MacKay and Mr. S. The judgment unanimously finds that the Board of Governors in dismissing the men, not only acted strictly within their powers, but that "the facts disclosed in this exhaustive inquiry of twelve days prove that the course taken by the president and the board was necessary, that a state of affairs in the university had been created such as made it impossible that these men should remain any longer in the service of the univer-

ENGINEER'S PROMPT ACTION SAVES SECTIONMAN'S LIFE

Stratford, May 1—Only the prompt action of the engineer in charge of train No. 80, eastbound prevented Mr. J. Miller, a sectionman of the Grand Trunk, residing at Bright, from being ground to pieces underneath the engine. Mr. Miller, who was called to the derailment near Tavistock was returning to his home when he suffered a stroke, falling between the rails, and was there discovered by the engineer on train No. 80 which was detoured via Stratford on account of the derailment at London. The engineer brought his train to a standstill just in time. When picked up Mr. Miller was unconscious. He was taken to his home in Bright and is now under the doctor's care.

New Record Is Set By Tanlac

Nearly 75000 Bottles Sold in Toronto Alone.—Hundreds Testify to Merits

Remarkable, though it may seem, nearly seventy-five thousand bottles of Tanlac have been sold and distributed in Toronto in less than three years and the wonderful demand continues unabated, and what is true of Toronto is likewise true of the entire Province of Ontario.

In one day alone recently in Toronto two hundred and eighty well known people, by actual count, called at Tamblyn's Drug Store to obtain the medicine and to tell of the benefits they have derived from its use. Among the number was John McElroy, of 39 Jarvis Street, Toronto. In relating his experience with the medicine, Mr. McElroy said:

"For several years I suffered with indigestion and a disordered liver as a result of which I had frequent bilious attacks and headaches. When these attacks came on my eyes would get red and swollen and my tongue all white I would have a dull heavy feeling and lacked all ambition to do things. My sleep at night was spoiled by restlessness and I always get up in the mornings feeling tired out.

'It wasn't until I tried Tanlac that I found anything to really help me. I had tried many other medicines but they never seemed to suit my case. But Tanlac put me into good shape in a very short while. My appetite picked up so fast that I am hungry nearly all the time. I found the tablets of great benefit in regulating my liver, and I never have biliousness or headaches now. I sleep well at night and have got twice the life and energy that I used to have. I have found Tanlac to be a splendid medicine and I'm satisfied that it's the very best thing for troubles like I had."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

Called By Death

CHARLES FANNING

(Havelock Standard)

The attack of influenza and consequent pneumonia contracted by Postmaster Charles Fanning last week, culminated on Tuesday evening in his death. For days hundreds of our citizens had been anxiously enquiring as to the state of his health, and the dread news of his demise has caused general gloom in Havelock and this district, where he was so well known and so highly esteemed by old and young. Mr. Fanning who has been postmaster in Havelock for the past fifteen years succeeding Mr. A. V. Fuller has won golden opinions from all classes, during his regime for the eminently painstaking and efficient services rendered to the public. As an evidence of his popularity it might be mentioned that, although a staunch Liberal in politics, yet there has never been a suggestion made that he be removed from his government office, although thousands of Liberal postmasters throughout the Dominion have been supplanted by those of Conservative opinions. Mr. Fanning is survived by his widow and one sister, Mrs. J. Maidens, of Belleville, and two brothers, George H., of Graham R. R. District and W. A. Fanning of Lindsay. The funeral took place at the Maple Grove Cemetery on Thursday, April 29, 1920.

HERBERT R. BLAKLEY

On April 6th, Mr. Herbert R. Blakley, a yeoman, residing at Eldorado, Madoc Township had the misfortune to break his left leg. He was well known and much respected in the community. A widow and four children survive.

ALBERT SALISBURY

Mr. Albert Salisbury an aged resident of Crofton, Prince Edward County, passed away on Saturday evening Deceased was 79 years of age and all his life was spent in the adjoining county. He was a prosperous farmer. A widow, one son and two daughters survive. The son, Henry B., resides in Belleville and the daughters are Mrs. B. Doolittle of this city and Mrs. George Tompsett, of Wellington.

Historical Pictures For O.S.D.

The Minister of Education for Ontario has presented the Ontario School for the Deaf with 9 large beautiful, historical pictures, in handsome oak frames, for hanging upon the walls of the corridors. The titles are:

"Queen Elizabeth opens the first Exchange, A. D. 1570. Painted by Earnest Crofts.

King Alfred the Great rebuilding the walls of London. A.D. 875. Painted by Frank S. Salisbury.

Charles I. demanding the five members at Guild Hall, A. D. 1641. Painted by S. J. Solomon R. A.

Cardinal Wolsley at the trial of Katharine of Arragon—Henry VIII at Blackfairs, A. D. 1529. Painted by Frank S. Salisbury.

King John sealing the Magna Charta of England, A. D. 1215. Painted by G. Harcourt.

The dawn of British Commerce. Phoenicians trading with the Early Britons. Painted by Lord Leighton.

The Founding of the Bank of England, A. D. 1694. Painted by G. Harcourt.

Nelson going on Board Ship. Painted by Andrew C. Gow.

Nelson's Last Signal at Trafalgar. Painted by Andrew C. Gow.

These pictures which reproduce with wonderful fidelity the tints of the original paintings were made in England, and as may be surmised from the names of the artists are historically correct and most artistic in design and coloring. Formerly such prints were produced only in Germany, but English houses have begun to turn out the same kind of work and these copies were sent to the Department of Education as samples of the quality of work that can be done in England and they certainly equal, if they do not excel, any similar German productions.

Dr. Coughlin, superintendent, the members of the staff and the pupils generally very much appreciate the generosity of the Minister in sending these splendid works of art, which will greatly beautify the school and at the same time help to develop the artistic tastes of the pupils and impress on their minds the great historic events they depict.

No Criminal Cases At High Court

The Spring Sitting of the High Court of Justice opened in this city this afternoon before the Hon. Mr. Justice Logie.

Mr. Carnew, who had been appointed as Crown Prosecutor, announced that there was no criminal business before the court.

After the court had been formally opened Mr. Carnew as President of the County of Hastings Law Association extended on behalf of the Association a hearty welcome to Hon. Justice Logie upon this his first official visit to the city as presiding over the court. Mr. Carnew stated that His Lordship's career had been watched and as a member of the bar; as a representative of the country and now as a Judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario it had been one of great success. The wish was that His Lordship might be spared many years to grace the bench an dthat his visits to Belleville might be often.

In replying Justice Logie thanked Mr. Carnew for his kindly references and stated that he had heard considerable about Belleville and especially when he was a student at Queen's University at Kingston. It was a pleasure for him to come to Belleville and to receive such a warm welcome. The city has a Provincial reputation and especially Hotel Quinte situated therein. He hoped all members of the bar would be successful in their practice.

AMERICAN ACTRESS HOOTED IN LONDON

London, May 3.—A gallery mob broke up the first production of J. Hartley Manners' play "A Night In Rome" at the Garrick Theatre. The curtain was lowered soon after the start of the second act.

Manager Charles Cochrane came before the curtain and said he would not permit Miss Laurette Taylor to proceed in the face of such disturbances, and the audience dispersed amid a great uproar.

Employes of the theatre advanced the opinion that the trouble was organized by enthusiastic enemies of Mr. Cochrane, and that it was in no sense an anti-American demonstration.

London newspapers indignantly denounce as a disgraceful and amazing affair the disturbance at the Garrick Theatre, which they describe at great length. They declare that the scene was unprecedented since the riots in Covent Garden Theatre in 1809 in connection with the prices charged for seats.

There is general agreement among the newspapers that the demonstration was an organized one, and as proof of this cite a number of packages of snuff and evil-smelling compounds were thrown towards the stage Most of these, however, fell in the audience. As to who the opposition was directed against there is conjecture. All the writers express sympathy with Miss Taylor and many actors, actresses and other persons connected with the stage in interviews voice their indignation over the incident and their sympathy for Miss Taylor. In a joint letter to the Times, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Cyril Maude, Gerald Du Marier and other noted theatrical men assure Miss Taylor that the esteem and affection of the London public toward her are equal to the feeling held for her in the United States.

Manager Cochrane says he will offer a reward of 500 pounds sterling for the discovery of the organizer of the disturbance.

LODGE FLAYED BY PRIEST.

Winnipeg, May 3.—"It is a mortal sin for a Catholic to listen to lectures by Sir Oliver Lodge and other such so-called spiritualists," Rev. Father F. MacGregor told his congregation in St. Mary's Cathedral, upon the eve of Sir Oliver's arrival here to deliver a series of addresses. "It would be a much more spiritual man than he to whom God would give His inspirations."

He said, further, that good Catholics would put no faith in such foolishness as a Ouija board.

Pinnacle Street Railway Again Before Council

ANOTHER EFFORT TO BE MADE TO INDUCE G. T. R. TO MOVE RAILS TO CENTRE OF STREET—PETITION IN FAVOR OF CHANGE PRESENTED — HOUSING PROPOSITION—COUNCIL TO ENCOURAGE CULTIVATION OF VACANT LOTS.

A considerable portion of the time of the City Council was taken up last night in a discussion in reference to Pinnacle street paving and the removal of the G. T. R. track from the west side of the street to the centre of the street. Arguments pro and con were given as to the advisability of removal. A motion was finally adopted asking the railway company to co-operate with the city in the matter, and conform to the street grade; move the rails and place crushed stone and tarvia between. Pending this being done work will be deferred for the time being.

Resolutions were adopted for the laying down of a number of granolithic walks in the city.

After some discussion a motion to allow citizens generally to keep pigs was voted down.

A committee was appointed to take some action in regard to the housing proposition the necessity being very apparent.

A special committee to be known as "More Production Committee" was appointed, the object being to encourage the cultivation of vacant lots about the city. Some other matters of minor importance were considered at the session.

Members present were: Mayor W. B. Riggs, Aldermen Woodley, Ostrom, Hanna, Demarsh, Doyle, Wensley, Adams, Bone and Ponton.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Reports of committees, communications, etc., were laid upon the table and on motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc., Ald Hanna in the chair.

The accounts recommended to be paid were passed and the following recommendations were disposed of:

Engineer Dismissed

That the dismissal of the third engineer at the pump house by the manager of the water works be confirmed.—Adopted.

A petition was presented requesting that Mr. Davidson, the party referred to, be given an opportunity of appearing before the Water Works Committee in this matter.

A motion prevailed to refer the matter to the Water Works Committee.

That the tender of Mr. Thomas Harris be accepted for one year from May 15th, 1920 at a price of $6,200 for garbage collection.

That the Salvation Army be allowed the privilege of placing a banner across Front street to assist in advertising their campaign.—Adopted.

That a grant of $100 be made towards the expense of improving the vacant property near the union station on Church street.—Adopted.

That the City Treasurer, Mr. Price, be given two months' leave of absence on account of ill health and that Mr. Fredericks act as treasurer during his absence.—Adopted.

That a transfer of tobacco and cigar license be allowed to C. H. McBride who has purchased the business operated by Mr. Wardner at 139 Victoria Ave.—Adopted.

That the tender of the Schuster Co. be accepted for a supply of Portland cement up to 2000 barrels at a price of $3.49 per barrel less an allowance of 20 cents each for sacks returned.—Adopted.

Pinnacle Street Pavement

Recommended that an application be made immediately to the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada to hold a special session at Belleville in the near future with representatives from the City Council, Grand Trunk Railway, Chamber of Commerce and citizens for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory decision regarding the permanent pavement on Pinnacle street and the removal of the railway tracks and that in the meantime paving be deferred and that this recommendation be referred to the city solicitor for action.

A largely signed petition was presented to the Council asking that the railway track be removed from off Pinnacle street or removed to the centre of the street.

Mr. J. O. Herity being called upon said the petition presented spoke for itself.

Mr. J. D. MacMillan, general superintendent of this division of the G. T. R., said he had been advised that the Council had asked the G. T. R. railway to put the track in first class condition and the railway was perfectly willing to do so. The chief engineer thought it would be better to use crushed stone and tarvia to bind the stone between the rails instead of planking between the rails.

Ald. Bone said it was not desirious of doing anything that would be detrimental to the G. T. R. The removal of the tracks altogether would be a serious matter for some of the industries of the city. He thought that if the track was moved into the centre of the street it would be an improvement.

Mr. MacMillan—The G. T. R. was prepared to meet the citizens fairly in this matter.

Ald Adams thought the resolution passed at the last meeting of the council should not be carried out. Mr. McMillan's promises were good.

Ald. Demarsh was of the opinion that the track should be in the centre of the street in accordance to the petition presented to the Council.

Ald. Hanna—There is every prospect that there would be in the future more tonnage than ever go over this railway on Pinnacle street.

Mr. J. A. Higgs said this was the home of the G. T. R. and he would like to see this matter satisfactorily settled.

In answer to a question City Engineer Mill said if the railway was removed to the centre of the street it would be partially over the sewer. The track could not be moved any more westward owing to the trees.

Ald. Ponton—We are contemplating improvement of streets in Belleville and Pinnacle street was one of them. It was a legal question whether the Board of Railway Commissioners had the power to order the G. T. R. to remove the track to the centre of the street. We do not desire to antagonize the G. T. R. or the citizens in this matter, but put down a pavement.

Ald. Ostrom—We desire to make Pinnacle street one of the best streets in the city and he thought the G. T. R. could conform with the request to place the track in the centre of the street. All we want is co-operation in this matter.

Mr. McMillan—The Grand Trunk wants to work in harmony in this matter with the Council. We all have the interest of the city at heart.

Ald Bone stated that he would introduce a motion relative to the matter and to conform to the request that the track be in the centre of the street.

Ald. Ostrom said he would support the motion.

Ald. Adams said he did not object to the moving of the track to the centre of the street if it could be done without inconvenience..

City Engineer—The placing of the track over the sewer would not cause inconvenience.

Mayor Riggs asked Mr. McMillan if there was any objection as to the moving of the track.

Mr. McMillan was in favor of Ald. Bone's motion excepting the removal of the tracks. There were objections to removing the track and it would hold up traffic for weeks, and would also interfere as to interswitching. If you have the track in the centre the unloading of cars will be objectionable. Our agreement says the track must be kept in shape. He was ashamed of the track in its present condition but it could not be put in shape during the war. As to the placing of the track in the centre of the street he could not say anything definite in the matter as he had no authority to do so.

Ald. Wensley said that if the track was in the centre of the street the latter would be blocked considerable of the time. The safest thing to do is to leave the track where it is.

Ald. Bone—A by-law could be passed as to unloading being done on one side of the track.

Ald. Ostrom—We want decision on this matter right away.

Ald. Woodley—There is a by-law prohibiting the unloading of cars north of Dundas street but it has not been in force. The street must be paved and the question now is, where will the track be placed?

Mr. Moonie—If the track is placed in the centre of the street there are

"ON THE TRENTON ROAD"

(Written and Illustrated by Mr. and Mrs. James Blomfield for the Christian Science Monitor, Boston).

In early morning, without the summer cottage on the margin of Lake Ontario's famous Bay of Quinte, there drifted over the water from the other side of the bay a shrilling, jovial strain of brass-band music. The Insurgent listened.

"I wonder what they are playing that for?" she queried, apparently of a woodpecker who, upon a tree trunk just over her head, his head cocked at an impossible angle to his major axis, was regarding her with an alertly bright eye. In the lakeside isolation we had almost lost count of days.

"What is it?" asked the matter-of-fact partner, poising an ebullient pot over the stove that cast breakfast-promising odors upon the air.

"Shade of good Uncle Toby! Don't you know 'Lilliburlero' when you hear it?" asked the Insurgent. And as the tune changed, she continued, "There's 'Boyne Water' now; and just see that!"

She pointed across the pasture to the road, where passed an automobile decked with orange ribbons, rosettes, streamers and pennants. These last two things, "Boyne Water" and the decorations on the just-passed car, repeated at intervals the morning through on other autos, buggies and farm wagons traversing the Trenton Road, confirmed the intimation conveyed by the air beloved of Uncle Toby. It was the 12th of July the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne dedicated by Orange lodges of Canada and the world over to the commemoration of great King William of glorious memory and the ascendancy of Protestantism in Great Britain.

The Orange Celebration

The first direct word of it was from the wife of a farmer delivering us our morning's milk. Dressed as for a day of special import, she informed us that with her husband and boys they were going "back up" for the Orange celebration at Tweed, a town some distance away, which was only one of many taking place in various communities up and down the bay and back in the country. They were going, too, it was announced, regardless of dread threats of censure and open hostilities made by the opposing faction. In face of this those interested went forward to their business of the day in a quiet unconcern that brought forth the comment: "These Canadians are slow in moving and easy in speech but you just tickle them under the skin on something they care about and bingo! you've started something."

All morning long the stream of orange-decorated vehicles passed up on the road, easily visible from the cottage verandah. All day long, till sundown, one picked up vagrant strains of melody, sometimes brassy, sometimes merely of fife and drum, drifting over the water one way, or borne on the easy wind from inland, the other. Among them besides "Lilliburlero" and "Boyne Water" were identified that rolling march of "The Old Line," "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "The Maple Leaf Forever," and toward evening, "God Save the King."

The Trenton Stage

Two days later we heard a bit more of it. We were on the Trenton stage. This was a many-windowed gayly, yellow motor bus with a landscape in a panel on either side. It was loud, lumbering, and laden; even its roof carrying boxes and packages. We were the only passengers and shared the carpet-seated interior with milk cans and boxes, fruit boxes and sundry packages of effects and merchandise besides His Majesty's mails. The driver Ryckman, cheerfully grim had a wry but warning smile, and manners frankly friendly, but far on the further side of familiarity. He was an Orangeman all through his career. He had missed the parade on Saturday for the first time in 18 years. But then, people on his route depended on him, so to say, let alone the mails.

A Passing Comrade

Passing a lumber wagon loaded with crushed granite, its driver, a large man in blue overalls, with overhanging eyebrows like penthouse roofs, and mustache like a gray waterfall, hailed Ryckman in jovial rebuke: "Where were you Saturday?"

This brought forth an explanatory but not opologetic confession of absence with a kindly raillery on both sides. As we parted Ryckman remarked: "He doesn't belong to my lodge, but he's a brother. He carried the banner in the parade for five years. Orangemen are strong here. I belong to the banner lodge of eastern Ontario. It has 185 members, and the population of the town isn't more than about 500. That's a big lot for that little town—Frankford. Were you up there?"

We remembered a village street, communal centre for an array of quietly prosperous homesteads and farms upon the River Trent, set in a valley of utter loveliness. He continued: "It's got the biggest membership against district population of any lodge in eastern Ontario. Did you hear how many turned out for the big parades on Saturday. Well at Tweed, whose population is 5,000, they estimate there were 10,000 people from outside. At Cobourg they reckoned to have had 12,000, besides its ordinary population of 10000 or so, and at Napanee, which isn't any bigger than Tweed ,they say there were 8000 from out of town."

A comment on his name brought from the driver confirmation of the suspicion that he was Dutch by descent: old New Amsterdam—New York Dutch. His forbears in Canada had been part of that following, who under the leadership of Major Van Alstine in the early 1780s, protestant against the American Revolution, had come up and across Lake Ontario and settled in Welland County. Here, with, as he remarked, "nothing more than a broadax and a suit of clothes" and that likely lent them by Governor Haldimand they had attacked anew the Ontario forest wilderness, laying again, as had their ancestors in New York State 130 years before, the foundation of a Dominion now in being. Of course, our stage driver, easy though his voice was, and his diction free from colloquial carelessness, did not phrase it so verbatim but that was its substance.

He was of United Empire Loyalist descent then. He was, and rather thought it something to live up to. To a question on national points of view, he preferred the notion of the one and undivided Empire, of associated free nations. "It was a mistake," he said, "to split up the English-speaking peoples that way."

Road Menders

Here some road menders greeted him. "There's some more of 'em," he remarked. "Lodge brothers. We can tell each other as far off as we can see ourselves."

The stage clanked, popped and rattled, knocked and bumped, lurched, swayed and rolled along. It almost but not quite stopped at this and that galvanized letter box, atop its roadside, on a signal of a swinging arm turned at right angles to the road, sign of mail within to be collected and mailed in the town ahead.. As the bus all but stopped, thrusting out a hand, Ryckman deftly lifted the flap, extracting letters and postcards, often money for postage with them and turned the box back on its post—the other hand never leaving the wheel —and dropped the mail into a bag under the forward window with almost a single motion. Almost every box had mail in it. He commented: "There's always a lot of letters to mail Monday morning. It's the duty of the day before. There's hardly anything the rest of the week."

Needs of Housewives

Sundry boxes and parcels with newspapers taken from a box between the driver's feet were delivered along the way. There were frequent hailings of women in dooryards. More than once Ryckman noted down the needs of some housewife from a box of groceries to a yard of tape or a bottle of ink to be brought out and delivered on his return trip. He took books to be exchanged at the town library. He seemed to be a traveling bureau of neighborhood and family information. A breathless woman accompanied by an anxious looking man, queried: "Oh Mr. Ryckman, did you learn whether Mrs. Hollick from New York and her mother were staying at Twelve O'clock Point, four miles the other side of Trenton? I asked you about that last week.."

"Why, certainly, ma'am." Extracting a much-thumbed notebook from an upper vest pocket, he scanned a closely pencilled page of memoranda, and announced: "Mrs. Hollick is at Twelve O'Clock Point with—" and he enumerated the names of a dozen people. "Her mother, Mrs. Rapley, is in Tweed, staying with Mrs. Locksall and expects to be there till Wednesday. Then she goes to Madoc till Friday, and "she'll pass this way to Twelve O'Clock Point next Saturday.

Germany Prefers Talk To Action

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, May 4.—Premier Millerand is going to London next week to confer with Premier Lloyd George regarding financial questions. It is expected an agreement will be reached upon the line of action to be adopted concerning Germany with regard to the execution of the reparation clauses of the Versailles treaty. The premiers will also work out the basis of discussions to be held with the German representatives at the meeting on May 23 in line with the understanding reached by the Supreme Council at San Remo that the Allies would not discuss before the Germans any questions upon which they were not in accord among themselves.

Train Stopped By Explosion

MONTREAL, May 4.—James Morin and John Landrigan were killed and a Grand Trunk train in motion was stopped when five tons of nitroglycerine exploded at the plant of the Canadian Explosives Company, at McMasterville, Quebec. The portion of the plant containing the nitro-glycerine, and in which Morin and Landrigan were working, was entirely destroyed. The Grand Trunk train was proceeding across a bridge over the Richelieu River, nearly a mile away, and was stopped by the force of the wind caused. All the windows in the train were smashed.

The cause of the explosion is not known.

Two More Americans Murdered In Mexico

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The murder of two more Americans in Mexico reported today to the State Department, accentuated the concern with which officials here are watching developments beyond the border.

Requests for additional warship protection at points on the east coast of Mexico already have been forwarded to the Navy by the State Department.

According to despatches from Agua Prieta, Sonora, advance forces of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, revolutionary leader operating in southern Mexico, have reached Texcoco, four miles from San Lazaro, the suburb of Mexico City.

U.S. Sunday Editions Waste Pulp Forests

NEW YORK, May 4—That an advertisement of The Chicago Tribune last winter showed that one Sunday edition of that paper used to print more paper than all the papers in Canada used in two days in daily editions, was one of the statements made by Jason Rogers publisher of The New York Globe who appeared as a witness before the Senate Committee investigating the paper shortage.

Mr. Rogers favored a proposal which had been made by Chairman Reed of the committee for Government regulation of print paper consumption by an excise tax. He also advocated an additional tax on advertisements exceeding a quarter page in size.

Arguments both for and against the proposed tax were presented by several other publishers.

ESCAPES LIFE TERM ON TECHNICALITY

Montreal, May 4—Joseph Labrie, sentenced to life imprisonment, and his brother, Emile Labrie, sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary by Judge Desy at Sherbrooke were freed by Judge Duclos on account of irregularity in the papers committing them to prison. The papers did not mention the full name of the man they killed or the date of the crime.

Recently it held Gordon Hughes and his wife at bay for several hours. C. P. R. Operator Lamount has had two narrow escapes, as also has had his little son. Leg Crushed When Dray Overturned

Amputation Necessary Following Accident to Belleville Drayman

Mr. William Hogan, a well known and popular drayman of this city, was this morning the victim of a distressing accident which resulted in his losing a portion of his left leg. Mr. Hogan had delivered some goods in the rear of the Lewis Hardware store on Front street and was about to drive out when the accident occurred. One of the animals attached to Mr. Hogan's heavy dray was young and full of life. It made a sudden turn with the effect that the dray was partially upset. Mr. Hogan's left leg was caught in a narrow space between the railing and the top of the dray and a corner of a stone wall and was severely crushed below the knee. The unfortunate man was tendered first aid and as quickly as possible was rushed to the hospital where physicians were in waiting to attend him. Upon examination it was ascertained the limb was crushed and lacerated to such an extent that amputation was necessary and it was taken off just below the knee. The operation was successfully carried out and Mr. Hogan bore it well. His recovery is anticipated.

Boards Accept Morden Offer

Directors of the Canada Steamship Lines, the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Company and the Dominion Steel Corporation received and considered the proposals made by the interests behind the $500,000,000 steel, coal and shipping organization to be known as the British Empire Steel Corporation and formally accepted the offers made for the transfer of securities involved subject in each case to the approval of the shareholders of the three enterprises which are to form the Canadian neuclus of the big consolidation.

In addition to the three companies mentioned in the foregoing, the consolidation will embrace the Halifax Shipyards Company, the Davie Shipbuilding Company, the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, together with the latter's Kingston subsidiary, the Maritime Nail Company of St. John, N.B., and possibly several other allied industrials.

It was stated that the Canada Foundries & Forgings Company was to enter the merger, but confirmation of this was not forthcoming last night. It is generally regarded in well-informed quarters, however, that negotiations to this end are in progress and developments in the matter are expected.

SKULL FRACTURED BY HIGHWAYMEN

Toronto, May 3—Robt. J. Johnson, aged 50, 47 Barber Avenue, a G. T.R. car inspector at the Mimico yards was brutally beaten about the head by two men on Sixth street, early this morning, while on his way to work. He is now in Grace Hospital with a fractured skull. He may die. Consequent of the alleged hold up, two foreigners, Yaco Tuchk, and Joseph Ekosky, both living on Sixth street, Mimico, are under arrest in Cowan Avenue station on a charge of vagrancy. The arrest was made by County Constable Ford.

Johnson had $160 on him when attacked. While this money lay undisturbed, the fact that the assailants of Johnson were interrupted by a resident, called out of his bed by the injured man's cries, leads the police to the belief that robbery was the cause of the attack. Johnson has severe head wounds, apparently inflicted by a blunt weapon. He was brought to Sunnyside Station by train from the G.T.R. yards and taken to Grace Hospital in the police ambulance.

She is the daughter of the late Abraham Diamond, Q.C., a former Police Magistrate and editorial writer of Belleville. MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

"POLLYANNA"

"Pollyanna," one of the loveliest and most widely beloved characters in modern fiction, has been brought to the stage in all her flesh and blood charms, thanks to the deftness with which Mrs. Cushing has builded her comedy upon the enormously popular glad-books of Mrs. Porter. Pollyanna Producing Company bring the original cast to Griffin's to-morrow (Wednesday) matinee and night. Any favorite book character is more vivid and understandable when poetically visualized upon the stage. The almost unprecedented advance sale of "Pollyanna" is very significant. It shows that the public is keenly alive to what is new and vital in the theatre and is eager for plays that convey the sweet and beautiful influence that has made "Pollyanna" fiction tremendously popular in many lands. The comedy is an even greater delight than the stories. It spreads good cheer and glad spirit broadcast and it is full of novel and fascinating surprises.

"THE MAN BENEATH"

Helen Jerome Eddy and Pauline Curley have prominent roles in Edmund Mitchell's story, "The Man Beneath" in which the eminent Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa is appearing at the Palace to-night and Wednesday, matinee and night. Miss Eddy plays opposite Hayakawa, portraying Kate Erskine, the Scotch girl whose love for an alien and the realization of the ban of blood that stands between her happiness and that of her lover furnishes her a role of tense dramatic and pathetic appeal. Miss Curley, one of the loveliest girls on the screen, makes a charming picture as Mary Erskine, the somewhat spoiled young sister. Jack Gilbert, in the leading juvenile role, Wedgewood Nowell and Fontaine La Rue as the black-hand spies, and Fannie Midgely complete a notable cast. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in another of his amusing comedies titled "The Rajah," the closing chapter of the "Fatal Fortune" serial is also being shown in addition to the above offerings.

"GREEN STOCKINGS"

On Friday evening in the City Hall the Albert College Dramatic Society will present a comedy entitled "Green Stockings" in aid of the Armenian Relief Fund.

Miss Jessie B. Tuite, will apear in the role of Celia, eldest of William Faraday's three daughters, the second of whom is already married. It transpires that the youngest daughter receives a proposal of marriage, but the father will not give his consent so long as Celia remains on his hands. Celia objects to her father's attitude and adopts what at the time seems to her to be a very simple solution but which really involves her so deeply in a mass of screamingly funny intricacies that a happy conclusion is only reached after many amusing experiences.

Miss Tuite will be assisted by other members of the College Faculty and Students.

Tickets are now on sale in Leslie's Shoe Store and the Belleville Pharmacy.

six man holes of the Bell Telephone Company which would have to be moved. This would cost at least $200 per man hole.

Mr. McMillan—The lowering of the track will be done satisfactorily to the street grading.

The recommendation was upon a vote being taken defeated.

Walks Wanted

Petitions for granolithic walks in various parts of the city were referred to the proper officials to ascertain if properly signed.

Dunbar St. Sewer

In answer to an enquiry relative to the petition for a sanitary sewer on Dunbar street Ald. Woodley said that it was not sufficiently signed. There was a private sewer at the south end of the street.

The city engineer presented a detailed report relative to the cost of construction of a number of granolithic walks.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Enquiries

Ald. Bone desired to know if anything had been done in reference to a public lavatory near the city building.

Ald. Demarsh.—The matter is being looked into by him and Ald. Doyle and plans are being made for a lavatory in the basement of the city building.

Ald. Bone—The assessment has not been what it should be but the Court of Revision will look into the matter.

Ald. Adams—Is it too late to fololw it up with a committee to co-operate with the assessor in this matter.

Ald. Woodley—This year it cannot be done.

Ald. Ponton—Will the assessment be published before the Court of Revision meets.

City Clerk—Yes.

Motions

Moved by Ald. Hanna, seconded by Ald. Demarsh that a sanitary sewer be constructed on Henry street from Cedar to Octavia Street under section 9 of the Local Improvement Act. —Carried.

Ald. Hanna moved, seconded by Ald. Ostrom that a granolithic sidewalk be constructed on the east side of south Front street from end of present walk to connect with new Government dock.—Carried.

Ald. Hanna moved, seconded by Ald. Woodley that a committee known as More Production Committee composed of Aldermen Doyle, Ponton, Woodley, Hanna and Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce be appointed with a view of encouraging the cultivation of vacant lots and that all vacant property owned by the city not required for other purposes be placed with said committee for gardening purposes.—Carried.

Keeping of Pigs

Ald. Hanna moved, seconded by Ald. Doyle that owing to the continued high cost of living the local Board of Health be requested to allow citizens to keep pigs within the city limits nearer to dwellings than a distance of 600 feet as required by bylaw, said privilege to be subjected to the sanction of the Sanitary Inspector and with the direct understanding that said pigs may be ordered removed at any time that they are found to be creating a nuisance or becoming detrimental to the public health.

Ald. Bone objected to the motion as he would substitute potatoes for pigs.

Ald. Adams objected to the motion.

Ald. Hanna could see no objection to the motion as it would help citizens who desired to keep a pig. The inspector controls the situation.

Ald. Wensley agreed with Ald. Hanna in this matter. A pig can be kept without being a nuisance.

Ald. Doyle spoke in support of the motion as it would help the workingmen of the city.

Ald. Demarsh—If we want to have sanitation in the city pigs should be eliminated.

Upon a vote being taken the motion was lost. Those voting for it being Aldermen Doyle, Hanna and Wensley.

Ald. Adams moved, seconded by Ald. Wensley that a sanitary sewer be constructed on Dunbar street between West Bridge street and Catherine street under section 9 of the Local Improvement Act—Carried.

Ald. Demarsh moved, seconded by Ald. Hanna that where property has been assessed this year that owners be allowed to paint and improve their dwellings and other buildings without increasing their assessment.—Carried.

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. Ponton that bailiff be procured by the city tax collector to assist in the procuring of poll taxes.

Ald. Ponton—It must be shown that those entitled to pay poll taxes must pay them.

The motion was adopted.

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. Ostrom that the Grand Trunk Railway be asked to take immediate steps to co-operate with the city regarding the paving of Pinnacle street. That their grade conform to the street grade as laid out by our engineer. That the track be moved to the centre of the street and paved along the breadth of the ties with crushed stone and tarvia and kept in good repair, and that failing this the matter be taken up forthwith with the Board of Railway Commissioners and that the work be deferred in the meantime.

Ald. Ponton moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Demarsh that application be made to the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada to hold a special session at Belleville in the near future with representatives from the City Council, Grand Trunk Railway, Chamber of Commerce and citizens for the purpose of arriving at a satisfactory decision regarding the permanent paving of Pinnacle street and the removal of the tracks and that in the meantime the paving be deferred and that this recommendation be referred to the City Solicitor for action.

After some discussion the amendment was withdrawn and Ald. Bone's resolution was adopted.

Moved by Ald. Bone, seconded by Ald. Ponton that this Council views with concern reports to the effect that the Hydro Commission and the Fire Underwriters are notifying and compelling owners of property to change their electric wiring on account of the very high cost of the required materials. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hydro Electric office here with a request for full information.—Carried.

Housing Scheme

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. Ostrom that a committee composed of Aldermen Ponton, Doyle and Adams enquire into the Government Housing Scheme of guaranteeing the bonds of the municipality and report as soon as possible on how said scheme may be put in operation.

Ald. Bone—This is an important matter especially as affecting industries.

Ald. Doyle said he had been working on this matter and houses were wanted.

Ald. Ponton—Our City Solicitor should be consulted and give information in reference to this matter.

Ald Bone—This committee should get busy in this matter right away.

The motion was adopted.

Unfinished Business

Under this head Mayor Riggs spoke about vacant lots being ploughed for use of citizens to make gardens.

Ald. Hanna—This may be done by the special production committee.

Council adjourned.

Old-Time Melodrama Has Screen Revival

Tourneur's Thrilling Picture 'The Life Line' Stirs Large Audience at Griffins

From Maurice Tourneur we have come to expect something spectacularly different from the ordinary run of feature motion pictures. Such successes as "Victory," "Sporting Life" "The Whip" and "The Bluebird," demonstrated his peculiar genius in transferring to the screen the thrilling action of the best of the Drury Lane melodramas. He has done a similar work with "The Life Line," his latest picture which was screened before a large audience at Griffin's last evening.

The story was adapted from the famous English stage production, "The Romany Rye," by George R. Sims.

The task of making a motion picture of this gripping melodrama of sunny British fields and the raging open sea was one which, we imagine, Mr. Tourneur approached with the utmost gusto. He loves masterful dramas with romantic, manly heroes, broad sweep, and smashing climaxes. "The Life Line," offers him just this, and he has made full use of his opportunities. There is little chance for subtle character development: the bad stay bad, and the good stay good. But is this not just as true to life as sudden reformation? This is a picture of great scenes, of heroic action under the stress of gigantic emergencies and impending death, of impulsive men and passionate women.

Mr. Tourneur has given us at the very outset a dashing picture of an old-time English hunt, with scores of brilliantly clad Lords and ladies following the hounds. It but whets the appetite for what is to come. The romantic figure of Jack Hearne, the Romany Rye, leader of the nomadic gypsy band, played by Jack Holt, comes back among his people after a trip abroad. Phillip Royston, master of Cragnest Manor nearby, has been struck by the beauty of Laura, a gypsy maiden. He invites her to visit him at night, and Jack comes also without invitation. We learn with a thrill that Jack is Royston's half brother and the rightful owner of Cragnest. The bible, which contains the evidence to establish his claim, passes out of Royston's possession into that of Joe Heckett, keeper of a bird store and thief on the side. Jack meets Ruth Heckett, Joe's ward, and comes to London to see her. While they are at the theatre, a fire bursts out. Again Mr. Tourneur has risen to the occasion. He has pictured the panic of the crowd, the ravishing onset of the fire, and the heroic rescue of the girl by Jack in unforgettable scenes.

"Fatty" Arbuckle is appearing on the same program in a very funny 2-reel comedy, "Back Stage," "The Plumber's Apprentice" offers an amusing study of monkey tricks an amusing Cartoon comedy, and a beautiful Bruce Travelogue complete a most entertaining program of photoplays.

MILLS LEAVES CITY

It will be a source of regret to baseball fans of Belleville to learn that William (Peany) Mills, catcher of the G. T. R. champion baseball team has left the city. He left yesterday for Brantford having signed up to play professional ball in the Michigan-Ontario League. His loss will be keenly felt by the G. T. R. team, as he was not only a superb catcher but a reliable batter. Mr. Frank Goyer, brother of Freddie Goyer, Belleville's celebrated pitcher, will take Mills' place behind the bat. Last year he was catcher with one of the western Ontario teams and was rated as exceptionally good. The team are practising daily and expect to be in good shape for the opening game here with Peterboro on Victoria Day, May 24th.

WILDE WON IN THE FIRST ROUND

Lawrence, Mass., May 3—It took Jimmy Wilde of England, the flyweight champion of the world but two minutes and twenty seconds of the first round of a scheduled twelve-round battle to knock out Bobby Dyson of New Bedford, the New England bantamweight champion, here Saturday.

A few seconds before the knockout the British boxer sent Dyson to the canvas with a sturdy left hook. The latter took his time coming up taking a count of nine, while Wilde coolly stood waiting for him to regain his feet. Wilde immediately attacked, shooting a slashing right to Dyson's chin and a quick left to the body. Dyson went down through the ropes and was counted out.

Mrs. Wilde sat at the ringside. Jimmy kissed her just before he stepped into the ring. When the battle was over he turned at once to her and waved his hand.

Fifteen thousand fans saw the contest.

Why Burden Yourself?

With old-time methods of housekeeping when the Hydro is at your service, and can relieve you of the burden, by supplying electric labor-saving appliances for your home?

By comparing the following two methods of doing housework you can readily see that the advantages of the electric way are as superior to the old fashioned way as electric light is superior to the coal oil lamp.

THE OLD WAY

ARTICLE. DISADVANTAGES.
Washboard and wringer .... Sloppy and laborious.
Broom .... Dust-laden air, wear on carpet.
Wire Toaster .... Waiting for suitable fire; slow.
Sad Iron .... Slow to heat; constant changing of irons.
Rubber Hot Water Bottle .... Leaky; either too hot or too cold.
Coal Oil Heater .... Smoky, and dirty to handle.

THE NEW WAY

APPLIANCE. ADVANTAGES.
Electric Washer .... Clean, economical, no work.
Hoover Suction Cleaner .... Dustless, saving on rugs and carpets.
Electric Iron .... Heats quickly; easily kept hot.
Electric Heating Pad—even regulated heat; recommended by the medical profession
Electric Portable Heater .... Clean, smokeless and safe.

FROM QUEBEC JUDGE TO TORONTO JUDGE

Quebec, Que., May 4.—"If you appeared before a certain judge of your Province and being unable to speak the language of the majority of that Province, you would be deemed worthy of deportation." Such were the remarks addressed by Justice Choquette to a witness from Ontario unable to utter a word of French. "But in this Province, although regretting that everyone does not possess at least a certain knowledge of the two official languages, we give to each the opportunity of being heard and understood," concluded the judge.

Extra Years of Easy Riding

Many a bright, shiny-looking bicycle is a gay deceiver! It is merely built to sell. In a few short months it becomes a chipped, rusty-looking object that runs as hard as it looks.

On the other hand, C. C. M. Bicycles retain their looks and continue to run easily for years and years. Many in use for 10 to 20 years are still running well.

C. C. M. Bicycles depreciate more slowly than ordinary bicycles because they are made of better materials.

For example, C. C. M. case-hardened bearings are so hard a file cannot cut them. That is an assurance of extra long years of easy running.

C. C. M. smooth, highly-polished nickelling over rust-proof copper and C. C. M. brilliant, waterproof, triple enamelling mean a sparkling, bright finish with years of durability.

When you decide to buy a new model you can always obtain a good allowance for your used C. C. M.

This year's models have the new Hercules Positive Drive Brake—the Coaster Brake without a side arm. See them at your local dealer's.

DAYLIGHT SAVING CONFUSION.

Daylight Saving, unless it is universal, is a silly fad, vexatious and unnecessary. Several cities in Canada have adopted the summer time, and the result can not be anything but detrimental to the municipalities if they care anything about cultivating the good wishes of visitors from places where standard time is observed. Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec City and other large centres have adopted summer time, and much confusion is bound to result.

THE YANKEE INVASION.

The Yankees, having found Canadians easy enough to part with their pulpwood and newsprint to the extent of crippling many Canadian newspapers, now purpose to make a clean sweep of Canadian potatoes. First they insult the Canadian dollar and make it look like less than ninety cents, then they walk off with our potatoes and tell us to eat rice and spaghetti with our meats. Is it any wonder that the great con game was born in the land of the free, where the eagle screams and the donkey laughs at the green goods game, the wire tapping swindle, bunco tricks and general humbug—where all the sugar comes from in the raw, ex-Cuba, burdened with an overhead of profiteering rake-off, the perpetrators of which have no counterpart in price manipulation, without conscience.

PRAYER FOR LANDLORDS.

There was a prayer in the Prayer-book of Edward VI., long since removed, that might well be re-inserted in these days. It was found among "Sundry Godly Prayers for Divers Purposes," under the title "A Prayer for Landlords." It was as follows:

"We heartily pray Thee to send Thy Holy Spirit into the hearts of them that possess the grounds and pastures of the earth, that they, remembering themselves to be Thy tenants, may not rack or stretch out the rents of their houses or lands, nor yet take unreasonable fines or moneys, after the manner of covetous worldings, but so let them out that the inhabitants thereof may be able to pay the rents and to live and nourish their families and remember the poor. Give them grace also to consider that they are but strangers and pilgrims in this world, having here no dwelling place, but seeking one to come; that they, remembering the short continuance of this life, may be content with that which is sufficient, and not join house to house and land to land, to the impoverishment of others, but so behave themselves in letting their tenements, lands and pastures that after this life they may be received into everlasting habitation."

CRISP COMMENT

With a full moon and a total eclipse the weather should show a more genial spirit.

The high price of potatoes is just another hint of the gold mine in the back yard when cultivated as a vegetable garden.

Uproar everywhere, murder in its most revolting form in Ireland, the home of chivalry, millions of women and children starving in Europe, profiteers raising the price of necessities beyond all reason and safety. We're on our way—whither?

A Toronto clergyman on his way to church Sunday morning met his congregation coming home. He had forgotten that the powers that be in Toronto had tinkered with the clock and Daylight Saving was added to the fads, frills and fancies for which Toronto is famous.

Because there is a potato famine in Texas the price jumps in Canada to six dollars a bag. Talk about taking the bread out of our mouths, but when the long arm of Uncle Sam takes the potatoes from Canadian tables it is about time Canadian legislators were sitting up and taking notice.

Prussianism Still Hearty
New York Times

What Germany asks is permission to retain the skeleton organization into which her millions of trained men can be fitted; to retain the officers corps with its mediaeval traditions, and the General Staff, with its technical knowledge and aggressive ambitions, which by the Treaty she promised to disband. Does she need a General Staff and an officers' corps to maintain order at home? The truth—the central truth which we all ought to remember in our dealings with Germany—is expressed in the artless admission that the army will not disband. Germany has got rid of the Hohenzollerns for the time, but she is still ruled by the Prussian aristocracy that made the Hohenzollerns.

The Grand Trunk
Vancouver Province

It is stated that Grand Trunk shareholders in Great Britain are still complaining bitterly over the hard terms made by the Canadian Government in the purchase of the railways by Canada. But we have also the information that the price of shares slumped badly last week in the British market on the report of a hitch in the sale proceedings. It is evidently recognized in the markets that the best hope of the shareholders is in the sale to the people of Canada. The railway is now operated at a loss. While it ought to be worth more as a part of the national system than it is by itself the people of Canada are not likely to make as good a bargain as the vendors. The shareholders ought to thank Canada for taking a burden off their shoulders.

Magnificent Efforts
Regina Post

Allowing for the truth of all the criticisms levelled at the British Budget speech, certain outstanding facts will bring pride to all the people of the Empire. The financial year has ended more favorably than anyone in the Mother Country expected, taking into consideration the abnormal conditions through which the United Kingdom is passing; the British revenue is coming up surprisingly well; the prospects for the future are excellent and England has proved that she has the resources, the financial strength, the industrial enterprise and the ability to meet all her obligations without panic or even undue strain.

The celerity with which Britain is recovering from the tremendous dislocation of the war period must be the source of very great gratification not alone in the Old Land, but in all the outlying parts of the Empire, which have been watching her magnificent efforts to regain her pre-war position with keen and affectionate interest.

Awful in Both Cases

"That's an awful price for strawberries," said a man the other day, observing a card on one of the boes in the fruit store window reading "5 cents each." But he suddenly lost his complacent smile when his wife retorted:

"Why not? 'Tis the only spare afternoon we may both have together for weeks."

"This dress of mine that I am going to wear on Sunday at Yalbury—I find it sets so badly that I must alter it a little, after all. I told the dressmaker to make it by a pattern I gave her at the time; instead of that, she did her own way, and made me look a perfect fright."

"How long will you be?" he inquired looking rather disappointed.

"Not long. Do wait and talk to me; come, do, dear."

Dick sat down. The talking progressed very favorably, amid the snipping and sewing, till about half past two, at which time his conversation began to be varied by a slight tapping upon his toe with a walking-stick he had cut from the hedge as he came along. Fancy talked and answered him, but sometimes the answers were so negligently given that it was evident her thoughts lay for the greater part in her lap with the blue dress.

The clock struck three. Dick arose from his seat, walked round the room with his hands behind him, examining all the furniture, then sounded a few notes on the harmonium, then looked inside all the books he could find, then smoothed Fancy's head with his hand. Still the snipping and sewing went on.

The clock struck four. Dick fidgeted about, yawned privately, counted the knots in the table, yawned publicly, counted the flies on the ceiling, yawned horribly, went into the scullery, and so thoroughly studied the principle upon which the pump was constructed, that he could have delivered a lecture on the subject. Stepping back to Fancy and finding still that she had not done, he went into her garden and looked at her cabbages and potatoes and reminded himself that they seemed to him to wear a decidedly feminine aspect; then pulled up several weeds and came in again. The clock struck five, and still the snipping and sewing went on.

Dick attempted to kill a fly, peeled all the rind off his walking-stick, then threw a stick into the scullery because it was spoiled, produced hideous discords from the harmonium, and accidently overturned a vase of flowers, the water from which ran in a rill across the table and dribbled to the floor where it formed a lake, the shape of which, after the lapse of a few minutes, he began to modify considerably with his foot, till it was like a map of England and Wales.

"Well, Dick, you needn't have made quite a mess."

"Well, I needn't, I suppose." He walked up to the blue dress and looked at it with a rigid gaze. Then an idea seemed to cross his brain.

"Fancy."

"Yes."

"I thought you said you were going to wear the gray dress all day to-morrow on your trip to Yalbury, and in the evening, too, when I shall be with you, and ask your father for you."

"So I am."

"And the blue one only on Sunday?"

"And the blue one Sunday."

"Well, dear, I shan't be there Sunday to see it."

"No, but such lots of people will be looking at me Sunday, you know, and it did set so badly round the neck."

"I never noticed it, and probably nobody else would."

"They might."

"Then why not wear the gray one on Sunday as well? 'Tis as pretty as the blue one."

"I might make the gray one do, certainly. But it isn't so good; it didn't cost half so much as this one, and besides, it would be the same I wore Saturday."

"Then wear the striped one, dear."

"I might."

"Or the dark one."

"Yes, I might; but I want to wear a fresh one they haven't seen."

"I see, I see," said Dick in a voice in which the tones of love were decidedly inconvenienced by a considerable emphasis, his thoughts meanwhile running as follows: "I, the man she loves best in the world, as she says, am to understand that my poor half holiday is to be lost, because she wants to wear on Sunday a dress there is not the slightest necessity for wearing, simply, in fact, to appear more striking than usual in the eyes of Yalbury young men; and I not there, either."

"Then there are three dresses good enough for my eyes but neither is good enough for the youth of Yalbury," he said.

"No, not that exactly, Dick. Still you see, I do want to look pretty to them—there, that's honest But I shan't be much longer."

"How much?"

"A quarter of an hour."

"Very well; I'll come in in a quarter of an hour."

"Why go away?"

"I may as well."

He went out, walked down the road and sat upon a gate. Here he meditated, and the more he meditated, the more decidedly did he begin to fume and the more positive was he that his time had been scandalously trifled with by Fancy—that so far from being the simple girl who had never had a sweetheart before, as she had solemnly assured him time after time, she was, if not a flirt, a woman who had had no end of admirers; a girl most certainly too anxious about her dresses; a girl whose feelings, though warm were not deep; a girl who cared a great deal too much how she appeared in the eyes of other men. "What she loves best in the world," he thought, "are her hair and complexion. What she loves next best, her dresses; what she loves next best, myself, perhaps."

Suffering great anguish at this disloyalty in himself and harshness to his darling, yet disposed to persevere in it a horribly cruel thought crossed his mind. He would not call for her, as he had promised, at the end of a quarter of an hour. Yes, it would be a punishment she well deserved! Although the best part of the afternoon had been wasted, he would go nutting as he had intended, and go by himself.

He leaped over the gate, and pushed along the path for nearly two miles till it sloped up a hill, and entered a hazel copse by a hole like a rabbit's burrow. In he plunged, vanished among the bushes, and in a short time there was no sign of his existence upon earth, save an occasional rustling of boughs and snapping of twigs in divers points of the wood.

Never man nutted as Dick nutted that day. He worked like a galley-slave. Hour after hour passed away and still he gathered without ceasing. At last, when the sun had set, and bunches of nuts could not be distinguished from the leaves which nourished them, he shouldered his bag, containing about two pecks of the finest produce of the wood, to which were about as much use to him as two pecks of stones from the road, and strolled along a bridle-path into open ground, whistling as he went.

where the healing of skin diseases and injuries is concerned. That is what the Roman gladiators proved when they applied only the essences of roots and herbs to their sores and wounds.

That is why Zam-Buk is acknowledged so superior to ordinary ointments to-day, because it is Nature's Skin Healer—made from roots and herbs like the balms used by the early Romans, but more scientifically refined, blended and concentrated into convenient form for modern use.

When applied to a skin disease or sore, Zam-Buk's unusual power of penetration enables it to reach the underlying tissues where most of the disease germs are located. These it destroys, and when the diseased parts are medicinally cleansed the healing essences contained in Zam-Buk grow new, healthy tissue which replaces the old and diseased. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent. Zam-Buk cures from the root up, leaving no trace of hidden disease to break out again.

Zam-Buk is absolutely pure. It is also free from animal fat and consequently it cannot turn rancid, but will "keep" for an indefinite period. This naturally appeals to careful buyers and in combination with the balm's reliability, explains why Zam-Buk is always found on the medicine shelf of the good housekeeper.

Those who have used Zam-Buk say nothing can take its place for eczema, ringworm, salt rheum, boils, pimples, ulcers, abscesses, chronic sores, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries. 50c box, 3 for $1.25. All dealers, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. FREE SAMPLE sent upon application and 1c stamp for postage.

ARRESTED WITH REVOLUTIONARY LITERATURE

St. Catharines, May 3.—Caught red-handed with copies of anarchistic literature in his possession, Thomas Sabadala, a Russian, was placed under arrest on Saturday by the local police. One of the pamphlets headed "To-day is the Day," is most revolutionary, declaring the first of May to be a day of awakening, and stating: "When we march or hold our meetings we must never forget to be armed to repel those misguided soldiers or policemen who dare to attack us."

A Most Trying Time In A School Girl's Life

"Nothing is more common with physicians" writes Hon. Dr. W. H. Roberts, Minister of Health, New Brunswick, "than to find that during the few weeks preceding the closing of the school term, we are visited by mothers having with them their daughters who have been cramming for final examinations and in the majority of instances the story related is something like this—'Doctor! I have brought Mary to you to see if you cannot do something for her. You know she has been leading her class nearly all of the term; she is competing for the Governor-General's Medal, and we are so anxious that she be successful; but of late it is so hard for her to study, her head aches, she has no appetite, we cannot force her to partake of food, her bowels are constipated, she is so nervous, Doctor; she cannot get to sleep, sometimes for hours after she retires.'

'She is so white and frail looking. We also notice her twitching her face, eyelids and mouth a lot, and of late tossing her head to and fro and we are fearful, if something is not done, she will not hold out and we do, so much, want her to take the honours she has worked so hard for all winter.'

"We take a look at the girl and find that in almost every particular the word picture of the mother quite correctly describes the condition found. We find she is truly very anaemic in appearance, tongue quite heavily coated, generally far below the average weight. We notice, too, the nervous symtoms spoken of by the mother, simulating a beginning chorea, or St. Vitus' dance. Upon examination of the heart, which she complains about as beating rapidly at times, there is revealed a functional murmur, and suspecting from her headache some possible eye complications, we have her see an oculist, who reports severe condition of astigmatism. At the same time, bear in mind, nature is doing her best to shapen and perfect her scheme of physical economy."

Such remarkable results are being obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, under conditions so well described by Dr. Roberts, that it becomes a duty as well as a pleasure to tell others about it

This letter from Mrs. Parks of 72 Picton St., Hamilton, Ont., is very very interesting in this connection. She writes:—"Five years ago my little girl was taken ill with St. Vitus' dance, and for four years we doctored her, trying several doctors and different remedies without curing her. She could not walk or get around at all, and we had to feed her, as she was unable to hold a spoon in her hand. Her tongue was affected so that we could scarcely understand her when she talked. One day a friend of mine who knew of the benefits of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advised me to give my little girl some. I acted upon her advice, and soon could notice a difference. She was quieting down and commenced to eat better. I continued the treatment for some time, and she gradually got stronger and healthier. She recovered from her nervous trouble and was able to get around nicely. We are very grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the cure it effected for our daughter."

"SALADA"

AMERICANS BUYING LAND IN THE WEST OF IRELAND

London, May 3—The Daily Graphic's special commissioner in Galway, states that, "by an accident of fortune," he has stumbled across "one of the most amazing facts of the Irish situation, and one which should concern—and, if report does not lie, is seriously concerning—British statesmen." He reports that Americans possibly members of the Irish-American secret societies, are buying land in the West of Ireland.

One of the most unsatisfactory things in this world is a sensible love letter.

Toronto Rotary's New President

Norman Tovell, Well Known in Belleville—Helped to Organize Local Rotary

TORONTO, May 4.—If Norman W. Tovell were not a man of eminently strong character he would not be today the newly-elected president of the Toronto Rotary Club.

To win that distinguished office Mr. Tovell had to fight both golf and lawn bowling.

The battle went on all last year—one of those bitter, silent, hidden battles, unseen by the public. Alone, unarmed, Mr. Tovell wrestled in the darkness with these two terrible powers, golf and bowls, and came out victorious. And for reward, in recognition of his victory and devotion to duty, his several hundred business-men fellow-Rotarians, selected him for 1920 president.

The origin of this battle was simple but was one of those fateful propositions put up to every bowls-fiend and golf-maniac once in his life.

The Rotarians proposed some extension work. Dozens of cities and towns in Ontario had to be organized within the circle of Rotary. And Mr. Tovell was nominated to take a large number of these prospects and supervise the founding of Rotary clubs in them.

It was a desperate choice. Either Rotary or golf and bowls had to give way. And the election of Mr. Tovell as president for Toronto in recognition of the fact that he succeeded in raising red-hot clubs in every town allotted to him is ominous evidence of what happened to golf and bowls.

Mr. Tovell is a bowler first and a golfer second. He and Mr. Frank Goforth, the new vice-president of the Toronto Rotary, captured the Globe trophy a few years ago. Mr. Tovell is president of the R.C.Y.C. Bowling Association and is one of the outstanding bowlers in the Dominion. But his Yacht Club activities are strictly confined to bowling. He is no mariner. His friends say that even crossing the Bay he never unbends to take in the nautical scene, but utilizes the ten minutes out on deck limbering up his bowling arm.

In regard to golf, Mr. Tovell is practically a phenomenon in Toronto. He has been golfing eight years and is still in his right mind. That is to say, he still bowls, attends the Rotary Club and devotes some time to his business, which is the brokerage firm of Brent and Tovell.

He still regards golf as a mere pastime. True, he is chief pusher, press agent, booster and boomer of the Scarboro Golf Club. One of its most active officials. But he has a financial rather than a spiritual attitude towards the club. Once in a while, when one of his friends becomes too offensive with golf talk, Mr. Tovell goes forth and trims him, say his intimates, just to demonstrate that there are things, Horatio, in the world his philosophy wots not of, so to speak.

He was born in Hamilton, is the son of the Rev. Dr. Isaac Tovell, of Trinity Methodist, an Upper Canada old boy and started out in life in a bank.

And you pronounce it To-vell, with the accent on the vell.

COYLE—MacDONALD

The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. MacDonald, Shannonville, was the scene of a very pleasant event on Wednesday, April 28, 1920, when their daughter, Marjorie E. M. MacDonald became the bride of Mr. Elmer O. Coyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Coyle, of Colborne, Ont. The house was very tastily decorated for the occasion in pink and white carnations and smilax, with a beautiful floral arch under which the young couple were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., Methodist clergyman of Shannonville.

The ceremony took place at one o'clock in the afternoon, the bride entering the room on the arm of her father, and carrying a bouquet of roses. She was prettily attired in a gown of white Duchesse satin with silk georgette overdress and silver bead trimming.

The bridesmaid was Miss Olive Greatrix, of Buffalo, N.Y., cousin of the bride, who was becomingly gowned in a costume of salmon colored silk georgette with pearl bead trimming and carried a bouquet of carnations.

Little Bernitus Coyle made a charming flower girl and the wedding march was played by Miss Bernice MacDonald, sister of the bride.

The groomsman was Mr. V. G. Eakins of Colborne.

The bridal party passed through an aisle of white ribbons held by girl friends of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid a pearl bracelet, to the flower girl, a pearl ring, to the pianist a gold necklace and to the groomsman cuff links.

During the signing of the register Mrs. (Dr.) Moore sang very sweetly "Because."

After the ceremony was performed a very dainty wedding dinner was served, a number of girl friends of the bride, clad in white, assisting, the guests numbering over seventy, including a number from Colborne, Belleville, Picton, Trenton and other places.

The popularity of the bride was amply attested by the many valuable and beautiful gifts of which she was the recipient, including one hundred dollars in gold from her father and a substantial check from her aunt, Mrs. G. H. Smith, of Picton.

The happy couple left on an extended wedding tour to Toronto, Montreal and Nova Scotia, returning they will make their home in Colborne, where Mr. Coyle is a successful business man.

Mr. and Mrs. Coyle have a host of friends who wish them every happiness in their married life.

TOO BUMPTIOUS

Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, O.C., cadet corps, when interviewed regarding the trouble at Peterboro, when the officers of the battalion resigned in a body, stated that the matter was satisfactorily settled. The action of the officers arose over the bumptiousness of the lad appointed commander. He endeavored to impose observance of his rank at all times, demanding that his officers salute him. This was too much, and a mutiny was the result. A proper understanding was reached and the officers are back at their posts.

BENCH AND BAR.

The Honorable Mr. Justice Logie was entertained by the Belleville Bar at an informal dinner at the Hotel Quinte last night, the company afterwards adjourning to the Belleville Club, where a delightful evening was spent, enlivened with speech and story. Crown Attorney Carnew presided. Colonel Lazier, the veteran Master, never misses one of these gatherings of the legal profession. Colonel Ponton and Judge Wills felicitously proposed the health of His Lordship, and of Mr. Leighton McCarthy, K.C., of Toronto, and W. E. Foster, K.C., of Montreal, also guests of honor. Special reference was made to the Judge's service, as General Logie, "the man behind the flag," who when in command of the Toronto Military District, sent to the front so many efficiently trained officers and well organized and disciplined battalions. Judge Logie responded in happy and modest terms and congratulated the Bar of the County of Hastings upon their fraternal and hospitable spirit.

Just as arms, legs, and other parts of the body are not fully developed in children, so eyes are not fully grown.

School work demands hard use of the eyes. Often they are not quite ready for it. The strain is apt to cause serious trouble that will last through life. In such cases glasses will prevent eye strain, and usually they can be left off when the eyes are fully grown.

Life Sentence For Father Hanging For Mother

DAUGHTER DIED AFTER BRUTAL BEATINGS FROM FATHER AND ILL-TREATMENT FROM STEP-MOTHER—DEATH SENTENCE FOR WOMAN, IMPRISONMENT FOR MAN.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

Quebec, May 5.—Telesphore Gagnon, found guilty of manslaughter in the case of Aurore Gagnon, his daughter, who died after brutal beatings from her father and ill-treatment from her step-mother, who is under sentence of death for the crime, was this morning sentenced to life imprisonment by Justice Desy.

Profiteering In Electric Bulbs

LONDON, May 5.—England has started an investigation of the post-war growth of alleged trusts and monopolies.

A profiteering committee which has been looking into the activity of electric light companies and lamp bulb manufacturers, in a report recently made public, says that "a trade combination does exist among electric light manufacturers in this country and exercises a powerful influence over the conduct and development of the industry."

It is known as the Electric Light Manufacturers Association, the report says, and has been created primarily in the interests of three firms—the British Thomson-Houston Company, the General Electric Company and Messrs. Siemens Brothers. It is reported to include from 90 to 95 per cent of the industry, to fix prices and regulate output, says the profiteering committee.

The prices fixed by the Association, the report says, become the standard for all lamps sold in this country, whether made by Association or non-association manufacturers, or imported from abroad. Because of this standard price policy the general public reap no benefit from lamps of cheaper manufacture, the advantage going wholly to distributors.

Standard vacuum lamps, now sold to the public for three shillings, states the report, could be sold at two shillings at which price the manufacturer and distributor would still have a satisfactory working profit.

"One and a quarter million half-watt lamps," adds the report, "sold to the public in 1919 at tewlve shillings and sixpence each were purchased in Holland by three associated manufacturers at about three shillings a lamp. They could have left ample margin for the importers and distributors. Importers and distributors between them made profits on these lamps, of something like $1,400,000 over and above what would appear to us reasonable.

"Since the largest of the three dominant firms," continues the report "is under the majority control of an American electrical concern, there is some danger that the interests of the British lamp industry may be subordinated to American interests.

"There is a possibility of an international combination comprising British, Dutch and American manufacturers which would be able to control supplies and dominate prices over a considerable part of the world.

"The perations of an association which so effectively controls an important industry," concludes the report, "should be subject to public supervision and control."

To Make Motorists Observe The Law

TORONTO, May 5—Mr. Justice Middleton in his charge to the grand jury at the opening of the Spring Assizes commented upon the steadily increasing number of automobile fatalities in the city and declared emphatically that any autoist who set out wilfully to break the bylaws and by so doing by passing a standing street car or by some other wilful act caused the death of any person, the offender was guilty of the crime of murder and not manslaughter. The declaration was forced from his lordship by his belief that many motorists did not understand the seriousness of the risk they took when they did not observe the laws. Recently a prominent citizen was knocked down and killed by a person who deliberately passed a standing car, but that person was guilty of greater lawlessness when he did not stop but left his victim to his fate. That reckless and lawless spirit said his lordship made more necessary the handing out of the more rigorous penalty.

Polish Socialists Demand Peace

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WARSAW, May 5—Reorganization of the Polish cabinet in the near future is predicted by newspapers of this city which give as a reason the opposition aroused by the Government peace policy. Socialists are making insistent demands for peace and have asked that they be recognized in Government appointment. The resignation of Stanislas Patek, Premier, and Finance Minister Grabski is considered almost certain. Count von Tarnow who was sent by Austria as ambassador to the United States in 1916 but who was not received there is mentioned as M. Patek's successor. Both Socialist and National Democratic parties are opposing the government over its insistence upon Borisov as the seat of the peace conference with Russian Bolsheviki. They say this is all that remains in the way of opening negotiations.

Sinn Fein Murders Guerilla Warfare

Assassinations in Ireland Called by Another Name

DUBLIN, May 5.—An article entiled "guerilla warfare" which sheds new light on assassinations in Ireland has been discovered in the effects of Paul John Vignoiss of Cork, recently tried by court-martial and sentenced to six months imprisonment "for having in his possession an issue of the official organ of the Irish volunteers."

"It is the duty of volunteers to recognize in all their plans, in methods of training and study and in their general outlook, the existence of this state of guerilla warfare and all that it implies," says the article, which has been made public in an official communication. "It is our business to develop those guerilla tactics which we have found most serviceable in dealing with actual conditions in Ireland at present, and to bring them to the highest pitch of perfection of which they are capable. It is our business to wage war against the forces of the invaders whenever and however we find it can be done most effectively.

"Of all forms of small wars, that most dreaded by imperialist armies of conquest is prolonged guerilla warfare in which they are unable to obtain a moment's security nor gain any opportunity of effectively crushing their foe. Particularly do they dread the adoption of well-organized guerilla tactics by a civilized foe of keen intelligence are to be apprehended by them bushes, raids on their fortified positions, sniping of their stragglers, the capturing of their arms and equipment, interruption of their communications, interference with their intelligence, are to be apprhendd by thm daily and their forces are driven more and more into the position of invested garrisons in the midst of a hostile country, afraid to venture from their strongholds except in force, living in a state of perpetual apprehension. That such a state of affairs exists to a great extent in Ireland at present is obvious to all and it is the business of the Irish volunteers to see to it that it continues to grow more intense and more menacing to the invaders."

POLICE CARE FOR CHILDREN

Toronto, May 5.—William Hack, his wife and family of nine, were unable to obtain another house when evicted by the bailiff from the one at 9 St. Germaine avenue, where they had been living, and the five younger children spent the night in the care of the police of No. 5 station. The rest of the family erected a tent and slept on the premises, and today were quite cheerful. The younger children were well taken care of by the constables, and were provided with comfortable beds improvised from the constables' blankets.

Turkish Woman Cabinet Minister

Women in Turkey are Progressing Toward Emancipation

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 5— A striking illustration of the general emancipation of Turkish women which has been affected by the war is afforded by the designation of Mrs. Halide Edib Hanem, as Minister of Education, in Mustapha Kemel's cabinet.

Mrs. Hanem is the wife of Dr. Adam Bey, formerly president of the Turkish Red Crescent and until recently Mustapha Kemel's Minister of Health. She is 35 years old, the mother of three children, a devout Mohammedan and has attained fame as the author of several strongly pan-Islamic novels.

Shortly after Turkey entered the war the need for nurses became so great that women for the first time, were permitted to accompany the armies and enter military hospitals as relief workers. They are said to have demonstrated remarkable efficiency in taking care of the wounded, a fact which soon made it possible for Turkish women to enter university classes with them. At the present time, however, they are still barred from theatres and amusements of various kinds, except special performances for women only.

Mrs. Halide Tdib Hanem is, perhaps, the most celebrated pioneer in the movement for the higher education of Turkish women. She was the first Turkish girl to graduate from the American women's college here, despite the persistent opposition of former Sultan Abdul Hamid, who forced her to discontinue her studies many times.

Dr. Mary Mills Patrick, president of the college and American diplomats in Turkey, always took a great interest in her struggle for education against such strong odds and she finally finished her course a number of years ago. Subsequently three of her sisters graduated from the same college.

Although educated in a school where the teachers were all Christians she retained her Mohammedan faith but removed the black veil from her face as many other Turkish women have since done. She is a firm believer in the superior cultural value of Mohammet's teachings. Mrs. Hanem resided for a time in England and other European countries. She is slight in build but has an attractive face and possesses convictions on the subject of Turkish nationalism. Because of her unusual power as an orator, she has been a popular speaker in behalf of the nationalist government in Antolia.

Irish Cattle Drives And Their Purpose

Land Held for Grazing Purposes Objectionable to Malcontents

DUBLIN, May 5.—Conflicts over land attended by organized "cattle drives," to intimidate land owners and compel them to sell have been added lately to Ireland's other troubles. The disturbances are a revival of conditions which prevailed thirty or more years ago when farmers and graziers were forced by similar methods to sell large land holdings.

The malcontents complain that most of the god land in the south and west of the good land in the south and west purposes and that they are unable to purchase it. Consequently they have resorted to the "cattle drives" and threats of bodily harm to the owners. It is very difficult to police all the country and many of the drives have resulted in three or four farmers losing all their cattle at one swoop.

The intimidators are represented as renters who are demanding longer leases of land, small owners and a certain number of holders of comparatively large tracts who believe their neighbors' land used for grazing is more suitable for tillage than the ground they are trying to cultivate.

"Its the same story again of the eighties," said a former south of Ireland land holder. They forced us to cut up our large holdings then by use of the same methods now employed."

The land troubles should not be confused with crimes resulting from the political unrest. It is separated and distinct and shows evidence of being on the increase.

IRISH SERGEANT KILLED

Dublin, Ireland, May 5.—A police sergeant was killed and two constables wounded when they were fired on from ambush while cycling from Listowel to Ballylongfor, County Kerry.

"DOMINION DAY IN ONTARIO"

(Written and Illustrated by Mr. and Mrs. James Blomfield for the Christian Science Monitor, Boston).

It was hard to realize that the fresh faced boy at the wheel of the waiting automobile, our hostess' son, in khaki with the insignia of a lieutenant, had just returned from service overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and had with his men been in the very terrible heart and center of engagements in which Canadian troops had covered themselves with distinction imperishable. He was so removedly boyish and insouciant for a man who had seen such things, let alone being twice gassed. Yet so it was. One wondered if he felt the apartness of things now with him as, his mother by his side, he awaited her guests' pleasure.

High on the back of the seat behind them were two curly-haired fair little girls, pink and gold in pink linen their hair about their heads in the sun like a halo of curling pale golden flame, lifted as by the passing air. As the wind in our travel lifted and fluttered their pink skirts, there flashed beneath them the badges and buttons of the officers undress khaki coat they sat upon.

Leaving town by the river bridge under which flowed a stream impossibly blue and clear for a town river with a town's attendant mills and warehouses on both sides of it, there came shortly the long bridge across the Bay of Quinte which took us into Prince Edward County, a peninsula enclosing the western arm of the famous bay. From here one looked across the estuary reedbeds of the river just left. Over the green levels of the reedbeds, flag-crowned tower of the town hall, a few roofs, the masts of schooners lying at the river-mouth wharf and the lighthouse at the bay entrance looked remindingly like recollected pictures of Dutch landscape. The longest of bridges comes to an end—as did this at long length with a stately group of poplars about a grass plot on which stood the bridge tender's house. On the grass plot a fox terrier mother and her pups, brilliantly black and white in the sun, basked in confident comfort, all heedless of the passing world. There was also an enthusiastic red collie who tried to bite off the forward mud guard of the machine running 20 miles an hour, calmly side-stepping the rear guards and returning to his place with an aspect of duty conscientiously attempted to be performed.

PASTORAL BEAUTY

Flower-gauded grass was by the side of a tree-shaded road on which we swept past alternation of hay meadows, pastures, corn fields, spaced and tended apple orchards and truck lands Milk loading platforms were by the roadside at nearly every homestead. Off across the flanking fields and woodlands at one side of the road, the Bay of Quinte lay sunny blue, its far side bounded by a low roll of distant wooded hills whose boscage was broken by pasture and wheat land. The morning air was full of the perfume of milk weed and ripened hay. We came to Carrying Place post office, so titled on a board at the eaves of its wooden verandah. The road here for a short distance followed the route of the great portage from the Bay of Quinte across to Lake Ontario. This had been a route of travel for Champlain's forces; and before and after him for Indians, traders, voyagers and pack-trains; and more than once for troops of the British crown.

Always along the route far out from any town, on the peak of weather-gray farmsteads and cottages or hanging from their windows, on barns and silos and from tall staffs in farm house dooryards, there floated the scarlet flame of empire with the saltires of Scotland and Ireland and the cross of St. George next to the staff, and the arms of Canada upon the fly. It was Dominion Day.

The forefoot of low timber-clad hills margined a still, wide river—so it seemed, embanked and walled on either side and with great locks whose massive masonry was brilliantly, warmly white in the fullness of noon sun. Far to the left was the wide sea of Lake Ontario, almost windlessly still. This was the Murray Canal. On the grassy and rocky hillside, sun-warmed, full of summer odors, orange milkweed and bright blue alkanet fairly chanted aloud a chromatic harmony in company with the pale gold flame of the stonecrop that covered the intervening rocks.

THE CITY'S DEMONSTRATION

Though in furthest rurality on our way every cottage and barn had made us aware of the Canadian national day, yet in the town of Trenton itself was manifest a fuller, deeper note. Here upon its main street, the flags of the Allies, strung overhead in every block, waved, tossed and flung their blazon to the summer wind. Every business house and dwelling that had a flag hung it out for all the world to see. Of bands and music, marchings and speechmakings, sports and contests there were none. This was only the first summer after the armistice. There were those waited for who were yet to come home and things were not yet fully in the paths of peace. But as far as any silent manifestation or the bearing and speech of those encountered was concerned, actual depth and reality of national feeling was not to be mistaken or unperceived by any but the perversely obtuse.

Above the town, the river Trent was a constant succession of wide parted falls, controlled by great dams of masonry with associated locks affording transfer from one level to another for lake-going traffic that traversed the canal, parted off from the main stream of the river by a line of coped masonry. The vale of Trent itself, full of grass-bordered tree-shaded roads, was a land of easily rolling hills timbered with round topped woods, between farmsteads whose aspect spoke a quiet and home-loving prosperity. Woodland and farm alike were full of bird life, remarkably and conspicuously so to one coming from the near vicinity of eastern American cities. Besides the crow ubiquitous, ravens, and coy-birds; plain, white and red-winged blackbirds, and brown and purple grackles; there were noted green-finches, wild canaries, black, and indigo birds, swallows of half a dozen types—the purple martin being specially notable—a golden harrier, golden and ringed plovers, lake gulls, and a solitary bittern in full light of noon. The types and kinds could not indeed be fairly enumerated which were seen in the course of a morning's swift travel through three counties.

But above all else that might be seen or noted—the deeply quiet feeling of the day aside—one brought home the impression of the vale of Trent and "the Bay" as a lovely homey, friendly land; a land that felt as if it was lived in with loyalty and love.

FARM HELP LOTH TO WORK AFTER CITY WHISTLES BLOW

Stratford, May 5—Believing perhaps, that 'everybody's doin it," the Agricultural Section of the Chamber of Commerce has seriously taken up the matter of the eight-hour day and Wednesday or Saturday afternoons off Notice of motion has been entered that a resolution dealing with these matters will be introduced at the June meeting. Farmers in close proximity to the city have had trouble with hired hands in keeping at work after whistles blew at quitting time in the city and probably this has something to do with introducing a motion for short hours on the farm.

Talk Until Morning For Increased Indemnity

LEGISLATORS DETERMINED TO BOOST THE SESSIONAL INDEMNITY FROM $1400 TO $2500—PREMIER DRURY STRONGLY OPPOSED—NO MOTION NO VOTE.

TORONTO, May 5.—Open conflict was staged in the Legislature last night. The point at issue was the proposal to increase the sessional indemnity from $1400 to $2500. The debate started at 10 o'clock, when the House was in supply, and lasted until 1.30 this morning. As there was no motion before the House no vote followed. Premier Drury was unalterably opposed to any increase, but had there been a vote it is doubtful if he could have commanded a majority.

Party or group ties fell like a house of cards when individual members discussed the question. Private members who have not opened their mouths even in committee sprang into the fray. Most of them wanted an increase. Some of them didn't, but these were a minority among those who spoke. Premier Drury's attempt to pour oil on troubled waters simply added fuel to the blaze.

So far as can be ascertained, this is the first time in the history of the Ontario Legislature, and perhaps in the annals of Canadian Parliamentary history, when the House has gone into battle over the question of sessional indemnity. Hitherto such increases have been petitioned for, granted, and accepted, with only a feeble protest from the country. That situation was reversed last night. It was apparent that the Cabinet thinks economy starts very much at home.

Higher Price For Canadian Wheat

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 5—Canadian farmers may get as high as thirty cents per bushel for participation certifficates on wheat sold through the Canadian Wheat Board, it was predicted today by members of the Commons who have watched the situation very closely. With $2.15 already guaranteed this will bring the price to $2.40.

Many of the farmer members believe that the price will indeed be much higher than the most optimistic had hoped for on account of the abnormal increase in the price of wheat from the time it left the farm until it was sold to European buyers.

It is also freely predicted that the price of the 1920 crop will be high. Some members believe that it will go to $3 per bushel providing there are no internal troubles in any of the larger countries of the world.

Naval Story Denied

Ottawa, May 5—An absolute denial of the story credited to the Halifax Echo which said that the Government proposed carrying out the naval programme recommended by Admiral Lord Jellicoe was made this morning by Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine. The story is absolutely false and a pure fabrication from beginning to end said the Minister.

Pilots Posse To Grave Of His Murdered Wife

NOTORIOUS BIGAMIST LEADS WEIRD PROCESSION TO LONELY GULCH WHERE BODY OF WIFE WAS CONCEALED—MOB OF 500 CURIOSITY SEEKERS WITH CAMERAS.

DIXIELAND, Cal., May 4—The body of Nina Lee Deloney was found by the searching party directed by Walter Andrew Watson, notorious bigamist, her alleged slayer at 10.10 o'clock today.

Five miles north of Coyete Wells Watson halted the ambulance.

"Ther's the gulch," he said. Assisted by Deputy Sheriffs, Watson walked to the spot near a small cliff "There's the ledge," he said, pointing.

Deputy Sheriffs turned a few shovelfulls of earth and revealed the body.

Watson, haggard, white faced, and with staring eyes, due to his physical condition, was unshaken until the body of his victim lay in view. As he walked feebly from the ambulance to the place where he said the body was buried he was accompanied by scores of officers, public officials, newspaper men and photographers. More than 100 curiosity-seekers followed the party. Seventy-five automobiles had made the trip across the desert from El Centro.

Cameras Click

Deputy Sheriffs with shovels stepped forward and turned a few bits of earth, while cameras clicked and the crowd stood watching.

Then one of the men dropped his shovel and bent forward; an instant later the canvas-shrouded form of the dead woman was taken from the small grave into which it had been jammed, distorted and almost broken by the force which had been applied to thrust it there.

The canvas was opened just enough to make sure that there was no mistake. Then it was allowed to rest until a casket arrived and the prisoner the body of his victim and their escort of hundreds started again for El Centro, where an inquest was ordered immediately.

Watson collapsed when the body of his victim was uncovered and had to be assisted to the ambulance where he lay during the subsequent stir of getting the body ready for transportation.

Story Substantiated

The position of the body bore out every portion of Watson's alleged statements concerning his course after he had killed the woman. He had said he had wrapped the nude body in canvas put it in an automobile at Santa Monica, adjacent to Los Angeles, and driven over the coast highway, inland through San Diego county, and then carried it in his arms to the spot he could not reach by automobile, where he thrust it into a small excavation.

At the grave Watson made a speech to the crowd before he would go forward. He said:

"My friends: I have come a long way to assist the law. I am not well as you can see, and I wish to request that I be not worried with questions or requests for pictures until the body is uncovered."

EVELYN NESBIT AGAIN IN TROUBLED WATERS

Jack Clifford (Virgil James Montani) filed a suit for divorce last week from his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Clifford. The latter was served Monday with a summons to appear in court. According to stories in the daily, it is understood that Clifford names Eugene Strong, who is playing with Valeska Surratt.

Miss Nesbit told reporters Monday night that the suit was not a surprise to her, also giving them the information that they had not lived together for more than three years. She exhibited a number of checks which she declared would show that she had given Clifford more than $20,000 since they were married. She had intended bringing a similar action, naming five women, one of them a prominent picture actress.

"I also intended to bring my action in order to recover real estate consisting of 260 acres and the lodge in the Adirondacks," she continued. "I bought the lodge with money that I earned on the stage, but when Mr. Clifford went to Boston to have the deeds transferred he had the property placed in his own name."

Miss Nesbit then referred to the lodge as the place where she and Clifford spen their honeymoon following their marriage in Ellicott City, Md., May 23, 1916, and added: "I shall press my suit against Mr. Clifford."

Clifford is represented in his action by Linn W. Thompson. The former wife of Harry K. Thaw declared that she would file her countersuit through her attorneys, House, Grossman & Vorhaus. Harry K. Thaw sued and was granted a divorce from Miss Nesbit in Pittsburgh in 1916.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

"POLLYANNA" THE GLAD PLAY

"Pollyanna" is coming to Griffin's tonight for one night only. Hundreds of thousands have read Eleanor H. Porter's joyously optimistic glad-girl stories, now blended into a buoyantly joyous comedy by Catharine Chisholm Cushing who is an expert and popular dramatist, author of successful plays for May Irwin, Henrietta Crossman and Billie Burke. Pollyanna is an orphan child, who humanizes all sorts of gloomy, despondent persons by sheer force of magnetic personality, quaint expressions and happy example.

It is a play to be seen without embarrassment, and its appeal is equally strong to the young and the mature. Comedy, sentiment, romance and a thrill of the dramatic are blended in "Pollyanna."

The Pollyanna Producing Company present the company playing it. Lollita Westman, a fascinating young comedienne, is the glad-girl at twelve and seventeen. Others are Pacie Ripple, Wallace Roberts, Earla Elverson, Audrey Wood, Augusta Durgeon, Peter W. Maguire, Geraldine Russel, William Day and others.

DOUBLE BILL OF PHOTOPLAYS

A splendid bill of entertainment has been arranged for presentation at the Palace tonight, when a double feature bill has been arranged for exhibition consisting of Jack Holt and Seena Owen in Muarice Tourneur's picturization of the famous Drury Lane melodrama, "The Life Line," Sessue Hayakawa, the eminent Japanese actor in "The Man Beneath." "Fatty" Arbuckle in a funny two reel comedy, "Back Stage," Harold Lloyd in a good comedy "The Rajah," the closing chapter of "The Fatal Fortune" serial featuring Helen Holmes, Ditmar's Nature book offering an amusing study of the Ape, and a Cartoon comedy. With such a splendid bill arranged for exhibition no doubt standing room will be at a premium at the Palace tonight.

"THE ADVENTURER"

William Farnum, who appears at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday in E. Lloyd Sheldon's romantic drama "The Adventurer," made his first stage success in roles of the types he now enacts on the screen. As Don Caesar de Bazan in "The Adventurer," Mr. Farnum is certain of success. While his art has enabled him to portray with success all types, it will be recalled that in the famous Ben Hur and The Prince of India, he scored notable stage successes before he deserted the spoken for the silent drama.

It will be a treat indeed to see this famous screen star as a happy, rollicking hero in "The Adventurer," and the older theatregoers will recall, that when they see him on the screen in his latest Fox production, the power of his interpretation of the hero in each of the famous plays referred to plays in which he put his right to stardom beyond all possible challenges. A funny two-reel comedy "Pipe Dreams," an interesting Outing-Chester reel, and The British Canadian News are also being shown on the same program.

Tack In Soup Worth $25,000

NEW YORK, May 4—A verdict of $25,000 damages caused by a tack in a bowl of soup was awarded to Dr. Moritz D. Spitzer, 225 East 14th St. today in his suit against the Childs Restaurant Company. The verdict was given in Justice Finch's part of the Supreme Court.

The evidence showed that Dr. Spitzer ate the soup in a Childs restaurant at 42 East 14th street on December 28 1915 and that the tack is still in his abdomen. Two of the witnesses were in France during the war and their testimony was not available until now.

Dr. Spitzer said he first felt a tack in his gums, then a sharp pain in his throat as he swallowed. He found another tack in the plate of soup, he said and showed it to the manager of the restaurant, who was at a loss to explain it. X-ray photographs, showing the tack in the abdomen, were part of the evidence.

Physicians said the tack might remain for years without doing any harm but might at any time necessitate a serious and possibly fatal operation.

BARBER'S BARREL FOR FALLS' TRIP

London, May 5—Charles George Stephens, the Bristol barber, who intends to "leap" Niagara Falls with a hand-made barrel, will sail for America this week. Stephens' special barrel into which he will be strapped, is fitted with special appliances to enable him to make the dangerous descent over the Falls. The barrel is six feet, two inches in height; its diameter at top and bottom is 26 inches and the middle 32 inches. A 100 pound weight fixed in the bottom is expected to keep it upright in the water.

Soul Of Music Revealed By Edison

Wonderful Demonstration of Perfection in Reproduction of Music, Vocal and Instrumental.

Thomas Edison, well-named "The Wizard," has given the world many wonderful and useful inventions, but no more marvellous creation of the human mind can be cited than the development of the instrument well named "The Phonograph with a Soul." This was well illustrated Tuesday evening at the Tone Test Recital in the City Hall, arranged by the J. M. Greene Music Co., Limited, the artists taking part being Miss Claire Lillian Peteler, soprano; Miss Sibyl Sanderson Fagan, whistler, and Mr. Willard Osborne, violinist, all of whom rendered selections in unison with a New Edison phonograph, not a special instrument, but a regular stock machine constructed for home entertainment.

The great interest shown in the recital was evidenced by the fact that every seat was occupied in the hall at eight o'clock, many were standing and hundreds were turned away, disappointed at being unable to gain admittance.

A feature of the evening was the charming personality of the entertainers, and this with their exceptional talent added materially to the enjoyment of the occasion. The appreciation of the audience was expressed by the heartiness of the applause, and it was altogether an evening of rare enjoyment.

The program had been selected with rare discrimination, affording variety and general excellence.

Mr. Willard Osborne, the violinist, made the announcements and any explanations that were necessary, and with his extreme modesty and tact established himself on a friendly footing with the audience at once. His violin solos and the Edison re-creations were excellently rendered and evidenced rare ability.

Of the singing of Miss Claire Lillian Peteler too much praise cannot be accorded. Her voice is flawless, liquid in tone, soft and musical to a degree seldom heard, and she was equally at ease in the Il Bacio, of Arditti, as in the beautiful solo, "Face to Face," by Johnson, and her other numbers. Miss Peteler's duet with an Edison Re-Creation of her own voice in "Coming Home," was a beautiful symphony in melody.

Miss Sibyl Sanderson Fagan is a whistler of rare talent, and her imitation of the singing of birds was wonderfully natural, showing her wide range and versatility. Whether in the most difficult of classical music or the simplest of melodies, Miss Fagan's wonderful bird-like tones are true and sweet and full.

"The Lover and the Bird," (Guglielmo) by Misses Peteler and Fagan, with an Edison Re-Creation of their own performance, was delightfully pleasing and well rendered, the voice tones and bird notes of the whistler blending with delicious harmony.

The trio with all three musicians, voice, whistle and violin, and Edison Re-Creation, was a charming number.

The program was a musical treat in its entirety and the demonstration of the perfection attained in the reproduction of musical numbers was a revelation to many and nothing short of marvellous.

Everyone who attended the recital must feel very grateful to the J. M. Greene Music Co., who arranged for the appearance of these clever musicians, for an evening of rare pleasure, entertaining and educational.

The program was as follows:

Il Bacio (Arditi); "Only a Year Ago" (Albers) — Miss Peteler with Edison Re-Creations of her own voice.

L'Arditi (Arditi); Serenata (Moskowski); Narcissus (Nevin) — Miss Fagan with Edison Re-Creations of her own performance.

PRICE OF CLOTHES TAKES A TUMBLE

Montreal, Que., May 5.—Due to the overall campaign, the price of clothes has taken a tumble here. The ready-to-wear clothiers are using up much space in the newspapers advertising substantial reductions in all lines of garments. On the other hand, coal was advanced to $16 a ton, while practically all lines of foodstuffs show no change.

SURRENDER TO BOLSHIES.

London, May 5.—A considerable number of Russian bourgeoise who fled from South Russia to Asia Minor perished in a storm in the Black Sea, according to a wireless despatch from Moscow. Fourteen ships laden with refugees were lost, the despatch says.

The remnants of the Russian volunteer army in the Stotchy region of the Black Sea coast, numbering several thousand, have surrendered to the Bolsheviki, the statement continues. The volunteers were headed by General Morozoff and Uhreoff. All were granted life and liberty with the exception of the leaders of the rising.

The capture of Stotchy was announced in an official statement issued by the Soviet Government at Moscow on Sunday last.

BASEBALL.

The Central League regrets the loss of their star player, Mills, of Belleville. Mills was the best backstop in the League and was strong with the willow. Belleville's battery this summer will be the Goyer brothers. If the catcher proves as efficient as the pitcher then the other teams in the Central League will have their work cut out for them.—Port Hope Times.

ONE MAN WILLING TO TAKE ALL BLAME

Four men convicted of the murder of a New York city subway agent who were sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison were granted a reprieve by Governor Smith, four hours before the execution was to have taken place.

Announcement of the reprieve was made by Governor Smith at Albany over the telephone to Warden Lewis E. Lawes at the prison. The four men are Joseph Milano, James Cassidy, Joseph Usefof and Charles McLoughlin. They were convicted of the murder of Otto Fialo, who was shot to death while attempting to prevent his assailants from robbing a subway station.

Milano is alleged to have made confession to Warden Lewis Thursday morning in which he asserted that he alone was responsible for the death of Fialo. Warden Lewis immediately telegraphed the confession to Governor Smith. When he had finished talking with Governor Smith over the telephone, he hurried to the death house and announced to the four men: "Boys, I have good news for you. The governor has granted all of you a reprieve of two weeks."

The news was received with cheers by the 31 men in the death house.

Letters To The Editor

PRICE OF ICE CREAM.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—We are all endeavoring to throw light on the vexed question of the H. C. of L. I believe everyone should make as public as possible anything that looks like profiteering. It may do good; it will do no harm. Here, therefore, is my contribution:

Neilson's ice cream bricks are retailed in Toronto for 30c. In Peterborough, 93 miles from Toronto, the merchants still sell them for 30c. But in Belleville, 113 miles from Toronto, they sell for 35c. The Peterborough stores must be making a profit after paying 93 miles express charges. Why should 20 miles further make a difference of 5c. a pint? If there must be an increase, what about two cents instead of five? Ice cream profits are notorious as it is, without further increases.

I am, sir,
Yours respectfully,
H. J. PARKER.

ILLUSTRATED PRINCIPLES
That disease arises from within the body, and the remedy needful to adjust the cause of disease is within the body; get that remedial power into play and the cause of disease is relieved. All that is necessary to keep this power to work is to keep the pressure off nerves, keep the backbone limber and in alignment.
A good illustration of the principles upon which Chiropractic bases its claim that all disease is the result of a disturbance of the nervous system, is seen in the case of a man with a paralyzed leg. Why is it that a man in this condition cannot move his leg when he wills to? Simply because there is some obstruction between the brain and the leg—PRESSURE ON NERVES—which interferes with the function of that leg. To take this pressure off nerves is to remove the cause of DIS-EASE.
The brain, is the power of man; attached to the brain is the spinal cord, which is enclosed within the spine; if the spinal cord be attached to the brain, it must be a part of the brain. "If you attach a hose to a hydrant it becomes a part of that hydrant, so far as conveying water is concerned." This brain and spinal cord sends branches, known as spinal and smaller nerves, to every part of your body, which carries the life of the body from the brain. THINK IT OVER. See your Chiropractor. JEWISH NATIONHOOD.

Jewish organizations comprising twelve million members were represented at the Peace Conference, where they asked for recognition of the historic claims of the Jewish people in regard to Palestine and particularly requested that the government and administration of Palestine be given to Great Britain as the trustee of the League of Nations. News that Great Britain has been given the mandate will be received with joy by Jewish people everywhere. It will also be a matter for satisfaction that the Supreme Council has decided to establish a Jewish National Home in the Holy Land. There will be complete freedom of religious worship in Palestine for all creeds, and Great Britain will see that civil rights are protected with a square deal to everybody. The dream of Jewish nationhood so long entertained is now within measurable distance of accomplishment.

PENALIZE THE GAMBLER, NOT THE HORSE.

A tax of $10,000 to $5,000 a day on race tracks operating in Ontario looks very promising to the "moral reformers." We presume that the Government propose to penalize race track gambling. But they really penalize the horse race, which is a different matter. A horse race is a form of sport which of its own character incites to a measure of gambling in some people. But elections are a sure cause of gambling. Why not put a tax on elections? Winnipeg "fans" sent down $25,000 recently to bet on a hockey match in Toronto. Why not tax hockey? Baseball is responsible for millions of dollars changing hands every year. Why not tax the diamond? The thing to tax is not the horse race, but the gambling end of it. Those who want the luxury of machine gambling should pay for the luxury. Private betting is another matter. It's not the money that changes hands in the community that makes the evil of race track betting, but the money lifted by professional manipulators who follow the races and pay most of their taxes somewhere else.—Canadian Courier.

CANADIANS SHOULD PROTEST.

Canada has vast resources of pulpwood, but at the rate the forests are being depleted to supply the enormous demands of United States newspapers it is easy to see that Canada's pulpwood wealth will speedily disappear unless an intelligent national system of protection and reforestation in adopted. Canadian newspaper readers are threatened with smaller papers and higher subscription prices as the result of the inflated prices for newsprint caused by United States bidding for Canadian pulp and paper. The St. Catharines Journal, published as a daily since 1859, has been forced to suspend owing to present conditions in the publishing field, and in its farewell note draws attention to the paper situation as follows:

> "The one condition toward which The Journal, in common with many other newspapers in Canada, feels critical, is that which allows the raw material of Canada's forests to be made into newsprint and shipped across the border to over-sized metropolitan newspapers that are offering fabulous prices for the newsprint tonnage. If this export continues, it is evident that other newspapers which have long been public-spirited and useful institutions will be forced to surrender. The Journal has letters on file from New York offering nine and a half cents a pound for newsprint in the roll. Canadian papers, accordingly, have to pay the piper. It may be found later by Canadian newsprint manufacturers that they are killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

When it is considered that the forests and waterpowers belonging to the people have been turned over to business interests with comparatively small return to the nation it does seem possible that the interests of newspaper publishers, readers and advertisers could be better protected and not penalized because United States publishers can afford to pay a higher price now that the pulpwood resources of that nation have been largely dissipated.

CRISP COMMENT

Trying to justify the atrocious murders in Ireland a Sinn Fein writer terms them "guerilla warfare." Gorilla would be a better word.

The Aldermen are finding out in ample measure how hard it is to suit everybody, and the more they try the nearer they get to nowhere, as Paddy would say.

Don't forget that the backyard garden will have an important bearing on the High Cost of Living next fall. A small daily investment of energy and seeds will pay large dividends later on.

With potatoes over $4.00 a bag, sensible people will substitute rice and macaroni. No potato ever grown was worth more than two cents a pound for its food value, says the St. Mary's Journal.

Pigs may be pigs, but they are not potatoes, and the City Council, while partial to potatoes, refused to permit the raising of pigs within city limits. Pigs as pigs do not seem to have many friends in the Council, although pigs as pork, pickled, fried, roasted or boiled, would not be sneezed at by any of the Aldermen.

Since the day when the man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, it was generally supposed that the thieves had for the most part left that locality for more fruitful fields in the New World, but the news has just come by courier, telegraph and cable that Jericho was raided by roving Bedouins last Sunday and a large number of cattle driven off. British troops were sent in pursuit, and an example of law and order in the Holy Land may be expected.

Canadians do not know what it is to be heavily taxed. Of conditions in England, the London Observer says: "Many a man in the middle zone of assessments is now working up to half his time for the State. So many months in every year he must labor before he can begin to meet the claims of himself and his dependents. Saving is very nearly out of the question for him. He has parted reluctantly from it as from a pre-war luxury or clings doubtfully to it as a post-war hope.

OTHER VIEWS

Why Bother About W. R. Hearst

Edmonton Journal

The Statesman, the Toronto weekly which came into existence to fight the Unionist Government, is still doing so. In the last issue Canada is informed that it brought upon herself all her present troubles by sinning against the light in returning that government. Parliament "is now a byword of contempt, the stagnant resort for juice-sucking parasites who labor not nor spin yet are gorged at the government trough." In another article Mr. J. S. Ewart carries on his propaganda for a Canadian republic. In a third a contributor holds forth on the iniquity of the regulations which compel the flying over the schools of the Union Jack, "the flag of an empire that is at this moment maintaining a diabolical tyranny in Ireland compared with which the actions of the Huns in Belgium were those of amateurs." A little further on we are asked to sympathize with the German children and with others who have to go to schools flying the emblem of an empire "universally detested by the peoples outside its own boundaries as well as by millions of those within."

Why worry about Hearst when propaganda of this kind is carried on within the Dominion itself?

Work and Play

Westminster Gazette

Mr. Rudyard Kipling was surely the most misguided of seers when he imagined in his "flannelled fool at wicket and muddled of at the goal" that a nation devoted to sport must lose its military spirit. It is the young men who have seen war and all that it means who are responsible for such a passion for sport as the country has never before manifested. Gates are bigger events more numerous and the public interest in every branch of play more keen than ever it has been. Football still holds the field, but its reign is hastening to a close, and the cricketer and the lawn-tennis player are preparing for their season, while the golfer looks forward to a summer that will crowd the links to excess. All this is healthy enough, and yet strange when on all hands the gospel of work is being preached by megaphone. If the world must work more it is strongly determined to season its tasks with more play.

A LAUGH OR TWO

His Modest Request

The great pianist at a drawing-room function was clearly annoyed "I do not ask," he said, "that you moderate your conversation to the point where you can hear me play. That, perhaps, would be too much. But in order to do myself justice I must request that you allow me to hear myself."

He resumed his playing amid deep silence.

Willie's Choice

"Now, Willie," said a generous father, as he and his little son were gazing into a tailor's shop window, "I am going to buy you a new pair of trousers, and you shall choose them Which pair do you want?"

After a moment's hesitation the little boy said: "Please, father, may I have that pair, marked 'Cannot be beaten?"

Time to Go

He had held forth for so long on the subject of his adventures that the entire smoking-room was distinctly bored. Finally he reached India.

"It was there that I first saw a man-eater tiger," he announced, boastfully.

"Pooh! that's nothing," said a mild-looking little man, edging towards the door. "I saw a man eating rabbit."

And he sauntered gracefully out—London Blighty.

MOTOR CAR NEWS

CANADIAN MOTORISTS FOR BIG TOUR

The Michigan Pikes Association are organizing their motor tour of Ontario in July, with the precision of the general staff of an army. They are leaving nothing to chance and have sent elaborate forms to clubs at the different places they intend to stop, asking for many particulars.

They seek to know the names of the committee in charge of local arrangements for their reception. Wherever possible, in the smaller towns, they want such organizations as the Daughters of the Empire, or the Red Cross Society to serve a semi-picnic lunch so that their schedule of time will not be interfered with. They are asking organizations to have supplies of gasoline and oil ready for their 70 passenger cars and their 15 motor trucks.

As there will be at least 300 men in the party, they want to know the location of a suitable camp site not less than 250 feet square, where their camp city may be erected, how near the centre of the city it is and whether water is available. Agents are sought in the different centres to purchase supplies for them in advance These will be notified by telegraph or letter of their needs.

They ask Toronto, whether they will stop on the night of July 16th, to arrange for a public good roads rally, where their speakers will discourse.

The secretary of the Michigan Pikes Association has written to the Ontario Motor League, inviting 75 "good fellows" from Ontario to come on their tour. Accommodation will be provided for them, so far as camping, etc., is concerned. They will also be given seats in Michigan cars or may bring their own. All that is being asked is $50 a head to cover meals and running expenses for the trip.

GOV'T REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Heavy rain during the week delayed seeding, but greatly helped fall wheat, clovers, and the early sown spring grains. A number of farmers on well situated land did a little seeding, as well as plowing and general cultivation.

The first spraying has been done by the better fruit growers.

Essex and Middlesex report the planting of early potatoes, and Norfolk declares that some farmers already have two or three acres in. Prices of potatoes to the producer run all the way from $4 to $5.25 a bag, according to locality and quality and sometimes despite poor quality. The demand for good seed potatoes was never stronger.

The high cost of feeding live stock is affecting breeders. Brant states that at a recent sale of pure-bred Shorthorns, good cows with plain pedigrees sold very cheaply, some really good ones going as low as $120 and $130. Bulls and very young stock scarcely brought beef prices.

Frontenac quotes calves as selling for veal at from 12 to 18 cents a pound.

Good milch cows are still highly regarded. Both Welland and Huron report sales of dairy cows at prices ranging from $125 to $200. The milk flow has largely increased with so many herds freshening.

Hogs are growing strong at from $19 ot $20 a cwt. Small pigs are selling at from $10 to $15 a pair, chiefly around $12.

Heavy horses are holding their own. The Fort William representative reports that farm horses from six to eight years old, and weighing from 1,300 ot 1,400 lbs., have sold at from $450 to $500 a pair during the week.

Hay is still dear, quotations ranging from $28 to $35 a ton. Norfolk states that straw is bringing as high as $20 a ton.

Farm labor cannot nearly meet the demand. Brant claims that not ten per cent. of the help actually needed is in sight, although York thinks the situation is improving. As a result of the shortage of labor more land will be given to pasture. Wages have never been so high on the farm, running all the way from $45 to $75 a month, with board, and in some instances the figures have reached $100.

Elgin reports many farms changing hands with land increasing in value.

JAMES LARKIN SENT TO STATE PRISON

New York, May 3—Extraordinary precautions were taken today when James J. Larkin, Irish agitator convicted last week of criminal anarchy, was sentenced from five to ten years in the state prison with hard labor. "I find nothing in the record of this case or in any facts that have been brought to my attention to indicate that the full penalty of the law should not be imposed," said Supreme Court Justice Weeks who denied motions for a new trial and arrest of judgment. Larkin, who clashed several times with the court while conducting his own defence took his sentence quietly. Bowing to Justice Weeks, he said: "I thank you, sir." Fifteen detectives commanded by James J. Gegan, of the bomb squad and several deputies headed by Sheriff David H. Knott guarded the court room, which was filled with Larkin sympathizers. Names and addresses of spectators were taken at the door. Men were searched for concealed weapons.

By THOMAS HARDY

Probably Miss Fancy Day never before stood so low in Mr. Dewy's opinion as on that afternon. In fact it is just possible that a few more blue dresses on the Yalbury young men's account would have clarified Dick's brain entirely, and made him once more a free man.

But Venus had planned other developments, at any rate, for the present. The path he pursued passed over a ridge which rose keenly against the western sky, about fifty yards in his van. Here, upon the bright afterglow about the horizon, was now visible an irregular outline, which at first he conceived to be a bush standing a little beyond the line of its neighbors. Then it seemed to move, and as he advanced still further there was no doubt that it was a living being of some species or other. The grassy path entirely prevented his footsteps from being heard, and it was not till he was close that the figure recognized him. Up he sprung and he was face to face with Fancy.

"Dick! Dick! Oh, is it you Dick?"

"Yes, Fancy," said Dick, in rather a repentant tone, and lowering his nuts.

She ran to him, flung her parasol on the grass, put her little head against his breast and then there began a narrative, disjointed by such a hysterical weeping as was never surpassed for intensity in the whole history of love.

"Oh, Dick!" she sobbed out, "where have you been, away from me? Oh. I have suffered agony, and thought you would never come any more! 'Tis cruel, Dick; 'tisn't, it is justice! I've been walking miles and miles up and down this wood, trying to find you till I was wearied and worn out, and I could walk no further. Oh, Dick, directly you were gone I thought I had offended you, and I put down the dress; 'tisn't finished now, Dick, and I never shall finish it, and I'll wear an old one Sunday! Yes, Dick, I will because I don't care what I wear when you are not by my side—ah, you think I do, but I don't!—and I ran after you and I saw you go up the hill and not look back once, and then you plunged in and I after you; but I was too far behind. Oh, I did wish the horrid bushes had been cut down, so that I could see your dear shape again. And then I called out to you, and nobody answered, and I was afraid to call very loud lest anybody else should hear me. Then I kept wandering and wandering about and it was dreadful misery, Dick. And then I shut my eyes and fell to picturing you looking at some other woman, very pretty and nice, but with no affection or truth in her at all and then imagined you saying to yourself, 'Ah, she's as good as Fancy, for Fancy told me a story, and was a flirt, and cared for herself more than me, so now I'll have this one for my sweetheart.' Oh, you won't will you, Dick, for I do love you so!"

It is scarcely necessary to add that Dick renounced his freedom there and then and kissed her ten times over, and promised that no pretty woman of the kind alluded to should ever engross his thoughts; in short, that though he had been vexed with her, all such vexation was past, and that henceforth and forever it was simply

X-RAY FAILED
Mechanic Gives Evidence

There are cases where science in its most profound phases is absolutely balked, yet other help is at hand.

This is proved by the testimony of a mechanic, 35 years of age, who suffered, at times, positive torture from stone in the bladder. After trying many remedies without result, he had an X-Ray photograph taken, which also failed to show where the trouble was. Fortunately, just at this juncture, when he almost had given up hope of any relief, Gin Pills were brought to his notice. These famous Pills in a very short time enabled him to pass the stone which was the cause of his trouble. We will give the name of this man on request.

Kidney and Bladder troubles should not be neglected. The first symptoms should be sufficient warning. Pain in the sides or back, constant headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, gravel, highly-colored urine, specks before the eyes, all point to derangement. Gin Pills should be obtained without delay. Druggists and dealers carry them—50c—your money refunded if not satisfied. Free sample on request.

AFTER SHAVING

Heal the Skin and Prevent Infection with "ABSORBINE JR."

The most healing, most soothing, most effective skin lotion you can use after shaving is one you can make up at home by adding one ounce of "ABSORBINE JR." to a quart of water or witch hazel.

To rub this lotion over the face after shaving is a luxury indeed. It takes away all soreness—prevents chapping and irritation—heals the skin—and prevents infection.

A solution of "ABSORBINE JR." in water makes an excellent mouth wash; it thoroughly cleans the mouth, destroys germs, and prevents decay; fine for the teeth and gums.

Sporting Duke In New Line

Duke Diabruzzi, Explorer and Hunter Forms Colony in Africa

ROME, May 5.—Arctic exploration and shooting the savage polar bear, have no allurement at present for the Duke of the Abruzzi, who is now engaged in the equally scientific if less hazardous task of investigating the commercial and agricultural possibilities of the Benadir Colony, East Africa, with a view to making it a source of income for Italy and even eventually of rendering that country independent of other nations for her supplies of cotton and cereals.

The Duke, in addition, intends to explore the source of the Uebi Scebel River, which, rising in the high plateau of Hanar, toward Abyssinia passes through the Italian colonies to the sea, and, it is believed, can easily be rendered navigable for small boats besides being invaluable as a source of irrigation for the extensive agricultural enterprises which the Duke hopes to initiate in Benadir.

Th first news has just arrived of the expedition which started last December from Mogadiscio. An exhaustive study has already been made of the winds, the climate and the rainfall of the country. Engineer Agostinelli, who is accompanying the expedition and who has done considerable work on the rivers and canals of the Lower Piave, considers that it will be comparatively easy to utilize the waters of the Uebi Scebel for a system of canals to irrigate that part of the colony which now suffers from drought which will more than quadruple its productive power.

The Duke of the Abruzzi, with the experts who have accompanied him, are setting up two big experimental farms where it will be demonstrated what immense harvests of cotton, dourra, sugar and coffee can be obtained in this country through irrigation, a system of intensive culture and the use of modern argicultural machines.

The ex-German cargo boat, now called the Carlo Pisacane, which brought news of the expedition,, also carried a large shipment of dourra from the colony, a grain which resembles maize and can be used, together with ordinary flour for bread. It has also been proved that the breeding of cattle in Benadir can be greatly increased so that supplies can be sent to Italy of meat and hides.

All this work is being done, it is announced, entirely at the expense of the Duke, who desires that Italy's colonies should be developed and hopes that similar work may be started in Lybia and Cyrenaica.

CASE LAID OVER

At Peterboro on Monday J Guise Bagley appeared before Judge Huycke in the County Court on several charges of defalcation. In view of the fact that a telegram was received last night from his brother in England holding out some hope of restitution, judgment was deferred by His Honor until June 12. The second reason for a deferment was that there are some division court cases pending in which Mr. Bagley may be required as a witness and the assignee who is meeting the creditors preferred that Mr. Bagley still be held. In a number of the cases the assignee may take action or press claims on Mr. Bagley's books against a number of young farmers for whom Mr. Bagley secured exemption from military service at the time of the M.S.A.

ROTARY CLUB HELPS

At the last regular luncheon of the Belleville Rotary Club, it was decided that in order to inaugurate a campaign of usefulness in Belleville to assist the most worthy cause, which now is to be met by the citizens of Belleville. The Salvation Army is asking that the citizens of Belleville contribute $2,500 to their great fund which is being organized to assist people in want in all parts of the world during this reconstruction period. The work that the Army has done during the war has stood out in bold relief. It is the duty of all classes to get together with the Rotary Club in assisting in this great cause. The Club had as guests at a recent meeting, Col. Chandler of Toronto, and Adjutant Cavender of Belleville. Colonel Chandler explained the necessity of securing funds to carry on the work begun during the war, and appealed to the Rotary Club as a public spirited body to lend its weight to this appeal. Rotarian Harry Ackerman was appointed Chairman of the Committee to perfect the organization and each Rotarian has undertaken to secure a certain allotment of this objective. It is expected that the citizens of Belleville generally will join with the Rotary Club in putting over the $2,500 drive which begins May 17th.

OLD BOYS REUNION

A most enthusiastic meeting of the re-organizers of the Old Boys' Re-union was held last evening with Judge Wills in the chair. That this celebration will be a complete success was quite evident by the feeling of unity and endeavorance shown by the large attendance. Reports were brought in by the various committees and were warmly commended by the members of the meeting. A preliminary draft of the Old Boys' program was submitted by the entertainment committee and was unanimously favoured. This program dealt with the sports for the big four days of the re-union and the proposed program is one that will make the celebration the greatest in history. It was decided to ask the City Council to have a civic holiday on Tuesday July 27th, as it is understood that citizens in general as in former years, have a great inclination to be one "of the regular fellers" on the above mentioned day. The various committees are working in conjunction with the G. T. R. to have a picnic on the 27th and so far arrangements are seemingly satisfactory. In connection with the land sports in charge of W. J. Cook and the water sports in charge of King Rogers, the committee have decided to hold excursions and ball games, teams to be taken from the Central Ontario League. It is understood that the Cobourg team will be one of the competitors for the title of the "Regular Fellers." At the conclusion of the meeting it was decided to meet again on the night of Tuesday May 18th at eight o'clock, and it is hoped that all interested in the welfare of the re-union will be there on time.

The business office of The Intelligencer will close at 5 o'clock on Saturdays during the months of May, June, July and August.

VISITING REBEKAHS

Thirty-six candidates initiated in three meetings is the proud record of Quintena Lodge No. 133, Order of Rebekah, which is an evidence that Rebekahs are increasing very fast and that Quintena Lodge is a very live and progressive institution. Tuesday evening eighteen candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the order, a special feature of the evening being the presence of large delegation from Oshawa Rebekah Lodge No. 3, numbering forty-five, with their degree team which conferred the iniatiatory degree in a clever and interesting manner. There were over two hundred and fifty members present and many favorable comments were passed upon the very fine manner in which the Oshawa Rebekahs put on the work. In the absence of Noble Grand Maud Naylor, who is ill, Past Noble Grand E. Ormand, presided. The visitors were met at the C. P. R. depot at 5.40 and escorted to the Oddfellows Temple where a very appetizing luncheon was served. Oshawa degree was in charge of Past Grand W. Caverly, assisted by Noble Grand Maud Hall. After the degree had been conferred a resolution expressing appreciation of the visit of the Oshawa Rebekahs and congratulating the degree team upon the high point of excellence reached in the work was proposed by Past Grand Patriarch R. H. Ketcheson in his usual witty and interesting manner and was seconded by Charles Frost and unanimously carried. Ice cream, and cake were served and a very pleasant evening closed with dancing.

LARKIN VS. GOODFELLOW

Larkin shipped cattle to Toronto, including four which it was alleged did not belong to him. Goodfellow, a neighbor, laid an information against Larkin for stealing his four animals, which Larkin had refused to pay for. Judge Deroche acquitted Larkin of stealing and left the question of the ownership of the cattle an open question. Larkin brings this action against Goodfellow (who has recovered two of his missing animals) for malicious prosecution, alleging want of reasonable and probable cause. Goodfellow claims he was justified in prosecuting. Negotiations for a settlement are pending and by consent case stands over till next jury assize.

CHAMBERS VS. TRENTON COOPERAGE

This action is brought by the plaintiff, an aged lady in infirm health, to set aside an alleged agreement made with the defendants for the sale of elm timber on her Thurlow Farm. Plaintiff alleges misrepresentation and pleads the statute of Frauds and no independent advice. Defendants deny having taken any advantage of plaintiff. Case adjourned to June Non-Jury Sittings by consent. Ponton and Ponton, solicitors for Plaintiff; H. J. Smith for defendant.

Lavall vs C. O. R'y Co.—An action for damages for alleged false arrest. The plaintiff was in the employ of the C. O. Railway, and was arrested for alleged intoxication. The Magistrate trying the case, adjudged Lavall not guilty. This action was brought and after some evidence had been submitted Justice Logie dismissed the action. Messrs. Porter, Butler & Payne for plaintiff. Mr. A. J. Reid, K.C., for defendants.

Blue vs C. P. R. Co.—An action for damages. The plaintiff, T. Blue resides at Madoc village, and in November last year, was driving home from Belleville in an auto, when near Ivanhoe station, the auto was damaged by coming in contact with a freight train which was standing on the highway crossing and could not be observed. The car was badly damaged as a result. Messrs. Porter, Butler & Payne for plaintiff. Mr. McMurchy, K.C., for the defendants.

MRS. AURORE BARRETTE, popular New Hampshire woman, who says Tanlac brought about a wonderful change in her condition and that every suffering woman ought to know about this wonderful medicine.

"Tanlac is a grand medicine, and I think every suffering woman ought to know about it." was the statement made recently by Mrs. Aurore Barrette, at her residence, 133 Second Street, Manchester, New Hampshire. Mrs. Barrette is a well known and highly respected resident of that city.

"I have not felt at all well for the past year or more," she continued. "I haven't been sick enough to be in bed, but I was far from being a well woman. At times I thought I had kidney trouble, for I suffered almost constantly from severe pains across my back, just over the kidneys. Whenever I tried to do any house-work at all that dull pain would be there, and if I attempted to stoop ever it just felt as though my back would break. I would get so weak and worn out I would have to sit down and rest several times a day, and I felt tired all the time.

"This condition made me awfully nervous, so that I rarely ever slept well at night, and every now and then I would jump in my sleep, as if in a fright, and my condition was really becoming serious.

"Only two bottles of Tanlac have brought about a wonderful change in my condition. In fact the results I have received from this medicine have really surprised me. Those terrible pains in my back which used to trouble me every day have almost disappeared, and I am going to keep on taking Tanlac until they leave me entirely. I have lots of energy now and am not only able to do my house work, but I get through the day without feeling the least bit tired. I am no longer nervous like I was, and I sleep well at night.

"I shall always be thankful for what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville at Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

LONDON "DISGUSTED" EVEN THAT TOO WEAK

London, May 5—In a letter sent to Premier Drury by the Real Estate Owners' Association here, the manner in which the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature met the delegates and dealt with the city of London bill are roundly scored.

"Disgust," says the communication, "does not adequately convey our contempt of the manner in which the business of the bill was conducted by the member who acted as chairman in the absence of Mr. Raney."

Free Land For Cultivation 40 Acres Available

CITY COUNCIL AND CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ARRANGE TO PROVIDE CITIZENS WITH GOOD GARDEN PLOTS FREE OF CHARGE—PLOWING AT COST—DEFINITE MOVE TO ENCOURAGE GARDENING IN THE CITY.

Definite plans have been worked out whereby it is believed that every resident of the city who is desirous of having a home garden this summer will be able to realize this desire. Mr. Charles Hanna, chairman of the Public Works Committee of the City Council, and Mr. Ernest P. Fredericks, Secretary-Manager of the Chamber of Commerce, at a conference last night, went over the local situation in detail and have prepared a working plan that should go a long way to help in the "Greater Production" campaign that is being launched here. The city has given the use of about 40 acres of land in various parts of the city, all of which can be put under cultivation and which it is hoped will be taken up promptly for home garden use. This property is located in Foster, Bleecker, Coleman and Murney wards and is splendidly adapted to garden purposes.

It is the plan of the committee to apportion this land in lots of approximately 66 x 132 feet, and residents of the city can have the use of such a lot free of charge if they will plant it and help to add to the city's production of farm produce. If a lot of this size is larger than one family care to cultivate, the city is willing that two families share the land. Those who feel that they can care for more than one lot can get whatever they are willing to place under cultivation.

If those who take over this property for the summer wish to have it plowed the city will arrange to do this work and charge just the actual cost to the user of the land. Every help and encouragement will be given those who desire to take advantage of this free offer of land because the fact is only too apparent that the need of more production is as great now as at any time during the war, and in some particulars the conditions in the near future so far as certain food products are concerned is destined to be more acute than they were two or three years ago. It is this situation that has impelled the movement to produce all the food possible the coming summer and the people of the city cannot do too much to aid in relieving a condition that is getting constantly worse and that will be felt even more next winter unless large additions are made to the food production this summer.

While the city has a fair amount of land suitable for planting, it is believed that much more will be needed, and an urgent request is made that all property owners who have idle land turn it over to the Greater Production committee for free use by the people of the city.

Plans showing the location and size of the land now available for planting can be had from Mr. Hanna or Mr. Fredericks at the Chamber of Commerce. The principle of "first come, first served" will be followed in alloting the land and all applications should be made before June 15th, at which time the offer will be withdrawn.

Raise Compensation To The Working Men

Hon. Walter Rollo's Bill Received First Reading in Legislature

A bill to make certain alterations in the Workmen's Compensation Act was introduced in the Legislature by Hon. Walter Rollo. It received its first reading. This provides for increasing allowances of 25, 50 and in some cases 100 per cent. over those at present in force. Funeral allowances will be increased from $75 to $125. Monthly payments to widows who are sole dependents from $30 to $40 per month additional monthly allowance for children from $7.50 to $10 per month, increasing from $10 to $15 per month of the payment to children who are the sole depedents, monthly allowances to dependents, who are other than widows, husbands or children, increased from $20 to $40 per month, and increasing the copensation to injured workmen from 55 to 75 per cent of the wages.

In reply to a question as to whether or not the increases would fall on the employes, Mr. Rollo said: "The workmen's compensation is paid by the employers from the industry in which the injury takes place and the increase in the present allowance will have to be borne by the same people who are at present paying the compensation."

Replying to Major Tolmie the Minister said the amendments did not provide for extending the Act to the merchants' retail clerks. The Act would become operative sixty days after the royal assent, he said in answer to a question by Joseph E Thompson, Northeast Toronto. The Act was not retroactive in regard to past payments but all widows already benefiting would be placed on the same basis as those who came in after the increases would be come effective. The permanently or partially disabled now enjoying benefits would receive the new scale.

HAS SPENT TWENTY YEARS BEHIND BARS

Montreal, May 6.—Octave Syrie, sentenced in the sessions court to five years' imprisonment for stealing an overcoat, had a police record that was almost unique. He was the possessor of half a dozen aliases, and is credited with 39 sentences, making a total of 28 years, 10 months and 13 days spent in jail.

Alleges Betrayal Of Commerce Board

R. L. Richardson, M. P., Gives Hints of a Story Yet Untold

OTTAWA, Ont., May 6.—Dark hints of a story yet untold in connection with the Board of Commerce were made by R. L. Richardson, M.P., for Springfield, in the House of Commons. After referring to the "impotency" of the board to deal with combines, etc., Mr. Richardson is reported in Hansard today as having said:

"Although I fancy it is not desirable that I should tell what I have heard about the Board of Commerce, and many of the things which have led almost to its destruction, the facts will, I hope, come out a little later on when this House and the country will see how the Board of Commerce has, as I believe, been betrayed and the dangerous position in which the people of this country stand because of the private onslaught against that board in an effort to destroy it."

Parliament has been awaiting further correspondence regarding the resignation of Mr. Justice Robson from the board, since March 21 last, when Dr. Molloy of Provencher placed an order for return on the order paper. On Monday Sir George Foster stated that he had no objection to the documents being brought down, provided that such as were not considered in the public interest need not be produced.

Foodstuffs Held For Higher Prices

Mayor Church Declares Food is Held There to Enhance Prices

TORONTO, May 6—Mayor Chruch in a letter to Crown Attorney J. Seymour Corley, of this city, states that a large number of cars containing perishable foodstuffs are being stored on the sidings along the water front apparently for the purpose of enhancing prices. Mayor Church declares that he has failed to get action in the matter from the Board of Commerce.

Amendments To Temperance Act Are Introduced

Minimum Penalty For Having Liquor Cut Down from $200 to $100

TORONTO, May 5—The long promised amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act were brought down in the Legislature this afternoon by Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary.

The minimum penalty for persons having liquor illegally in their possession is reduced from $200 to $100. The maximum penalty which may be imposed under the Act is $2,000.

Either a fine or imprisonment may be imposed at the discretion of the magistrate.

Dentists are to be allowed to obtain a quart of liquor for medical purposes. Their present allowance is six ounces. The License Board is also given power to control the number of prescriptions issued by physicians.

Recall Gets Hard Knocks In Commons

Would Disqualify Members Filing Resignations with Party Committees

OTTAWA, May 6.—Parliament, generally speaking, is opposed to the system of recall. The question was thoroughly discussed in the House, and, while views varied, there was not one out-an-out champion of this plank which has been incorporated into the platform of the Farmers' party. Contrary to expectations, not one of the Farmer members came out wholeheartedly in support of the system. They went so far as to say that they would not want to be in Parliament if 60 to 75 per cent of their constituency was dissatisfied with them, but beyond that, they did not go. Unionist speakers were all opposed to it, while Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the Liberal Leader, and Hon. W. S. Fielding, his deskmate believed the system was wrong, but were agreeable to allowing anyone to try it out, providing the public was acquainted with the facts.

T. M. M. Tweedie, a lawyer, and Unionist member for West Calgary, precipitated the heated and acrimonious discussion. When the House was considering the Franchise Bill in committee, he moved an amendment to the clause, disqualifying candidates on different grounds, as follows:

"Persons who have signed any greement, whether amounting to a esignation, a recall or otherwise, which would in any manner whatsoever limit the independence of such person in the event of his being elected a member of the House of Commons The amendment was directed at the agrarian group, and more particularly at O. R. Gould of Assiniboia, the first Farmer member to be elected on the new national policy of the Canadian Council of Agriculture.

Shipments To U.S. Charges Collect

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 6—Canadian exporters will be obliged to ship freight to the United States, charges collect, as long as Canadian Railways refuse to accept payment of such charges. The Canadian Railway Commission has issued an order dismissing for want of jurisdiction over the subject matter three of the complaints presented before the commission by the Boards of Toronto and Montreal and the Canadian Manufacturers Association protesting against the order to agents by Canadian railways not to accept prepayment of freight charges to the United States on account of the adverse exchange situation It is stated that the U. S. roads may shortly rescind the order demanding prepayment of freight charges on shipments from the United States to Canadian points following representations to the Canadian Railway Commission by importers in this country.

JAIL WITHOUT FINE FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Toronto, May 6— Imprisonment, without the option of a fine is made the penalty for persons, who are intoxicated while in charge of a motor car, under a bill introduced by Hon. W. E. Raney.

Dr. Stevenson, of London, urged the confiscation of motor cars during the period that their owners are in jail.

Verdict Of $1,500 Against Simpson In Libel Action

Mr. Justice Middleton Says That Defendant Might Have Made Enquiries

TORONTO, May 5 — Arthur E. O'Leary was awarded $1,500 damages and costs against James Simpson by a jury before Mr. Justice Middleton in the Assizes in his $10,000 claim for slander and libel. The amount was divided $1,250 for the written libel and $250 for the spoken words. The jury deliberated for two and a half hours, leaving the court room shortly before twelve noon and returned at half-past two.

Following the decision, A. W. Roebuck counsel for Simpson, declined to say whether he would appeal.

Strike Situation Unchanged In France

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

PARIS, May 6—The strike situation was unchanged this morning both the government and the labor federations claiming victory. The federation has not renewed its request for a conference with government officials. Marseilles and Harve are completely tied up by a strike of dock workers while the railroad service is greatly reduced.

Parliament Wrestles With Disputes Act

Liberal Leader and Laborite Fight Basis of Application for Board

OTTAWA, May 6—There is a strong probability that municipal, and even Provincial employes will be included as coming under the Industrial Dispensaries Act, which at the present time is undergoing amendment by Parliament. Briefly speaking, it is the main purpose of the amendments (introduced in the Senate by Minister of Labor Robertson, and sponsored in the Commons by Hon. Arthur Meighen) to provide against indiscriminate strikes and to further provide that an application for a board of arbitration must have behind it a majority of the union whose members are concerned in the dispute in question. The word "union," Mr. Meighen explained did not, in his opinion mean the "locals" but the main body, even though its members might be scattered throughout an entire Province.

In the course of the discussion in the Commons, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Leader of the Opposition, suggested that it might be well to include under the incidence of the amended Act, municipal corporations. The employes, etc., the inclusion of whom had really been intended in the original Act, though technically they did not at present come under it. He proposed an amendment whose purpose it was to bring them under the Act.

The Minister of Interior did not profess to be entirely conversant with the intricacies of the bill, which he had been called upon to sponsor; so he refused to take the responsibility of accepting the proposal of the Opposition leader until he had consulted the Minister of Labor. But if the Act was so amended, he asked, could it not as well be made to cover Provincial employes?

"I think that the Minister of Labor would be willing to accept the suggestion," said Mr. King. The clause was left over for further consideration.

The amendment, which would necessitate a majority vote of an entire union before a board could be granted, proved very controversial. D D. McKenzie, Cape Breton; Hon. Mr. King, and Angus Macdonald, Labor member for Temiskaming, all registered strong opposition, chiefly on the grounds that the employes of one company might have difficulty in securing a bard which might deal with an issue of particular interest to that group of employes alone.

This amendment was also left in abeyance.

GERMAN BARON FOUND MURDERED

Berlin, May 6.—Baron von Westerholt-Ysenbury whose castle was sacked early in April, has been found dead in the neighborhood of his estate. He had been shot through the head and murder is suspected. The Baron shortly was to give testimony at Muenster against the Reds, who, it is reported, placed a price of 20,000 marks on his head. Lately he had been the recipient of many threatening letters.

Revolutionists Will Subjugate Border States

AGUA PRIETA, Sonora, May 6.—Revolt or subjection of the border States of Coahuila, Nuevo Leon and Tammaulipas is a matter of but a few days it was announced at military headquarters of the revolutionists here today.

Revolutionary forces are active in all the States, it was said, and conferences are under way like those conducted which led to the revolt of Juarez.

In Monterey, Nuevo Leon, Carranza forces were declared concentrating in fear of attack, and the same concentration was reported at San Luis Potosi, further south in the State of the same name.

Monterey and San Luis Potest are considered the two most important rebel objectives in Northern Mexico. With these cities in their possession all rail communication between the United States and Mexico City would be cut and the oil fields would be isolated, except by water.

Girl Battles With Thug Till Help Arrives

Toronto Girl Attacked in Broad Daylight Puts up Good Fight

TORONTO, May 6—In broad daylight in full sight of other pedestrians some distance away, an attempt was made to rob Miss Aida Smart of Mimico at the corner of Jane street and the Lake Shore road about six o'clock last night.

Miss Smart was seized from behind by a strange man who had been following her all the way from the city and an effort was made to snatch her satchel from under her army. The plucky girl clung to the satchel and when her assailant tripped her she dragged him down with her.

Escapes up Jane Street

The two struggled on the pavement, Miss Smart retaining her hold of the satchel, even after the strap had broken Her strength was going fast, when a motor car came to her assistance, Just as the auto approached, the thug freeing himself from the girl's clasp and forsaking the satchel, escaped up Jane street.

Two men were in the car, and while one came to Miss Smart's assistance, the other made a vain effort to capture the thug.

Miss Smart, although badly shaken by the struggle and bruised by her fall, retained self possession of her faculties. She refused to be taken home until she had first notified the police, and accompanied the two men to County Constable Simpsons residence.

Every Inch a Thug

Her asasilant, she told the constable, was short and wore a peaked cap pulled well down over his eyes. He looked every inch a thug, she said. He had followed her all the way from Sunnyside, but she had not noticed him particularly. He evidently wore rubber-soled boots, as she had not heard him approach her.

Two women walking along the Lake Shore road had seen the attack, but were too far away to get to Miss Smart's assistance.

Miss Smart works in the city, but lives with her mother in Mimico. She is fond of walking, and nearly every night walks the full three miles from Sunnyside to her home, Jane street, where the assault took place, is one block west of the Humber.

Constable Simpson, with one of the motorists, immediately began a hunt for her assailant. Though the other police were notified, nothing has since been heard of him.

Do Not Represent U.S. Sentiment

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, May 6.—Premier Lloyd George will not take cognizance of the message from the American Congress relative to Ireland. This sort of thing has ceased to cause any stir in Downing street, officials said. We long since have come to believe that resolutions and messages coming from America are political manouvres and that they do not represent American sentiment consequently they have little weight.

Red Divisions Annihilated Polish Cavalry Push Forward

SKIRVA OCCUPIED BY POLISH CAVALRY IN ADVANCE TOWARD DNIEPER RIVER—PROGRESS MADE, BUT BOLSHEVIKI FIGHTING STUBBORNLY.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WARSAW, May 6.—Polish cavalry operating in the offensive against the Bolsheviki, have occupied Skvira in the Polish thrust towards the Dnieper. Skvira is about sixty miles southwest of Kiev and was a Bolshevik stronghold. Today's Polish communique announces that two Red Divisions which were cut off from the retreating Bolshevik army last week were annihilated. Fighting is continuing, the statement says, with the Bolsheviki stubbornly defending their positions, although the Poles are making some progress.

WARSAW, May 6.—Fighting between the Poles and the Bolsheviki for the possession of Kiev, the capital of Ukraine, continues day and night in an entire semi-circle of the Kiev bridgehead. Polish infantry is in contact with Bolshevik infantry, and the Poles are slowly pushing back the enemy in the face of machine gun and artillery resistance.

London Bank Manager Meets Tragic Death

Run Over by Freight Train in G. T. R. Yards

LONDON, Ont., May 6—Robert W. Travers, for five years Manager of the main branch of the Bank of Montreal in London, met a tragic death in the G.T.R. yards just east of Waterloo street this evening. For more than six months he had been suffering from a serious illness, and had been kept to his home. Yesterday afternoon he went out for a walk and shortly afterwards his relatives asked the police to locate him. Mr. Travers walked down Waterloo street to the railway and for a time sat on the freight-house platform. He attracted the attention of some of the employees and William Burrows, the crossing watchman asked W. T. Johnston, a fellow-employee to get into conversation with him. Johnston walked toward him, and as he did so a freight train approached from the west. Mr. Travers was seen to attempt to walk across the rails in the path of the locomotive and in an instant he was under the wheels.

Mr. Travers was born in Peterboro Ont., in 1860 and was the son of John N. Travers, and a grandson of General Sir Robert Travers of the British army. He was educated in Trinity College School, Port Hope.. He had spent practically his entire business life in the service of the Bank of Montreal. In 1909 he was placed in charge of the branch in Peterboro' and in 1915 he was promoted to London. His wife was formerly Miss Eda E. Smith of this city.

Raise $1,500,000 For Monuments For Canadians

Parliamentary Committee Decides to Ask for Vote of That Amount

OTTAWA, May 6.—The Committee of Parliament, which was appointed to consider the question of monuments to be erected to Canadians who fell in Flanders, has decided to ask for $1,500,000 for that purpose.

The bilingual question was raised in the Commons but Sir George Foster, by his reply in the French tongue fairly captivated the Quebec members who vigorously applauded. P. F. Casgrain, Charlevoix, had asked why the calendar on the table of the clerk of the House was in English only, and Sir George replied that such had been customary since Confederation, and he did not think they were less intelligent than their predecessors.

In the Commons yesterday afternoon, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, introduced a bill to amend the Supreme Court Act. The purpose he said was to bring about simplification and uniformity and also to prevent appeals in matters of trifling importance. The Supreme Court should be restricted to cases in which the amount of the matter in controversy whatever it's nature exceeded $2,000 and in other cases appeal would be to the court of last resort in the province However, in the cases where deemed advisable, appeals might be made to the Supreme Court, by leave of the Court of Final Appeal in the province.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"WHOSE YOUR SERVANT?"

Talented and beautiful Lois Wilson heads an excellent cast of prominent screen players at the Palace tonight in a picturization of Julian Johnson's celebrated play, "Whose Your Servant?" which enjoyed a most successful engagement of many months at the Princess Theatre as a stage play. A beautiful Travelogue, a funny Atar comedy, and the Pathe News Graphic are also being shown on the same program.

WILLIAM FARNUM'S LATEST FILM

Commencing tonight William Farnum, famous motion picture star, will be seen at Griffin's where he will appear until Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, in William Fox's presentation of a romantic love story, "The Adventurer," by E. Lloyd Sheldon. This contains a typical Farnum role, and one in which the many followers of the star are promised much. Farnum is cast as a romantic lover who is as sure with his sword as with his heart. As the hero in "The Adventurer" he is certain to score, for it is the type of role in which he has won his greatest fame as an actor. William Farnum's ability is as unquestioned as is the fact that he has the largest following of any male screen star in the world. In this romantic drama he is afforded a chance to display those fine histrionic touches which have elevated him to his present eminent position. As usual, a strong supporting cast has been given this popular and talented star. Playing opposite him is Estelle Taylor, a newcomer to Belleville, and an actress who has risen rapidly and for whom a bright future is predicted. Harry Mann in a funny two reel Big V comedy entitled "Pipe Dreams and Prizes' and other varied attractions of interest have also been arranged for exhibition.

"RED RIDING HOOD"

"Little Red Riding Hood," a gay and gorgeous musical spectacle which is called pantomine in England and extravaganza in America, but, like the rose, by either name would be as sweet ,will be the attraction at Griffin's next Wednesday night, May 12th, for one night only The production, which will be seen here is an all-English importation, produced under the personal supervision of F. Stuart Whyte, whose previous offering, "Aladin," "Robinson Crusoe" and "Cinderella" have proved wonderfully successful on this side of the Atlantic. The action of the piece is divided into two acts and eleven superb scenes, while the costuming and lighting effects are marvels of beauty and riots of color. The company is headed by Miss Zara Clinton, the favorite English comedienne and the cast of twenty includes Mr. Johnny Osborne late of "Zig Zag" revue at the London Hippodrome and Miss Dorothy Mackie. In addition to the big cast of principals there is a chorus of wonderful girls, without which no big extravaganza would be complete. The management of Griffin's guarantee the above attraction to their many patrons, considering it the finest musical offering that it has been their privilege to present in many seas-

Pollyanna The Mad Glad Girl

Book Play Pleased Patrons at Griffin's—Capable Company

Sunshine distilled from a determination to be glad all the time, to have something to be glad for even in the most depressing circumstances is the theme of Eleanor Porter's book creation, "Pollyanna,". "Pollyanna" came to Belleville Wenesday for matinee and evening performance at Griffin's and large audiences resulted on both occasions. Laughter and tears punctuated the telling of the story of the little glad girl whose sole mission in life was to make people see the rain bow and take the good out of life which they have closed their eyes to. Bianca Robins in the title role is a clever actress and she was ably supported by a competent cast.

Action for $5,000 Damages for Breach of Promise Resulted in Verdict for $500

In the High Court of Justice in session here presided over by Hon. Justice Logie, a case which had aroused considerable interest was tried and disposed of. The plaintiff was Mrs. Mary Pearce, a middle-aged widowed lady, who is at present residing in Cobourg and the defendant was Mr. Isaac Smith, a widower, and a prosperous retired farmer residing near the town of Brighton in Northumberland County, a man who is upwards of 60 years of age. The case was what is known as a breach of promise case and the $5,000 damages was asked by the plaintiff.

It appears that some time ago the parties became acquainted and a courtship ensued. That Mrs. Pearce relied upon the alleged promise to have a marriage ceremony performed was evident from the fact that she spent a considerable sum of money in the preparation of a trousseau for the occasion. According to the testimony of the plaintiff, a wedding trip was arranged for which was to include points of interest in Canada and New York State. Shortly before the time set for the marriage, a son of the defendant was married and he (the defendant) made his home with his son. It is alleged Mr. Smith then notified Mrs. Pearce that he was not in need either of a wife or a housekeeper and thus the engagement was broken off. Failing to get compensation the breach of promise action was brought.

The jury after considering the evidence submitted, brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $500 and costs.

Messrs. Porter, Butler & Payne for the plaintiff; Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., and Mr. G. Drewery of Toronto for the defendant.

Landlord Murdered By His Tenants

Choked Him to Death Following a Quarrel on Deal.

Saskatoon, May 6.—John Arthur was committed from Kindersley police court to stand trial for the murder of Harry D'Guerre, his landlord, who was found choked to death in his tenant's barn last Wednesday night.

When asked by Magistrate McEachern if he wished to make any statement, Arthur said he was responsible for D'Guerre's death, but he choked him to save his own life, following a violent quarrel over a land deal. He also stated that on forcing D'Guerre into unconsciousness, he had gone to see Mrs. D'Guerre for help. She refused to let him telephone, owing to bad feeling between them, but on telling her there was trouble at the barn she immediately left with him.

Finding Mrs. D'Guerre's efforts to revive her husband had failed, Arthur phoned for a doctor, then the police, and then his own lawyer. He advised the police that he was ready for arrest, stating that he acted in self-defence.

Although the police had but eight miles to go to get Arthur, he had to wait until next morning before officers came for him.

Mystery of Murder Still Unsolved

Woman Acquitted of Murder of Brother-in-law

CONCORD, N. H., May 6—Mrs. Marion Loynes Otterson was found not guilty by a jury in Superior Court of the murder of her brother-in-law, Maurice Otterson, at Hooksett in November.

The jury occupied two hours and forty-five minutes in reaching its decision.

Mrs. Otterson was placed on trial on April 26. The murder with which she was charged was committed at the family home in Hookset on the night of November 9 last, her brother-in-law, Maurice, who but recently had returned from overseas, being shot to death when in the house with Mrs. Otterson only. Mrs. Otterson's husband and his parents had left the house early in the evening, for a shooting trip to Manchester and according to their testimony had expected to be joined in that city later in the evening by Mrs. Otterson and Maurice for a theatre party.

When Maurice was killed neighbors were summoned by Mrs. Otterson's screams and found the curtains drawn, the interior bearing the appearance of having been ransacked and Mrs. Otterson pale and dishevelled. She told them that two burglars had entered the house and one of them had thrown a sweater over her head to prevent an outcry and held her to the floor. His companion, she said, ransacked the house, encountered her brother-in-law and killed him and the men escaped in an automobile.

The state claimed that the story of the robbery was a hoax and that Mrs. Otterson herself committed the murder, although no motive was suggested.

No trace of the alleged burglars was ever found although there was mention in the testimony of the track of an automobile being seen near the house, and a garage keeper in Boscawen, a nearby town, that night sold gasoline to two men who drove hurriedly up in an automobile.

Mrs. Otterson was first held on suspicion, and then released but subsequently was arrested and indicted by the grand jury. She was formerly a nurse.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST WATSON NOW

El Centro, Cal., May 6—Walter Andrew Watson, alleged bigamist-murderer, was formally charged with murder here late yesterday when a coroner's jury after an inquest over the body of Nina Lee Deloney which was recovered yesterday morning from its hidden burial spot in western Imperial county, returned a verdict that "death was caused by a blow on the head by James Watson." The latter name was said to be another by which the prisoner is known. Watson was the principal witness at the inquest. He identified the body as that of "My wife, Mrs. Deloney." He also told the jury he had killed her and had buried the body in the lonely grave in a mountain gulch thirty miles west of Centro.

SAYS CANADIAN BRANDS MOISTEN ARID STATES

Special despatches published in the New York World from its correspondents in various parts of the United States tend to strengthen the impression that a good deal of the present supply of illicit "booze" being vended in the country, is finding its way across the international boundary from points in Canada.

The correspondent at Detroit is con- Nearly all the liquor handled by, and adds that Windsor keeps a section of the populace "wet" for a moderate charge of $5 to $6 a quart.

Nearly al the liqour handled by Seattle bootleggers is smuggled from Canada, the coast correspondent says. The same procedure of obtaining intoxicating refreshments prevails at St. Paul correspondent, who says that a Canadian quart is obtainable from $7 to $20, the average charge being about $15.

Canadian whiskey is highly appraised in Cincinnati, by one offender at least, who is now in jail awaiting a hearing on a charge of being a party to a transaction which involved a small Canadian quart. The price charged was $30.

ST. CATHARINES JOURNAL HAS CEASED PUBLICATION

St. Catharines, May 4—After years of struggling against adverse circumstances, the Evening Journal, the oldest newspaper here, announced that it would suspend publication. J. M. Elson, who came here from Toronto 11 years ago to take over the Journal, in announcement says: "Though reluctant to take this step, the ever-increasing cost of all commodities that enter into the printing and publishing business has brought the time when operation is carried on at a loss."

The Journal is one of the oldest newspapers in Ontario. It has been published as a daily since 1859 and as a weekly prior to that date. The Journal's liabilities are comparatively small but want of working capital, together with a loss on operation makes it prudent to close the books.

New York Store Cuts All Prices

Overall Campaign is Credited With Bringing Down the Prices.

NEW YORK, May 6.—Following the announcement of a 20 per cent. reduction in the price of practically its entire stock by one of the largest department stores in the city, New York is hoping for a general lowering of prices by local merchants. Although there have been no further announcements of such sweeping reduction as was made by the big department store, a general downward tendency is noticeable. This applies particularly to clothing.

"Special sales" at greatly reduced prices are being advertised by many establishments and the price tickets in the windows of clothing stores indicate that a break in values has come.

A few weeks ago the prevailing price for ready-made suits in the lower Broadway shops was from $45 to $60. Suits are displayed in the windows of many of these shops today at from $35 to $50. The overall campaign, although it never progressed any further than the talking stage in New York, is believed to have been largely responsible for these reductions. The prosecution of several profiteers in Brooklyn by the United States Government's "flying squad" of cost of living experts is also thought to have had the effect of making dealers in several other lines readjust their ideas of profit to a more reasonable level.

Down in Toronto, Too.

Toronto, May 6.—A decided lowering of the cost of clothing and staple products is indicated in advertisements appearing daily in Toronto newspapers. Display advertising calling attention to great bargain sales at large department stores has increased considerably since the inauguration of the overall campaign in the United States and a few Canadian cities. It is reported that business among retail merchants in the down town section of the city has decreased rapidly during the past four months and bargain sales are being organized on a large scale to get rid of surplus stocks.

COOLIES STRIKE IN FIJI ISLANDS

Rioting and fierce fighting marked the strike of Indian coolies in the Fiji Islands late in February. The disturbances did not cease until a government yacht arrived from New Zealand with artillerymen and Lewis gunners aboard, followed by a mine sweeper from Sydney with a force of bluejackets.

There had been unrest among the Indians for some time and they launched their strike when the islands were isolated by a marine engineers' strike in Australia. Practically all the Indians in Fiji, numbering about 60,000 were involved. They expected the aid of 80,000 Fijans, but in this they were disappointed. The strike began in January on the Rowa River Sugar Fields, where the Indians are mostly employed. The Indians in public meetings declared themselves "as good as whites," and demanded equal rights. Coolies who remained at work were clubbed by the other coolies or hideously mutilated by women with knives. The disorders were started by a false report that a white man had beaten a "boy" (laborer).

At one time the situation was critical at Suva, the capital, there being 30,000 riotous coolies inside the town and 1,000 whites, including women and children, inside it. Returned soldiers, native policemen, regular and special, and a small improvised cavalry force held the Indians at bay until the arrival of the New Zealand artillerymen. Meantimo the infuriated coolies blew up bridges cut telephone wires and did other damage to property.

More than 250 Indians are to be tried for rioting.

SPANISH RIVER COMPANY PURCHASES FLYING BOAT

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 4.—The Spanish River Paper Company, with head offices in this city announces the purchase of a flying boat for forest survey and inspection work. Fuel supply bases will be established at various points in the area. The numerous lakes scattered throughout the northern part of Ontario, where the Spanish River people have extensive pulpwood limits, will make admirable landing places for this type of airplane. The purchase of such a craft has been under consideration for some time and the officials have come to the conclusion that survey work can best be carried out by the use of aircraft. The boat will be in charge of Capt. George H. Simpson, who served with distinction in the Naval Air Service of Great Britain. He is a Canadian.

Prices ewre firmer on the Canadian Txchanges, Dominion Steel being a feature.

The business office of The Intelligencer will close at 5 o'clock on Saturdays during the months of May, June, July and August.

—and neither could you have told the difference!

Why Tuesday's audience at the City Hall was so completely mystified. Claire Lillian Peteler and Sibyl Sanderson Fagan were inside the phonograph in all excepting physical presences

At first reading, the story of the New Edison's performance last Tuesday night at City Hall seems fraught with mystery.

But the explanation is simple enough.

First, get a picture of what happened. Miss Peteler sang "Only a Year Ago." She stopped after the first few lines, but her voice flowed on without a break. No one even noticed she had stopped—until some eyes, keener than the rest, saw her lips were still. It was only then that realization dawned. The audience found it had been listening to the New Edison.*

To every ear, the two voices, living and RE-CREATED, had been without a shade of difference. When Sibyl Sanderson Fagan made similar tests with her whistling selections, the same result was obtained.

That was what so mystified the audience. They had expected the RE-CREATED art to betray its phonographic origin. It was a step too advanced for their comprehension that this instrument should be all that Miss Peteler and Miss Fagan are, excepting their physical presences.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

This extraordinary proof is the only means through which people learn to appreciate the true powers of the New Edison. If you are interested in music, it is indeed unfortunate that you were not present.

Yet, you know this is a test which no other phonograph dares to attempt. It is proof that no one can evade or deny. The New Edison* is the only phonograph which RE-CREATES music and the soul of music.

Come in and hear it for yourself.

*The instrument used in Tuesday's Tone-Test is the regular model which sells for $440.00. It is an exact duplicate of the Laboratory Model which Mr. Edison perfected after spending Three Million Dollars in experiments.

EXPLODE MUNITIONS WHEN FISHING IN RIVER

Paris, May 5.—A loud echo of the war has just been heard around Rheims. Two soldiers who were fishing in the famous River Vesle accidentally caused the explosion of a great quantity of munitions which the Germans threw into the stream two years ago. The explosion killed the two soldiers and fourteen head of cattle which had been delivered by the Germans in reparation for cattle taken during the war. All the telegraph wires in the vicinity were cut by the force of the explosion, which made a great crater in the river's bed.

Tne thousand soldiers are ready to march on Mexico city and are expected to start within a day or so.

C. P. R. CONDUCTORS ASKED TO EXPLAIN

Montreal, May 5.—Seven conductors employed on the Montreal-Quebec line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, appeared before Judge Cusson charged with accepting railway tickets and moneys during the last twelve months while employed by the company on the Montreal-Quebec line, for payment of fares by passengers and converting same to their own use. Four were arrested in Montreal and three in Quebec, the latter being brought back on Saturday morning to appear with the others. They are: C. Cassidy, E. Lemieux, W. Lafortune and E. Beauchamp, of Montreal, and conductors Garceau, Pelland, and Boudreault, of Quebec. They were remanded until May 7th for enquete and were allowed out on bail of $1,000 each. The cases were made by the C. P. R. investigation department. Messrs. N. K. Laflamme, Bercovitch and Creelman appeared for the company, and Messrs. Alban Germain and Cohen for the defendants.

New York stocks were stronger with active buying of railroad shares.

AUSTRALIAN VIEW OF NAVAL POLICY.

The Sun, the leading afternoon newspaper of Australia, says editorially:

"The scheme of naval defence in Lord Jellicoe's report indicates that Canada may consider herself safe from foreign aggression while the Empire holds. Even in the event of supreme catastrophe, the Monroe Doctrine doubtless would be stretched to preserve her. But it is inconceivable that Canada will ask Britain to guard the Atlantic and ask Britain and Australia to guard the Pacific."

LORD MACAULAY'S ADVICE.

At the banquet recently given by the Empire Parliamentary Association in Ottawa in honor of Col. W. Grant Morden, member of the British House of Commons, and which was largely attended by members of the Government, Senators and Commoners, Col. Morden, in his address replete with information and advice regarding the welfare and future prospects of the Dominion, said in part:

"Some people are laboring under the impression that England has been ruined by the war. It is true that she has a great debt of some eight thousand millions sterling, but over ninety per cent. of this debt is an internal one, and the balance is more than doubly covered by loans that have been made to the Allies. A hundred years ago England had a debt of approximately eight hundred millions sterling. This debt was a much heavier one at that time than the present debt of today. During the reconstruction period after the Napoleonic wars the country was exceedingly poor, as compared with today. The ministers of those days were forced to extreme measures to find means of meeting the interest on their debt. You will remember Pitt was even forced to put a tax on light and to this day there are still windows in houses in London that were bricked up to avoid paying this tax, which shows that people then objected just as much to paying taxes as, I believe, some of them even in Canada do today.

"But since those days in England there has been an enormous development in manufacturing. Machinery came into use for factory purposes along in the forties and England became one of the foremost manufacturing countries in the world. The Government listened to the words of Lord Macaulay, words though uttered some ninety years ago, in 1830, I think, that are being followed again by our Government in England at this very moment, and which I think are most applicable to Canada today, when he stated:

> Our rulers will best promote the improvement of the nation by strictly confining themselves to their own legitimate duties, by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair price, industry and intelligence their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment, by preserving peace, by protecting property, by diminishing the price of law, and by observing economy in every department of the state. Let the Government do this; the people will assuredly do the rest.

"Gentlemen, I suggest to you, the rulers of Canada, that you cannot do better than follow these words today."

The annual spring clean-up is now under way, and the refuse of the winter hidden by the snow is now being cremated or carted away. The perils of city life seem, since May came in, to be more numerous than ever. In addition to dodging street cars, autos and red demons on motorcycles, the pedestrian has to keep his eyes peeled if he wishes to avoid being run down by a van load of household furniture dashing madly up and down street in search of an empty house, says the Toronto Star.

How does your garden grow, Old Top? Fine, isn't it, getting up early these mornings when the air is fresh and invigorating, and investing an hour or so in the soil with the immediate return of better appetite, better digestion, better humor and better disposition generally, besides promising large future dividends in potatoes and other garden stuff to keep down the high cost of living. This is the life, Old Top! Finest tonic in the world.

Swedish producers of cheese have protested to the Ministry of Agriculture that cheese from Denmark and the United States is being sold on the Swedish market at prices lower than the cost of production in Sweden. They point out that under present conditions they must operate at a loss and that eventually their industry may be ruined by foreign competition. The producers have requested that either an embargo be instituted on imports or a tariff duty imposed, a rate of six per cent. per pound being suggested.

The new divorce bill before the Senate very wisely provides that details of the evidence given in divorce proceedings shall not be published unless so directed by order of the Divorce Court. Divorce proceedings publicity does not affect a man's present and future very much, but, true or untrue, divorce charges smirch a woman's reputation and darken her life. A woman should not only be held innocent until proved guilty, but should be protected to the limit from scandal mongers.

The Stew in Mexico.
New York Tribune

Mexico, with its new and advanced state socialist constitution, is just as much the home of revolutionary individualism as it ever was. The sword is mightier than the ballot. But the average Mexican sees nothing abnormal in that. It is in his blood. He easily accommodates himself to anarchy. Civil strife accentuates his patriotism. Mexico may go through another period of disorder. But the heart of the nation will continue to beat. Even the Sonorans now declare that they do not want secession or independence. Their war is against Carranza, not against the federal state. They only want to keep the old pot of personal factionalism and free-for-all political adventure boiling.

What Vivisection Has Done.

Humanity knows no higher duty than physiological research into the cause and prevention of human disease. For such research scientific experiment on the dog is essential. Expert opinion has decided that no animal can take the dog's place. By such experiments as the cranks would make a crime, science was enabled to save the lives of hundreds of our soldiers during the war. Experiments on dogs were an essential feature in evolving the most successful anti-gas mask for the protection of our troops. That is the answer science gives to the agitation which exploits the tender hearts of old ladies.

One Remedy Only.
Springfield Union.

From Washington it is reported that approximately 3,000 co-operative consumers' societies are operating throughout the country in an effort to beat the high cost of living. Handling food commodities in bulk, the societies do gain for their members the advantages of wholesale prices, but they are not a final solution of the cost of living problem. Wholesale prices increase, even as the retail prices do, despite co-operative buying and distribution. The only permanent cure for high prices is to be found increased production, not merely of food products, but of all necessities, for high prices in some lines of commodities cannot fail to have an influence on prices in other lines.

Kings and Their Characters

The class composition was on "Kings," and this is what one boy wrote:

"The most powerful king on earth is work-ing; the laziest, shir-king; one of the worst kings, smo-king; the wittiest, jo-king; the quietest, thin-king; the thirstieth, drin-king; the slyest, win-king, and the noisiest, tal-king."

An Important Precaution

"Why, Alphonso," said the wife, as she found her husband in the hall strapping up the family umbrellas as if he were about to depart on a journey, "Certainly you are not going to take all those to town with you?"

"Marguerita," he responded, firmly, "have you forgotten that this evening we are going to have friends to supper.

"But, Alphonse! Our guests would never steal—"

THE POET'S CORNER

THE CHOICE OF A TREE

All in the wild and windy weather,
The trees in the forest were talking together.

"Shall I dread the axe?" the great Oak sang—
"Long is the rapture and short the pang!
Out of my heart that knows not fears—
Ringed with the strength of a hundred years—
They will fashion a keel to cut the brine,
Afar and away will the coast lights shine
When, afloat on the breast of the wide, wild sea,
The call of the tempest I follow free!"

"I, too," said the Maple, "in pride and pain,
Shall I yield my trunk to the saw and plaine;
I must harden and beat in the drier's kiln,
'Neath the rasp and the pumice writhe and thrill,
Till fitted, at length, to some niche in the wall
Of a palace stately and fair and tall,
Under the moon and the starry skies,
Let me fall," said the maple, "again to rise!"

Then softly answered the Balsam tree
(The youngest child of the wood was she)
"But I—by the lord of the forest's grace—
Would beg of his woodmen a humbler place,
For I would stand at some cottage hearth,
While gently down on the waiting earth,
Over the snow-clad hill and plain,
The feet of the Christ-child walk again."

"For the forest glades may be fair to see
And far the sweep of the flowing sea,
And grand the palace, and tall the mast,
But love is dearest and love is last,
And, over and always, beneath the skies,
The test of loving is sacrifice."

OLD PEOPLE NEED STRENGTH

This Woman of Eighty-one Years

Tells How Vinol Creates Strength for the Aged

She says: "It is with great pleasure I tell others of the great benefit I have derived from VINOL. I am now eighty-one years of age, and I have never found any remedy that would create an appetite, overcome nervous conditions and build up strength equal to VINOL."

The reason VINOL is so successful in such cases is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cods' livers, aided by the blood making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites.

Thus, in a natural manner, it increases the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red blood corpuscles and imparts strength, health and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body.

If feeble old people only realized the good VINOL will do them our druggists would not be able to supply the demand.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

Fancy or death for him. And then they set about proceeding homeyard, very slowly on account of Fancy's weariness, she leaning upon his shoulder, and in addition receiving support from his arm around her waist; though she had sufficiently recovered from her desperate condition to sing to him, "Why are you wandering here I pray?" during the latter part of the walk. Nor is it necessary to describe in detail how the bag of nuts was quite forgotten until three days later when it was found by an under-keeper and restored empty, to Mrs. Dewy, her initials being marked thereon in red cotton; and how she puzzled herself until her head ached upon the question of how on earth her meal-bag could have got into Mellstock copse.

PART IV—CHAPTER II

Saturday evening saw Dick Dewy journeying on foot to Yalbury Wood according to the arrangement with Fancy.

The landscape was concave, and at the going down of the sun everything suddenly assumed a uniform robe of shade. The evening advanced from sunset to dusk long before Dick's arrival, and his progress during the latter portion of his walk through the trees was indicated by the flutter of terrified birds that had been roosting over the path. And in crossing the glades, masses of hot, dry air that had been formed on the hills during the day greeted his cheeks alternately with clouds of damp night air from the valleys. He reached the keeper's house, where the grass-plot and the garden in front appeared light and pale against the unbroken darkness of the grove from which he had emerged and paused at the garden gate.

He had scarcely been there a minute when he beheld a sort of procession advancing from the door in his front. It consisted first of Enoch, the trapper carrying a spade on his shoulder and a lantaern dangling in his hand; then came Mrs. Day, the light of the lantern revealing that she bore in her arms curious objects about a foot long in the form of Latin crosses (made of lath and bronw paper dipped in brimstone—called matches by bee-fanciers) next came Miss Day, with a shawl thrown over her head; and behind all, in the gloom, Mr. Frederic Shinar.

Dick in his consternation at finding Shinar present, was at a loss how to proceed, and retired under a tree to collect his thoughts.

"Here I be, Enoch,' said a voice; and the procession advancing further the lantern's rays illuminated the figure of Geoffrey, awaiting their arrival beside a row of bee-hives in front of the path. Taking the spade from Enoch, he proceeded to dig two holes in the earth beside the hives, the others standing round in a circle except Mrs. Day, who deposited her matches in the fork of an apple-tree and returned to the house.

The party remaining were now lighted up in front by the lantern in their midst, their shadows radiating each way upon the garden-plot like the spokes of a wheel. An apparent embarrassment of Fancy's at the presence of Shinar caused a silence in the assembly, during which the preliminaries of execution were arranged, the matches fixed, the stake kindled, the two hives placed over the two holes and the earth stopped round the edges. Geoffrey then stood erect, and rather more to straighten his back-bone after the digging.

"They were a peculiar family," said Mr. Shinar, regarding the hives reflectively.

Geoffrey nodded.

"Those holes will be the grave of thousands," said Fancy. "I think 'tis rather a cruel thing to do."

"Her father shook his head. "No," he said, tapping the hives to shake the dead bees from their cells, "if you suffocate the new way, they come to life again and so the pangs o'death be twice upon 'em."

"I incline to Fancy's notion," said Mr. Shinar, laughing lightly.

"The proper way to take honey, so that the bees be neither starved nor murdered, is not so much as amusing as a puzzling matter," said the keeper steadily.

"I should like never to take it from them," said Fancy.

"But 'tis the money," said Enoch musingly. "For without money, man is a shadder.

The lantern-light had disturbed several bees that had escaped from hives destroyed some days earlier, and who were now getting a living as marauders about the doors of the other hives. Several flew round the head and neck of Geoffrey; then darted upon him with an irritated buzz.

Enoch threw down the lantern, and ran off and pushed his head into a currant-bush, Fancy scudded up the path, and Mr. Shinar floundered away helter-skelter among the cabbages. Geoffrey stood his ground unmoved, and firm as a rock. Fancy was the first to return, followed by Enoch picking up the lantern. Mr. Shinar still remained invisible.

"Have the craters stung ye?" said Enoch to Geoffrey.

"No, not much—only a little here and there," he said, with leisurely solemnity, shaking one bee out of his shirt-sleeve, pulling another from his hair and two or three more from his neck. The others looked on during this proceeding with a complacent sense of being out of it—much as a European nation in a state of internal commotion is watched by its neighbors.

"Are those all of them, father?" said Fancy, when Geoffrey had pulled away five.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU WASH YOUR HAIR WITH

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

BROKE OUT OF PRISON WITH A NEEDLE

Rawlins, Wyo., May 5—With a needle obtained in the prison shirt factory as his only tool, Bert Loften, has escaped from the state prison here. Wm. Smith, his companion was captured while trying to scale the prison wall.

Loften and Smith were confined to the death house cell because of their known desperate character. Loften found that a soft piece of steel covered a drain. With his great patience and skill, he slowly cut a hole through the steel with the needle. After removing the pipe and a plate they crawled through the hole, picked the lock of a steel door connecting with the main corridor of the prison, scaled the tiers of cells, cut holes through the slate roof and dropped to the ground. In the prison yard, they found a steel bar, which the prisoners bent into a hook, to fasten an improvised rope on the prison wall.

Loften escaped but Smith was caught by a guard.

LIVED SIX DAYS IN CLOSED BOX

Cambridge, England, May 5—Joseph Barcroft, a reader of physiology at Kings College here, has lived for six days in a hermetically sealed glass box.

The experiment arose out of a 30-year-old controversy as to whether it is possible to calculate the amount of oxygen in the blood from a knowledge of the amount of oxygen in the breath. The test was also made to demonstrate whether it was necessary that airmen should have oxygen apparatus when flying at great heights. It proved that oxygen was necessary to flying men but it did not show to what height they could fly with safety.

While in the box Barcroft kept a record of his sensations and made scientific observations. He said he suffered from sleeplessness but otherwise did not experience much inconvenience except on the last day when the atmosphere became extremely rarified. He then had headaches and nausea. He was watched continually while in the box. He took food and sleep in two small compartment fitted up with wicker chairs, a table, a small bed and a bicycle on which he exercised every morning.

PERSONALITY.

Personality is power. Power reduced to its finality is all we can hope to attain in life. We are each of us powerful to a degree. Some more so than others, but all to some extent. Not the possession of a thing, but the use made of it, denotes its worth. Personality of a pleasant sort is of the most profitable sort. Its returns are both inward enjoyment and material profit.

Types of personality differ and are many. To our mind the cheerful type is the most desirable one. To be always cheerful means much. Analyzed, it means about everything that would enter into the fundamentals of a successful life.

It is natural to be cheerful; unnatural to be glum and heavy-hearted. Life itself is a call to be cheerful. The answer to our every inquiry into the mystery of life is, be of good cheer. Yesterday was what it was largely because we made it that way. Today is our master opportunity to gain over yesterday. Tomorrow is a matter of uncertainty.

Business without cheerfulness is a drag. We can take the pessimism out of much that concerns us by cultivating and continuing a cheerful personality. A man's ways are his stock in trade. To realize the most money and the most joy, one must make the best investment—that of a cheerful personality as a habit. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. Drs. PRICE OF RICE DECLINES IN JAPAN

Tokio, May 5—Fifty more public markets to sell food and other necessities will be established here and in the suburbs by the Tokio prefecture, 50 similar markets opened last year to adjust the price of commodities having shown satisfactory results.

A general slump in prices of stocks occurred today on the Tokio exchange. The drop was most noticeable in the cotton spinning companies. Prices of rice and silk also declined, due, it is believed, to the tightness of the money market. For the past week prices of various rice have had an average decline of six per cent.

Chorea—St. Vitus' Dance

When children's nerves become starved and exhausted their trouble usually takes the form of Chorea, St. Vitus' Dance or Convulsions.

Rapid growth—physiological changes—urgent school work and examinations mean a tremendous strain on the nervous system of the child who is naturally of a nervous temperament.

The child becomes fretful and irritable. Restless, wriggling movements of the limbs and face—inability to sit still—tendency to drop things from the hands tell of the development of these troubles.

Later, speech is affected and there is irregular twitching of the muscles, squinting of the eyes and other indications of loss of control of the muscles.

Rest in bed in a bright airy room with cheerful companionship and the absence of anything to irritate or excite the nerves is the ideal condition for recovery.

Since the nervous system is completely starved and exhausted it is essential that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food should be used regularly and persistently to build up the depleted nerve cells.

Instead of dwelling on the merits of this well-known food cure we shall refer you to the letters quoted here which tell of actual results accomplished.

St. Vitus Dance

Mrs. Wm. Matt, Cordova, Man., writes:

"My little girl, ten years old, was not very well, and I noticed some rather odd ways about her. She used to act very strangely at times. I asked the doctor what could be the matter, and he said she had St. Vitus' Dance, to keep her quiet and out of school. He said treatments weren't any use for her. She was affected in this way for a year. I thought something ought to be done, so in looking over Dr. Chase's Almanac I read several testimonials from people who had used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I sent for six boxes, and started this treatment with my daughter. Before she had finished the first box I could see a great change in her, and by the time she had taken the six boxes, she was completely cured. She is real well now, and going to school every day."

Twitching Nerves

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 170 Dublin St., Peterboro, Ont. writes:

"When about the age of 14 or 15 my daughter was on the verge of nervous break-down. She had a very poor appetite, lost all her color, and at times had a twitching of the nerves in her limbs. I secured some of Dr. Chases Nerve Food and gave her a treatment, using five or six boxes. The results were splendid, entirely curing her of her nervous trouble, and restoring her appetite. I find Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid Spring tonic, and best results to be found by taking some of the Kidney-Liver Pills at the same time."

St. Vitus' Dance

Mr. S. F. Flarity, Wiarton, Ont. writes:

"My daughter, eleven years of age, was in a run down condition, and suffered from a nervousness which showed a tendency toward St. Vitus' Dance. I got a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for her, and by the time she had taken three boxes there was a big change in her. She is much stronger, and her system in general is built up. She has recovered from her nervous weakness, and you could not detect a trace of it now. I gladly recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Convulsions

Mrs. Xavier Albert, St. Francois, N. B. writes:

"My daughter, Imelda, was troubled for four years with nervousness. Almost every night, she used to take nervous convulsions. We took her to a doctor, but he did not do her any good. Finally we began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and gradually the convulsions were less and less frequent, until they disappeared altogether. It was two years ago that she used the Nerve Food, and six boxes completely cured her. We are very grateful for what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for her."

Par-ol

The Human Body Lubricant

Oiling the Human Transmission

After your body has absorbed the nourishment from food the rest is waste.

That waste should pass out naturally through your bowels.

One of the best ways to insure it passing out naturally is to oil its passage through the bowels—with Par-ol, the Human Body Lubricant, which keeps the waste matter soft and prevents the hard secretions that cause constipation. One week's treatment will prove this to you beyond all question.

Par-ol is a highly refined petroleum oil of unvarying purity. It has a specific gravity of .865 to .870 at 15° Centigrade.

Most druggists sell it. Don't accept a substitute—you'll be disappointed—Par-ol—that's the name. $1.00 a bottle—enough for a month's treatment.

How Mr. Hill's Bill Would Elect M.P.P.'s

One claim made for the proportional representation bill, introduced by H. P. Hill, M.P.P., Ottawa, in the Legislature, is that no vote is wasted under this system.

Old Order Changeth.

Existing constituencies in Ontario disappear, and a rearrangement follows, each unit to elect six members to be chosen at large.

A ballot paper with the names of all candidates is provided, and opposite the names of candidates the elector wishes returned he places a number showing the order of his preference.

On election night it is not likely to be known who the successful candidates are. This is determined by transferring surplus votes of elected candidates to the next lowest candidate until the full six candidates are elected.

Votes are transferred in this way: The total number of votes cast (one vote for each voter) is divided by the number of candidates to be elected, and to the result is added one. Any candidate for whom a first preference is recorded by the resultant number of electors is declared elected. If there are less than the required number of candidates returned, and some of those returned have an excess of votes over the number required for their election, that excess is transferred to the next highest candidate for whom second preference was expressed by the successful candidate's supporters.

If Only One is Returned.

Thus, if only one candidate is returned by the initial count, which shows fifty first preferences to have been recorded for him, and he has an excess of twenty votes over the amount required to elect him, he can spare two out of every five votes and still stand elected. If of the 50 votes recorded for the successful candidate 10 second preferences are recorded for one other candidate, 25 second preferences for another and 15 for a third, the first of the second preference candidates is entitled to two-fifths of the 10 papers on which he is second choice, i.e., to four. The second is entitled to two-fifths of the 25 papers on which he is second choice, i.e., ten, and the third is similarly entitled to six transferred votes. These transferred votes are added to the number of first preferences recorded for the respective candidates, and when the total thus attained reaches or exceeds the number of votes necessary to secure election the candidate is declared elected.

And, Then, If.

If there remain other candidates to be elected, surplus votes for the successful candidates as a result of the second count are again transferred to the next candidates. When all surplus votes have transferred, the returning officers declare the candidate at the bottom of the poll defeated, if further candidates remain to be elected to fill the six seats of the constituency. These votes for the low candidate are not lost, but transferred to the candidates for whom second preferences have been expressed by the electors. This is repeated until six candidates have attained the quota of votes necessary for their election.

The Last Corn

When you end your corn with Blue-jay, it will be the last corn you let grow.

You will know how to stop the pain. And how to quickly and completely end all corns.

There are millions who use Blue-jay now, and they never let a corn remain.

The new-day way

Blue-jay is the new-day way, the scientific method.

It was perfected in a laboratory world-famed for its surgical dressings.

It is supplanting the many treatments which are harsh and inefficient.

It has made paring as ridiculous as it is unsafe, for paring doesn't end corns.

Do this tonight:

Apply to a corn a Blue-jay plaster or liquid Blue-jay—whichever you prefer.

Mark how the pain stops. Then wait a little and the corn will loosen and come out.

What that corn does all corns will do. Some 20 million corns a year are ended in this way.

Don't suffer corns. Don't have your feet disfigured. They can be ended almost as easily as a dirt-spot on your face. They are just as inexcusable.

Don't forget this. It means too much to you.

Ask your druggist for Blue-jay.

SHOT TO SAVE BRITISH RULE IN INDIA

London, May 6—"It was my dirty duty." Thus Brigadier-General R. E. H. Dyer, ex-commander of the British troops, in India, today explained his order to a small squad of troops to fire into a crowd of 1,000 Indian civilians at Amristar in April 1919. Dyer's men killed 500 and wounded 1,500 inside less than a quarter of an hour.

"I am a soldier," he said. "It took me 30 seconds to decide that the shooting was necessary to save British rule in Punjab. (The Province in which Amristar lies.)

"It has taken the Government a year to decide that I did wrong. I shot to save British rule, to preserve India for the British Empire and protect Englishmen and English women who lived under my protection. Now I am told to go. Every Englishman I have met in India approved of my act, horrible as it was.

This, so far as memory of horsemen goes, is the highest price ever paid for the contract of a rider, which does not, by the way, include pay for his services.

Sam Hildreth, when he purchased the contract of Laverne Fator last summer for $15,000 was thought to have set the record.

"CANADIAN CAPTAIN" STEALS FOR FRIEND.

New York, May 5.—That he stole $4,200 worth of Liberty bonds to help out a man who had saved his life on the battlefields of France while he was serving with the First Canadian Division, was the excuse offered by Captain Russell Holmes Fletcher, 27, when he pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree in General Sessions.

Fletcher enlisted as a private in Montreal in 1914, and rose to the rank of captain, which he held when discharged in January, 1919. In court he wore the military medal which he won while serving as a private.

Counsel for the defendant made a plea for clemency. He told the judge that a number of Canadian friends of the defendant had offered to make restitution and give him a place in Montreal. He asked permission to enter negotiations with the bank for the making of restitution, and this permission was granted.

Meanwhile the judge said he was obliged to send the Canadian war hero to the Elmira Reformatory.

Women's Section Added to Chamber of Commerce

BELLEVILLE LADIES WILL FORM RIGHT WING OF ORGANIZATION—PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS HOUSING AND COMMISSION GOVERNMENT—BAY BRIDGE VALUATION.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday afternoon, it was decided to establish a Women's Section as part of the work of the organization at a special yearly membership fee of two dollars. It was felt by the Directors that there are many local activities coming within the range of the Chamber of Commerce programme that are distinctly within women's realm and, as there have been frequent requests from women in the city to take part in some of this work, it is believed that by creating a women's membership branch a great deal can be accomplished along well defined lines. Some of the more important activities which the women will be asked to interest themselves in are: child-welfare, city beautification, clean-up campaigns, home gardens, housing, playgrounds and recreation, public market, schools, charities, Chautauqua week and numerous entertainment features which are in prospect. A cordial invitation is extended to all the women in the city, who are interested in these or associated activities to join this new branch of the Chamber.

PUBLIC MEETING

It was also decided to hold a public meeting in the City Hall about May 14th, to which all citizens will be invited for the purpose of discussing the housing situation in the city and the desirability of establishing a commission form of government for Belleville. These are two important matters that have been before the people for a long while and in the case of the housing problem it is felt that the city is now in a position to make some definite plans towards improving the conditions here.

COMMISSION GOV'T

So far as the commission form of government is concerned, there has been a growing sentiment in the city for years that this is the logical and modern method of city administration and it is hoped that some action can be taken at the proposed meeting which will lead to the first plans in the direction of securing the necessary legislation to bring about the change in the form of government if it is considered desirable.

BAY BRIDGE VALUATION

Mr. Fredericks, Secretary of the Chamber, reported that he had interviewed the Honourable Mr. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, and as a result of the conference Government engineers will be sent to this city immediately to make a survey of the Bay Bridge with a view to reporting upon it's present condition and establishing a basis for a definite valuation. When this is done it is felt that the taking over of the bridge property will be quickly accomplished, provided the Bridge Company is willing to accept the valuation decided upon.

CLEAN-UP DAY

The Grand Trunk Railway was complimented upon the improved appearance of the area around the station in this city. An effort will be made to have the property owners in the city co-operate in eliminating unsightly spots and cleaning up the litter that has been allowed to accumulate in a number of sections. May 15th being official clean-up day, the Chamber would like to have everyone in the city do his part in carrying out the purposes of the day.

To Make Changes In Temperance Act

Board Given Stricter Supervision Over Doctors and Druggists.

The Ontario Government's Temperance Act amendments were laid before the Legislature and, as they expected, they contain no radical changes in existing legislation, though a number of the proposals are important in their bearing on the administration of the Act. The bill gives the Ontario License Board means of controlling the issue of prescriptions by doctors giving statutory authority for measures that have been taken by the Board in the past. It declares the board may issue an order refusing to sell or supply liquor to a medical practitioner "for any cause which the board may think sufficient," to any person holding a prescription from such practitioner unless he satisfies the person in charge of the dispensary that it has been obtained bona fide, to a druggist who has, in the opinion of the board, disposed of an unreasonable quantity of liquor without accounting for it, and to a dentist or veterinary surgeon in the same position.

An important change is the widening of the gap between minimum and maximum fines. Hitherto the smallest fine a magistrate could impose for illegal sale, etc., was $200. This is reduced to $100 by the new bill. On the other hand, the maximum fine is raised from $1,000 to $2,000.

The clause banning the possession of liquor in a private dwelling in respect to which there has been an infraction of the law, is extended to make it apply where any member of the family has offended, and where the guilty one moves, the prohibition goes with him, remaining in effect until a year after conviction.

Jail for Old Offenders.

Where a person is convicted of being drunk or disorderly in a public place or where such person within three months has been twice convicted for being drunk or disorderly, he may be committed to jail or to an industrial farm for a period not exceeding three months.

A new section that will have wide application brings vessels on the lakes and rivers of the Province under the meaning of the term "place." The effect of the change is to make the owner or captain or person in command of the vessel responsible for any infraction of the law on the vessel by the simple process of declaring him the "occupant."

Protection has been made for giving protection to standard hotel licensees, a new section declaring that no municipality shall, without the consent of the board, issue a restaurant or other license to sell the articles covered by the standard hotel license, in respect to "any premises which form part of a building in which an unlicensed hotel, inn or house of public entertainment is carried on, whether or not there are any internal means of communication between the respective premises."

Heretofore the board has had the right to grant such privileges to standard hotel licensees and persons not securing such Provincial licenses have been unable to get municipal licenses to do the same class of business as part of their hotel operations. The Act, however, did not meet the contingency of businesses carried on in the building, but separated from the rest of it.

New York, May 3—The mangled body of George H. Weaver, Vice-President of the Remington Typewriter Company, was found in his wrecked touring car on White Plains post road.

Privy Council On Halifax Explosion

Why Both Ships Concerned Were Held to be Blameable

The appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of the Ship Imo vs. the Mont Blanc was heard by Viscount Haldane, Lord Dunedin, Lord Atkinson and the Lord Justice Clerk, with Admiral Sir Nelson Ommanney, K.B.E., and Commander W. F. Caborne, C.B., as Nautical Assessors.

Their Lordships dismissed these cross-appeals from a judgement of the Supreme Court of Canada of May 19 last in a suit relating to the collision of the two vessels in Halifax Harbor in 1917. The Times Law Report is as follows:

The action arose out of a collision between the two vessels in the harbor of Halifax, Nova Scotia, on December 6, 1917, shortly before 9 a.m. The Mont Blanc was loaded with a cargo of high explosives. The impact of the two ships ignited that cargo, which exploded and devastated a large part of the city of Halifax and the town of Dartmouth causing many hundreds of deaths and destroying property worth several millions. The owners of the Mont Blanc claimed $2,000,000 as damages and the owners of the Imo counter-claimed for a similar amount.

Mr. Justice Drysdale, assisted by nautical assessors, tried the case at Halifax. The trial occupied thirteen days. The judge pronounced the Mont Blanc solely to blame. The owners appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the appeal was heard by five judges, two of whom found the Mont Blanc wholly to blame, two found the Imo solely at fault, and the fifth judge was of opinion that both were equally responsible. In the result the Supreme Court allowed the appeal and held both ships equally liable. From that decision both sides appealed.

At the time of the disaster the Imo belonging to the port of Christiania, was going in ballast to sea on a voyage to New York under a charter made between her owners and the Belgian Relief Commission. The Mont Blanc was the property of La Compagnie Generale Transatiantique and was going from New York to Halifax with a full cargo of picric acid, T.N.T., benzol and guncotton, belonging to the French Gvernment. Each was in charge of a qualified pilot. The collision took place in about mid-channel intending to pass through the narrows. There was, it was admitted no wind and very little tide, and for all practical purposes there was sufficient visibility.

The Imo alleged against the Mont Blanc that she was travelling at excessive speed, and that she star-boarded her helm and attempted to cross the bows of the Imo, that she waited to reverse engines until the instant of or only a few seconds before the collision, that she crossed to the Halifax side of the channel instead of keeping to the starboard side of mid-channel, and that she did not give the proper whistle signals or navigate in accordance with the whistle signals. Stress was also laid on the fact that she had no interpreter on the bridge through whom the Canadian pilot could give orders to the French officers.

The Mont Blanc submitted that the negligent navigation of the Imo was the sole cause of the collision. It was alleged that while the Mont Blanc was keeping to her right side of the channel and giving appropriate signals, the Imo adhered to her wrong side, thus putting the Mont Blanc into a position of difficulty when it was necessary to take immediate action. The putting of her helm hard a-starboard was, it was submitted, the best course to have adopted to avoid a disaster.

Lord Atkinson, whose judgement was read by the Lord Justice Clerk went in great detail into the cases, and the evidence on both sides, and in conclusion said: Their lordships have, upon the whole, come to the following conclusions. First, that the Mont Blanc from the time when she passed the Highflyer till she starboarded her helm in the agony of the collision, never left her own water, though she may no doubt before she was actually struck have forged ahead so as to cross the middle line of the channel. Second, as she steamed up through her own waters her speed was not immoderate. Third, the Imo, in order to inflict the injury to the Mont Blanc which it is proved she did inflict must have struck that ship with more force and at a higher rate of speed than her witnesses admit. Fourth, the Mont Blanc must at the time of the collision have had little, if any way on her else the stern of the Imo would have been twisted to some extent, which it was not. Fifth, the inclination of their lordships opinion is that the Imo could, when she first reversed her engines, have crossed into and remained in her own water, as she was bound to do, but never did. It is not necessary however, absolutely to decide the last point, because on the case of both ships, it is clear that their navigators allowed them to approach within 400 feet of each other on practically opposite courses, thus incurring risk of collision and indeed, practically bringing about the collision, instead of reversing their engines and going astern as our assessors advise us they, as a matter of good seamanship could and should have done, long before the ships came so close together. This actually led to the collision. The manoeuvre of the Mont Blanc in the agony of the collision may not have been the best manoeuvre to adopt, and yet be in the circumstances excusable. But their lordships are clearly of opinion that both ships are to blame for their reciprocal neglect to have reversed and gone astern earlier than they did. They are therefore of opinion that the appeal and cross-appeal both fail, that the judgment appealed from should be affirmed, and there will be no order as to the costs of the appeal and cross-appeal.

Power Developement In New Ontario

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

NORTH BAY, May 7—The advantage of deepening of the St. Lawrence River to northern Ontario, with its great resources of timber and mining, depends on the development, also of the French River connecting Lake Nipissing with Georgian Bay, according to statements made to the International Waterway Commission which today recommenced its sessions to hear arguments regarding deepening of International Waterways to the sea. A. J. Young, a prominent citizen of North Bay, was the principal speaker before the Commission this morning. He told of the need for more electrical power for development of industries in the north country. This development would be realized, he said, by canalization of the French River as a tributary to the deeper Great Lakes and rivers system.

Kissed Her To Keep Her Good Natured

So Said Defendant in Breach of Promise Case—Friendship Calls Only

An appeal will be entered by defendant against the verdict of $500 damages given in the action of Pierce vs Smith for $10,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage which was tried at the Belleville Assizes on Wednesday, the 5th inst., before Hon. Mr. Justice Logie and a jury. Plaintiff and defendant were widow and widower residing at Smithfield in the County of Northumberland and the plaintiff said defendant had promised to marry her and take her for a trip to Pittsburgh, showed her through his house, visited her in the evenings, kissed her and put her to a good deal of expense and she claimed $10,000 for her expenses and the loss of a home. Defendant denied the promise, claimed his calls were merely out of friendship, that he kissed her because she wanted it and hugged her to keep her good natured. He said the talk of a trip to Pittsburgh was only by way of a joke. The jury brought in a verdict for $500. Mr. Mikel the defendant's counsel raised the legal point that there was no corroboration of the promise as required by law, and that there was no evidence of a breach of promise, if made. The Judge gave defendant fifteen days to appeal, and defendant intends to appeal to the Divisional Court. E. Guss Porter, K.C., for plaintiff; W. C. Mikel, K.C., and George Drewery for defendant.

Liberals Fight for Votes for Aliens

Ottawa, May 6—That clause 29 of the new Franchise Act will not pass the House in its present form without the imposition of closure is fully anticipated here. That is the clause which deals with "aliens" and which in its original form, according to the stated opinion of William Euler, of North Waterloo, would have disfranchised more persons throughout the Dominion than were deprived of the vote under the War-Time Elections Act.

Trading on the Canadian Exchanges was quieter, bank and paper stocks receiving most attention.

Chairman Cronyn And Col. Peck To State Issue

Gen. McLean's Soldiers' Wives Controversy Reaches the Commons

Ottawa, May 6—The row in the Parliamentary committee on soldiers' pensions growing out of the reference of General McLean of Royal, N. B., to the soldiers marrying servant girls, had an echo in the House of Commons this afternoon, when the chairman of the committee, Hugh Cronyn, of London, Ont., rose to a question of privilege to give his version of the affair.

Colonel Peck, V. C., of Skeena, and Colonel Cooper, of Vancouver, both of the original Sixteenth Battalion, had resigned from the Pensions Committee as a protest against what they term, 'the camouflaging of the reports' of that committee. There was a protracted discussion of the whole matter in the pensions committee this morning when the official reporter, C. S. Blue, asked permission of the chairman to give his version of the case. Mr. Blue was cleared of all blame when it was shown that he was a shorthand reporter of 25 years' experience. One member of Parliament said he had known Mr. Blue for fifteen years and had yet to find a mistake in his work.

Negotiate With Bolsheviki To Stop Crimean Campaign

REPORTED THAT GREAT BRITAIN WILL OPEN NEGOTIATIONS WITH RUSSIAN SOVIET WITH A VIEW TO CESSATION OF ADVANCE INTO ARMENIA.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 7.—Great Britain is on the verge of negotiations with Soviet Russia, a wireless message from Moscow today asserts. Earl Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, the message says, has forwarded to Tichitcherin, Soviet Commissary for Foreign Affairs, a declaration in which direct conversations with General Wrangel, commander of the remnant of the Russian volunteer army are proposed. These declarations, it is declared, are desired by Great Britain in order that definite negotiations may be begun concerning the cessation of the Bolshevik advance into the Crimea, and British officers would participate in the negotiations. Tichitcherin replied with the statement that the Soviet Government was prepared to meet the desire expressed in the communication and enter into negotiations with the British Government.

NO REAL SHORTAGE OF SEED POTATOES

There is no serious shortage of seed potatoes in Ontario, Hon. Manning Doherty informed the Legislature that he had been in communication with district representatives of the Department of Agriculture in all parts of the Province, and their reports show that the farmers and commercial producers had retained enough stock for seed. There might be some difficulty in cities and towns where potatoes were needed for seed for gardening, but the department was ready to put any municipality in touch with firms that would supply potatoes for seed in car load lots.

There had been a lot of "cheap talk" about methods of bringing down the herty, but the only thing that would herty, but the onl ything that would be of any avail was greater production. The shortage was due to one of two things, crop failure or low production, due to a low price in past years. The present high price was the best guarantee that the shortage of potatoes would be rectified.

PARADE OF JEWISH CITIZENS

Ottawa, March 7—The parade of Jewish citizens of Ottawa in celebration of the acceptance by Great Britain of the mandatory over Palestine was held from Cartier Square through the principal streets of the city to the Rideau Street Synagogue.

The stores and establishments of Jewish citizens and the houses of Jews were decorated for the occasion.

PURCHASE BOARD FOR GOVERNMENT SUPPLIES

Ottawa, May 6.—Communications from business interests throughout the country have been received by the Government, favoring the bill to establish a permanent board for the purchase of Governmental and other supplies. Resolutions in approval have been received, among others from the boards of trade of Vancouver, Calgary, Moosejaw, Medicine Hat, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, the Associated Boards of Trade of British Columbia and the Canadian Manufacturers Association. The point generally taken in the resolution in that establishment of such a board would mean greater economy in the purchase of supplies and give every man engaged in the business a fair chance to compete.

The resignation will take effect next week and he sails from New York on May 15 in order to be in Geneva to attend the Seamen's Conference next month. He will continue to act as an advisor to the Ontario Government as Agent-General in London on labor and immigration.

THE BACK YARD GARDENER.

By Robert Drysdale, in Toronto Star.

I note that some of the people in the city are talking of planting potatoes in front of their houses. I do not think this will be a very successful plan. Firstly, potatoes do not grow well if they are planted under trees or crowded up against a fence or wall. Secondly, I have never had any luck from planting potatoes in heavy clay. This crop does best when planted in a good large patch out in the open, where it can be properly cultivated with a horse cultivator.

The cheapest and best plan would be for several neighbors to form a potato club and all go in together in renting a good-sized piece of land, say an acre or so. A sandy loam or a black muck soil is the best. When selecting the ground it would be a good idea to get the advice of a retired farmer, and there are lots of them in Toronto who would gladly give advice and assistance.

The members of this club could put their money together for the purpose of buying seed, manure, fertilizer, etc. They could all take a part in cutting and treating the seed and in the planting. There should also be a timekeeper who would record the amount of time put in by each member during the season. The crop should be properly sprayed or dusted with arsenate of lead and Bordeaux mixture to ward off the attacks of bugs or blight.

The hand hoeing would be a light job with plenty of members to share it up.

It seems to me that a plan of this kind would result in a good crop being raised at the least expense.

It would not make much difference if the ground was a mile or two from home, as one or more members of the club are sure to have a car.

It might be a good idea to plant a few beets and carrots as well.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"GREEN STOCKINGS" TO-NIGHT

The Albert College Dramatic Society which is presenting its new comedy, "Green Stockings" in the City Hall, this evening, gave its first performance of this comedy to a capacity audience in the Collegiate Institute at Picton, on Tuesday.

Mr. H. W. Kerfoot, Principal wrote as follows: "The Picton audience thoroughly enjoyed the rendering of 'The Private Secretary' given here last fall, and turned out to the number of over five hundred in anticipation of another treat in 'Green Stockings.' After the play was over, the general verdict was that this comedy was even better than 'The Private Secretary.'"

The proceeds are being devoted to the Armenian Relief Fund.

"RED RIDING HOOD"

"Little Red Riding Hood" the fourth of a series of English Musical Extravaganzas imported to this country by F. Stuart Whyte, the noted British author-manager will be the offering at Griffin's next Wednesday May 12th, for one night only. By his previous productions, "Alladin," "Robinson Crusoe," and "Cinderella" Mr. Whyte has established a reputation for gorgeous musical shows that has placed his offerings in a class by themselves. The reception which has been accorded this his latest effort, amply evidences the fact that "Little Red Riding Hood" is desined to prove an even greater success than any of his preceding importations. This company plays His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, after their Belleville engagement by demand, this making their second appearance in Montreal this season.

The Griffin Management have no hesitation in personally guaranteeing this attraction to their many patrons considering it one of the finest musical offerings it has been their good fortune to present in many seasons.

MILLION DOLLAR SERIAL

At what is probably the highest figure ever paid for a screen attraction the Griffin Amusement Corporation have purchased "The Lost City" a big story of the African jungles., taken among untame savage denizens in strange lands and surrounded by uncivilized natives, some of whom have never up to this time beheld a white face.

This sensational screen offering is soon to burst upon the excitement loving public with its never ceasing thrills and adventures and the Griffin Theatre will show the first presentation for two days only, commencing Monday, May 10.

Who has not at some time or other read of the dangers of the jungles without a compelling desire to see these daring adventures with their own eyes. Old and young revel in the scenes as only the wild and mysterious can offer and in the showing of this extraordinary story; the the producer whisks the spectator into a strange land; among strange people and a long series of hazardous adventure that could never be described in words Lions, tigers, elephants, leopards, camels, gorillas, alligators and all the other denizens of jungle and desert, each play an important part in this swift moving story crowding sensation upon sensation in such rapid sequence that the spectator is hardly allowed time to recover from one gasp before another is forced upon him.

William Farnum in "The Adventurer"

Scores Hit as Don Caeser de Bazan the Romantic Lover, in Costume Play

William Fox presented William Farnum in "The Adventurer" at Griffin's last night, and after seeing the virile and accomplished actor as Don Caesar de Bazan we do not hesitate to say that as a romantic lover William Farnum is without equal on the screen. If ever an actor enjoyed a role, Farnum enjoyed that of the hero of the story of Spain in the days when knights were bold. He was at his happiest at all times, and he carried the production over with a smash. If there are any who do not care for costume productions a visit to Griffin's is all that will be necessary to cure them of their dislike for pictures of this kind. Farnum excels his best previous screen efforts. His Don Caesar will live for many years. His swordsmanship is the best ever photographed—and there is no fake in it, for it is apparent even to the merest novice that he is an accomplished handler of the weapon. A well balanced cast headed by the attractive Estelle Taylor, supports Mr. Farnum. "The Adventurer" strikes a new note in screen productions, and it rings clear and true.

"Pipe Dreams and Prizes," an amusing two-reel Big V comedy starring Harry Mann, British Canadian Pathe News, showing scenes in the recent Sinn Fein uprising in Ireland, and other interesting news events and a beautiful Outing-Chester reel are also being shown on the same program.

Memorial Home Plans Prepared

Great War Veterans Meet—Entertained By Ladies

The regular meeting of the Belleville Branch Great War Veterans' Association was held in the Association Rooms last evening and was well attended. The President, Comrade C. F. Wallbridge, occupied the chair. Some very important business was transacted.

A number of new applications for membership were received and passed by the investigating committee and accepted as members of the Belleville Branch.

A letter received from Mr. Robert Bogle, enclosing a substantial cheque as a donation to the new Memorial Home Fund, this being the first donation towards the new home. The following resolution was passed to be forwarded to Mr. Bogle:

Moved and seconded that the secretary be instructed to express the feelings of the Belleville Branch, Great War Veterans' Association to Mr. Bogle, thanking him for his generous donation towards the new Memorial Home.—Carried unanimously.

The President reported for the building committee stating that an agreement had been made with Comrade D. M. Waters of Toronto (architect) to prepare the plans and specifications for the new Memorial Home which will be erected on Riverside Park. These plans will be here in the course of a few days.

The report of the St. Julien Night Dance was given and accepted. It is the intention of the dance committee to hold another dance in the near future.

Preparations are being made for the 3rd Annual Demonstration on June 3rd, (King's birthday). A good day will be provided by the committee in charge.

After the business had been transacted a number of ladies arrived on the scene and provided the Veterans with numerous piano and vocal selections. The Veterans assisted in the singing. Two of the members gave comic selections.

The evening was enjoyed by all and very much credit is due to the ladies who so kindly volunteered their services, to make the evening a decided success.

Gov't Report On Farm Conditions

The following is a summary May 4th, 1920 of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The latter part of April was wet and cold, and the condition of vegetation was very backward for the opening of May, some representatives putting progress of sowing as about two weeks later than usual. On Friday, however, work on the land had been generally resumed. Estimates of the acreage of spring grains in by the first of May range all the way from 15 to 60 per cent by counties; a few individual farmers have finished, while others had almost nothing sown.

Much attention is being given to early potato planting, a considerable acreage already having been put in, in some cases before the land was really fit for the crop. There is a shortage of good seed in many localities.

Essex reports that early tomatoes already have been set outside under cotton in large quantities, while in Prince Edward County a considerable acreage of peas for canning factories has been got in.

Fall wheat and clover look well, speaking generally; but some representatives are of the opinion that recent raw weather has given the former crop a slight setback.

Huron states that some farmers who are growing sweet clover say that the crop never came through the winter in better shape.

Kent tells of one farmer in that county who is growing one hundred acres of flax for fibre and fifty acres for seed, adding that the grower will have a small mill erected so that the flax may not only be grown but also processed on the place. Huron also reports that several new flax mills will be started this year, and that the industry will open up a good deal of sod and pasture acreage, which is likely to make grazing land dear.

Fodder is so scant with some that live stock is being thrust on the grass before there is a really satisfying bite for them. Grain especially is scarce. Concentrates are almost impossibly high in values. Oxford asserts that some very poor bran mixed with oat hulls, is selling in that country at $60 a ton.

Most of the live stock are still being carried along on little better than a maintenance ration. Even some working horses are getting only a small share of grain with their fodder. Vealing calves are being shipped by the carload from Prince Edward at from 14 to 16 cents a pound, but Lennox and Addington places prices at from 12 to 19 cents. Young, pure-bred bulls in the latter country, the product of different breeders, have been selling at $200, $300 and $408 Good milch cows in Lanark are quoted at from $150 to $200 although lower prices aer cited elsewhere.

Cheese sold at a little over 30½ cents a pound on the Picton Board, at its opening meeting last week, and at 30 cents on the Kingston Board.

Lennox and Addington also reports that nearly all the cheese factories in that district are skimming the whey. One factory that handled about 5,000,000 lbs of milk last season said from that quantity about 12,000 lbs. of whey butter, which brought an overage price of 50c a lb.

Fewer hogs are being fed, as a large number of brood sows were disposed of during the last six or eight months. Prices now range from $18 to $21 a cwt. Little pigs vary in value, ranging from $12 to $22 a pair according to locality.

Good young horses weighing around 1,500 lbs. are bringing from $500 to $550 per team in the Port Arthur district.

Norfolk reports a big demand in all lines of poultry industry.

A Practical Prescription For Sour, Acid Stomach

Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach trouble nowadays are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased but if this acid condition is allowed to continue the acid is very likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce gastritis with stomach ulcers. This may render a radical surgical operation necessary even to prolong life. Therefore, an "acid stomach" is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. The excess acid or stomach hyperacidity can easily be neutralized by Bisurated Magnesia taken in teaspoonful doses in a glass of water after each meal. Larger quantities may be used if necessary as it is absolutely harmless. Be sure to ask your druggist for the pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for this purpose.

Called by Death

MRS. CASSIE AMELIA YOUNG.

Many friends in Belleville and vicinity will regret to learn of the death at Winnipeg on Monday, April 26, 1920, of Mrs. Cassie Amelia Young. The Winnipeg Free Press refers to Mrs. Young's death as follows:

"The death of Mrs. Cassie Amelia Young, 11 Lenore Apts., which occurred Monday at the Winnipeg General Hospital, came as a great shock to her friends and relatives. She is survived by two brothers, Allan Hall and George A. Hall, Belleville, Ont.; one daughter, Mrs. D. J. McGregor, Winnipeg, and six sons, Harold and Clarence Young, Mountain View; Loran S., Percy G., Gerald J. and Leonard L., all of Winnipeg. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. E. JOHN COOK

HAVE POWER SOURCE TO FINANCE SCHEME

North Bay, Ont., May 7—One of the claims that will be made before the International Deep Waterways Commission, which meets here Friday, is that the improvement of the French River will result in securing enough electric power to more than pay the interest on the amount required for the cost of the whole proposed waterway.

RUSSIAN REDS LOOT SHCPS AT KIEV

Warsaw, May 7.—Russian Bolsheviki, soldiers are reported to be looting houses and stores at Kiev preparatory to abandoning the city. Advices received here indicate great confusion there. Polish military authorities plan to occupy Kiev late this this week, it is believed, and special trains to take visitors from Warsaw to the Ukrainian capital are being arranged. Ticket offices here are crowded with people who desire to make the trip. The Red Cross has chartered a special train to take supplies to Kiev, and plans are made for it to leave here on Wednesday. A party of guests of the Polish high command left here today for the front expecting to reach Zhitomir sometime Thursday night.

The Beavers scored seven runs in the third innings, but the game was cinched by their opponents in the third innings when the united teams scored three runs. The stars for Beavers were Barnett, Fleming and Andrews, while Clare, Wells, Curry and Follwell played well for the Patrol Leaders and Corporals.

Unwise To Boycott Articles of Food

Belleville Ladies Favor Increased Production Rather Than Boycott.

The women's mass meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. building yesterday afternoon was largely attended and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. The object of the meeting was to discuss the question of the high cost of living.

Miss Gibson reported that a committee interviewed the Mayor and Mr. Fredericks, of the Board of Commerce, and they are endeavoring to secure 600 bags of potatoes in order that there will be supplies available for planting.

Mr. Fredericks then addressed the meeting and reported that the City Council had turned over to the Board of Commerce all vacant city property and it was available for anyone who wished to obtain a lot. From inside information he told them that sugar would soon be 26c. a pound, and after June 1st, 28c. a pound.

A "Women's Section" was about to be added to the Board of Commerce to aid in looking after the child welfare of the city, playgrounds, etc. An annual fee of $2.00 would be charged.

After Mr. Frederick's address the following resolution was moved and carried by a standing vote:

"Be it resolved that this meeting deems it unwise to boycott foodstuffs, believing that there are no short-cut solutions to the problems of rising prices, and that any local attempt to interfere directly with prices would probably lead to increased local scarcity and other evils; but that this meeting recommend and encourage the conservation of supplies and increased production during the coming summer and study thoroughly the question of markets and give utmost publicity to its findings so as to prevent panicky buying and to produce rational and economical methods of purchasing on the part of the consumer in every way possible."

A vote of thanks to Mr. Fredericks was moved and adopted and the meeting then adjourned.

"HAVE THE COUNTRY BY THE THROAT"

That John Best, of Dufferin, says more than his prayers was evidenced in the debate on oleomargarine in the House of Commons. Best, M.P., is credited with saying:

> "Thank God the farmers have got into the position where they can say—and they are doing it—'we have the country by the throat. They had us by the throat long enough and now we will defend ourselves'."

Such talk is mischievous and harmful, disturbing the cordial relations which should exist between country and town dwellers. That some people would deliberately create a fued between the farmer and the townspeople seems very evident, and the class principle is being vigorously pushed for political purposes. This state of affairs is extremely dangerous to the progress, prosperity and happiness of the nation and should be discouraged by all true Canadians.

The intelligent, progressive farmer does not want to take anybody by the throat, neither does the real Canadian who does not happen to be engaged in the farming industry.

Trade conditions in every line are chaotic at present as regards prices and people with goods to sell faced with higher prices of things they buy feel that they are entitled to charge more. With a general rising tide of wages and prices and reduction in working hours there is a tendency to excessive prices and injustice, but to say that any class in the community is deliberately taking another class by the throat is not true in Canada. Manipulation of prices is the work of individuals in a position to profit by abnormal world conditions, and not due to any organized class movement on the part of farmers, retailers or wholesalers.

FARMERS OBJECT TO STRIKES.

American farmers are becoming restless over the actions of extreme labor elements in the United States. At its last meeting in Chicago, the American Farm Bureau Federation passed the following resolution:

"We desire to point out that a large factor to the high cost of living is the curtailing of production through shorter hours, lessened efficiency of labor, and strikes.

The Breeder's Gazette of Chicago, also says editorially: "Due to labor strikes. thousands of carloads of stock ready for the market are being held at an enormous aggregate expense. Feeders cannot ship them until the existing embargoes are removed. Radicals are trying to use organized labor as a weapon with which, first, to wreck established businesses, and then the Government itself. Industrial workers are loafing and demanding higher wages, while, as a direct result, stockfarmers are losing millions of dollars. Stock fattened on expensive feeds cannot be marketed because groups of laborers in cities refuse to work. A comparatively small number of men has achieved the power, through organization, of paralyzing one of the most vital productive industries of the country. Stockmen, on whom this misled power is inflicting a loss, are organizing, in self-defence, to fight the devil with fire. If organized labor follows the despotic leadership of its radicals, now in the saddle, it will ally against itself every farmer in America. If labor welcomes that result, it is hopelessly lost. Farmers everywhere are beginning to say that men who refuse to work shall not eat. It would be a tragedy if organized labor permitted its revolutionary masters to continue leading it toward breadlines. Its real friends should solemnly warn their adherents that farmers, with the moral support of public opinion, are prepared to stand pat while insane radicalism is rationalized by hunger."

Premier Drury has announced that a committee will be appointed to investigate and report on the advisability of adopting proportional representation for Ontario. But we thought the United Farmers had already desided the matter. Among the list of democratic reforms embodied in the official draft of the Farmers' platform is proportional representation. Doesn't it seem a bit curious to appoint a committee to investigate a plan after having already declared for it?

THE POET'S CORNER

LAND OF MY FATHERS.

(Written by G. R. Fearebay, M.D., author of "The World's Fair," "St. Louis," "Beautiful Flowers," "Belleville," etc.)

Land of my fathers' joy and pride,
Where Englishmen in love abide,
Thy morning call sounds round the world,
As to the breeze thy flag's unfurled;
And ev'rywhere thy laws rejoice
The hearts that do thy praises voice—
The sires and sons of Britain free,
Earth's fragrant land of liberty!

Long years thy hist'ry's pages show
The flowers of thy grace that grow,
Where men true government do know,
Progressive e'er, but staid and slow;
Lov'd land where justice, honor reign,
And truth new visions doth attain:
Where labor for the common-good,
True Englishmen in Brotherhood.

Thy colonies, in ev'ry clime,
In wealth and pow'r increase with time.
Beneath thy friendly, gentle rule,
Beloved of all trained in thy school,
On ev'ry sea thy flag doth wave,
And sounds Britannia's glory-stave;
While nations of the world applaud
Thy stand for manhood, honor, God.

Oh Merry England of the free,
Thou charming land of liberty,
How wondrous are thy visions true,
As calmly thou does e'er pursue
Thy loyal, steadfast, honored way
Of faith and cheer in Freedom's day,
Ruled over by the sovereign will
Of King who does thy laws fulfil!

"Kindly allow me to use my own French!" he snapped.

"By all means!" answered the tourist, blandly. "But I wish to point out that your are asking for a staircase, when all you require is a spoon."

Fort Frances, Ont., May 6—Six hundred timber workers are out on strike in International Falls, but the Fort Frances mills are not affected by the walkout. Angry Justice Swore At Lawyer

Lost His Temper at Greedy, Gouging Landlords in New York

Throwing off his judicial robes, following what was practically a dismissal of some two hundred eviction cases in his court through the landlords' lack of courage to prosecute before him, Justice William .A Morris, in the New York City Municipal Court, told Simon Platt, attorney for the landlords of the premises at 626 Concord avenue the Bronx that he "could go to the Supreme Court of the United States or he could go to hell." Platt had threatened to take his case to a higher court to secure the evictions he had applied for.

Justice Morris had just asked the tenants if they were willing to pay the rent they had paid in February, which called for a light increase, and when they replied that they were he had asked the landlords if they still insisted on evictions. None of the landlords replied and as a result court was adjourned. The justice was approached by Platt as he was on his way to his chambers.

"I care more for the finger of a baby of one of these tenants than I do for all the landlords here," said the justice, pulling off his robes, "and I don't propose to have a lot of people put out of their homes by a lot of greedy, grasping, gouging landlords. Now, you can go to a higher court if you want to. You can go to the supreme court of the United States or you can go to hell."

With that the justice strode off, muttering to himself Platt represents the G. and [illegible] Construction Co.

WALKER FIRM ASSESSED FOR MILLION DOLLARS

Windsor, May 5.—Completing the new assessment ordered by Walkerville, Assessor Mapes announces that that business assessment of Hiram Walkers' Sons had been fixed at more than $1,000,000. During the war distilleries in the Dominion were exempt from paying business tax.

The total assessment for Walkerville is now $9,418,659, an increase of $1,049,000, as compared with last year. Properties such as churches, schools and public utilities are exempt, leaving a total of $8,724,418 on which taxes may be levied.

A Court of Revision will be held May 25 at which, it is said, the Walker firm will enter an appeal against its assessment. Should the assessment stand the company will contribute $30,000 to the town's taxes this year.

The fingers were those of Mr. J. W. Besnard, of 539 Craig St. E., Montreal. He says, —"A falling beam badly smashed my hand. Two fingers were so severely crushed that the doctors said they would have to be amputated. Naturally I didn't want this, so decided to try Zam-Buk first. I applied Zam-Buk daily, and by the time I had used $4 worth, the injury was completely healed. My fingers were saved!"

Just another illustration of the healing power of Zam-Buk. Accidents will happen. It may be your turn next. Better get a box and keep it handy. Accidents are less frequent than skin diseases, and remember this—

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

PART IV—CHAPTER II

"Almost all, though I feel a few more sticking into my shoulder and side. Ah! there's another just begun again upon my backbone. You lively young martels how did you get inside there? However, they can't sting me many more times, poor things for they must be getting weak. They may as well stay in me till bed-time now, I suppose."

As he himself was the only person affected by this arrangement, it seemed satisfactory enough; and after a noise of feet kicking against cabbages in a blundering progress among them the voice of Mr. Shinar was heard from the darkness in that direction.

"Is all quite safe again?"

No answer being returned to this query, he apparently assumed that he might venture forth, and gradually drew near the lanterns again. The hives were now removed from their position over the holes one being handed to Enoch to carry in-doors, and one being taken by Geoffrey himself.

"Bring hither the lantern, Fancy the spade can bide."

Geoffrey and Enoch went toward the house, leaving Shinar and Fancy standing side by side on the garden plot.

"Allow me," said Shinar, stooping for the lantern and seizing it the same time with Fancy.

"I can carry it," said Fancy, religiously, repressing all inclination to trifle. She had thoroughly considered the subject after the tearful explanation of the bird-catching adventure to Dick and had decided that it would be dishonest in her, as an engaged young woman, to trifle with men's eyes and hands any more. Finding that Shinar still retained his hold of the lantern, she relinquished it, and he, having found her retaining it also let go. The lantern fell, and was extinguished. Fancy moved on.

"Where is the path?" said Mr. Shinar.

"Here," said Fancy. "Your eyes will get used to the dark in a minute or two."

"Till that time will ye lend me your hand?"

Fancy gave him the extreme tips of her fingers, and they stepped from the plot into the path.

"You don't accept attentions very freely."

"It depends upon who offers them."

"A fellow like me, for instance."

A dead silence.

"Well, what do you say, missie?"

"It then depends upon how they are offered."

"Not wildly, and yet not indifferently; not intentionally and yet not by chance; not actively nor idly; quickly nor slowly."

"How then?" said Fancy.

"Cooly and practically," he said. "How would that kind of love be taken?"

"Not anxiously, and yet not carelessly; neither quickly nor slowly; neither redly nor palely; not religiously nor yet quite wickedly."

"Well, how?"

"Not at all."

Geoffrey Day's store-house at the back of his dwelling was hung with bunches of dried horehound, mint of sage, brown paper bags of thyme and lavender, and long ropes of clean onions . On shelves were spread large red and yellow apples, and choice selections of early potatoes for seed next year—vulgar crowds of commoner kind lying beneath in heaps . A few empty bee-hives were clustered round a nail in one corner, under stood two or three barrels of new cider of the first crop, each bubbling and squirting forth from the yet open bung-hole.

Fancy was now kneeling beside the two inverted hives, one of which rested against her lap, for convenience in operating upon the contents. She thrust her sleeves above her elbows, and inserted her small, pink hand edgewise between each white lobe of honeycomb, performing the act so adroitly and gently as not to unseal a single cell. Then cracking the piece off at the crown of the hive by a slight backward and forward movement, she lifted each portion as it was loosened into a large blue platter placed on a bench at her side.

"Bother them little martels!" said Geoffrey, who was holding the light to her, and giving his back an uneasy twist. "I really think I may as well go in-doors and take 'em out, poor things! for they won't let me alone. There's two a-stinging wi' all their might now. I'm sure I wonder their strength can last so long."

"All right, friend; I'll hold the candle while you are gone," said Mr. Shinar, leisurely taking the light and allowing Geoffrey to depart which he did with his usual long paces.

He could hardly have gone , round the cottage door when other footsteps were heard approaching the out-huse the tip of a finger appeared in* the hole through which the wood latch was lifted, and Dick Dewy came in having been all this time walking up and down the wood, vainly waiting for Shinar's departure.

Fancy looked up and welcomed him rather confusedly. Shinar grasped the candle-stick more firmly, and, lest doing this in silence should not imply to Dick with sufficient force that he was quite at home and cool, he sung invincibly:

" King Arthur he had three sons."

"Father here?"

"In-doors, I think," said Fancy, looking pleasantly at him.

Dick surveyed the scene and did not seem inclined to hurry off just at that moment, Shinar went on singing:

"The miller aws drown'd in his pond,
The weaver was hung in his yarn,
And the d— ran away with the little tailor,
With the broadcloth under his arm"

"That's a terrible crippled rhyme, if that's your rhyme!" said Dick with a superciliousness in his tone, and elevating his nose an inch or there about.

"It's no use your complaining to me about the rhyme!" said Mr. Shinar. "You must go to the man that made it."

Fancy by this time had acquired confidence.

SINTALUTA, SASK.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for liver trouble, and found it excellent, and would not be without it. I suffered from congestion of the liver about six years ago and I always say that this medicine cured me. I have also given it to my family for colds and it cured them in a very short time. We must have used about 4 dozen bottles of the 'Discovery'."—MRS. ENOCH MITCHELL.

KITCHNER, ONT.—"I had become all run-down, was weak and nervous. My blood was bad also. I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and was completely restored to good health. TRACING STOLEN BONDS.

New York, May 7.—Wall street brokers other than David W. Sullivan and his immediate associates will be connected with the disposal of the $2,500,000 in stolen securities charged against the missing "Nickey" Arnstein and Nicholas Cohen, according to Saul S. Myers, attorney for the National Surety Co.

Myers also declared Cohen is now in hiding in Cleveland, and is the real master mind of the $5,000,000 theft plot, and not Arnstein, who hitherto has been credited with being the "brains" of the gang.

William A. Easterday, a partner of Sullivan, made a complete confession, telling the parts each individual member of the "gang" played in the robberies and disposition of the securities, which was filed today with the United States District Court.

Do you believe in a Supreme Being?

Do you believe in a perfect Supreme Being?

Do you believe that this perfect Supreme Being could do an imperfect thing? Could you suggest one thing that He does that could be improved?

Could you suggest an improvement to be added to a new-born babe?

Does man make a single article, tool, instrument, etc., perfect, or does he add one improvement after another?

Innate is perfect; makes perfect bodies, trees, bushes, animals; in fact, all that which has life is the handiwork of Him. These objects are perfect, complete at time of birth; if anything were added it would be a drag; if organ, tissue or muscle were removed, just so much would the general metabolism be interfered with as that organ carried its share of work.

Believing that Innate is perfect, then if man removes any organ he is just that much denying the ability of Him to do things as they ought to be done. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. Drs. Relick and Relick, 283½ Front St., Belleville. Phone 900. Hours: 10—12; 2—5; 7—8.

AUTO LICENSE FEE MAY BE INCREASED

An increase in auto license fees and a graded system for different types and sizes of cars may be expected next year, judging from the remarks of Hon. F. C. Biggs, discussing the estimates. He said that the license forms had been made out when his Government came into power, so that there was no change this year. He thought, however, with an improved road system first, that people would take more kindly to increased fees on autos.

"In the near future," he continued, "we will undoubtedly have the privilege of a new rating on motor cars." The matter was first brought up by Wellington Hay, North Perth, who said that men able to pay $1,400 to $11,000 for cars were able to pay an increased license fee.

Popular— With the Family

"MY dear fellow, I wouldn't go home on Saturday without a box of Maple Buds, any more than I would come down town without my hat. A week-end with four youngsters and no Maple Buds? No, my dear chap! Arm yourself with a box of Maple Buds for the family, and you are the most popular person in the house.

"Good? Didn't you ever taste them? Then take my advice and get a box to-day. The youngsters must have something sweet, but I don't believe in letting mine eat any old rubbish. I get Cowan's Maple Buds regularly. They're pure and wholesome, and the children love them. So does their Mother."

COWAN'S

Take Cowan's Maple Buds. They are the only genuine Maple Buds. You'll find the name on the bottom of each bud.

During the forepart of haying in 1919, Robert Hamilton, Philipsville, had occasion to use some money to pay a party at the roadside. He called to Mrs. Hamilton to send him his pocket book. She did so. After paying the party there was left in the pocket book over $800. A day or so after he wanted some more money but the pocket book was not to be found. KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Akey vs. Hydro Electric, an action brought by plaintiff for $10,000 for the death of his son at the village of Tweed by coming in contact with a live wire attached to one of defendant's poles. The deceased was sent by his mother for a pail of water and instead of going direct to the water pipe went to the guy wire and was found dead with his hand holding onto the wire. The guy wire became alive by the breaking of the insulator by some unknown cause. The action was listed for trial at the Spring Assize but on application of the plaintiff, the action was postponed to the Fall Assize on the ground of the absence of a material witness. E. Guss Porter, K.C. for plaintiff; W. C. Mikel, K.C., for defendant.

Feels Fully 20 Years Younger

Mrs. Tremblay Gains Twenty Pounds And Never Intends to be Without Tanlac

"After what Tanlac has done for me I never expect to be without it in my house, for I don't think a home is complete without it," said Mrs. Adele Tremblay, wife of a retired farmer living in Albert street, Victoriaville, Canada, while on a visit to her daughter at 65 Marble street, Burlington, Vt.

"For the past twenty-five years," she said, "I had suffered from stomach trouble and although during that time I had tried many different treatments and medicines, until I started taking Tanlac I had never found anything that did me any good. I gradually got worse as the years went by until finally I had no appetite at all, and when I did manage to eat a little something it would distress me for hours. I suffered with a terrible burning sensation as if there was fire in my stomach after every meal and the formation of gas was so bad it would nearly choke me. I could sleep but very little and often when I did go to sleep would wake up in perfect misery. In the mornings I felt tired and worn out, actually worse than when I went to bed, and barely able to stand on my feet.

"One night my daughter read a statement from someone who described their trouble as being very similar to mine, saying they had been entirely relieved by Tanlac, and my husband right then decided to have me give it a trial. Well, it began to help me almost at once, and now after taking only three bottles, my stomach trouble is gone entirely. I have a splendid appetite and can eat just anything I want without feeling the slightest sign of that terrible berning sensation or gas. I sleep well at night and always get up feeling greatly refreshed and my general health is so good I feel twenty years younger. I will always praise Tanlac and I hope others will profit by my experience."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by leading druggists in every town.

The business office of The Intelligencer will close at 5 o'clock on Saturdays during the months of May, June, July and August.

Letters To The Editor

BACK TO THE LAND.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—Once more let me put the food production situation clearly before us town and city people. The crux of the whole matter is simply this: The farmer says "I am short handed, very short-handed. I will engage to supply you city people with wheat for bread, with meat, with milk and butter and cheese and part of your eggs; but I can't raise your garden stuff and vegetables. You will have to do that yourself or go without." Now let us all get to work with a will. I predict a splendid season for such crops. Let us also knock the high cost of living.

Yours truly,
DR. ACKERILL, V.S.

BEWARE OF DECEPTION

Statistics show that when egg albumen is used as a constituent of baking powder, the amount so used is too small (usually 15/100 of 1%) to affect the quality or effectiveness of the baking powder containing it, and when so used, is plainly for the purpose of fraud. Intelligent buyers will not permit themselves to be deceived by the water glass test.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

contains no alum or egg albumen and is guaranteed to be composed of the ingredients printed on the label—and none other.

Proper care of the growing eyes

Just as arms, legs, and other parts of the body are not fully developed in children, so eyes are not fully grown.

School work demands hard use of the eyes. Often they are not quite ready for it. The strain is apt to cause serious trouble that will last through life. In such cases glasses will prevent eye strain, and usually they can be left off when the eyes are fully grown.

Britain Officially Ignores U.S. Twisters Of Lion's Tail

BONAR LAW TELLS HORATIO BOTTOMLEY THAT GOOD FEELING BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES IS NOT REPRESENTED BY A NOISY MINORITY, AND ANY ACTION TAKEN WOULD BE PLAYING INTO THEIR HANDS.

LONDON, May 8—Britain intends to ignore the unofficial United States support of Eamonn De Valera "President of the Irish Republic," Andrew Bonar Law, Government spokesman, announced in the House of Commons.

Horatio Bottomley opened a brisk interchange on the subject by asking Bonar Law is the Government was aware that De Valera is raising a loan in the United States on behalf of the Irish republic, and the governors of various American States were supporting De Valera's appeal.

The Government spokesman replied he was not aware that United States governors were supporting the Irish loan appeal, and adding that in any event the United States Government had taken no action in that direction.

The bellicose editor of John Bull persisted in heckling Bonar Law on the subject. He said United States support of De Valera constituted an "unfriendly act" toward Britain. He pointed out that it was claimed $10,000,000 had been raised and that triumphant parades were celebrating the event and De Valera being entertained by civic authorities.

The leader of the House of Commons disclaimed knowledge of these alleged facts and added:

"Even if it were so, it was not always policy to take action, because to do so might play into the hands of a noisy minority."

Cries of 'hear! hear' greeted the statement.

Captain Wedgewood-Bean interpolated: "Will the honorable gentleman take action to counteract the attempts of those trying perniciously to sow discord and create unfriendly relations."

There was no answer to this question.

Another member asked if the entertainment of De Valera in New Orleans was not "a deliberate insult to the people of England."

Bonar Law replied:

"I have nothing to add. I am quite satisfied that the good feeling in the United States is not represented by these demonstrations and that any action we could take would not have any result except to disturb the relations between the two countries, without any advantage to ourselves."

Will Not Accept Gift Of $5,000 Hat

NEW YORK, May 8.—The question of the Retail Milliners' Association of the United States giving a $5,000 hat to Mme. Deschanel, wife of France's President, has been brought to a head but not to Mme. Deschanel's head.

Mme. Deschanel will never wear that hat. This was made clear in two cablegrams received by the association now convening here, one from President Deschanel politely declining the honor of the proposed gift and the other from the Society for Improvement of the Millinery Art of Paris which was not so polite.

The Paris society's schedule of reasons why Mme. Deschanel could not possibly wear an American-made hat was based upon the "14 points of artistic millinery freedom for France." There was a strong intimation that it would be little short of "disgraceful" for any woman, even the French President's wife, to wear a $5,000 hat.

"No hat worth more than $500 was ever made in Paris," reads the cabled message. "The price is too exhorbitant. And then one can readily see that the whole practice of Paris accepting United States hats is like 'carrying coals to Newcastle.' Paris has always made hats for the world and it would be inappropriate for us to import a foreign piece of millinery."

The hat which is lined with 48 pieces of silk representing the states of America, is also adorned with nine birds of paradise plumes worth $500 each. Just what is to be done with the hat has not been determined. May be it will be sold to a Broadway chorus girl.

'Planes For Canada Of British Design

Col. Bishop, V. C., States Large Shipment Arrives Soon

TORONTO, May 8—The decision of the Aircraft Disposal Syndicate of England, of which Mr. Handley-Page is the head, to ship to Canada a portion of the 10,000 aeroplanes purchased by them for disposal through the Bishop-Barker Aeroplanes Limited, will be welcome news to many R. A. F. officers who are behind the agitation put forward by the Aero Clubs of Canada in favor of the introduction of aircraft of British design for use in commercial aviation in this country. The announcement was made yesterday by Colonel W. A. Bishop, V. C., president of the Bishop-Barker Company.

Col. Bishop stated that full details of the purchase would be announced in a few days, while the first machines already ordered would arrive in a few weeks. These would include such machines as the famous Avors Training Planes, Bristol fighters fitted with Rolls-Royce engines, D.H. 9A's fitted with 450 Liberty engines, S. E. Single Seater biplanes, Sopwith Smipes, etc., One or two twin-engine Handley-Page bombing machines and some Vimy Bombers, similar to the plane which flew across the Atlantic, would be included in the first lot.

The prospects for big development in commercial flying in Canada during this summer are considered unusually bright. A number of schemes are under way already.

Vancouver, M. C., May 8—An increase of $120,000 a year in school teachers salaries is provided for in the new wage schedule now being considered by Vancouver school trustees. U.S. Railroads Need A Billion To Bring Income To 6p.c. Basis

PROPOSITION THAT THIS SUM BE REALIZED THROUGH INCREASED FREIGHT CHARGES, LEAVING THE PASSENGER RATES AT PRESENT LEVEL.

United States railroads will need an additional $1,017,000,000 to bring their income to the six per cent. basis provided in the Transportation Act.

Through the Association of Railway Economizers, the roads proposed to the Interstate Commerce Commission that this sum be realized through increased freight charges, leaving the passenger rates at the present level. The advances in freight rates proposed were:

Eastern roads—30.6 per cent., to yield an advance in all revenues of 21.1 per cent., or $511,000,000.

Southern roads—30.9 per cent., to provide 20.7 per cent. larger revenue.

Western roads—23.9 per cent., to advance all revenues 17 per cent.

Western roads—23.9 per cent. to advance all revenues 17 per cent.

Presentation of the figures marked the formal opening of the railroad rate case.

Net income of all the railroads amounted to $1,156,000,000 in 1916; to $510,000,000 last year, the railroads claim, while their investment has increased more than $2,000,000,000.

Sensational Ramifications Of Bond Theft

Informer In $5,000,000 Bond Robbery Plan Said to be One-Time Montreal Policeman

NEW YORK, May 8.—The details of a plot which culminated in the burning of a boat last June in the canal in Montreal, the threatened killing of James Kean, informer in the $5,000,000 bond plot and the trapping of a one-time Montreal policeman by Saul S. Myers counsel in the Arnstein Sullivan and Company bankruptcy proceedings before United States Commissioner Alexander Gilchrist, Jr., were the salient features obtained in the bankruptcy in the last few days. The confessions were made by "Big Bill" Furey, now in the Tombs under $50,000 bail in connection with the bond plot; David Joseph Haines, the former Montreal policeman and James Keen who up to several months ago was the manager of the Montreal branch of the Burns Detective Agency.

Haines confessed that, in the presence of Kean, he set fire to the Oceanic, a small vessel, and that they were hired to burn the boat by a Captain Bavais, of Montreal. Furay testified that Kean told him the details of the burning of the vessel and admitted that six weeks after the burning he accompanied Kean and Haines to the office of a man named Fitch in the Woolworth Building in this city where both he and Kean posed as detectives for a fire insurance company, who were assigned to investigate the burning of the Oceanic.

Furey admitted that Kean had proposed that they use that pretence in an effort to extort money from Mr. Fitch, because those at the head of the plot had failed to pay Captain Bavais the $5,000 he was to receive for the burning of the vessel, half of which was to be divided between Kean and Haines, according to the testimony of both Haines and Furey.

The threat to "knock off" Kean was contained in a letter which Furey sent to the former Burns detective while he was residing in the Claridge Hotel several days after Furey, "Joe" Gluck, and the latter's brother Irving Gluck had been lodged in the Tombs under $100,000 bail in connection with the $5,000,000 bond plot. Furey, at a latter hearing before Commissioner Gilchrist informed Haines while he was testifying that Kean had "stolled on them" to the police about a feeting at the St. Lawrence Hotel in Montreal last January, which was attended by Kean, Haines Furey and "Joe" Gluck.

Joseph Gluck had testified previously that he and Furey journeyed to Montreal from Cleveland to see Kean to arrange for his disposing of the $5,000,000 worth of securities, which Gluck had arranged to steal from brokerage houses in the financial district.

David W. Sullivan was in the Tombs on an indictment charging him with receiving from "Nicky" Arnstein and "Nick" Cohen, more than $600,000 worth of securities which Gluck had obtained from dishonest messengers, and Furey, Gluck testified had urged him to resume the business of stealing bonds now that Sullivan, Arnstein and Cohen were out of the way.

Furey denied to the last that he intended to carry out the plot. He declared that he intended to obtain information how the securities were being stolen, and then go to the surety companies with the information and receive pay for it. All of his statements about the trip to Montreal with Gluck were disputed in the confessions of Gluck and Kean and Haines. The latter now are in the House of Detention, having been committed there last Friday, following their appearance before Commissioner Gilchrist.

Railway Shopmen Will Get Increase

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WINNIPEG, Man., May 8.—Railway shopmen throughout Canada will in all likelihood get the advance in wages asked for at the Conference in Montreal between representatives of the men and the railway association. The demands were for 95 cents an hour for mechanics and seventy-five for helpers. The new wage scale will not become effective until the American organization have come to terms but will be retroactive to May 1st, the Railway Association having given an understanding to this effect.

Bottomley Fires A Dud At Lady Astor, M.P.

SENSATIONAL ENGLISH WEEKLY CALLS LADY ASTOR RANK HYPOCRITE IN FOUR COLUMN ATTACK—BOTTOMLEY SNUBBED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

LONDON, May 5—The bitter opposition to Lady Astor which, since her entry into Parliament has been gathering strength, was dragged brutally to the surface today by Horatio Bottomley, who devotes four columns to a bitter attack on her in his widely-read weekly, John Bull.

"I hate to be rude to a woman, but my public duty compels me to denounce Lady Astor as a hypocrite of the first water," says Bottomley in his article.

Did Not Make a Hit

When Bottomley entered the House of Commons this afternoon the majority of the members showed him that his attack on the only woman "M.P." far from making the hit which he had counted on, was being deeply resented. There was a hostile hush as he strode through the aisle toward his seat. When he arose to speak "boos" from all parts of the House cut him short. The Speaker intervened to calm the members, but the booing and hissing continued.

At the height of the row Lady Astor entered the chamber. Loud cheers greeted her, virtually the whole House joining in the ovation. With flushed face, head erect, and her eyes shining with gratitude, she took her seat, which is but a few yards from that of her journalistic assailant. Throughout the session she pointedly averted her gaze from his direction.

The first woman member of Parliament recently forecast this attack by saying publicly: "I know that my advocacy of temperance is stirring up the bitterest antagonisms and that I have to fight for my future political existence."

Bottomley's attack is largely of a personal character. He opens with the charge that Lady Astor deceived the Plymouth electors by turning down prohibition when seeking their votes, while now she is openly advocating it. Bottomley then quotes from Lady Astor's speech in the House of Commons last month, urging that there be no weakening of the martial ties by freer divorce facilities.

"I am convinced," she had said in that speech, "that making divorce easier, really makes happy marriages more possible. In America where the States have such easy divorce laws unhappy, I congratulate her upon getted

"I beg the House in thinking this measure over, to consider it from a large viewpoint, and not to dwell merely upon miseries and inequalities. I think the world is too loose altogether and what it needs is tightening up."

With Tongue in Cheek

Bottomley says Lady Astor spoke "with tongue in her cheek," and avers she is guilty of "rank hypocrisy," because she obtained a divorce from her first husband, Robert Gould Shaw, at Charlottesville, Va., on February 3, 1903 "by arrangement between her and her husband."

The editor produces a New York newspaper report which states that Shaw went to Europe to make the divorce easy. He then comments:

"This was a collusive divorce such as certainly would not be possible in this country. Every practicable step was taken to hush it up.

"This is the honorable, noble lady, American by birth, who in the House of Commons dares to be ceremonious upon the spiritual aspect of the marriage tie and protest against slackening our laws of divorce.

"I am not a moralist, or a purist. If Lady Astor's first marriage was unhappy, I congratulate here upon getting rid of her husband, but I want to see familiar facilities, with due limitations, and unhappy married persons in this country. I do detest cant.

"I am not an enemy of female representation in Parliament, although I confess I would prefer a plain, British-born Mrs. Smith, to the most noble viscountess of American birth. Lady Astor was the protagonist of a great experiment, and she has dismally failed."

Bottomley predicts that these "revelations" will come as the final shock to the members of all parties in the House of Commons who object to being "fooled."

He winds up what he describes as a "painful, delicate task," with another charge, namely dissimulation, pointing out that Burke's "Peerage" and other reference books, describe "Nancy Astor" as the widow of Robert Gould Shaw, whereas, her first husband is stil lalive in New York where he is a member of the Brook Club.

JOHN A., ON DEAR POTATOES IN 1882.

The first general election after the adoption of the national policy was in June, 1882. Citizens of Toronto and elsewhere were suffering at the time from a potato famine and, as at present, prices were very high. The chief Conservative meetings were held at the Ampitheatre, on James street, where part of the City Hall now stands. The chief speaker one night was Sir John Macdonald. He said, when he appealed to the country in '67, the battle cry was Union and Progress, and his opponents referred to his party as the U.P. Now he was asking a renewal of confidence on account of the N.P., which, he said, stood not only for National Policy but National Prosperity, No Poverty, and, (after a pause and with that peculiar smile) he added, "and for New Potatoes." This "brought down the house."

THE BACK YARD GARDENER.

By Robert Drysdale.

I have planted my Cobbler potatoes, although the ground is quite cold and there will be no growth until it warms up a little. Anyhow, I have that much work done and out of the way.

Before the potatoes were cut they were soaked for two hours in 30 gallons of water, to which half a pint of formaldehyde had been added. When opening the hills I noticed that there were quite a few wire worms in the ground. These creatures drill holes through the new potatoes as soon as they begin to form. To keep them off I put a little sulphur over the potatoes directly after they had been cut. It is very little extra trouble to do this, and the powder sticks well to the freshly cut side. Sulphur is also supposed to keep off scab.

The seed was planted 15 inches apart in the row and one yard between the rows. Planting in this way gives the maximum crop for the amount of land planted. When labor is scarce a good way to plant is to have the hills a yard apart each way, with two or three sets in a hill. This enables one to run the cultivator both ways and does away with most of the hand hoeing. Thus, two cultivations each way and one hand hoeing will pretty well see a crop through where the land is fairly clean. Anyhow, I kept a two-acre piece clean with just that much cultivation. Of course the season was dry, and if it had been wet the weeds might have been more troublesome.

The best crop of potatoes I ever grew were cultivated with the wheel hoe only. I ran it through every Saturday afternoon from the time when the tops first showed until the time when the tops were too big to get the wheel hoe through.

When the tops begin to appear one should look out for the bugs. If theer are many bugs about begin dusting immediately with equal parts of arsenate of lead and slaked lime. This should be applied in the early morning when the dew is on the leaves. This will stick tight and will not come off as paris green does.

A cotton bag on the end of a short stick makes a good shaker. If you take a bag in each hand two rows can be done at the same time.

C S TUXIS BOYS AND TRAIL RANGERS E T

BY Firelighter

"Read! Read! What Shall I Read?"

I am not in the book business, but must live up to a promise made last week to name some good reading for boys. The list of books that might be named is so long that I have finally decided to mention those that deal with camping and other features of outdoor life. During the summer months every real boy is spending all the time he can outdoors and, even when he has to stay in, he likes to read about the woods and the fields. Here is a list: make your choice and buy them through any local bookseller or borrow them from a library.

"American Boy's Book on Bugs, Butterflies and Beetles," by Beard.

"Flower Guide," and "Bird Guide" by Reed.

"Field and Forest Handy Book" by Beard.

"At Home in the Water," by Corsan.

"Camping and Outing Activities," by Cheley and Baker.

"Shelters, Shacks and Shanties," by Beard.

"The Boy Craftsman" and "Handicraft for Handy Boys," by Collins.

"Harper's Wireless Book," and "Harper's Aircraft Book," by Verrill.

"The Camera Man," by Collins.

"Captains Courageous," by Kipling.

"Treasure Island," and "Kidnapped," by Stevenson.

"Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn," by Mark Twain.

"The Biography of a Grizzly," by Seton.

"The Ransom of Red Chief," by O. Henry.

"Boy Scouts Book of Stories."

"Twenty Thousand Leagues," and "Mysterious Island," by Verne.

"Around the Fire Stories," by Doyle.

"Around the Fire" (Stories) by Burr.

"The Pennant," by Tomlinson.

"Story of David Livingstone," by Golding.

"Down to the Sea" by Grenfell.

"Boy's Life of Roosevelt," by Hagedorn.

I have tried to keep this list from being so long as to frighten you but at the same time to have it include a few books about every subject in which you are interested. Are you and the boys of your city or town going camping for a week or a month? Here's an idea! See if your local librarian will loan you a box of books for camp. Most of them will do so with the understanding of course that you will replace those not returned in good condition.

Yours for some good summer reading

MUSIC AND DRAMA

FARNUM FEATURE CLOSES TONIGHT

Those who have not yet availed themselves of the opportunity to see William Farnum, Fox star, in one of the best roles of his stage career will have to take advantage of the performances at Griffin's today, because tonight marks the end of the successful run of "The Adventurer". This production is one of the best that has been shown here this year. "Pipe Dreams and Prizes," a two reel Big V. Comedy, British Canadian News and a very interesting Outing Chester Travelogue of Bermuda are also being shown on the same program.

"WHOSE YOUR SERVANT?"

The great wave of unrest which has swept the country in the wake of the war has been characterized by countless daring crimes. "Whose Your Servant?" which will be shown at the Palace tonight was based on this idea. A funny Lyons-Moran comedy, "Some Shimmiers," a beautiful travelogue in color and the British Canadian News are also being shown on the same program in addition to the above offering.

"THE BLUE BANDANNA"

William Desmond, the popular essayer of western roles, is seen in another one of his inimitable characterizations in "The Blue Bandanna" his new production. This latest of the genial Bill's pictures is a romantic drama of that part of the west in which hard riding, stage robberies and murder mysteries are still more or less rampant. There are thrills galore in this exciting drama, which gives Desmond one of the best roles of his career. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a funny comedy entitled "He Leads Others Follow." Other selected and varied attractions will be shown in addition to the above offerings.

"THE LOST CITY"

The mad elephant introduced in one of the scenes of the million dollar production, "The Lost City" shows a new danger to the jungle to the average spectator, who has become prone to believe that these heavy beasts of burden are very docile and tame. To witness this crazed beast tearing his way through the jungle, overturning native huts, ripping up trees by the roots and tramping down barricades gives one a new insight into the destructive powers of these gigantic animals, to see this will cause the spectator to wonder how it was possible to train this animal to perform these feats with the realism with which they are actually done, but the secret of it all is, that the elephant is not trained but is really mad and had to be shot in a later episode, the shooting of the animal which is valued at $25,000 will be doubted by many, but it is only one of the many situations in 'The Lost City' which the skeptical may doubt, which makes this production entirely different from any other ever produced. "The Lost City" will be shown at Griffin's this Monday and Tuesday.

Cahrles Ray has three fights in his new Thomas H. Ince Photoplay "Crooked Straight" which is also being shown on the same program. He has a fight with a crook in a cafe, a battle with the police in the streets and a fistic encounter with the same crook on a stairway in a small town residence. This is a story which Mr. Ray insists has more 'punch' than any in which he has worked. "Her Private Husband" a funny 2-reel Sunshine comedy is also for exhibition.

RETURN OF TYRONE POWER

Owing to the phenomenal success achieved by Mr. Tyrone Power, the eminent English actor, and his excellent company of English artists, in "The Servant in the House" when seen here a few months ago, it has been decided by Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited to bring back Mr. Tyrone Power as a special return engagement in another of his great success "The Little Brother," a powerful drama of love by Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James for one night only at Griffin's on Monday night, May 17.

Green Stockings A Pleasing Play

City Hall Packed to the Doors—Fine Performance of Albert College Dramatic Club

Under the auspices of the Dramatic Society in connection with Albert College, a three-act drama entitled "Green Stockings" was presented last evening at the City Hall to an audience which filled the spacious place to overflowing. The proceeds which amounted to a considerable sum will be devoted to a worthy cause, namely the Armenian Fund. The drama was presented in a manner which showed that those taking part had given considerable thought and practice to the characters they wished to portray. The drama represented to a marked degree country life and its surrounding and the stage settings were in keeping with the play. Previous to the presentment of the drama, the College Choral Club, under the able direction of Prof. Hunt, rendered two selections entitled "Violets and the Bee" and "Gleam" in a manner that met with the hearty approval of the audience. Between acts, solos were given by Prof. Staples, Mr. Anglin and a male quartette and these were much appreciated. As to the play, Prof. Hunt, as Mr. Faraday, the father of three charming daughters, carried out his part well, as did also Miss Jessie Tuite as Celia Faraday, one of the daughters who took the leading role. Her personation of the character she desired to impart was all that could have been desired. Prof. Staples as Admiral Trice had a fine conception of his part and acted it well. The others taking part were able to present their characters in a manner that brought forth the commendation of the audience. The play whilst simplicity in its nature had some amusing situations and these were brought out true to life. All taking part are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they portrayed their role. The cast and those constituting same was as follows:

Celia Faraday—Miss Jessie B. Tuite.
Aunt Ida—May E. Copeland.
Phyllis Faraday—Edna R. Laidley.
Mrs Rockingham—Madeline C. Young Lady Trenchard—Stella Lane.
Colonel Smith—Mr. S. F. Maine.

Robert Tarver—Mr. S. M. Anglin.

RED PAINT.

We met a man and he remarked: "I am going to paint my barn." We inquired what kind of paint he would use in decorating his building. Red paint was his choice, not that he especially preferred that color, but he had demonstrated by practice that red paint was worth more money to him. That was his reason for using it. I am one that will believe anything that can be demonstrated. I do not profess to know very much, much less to know everything, but what I do know I feel that I know quite well, because it has been demonstrated to me.

EXPLOSION STOPS MAKING OF WINE

New York, May 6.—A heavy explosion brought Patrolmen Francis Smith and William McMahon to the grocery shop of Farlo Santevechi, 871 Third Avenue, Brooklyn. They found the two front windows blown out. Entering through one of the window frames they found Santevechi and Tony Pettischi of 126 Thirty-third St. stunned on the floor.

A milk can on a lighted stove had exploded, the policemen reported. There was a copper coil leading from the can to a barrel of water. They allege they found in the place a barrel of wine and a jug containing alcohol, in addition to the still. The articles were taken to the Fourth Avenue police station. Both men, who were held for the federal authorities, are said to have admitted they were making wine. Many persons in the neighborhood ran into the street, thinking a bomb had exploded.

O'DOWD LOSES TITLE

Boston, Mass., May 7—Johnnie Wilson became the middleweight champion of the world at the end of the twelve rounds in the Mechanics' Building. The referee, Hector McGinnis, a home product, gave Wilson the decision over Mike O'Dowd, to the amazement of the spectators. O'Dowd did all the leading and Wilson all the receiving, although Wilson knocked O'Dowd down in the second round.

O'Dowd was the aggressor throughout the contest, but Wilson, a left-handed boxer, scored repeatedly with his right. O'Dowd excelled in infighting, but seemed unable to fathom Wilson's style of boxing. Eight of the rounds went to Wilson, two to O'Dowd and two were even.

The only knockdown in the bout came in the second round, when Wilson caught O'Dawd with a straight right to the jaw, O'Dowd going down for the count of four. Wilson surprised the followers of the game by scoring so many times with his right, breaking through O'Dowd's defence often.

The pace set by the men was fast, and at the end of the 12th round both were unsteady on their feet. A great crowd witnessed the bout. The St. Paul boy was a big favorite before the bout, the general betting being 13 to 2. Wilson scored continually with right jabs to O'Dowd's face.

Hector McInnes of Boston, was referee.

Wilson has participated in many bouts against second-rate boxers in the last year and has appeared in many cities, principally in New England. Tonight's bout was his first against a leading boxer."

O'Dowd won the title from Al McCoy in 1917.

ANN STREET VICTORY

Friday evening Queen Alexandria School team defeated the Academy on Pine street grounds in a snappy game of baseball. St. Michael's are to be congratulated on the good work of their catcher, first baseman and especially their pitcher, Mullins. "Chuck" Jeffries, on the mound for Ann street, was in excellent form, striking out seven batters. His team gave him good support and won chiefly by their ability to hit at the right time by a score of 15-7.

This game completed the second round of the Public School League. Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria are now tied for first place while Queen Mary and the Academy are also even for second. The schools are keenly interested in the games next Friday when Queen Victoria meets Ann Street on the latter's ground and St. Michael's plays at Queen Mary.

The occasion was the presentation of the charter affiliating the Oshawa Rotary Club with the International Association of Rotary Clubs. District Governor Harry Stanton, of Toronto, made the presentation. Rotarians Jimmie Bone and Billy Deacon spoke on behalf of the Belleville Rotary Club. Rotarian Norman Tovell, President of the Toronto Club, spoke on behalf of Toronto Club and Bert Truesdale gave a humorous address on the duties of the Sergeant-at-Arms, which gave more of the history of Oshawa than the subject assigned to him.

Seed Potatoes At Chamber of Commerce

Only One Bag Will be Sold One Person—35 Bags Secured

After a great deal of effort, the Chamber of Commerce has succeeded in securing an initial shipment of thirty-five bags of guaranteed seed potatoes for residents of the city who are planning to have home gardens this summer. It was only with the greatest difficulty that these potatoes could be secured because all sections of Quebec and Ontario appear to have been drained of all reserve stocks of seed potatoes. The Department of Agriculture was communicated with by telegraph and the best that they could offer was an uninspected grade at the maximum price and it was not felt that it would be safe to take a chance on this stock.

The thirty-five bags that are under way to this city will have to be sold at $7.50 a bag and even at that price it was impossible to get any further deliveries at this time. Mr. Fredericks, Secretary of the Chamber, has been in telephone and telegraph communication with people in various parts of Quebec and Ontario with a view to securing some supply for planting. In the majority of cases no potatoes were available at any price, while in some other instances the potatoes were not guaranteed which made them undesirable for the purpose for which they are intended.

It was the determination of the Chamber of Commerce that if it undertook to relieve the situation at all in the matter of seed potatoes it would insist upon getting only high grade stock and these that have been secured are guaranteed as to quality and are true to type. Those who wish to secure some of these seed potatoes for planting con do so by applying to Mr. Fredericks of the Chamber of Commerce on the condition that only one bag will be allotted to each purchaser. The Chamber of Commerce cannot undertake to guarantee any further deliveries at these prices after

ESCAPED FROM HAREM, ORDERED BACK TO TURKEY

Because she could not read, Anna Sherbetdjian, a young Armenian woman at Ellis Island, New York, was ordered deported back to Turkey, where she may face death for her escape from a harem there, to come to the United States to an unseen protective bridegroom.

Hampirsoon Terekelyian, a wealthy Philadelphia merchant, appeared at the Island to claim Anna as his bride-to-be, only to learn that she could not enter the country.

Rich Armenians are planning to appeal the case.

Aviators Must Report At Customs

"Hoping that we may have the pleasure of seeing a great many Canadian planes at our field this season" is the conclusion of a letter from Paul R. Moore, aero-inspector, U. S. Customs, to the Bishop-Barker Aeroplanes, Ltd. of Toronto, in which he informs aviators of the Customs rules regarding entry.

All airplanes arriving in the U. S. from Canada by way of of the Niagara frontier are required to land at the aviation field, Niagara Falls, N.Y., except, of course, in event of forced landing, when pilot and occupants must report at the field or to Customs House at either Niagara Falls or Buffalo. Planes in which it is desired to tour for not more than 30 days will be granted permits which will be issued at the landing field. Airplanes of foreign manufacture may remain in the U.S. for not more than six months without payment of duty by being placed under special six months' bond for exportation. These bond should be executed by an approved surety company and airplane tourists intending to remain for more than 30 days should consult a Customs House broker regarding filing of bond. The six-months' period cannot be extended. Airplanes are dutiable as entireties upon the component material of chief value; if wood 15 per cent.; if metal 20 per cent. Parts of planes that are of U. S. manufacture and separable and identifiable as such are free of duty.

The aviation field at Niagara Falls will be marked "U. S. Customs" in white letters of a size to be easily discernible at considerable height and distance. Three landing courses will be provided. The aerodrome will accommodate three planes.

SHORTER HOURS ARE REDUCING PRODUCTION

Boston, May 6.—The national industrial conference board, in a report issued here on the hours of work problem, reaches the conclusion that no single schedule of hours is equally adaptable for all industries from the standpoint of production.

"In general," the report says, "the ability to increase hourly efficiency and thus make up, either wholly or in part, for reductions in hours, was largely determined by the amount of handwork performed in any given process. Those industries characterized by a relatively large amount of machine work as a rule showed a marked decrease in output when hours were reduced."

The board investigated 1,818 representative establishments in five industries—cotton, wool, silk, boot and shoe and metal manufacturing. Of these 749 establishments had reduced hours and furnished definite information regarding results. The report says the investigation revealed no clearly established relationship between changes in wages and the rate of production, but the evidence clearly indicated that the piece-rate system was more conductive to efficiency than the day-rate system.

The letter states that investigations have been made and it has been discovered that it is not the wholesalers or retailers, but the growers that are at fault.

MOTHER'S DAY.

A loving tribute to the living Mother or an affectionate remembrance of the one who has gone on before is the floral significance of Mother's Day, which will be generally observed on Sunday. The lovely carnation with its white purity or its delicate color shading, quiet and modest in appearance and demeanor, yet suggestive of hidden strength of stalk and leaf and complete reliability, is the appropriate symbol chosen for Mother's Day, and the great popularity of this commemoration is evidenced each year by the great demand for flowers which generally exceeds the supply.

Mother's Day was initiated in a quiet way by a young lady of Philadelphia, and soon became national and international, the movement finding great favor in the public press with the result that its spread was rapid.

It is thought that the war helped materially to popularize Mother's Day because the men overseas, facing death daily, constantly had Mother and home in their thoughts. Many incidents are recorded of the constant presence of the mother love in the trenches, and the Toronto Globe tells the following story of war-time which throws a clear light upon the great mother love which softened the sacrifices and sorrows of the bloody fields of Flanders:

> Among the incidents in proof of this, one seems to stand out with unusual force. It was Christmas Eve, and after the toil and dangers of the trenches some Canadian soldiers were having a sing-song in one of the Y. M. C. A. huts. A young officer of the Royals, a mere boy, came forward. There was a hush, and every word of his song sounded clearly through the room:
> "Did ye iver have a mother,
> A Mother!
> Faix, ye'll niver get another,
> Another.
> So just prize the dear old mater,
> For ye'll have a job to bate her,
> And she's just the swatest cratur
> In the wide, wide world.
> Chorus:
> Mother, Mother,
> Niver such another;
> Swatest cratur,
> None can bate her,
> The silence became tense as the words fell upon the ears of the fighting men, and it must be confessed that here and there a hand was furtively brushed across a rough face. As the two last words rang out the young officer bowed and retired. Two days after Christmas the men were hard at it, and a "scrap" was proceeding. Some soldiers who had heard the song found a young officer at the bottom of a crater. He looked so young and fair as he lay with his face upturned to the sky, and the lips that had sung, "Mother, Mother" were sealed in death.

STILL PAYING TOLLS.

It seems a long and weary road with many devious windings and curves leading to a bridge free of tolls between Prince Edward and Hastings Counties at Belleville. The question has been discussed in all its phases and no one found in favor of the toll system. Further general discussion at public meetings is useless, but a definite plan of action, vigorously followed up is necessary if a free bridge is to become an accomplished fact. By keeping everlastingly at it a free bridge can be secured, and the representatives of the municipalities concerned should get together upon a definite plan of action at once. The question should not be approached in any narrow, personal spirit, but in the larger spirit of a great good to be accomplished for a great number of people.

The report of Mr. Lucien Allen, Civil Engineer, recently prepared for the Belleville Chamber of Commerce upon the bridge question, has an important bearing, and is worthy of careful consideration by all concerned. This report was recently published in full in The Intelligencer, but the concluding paragraphs of the report, summing up the conviction of the engineer, will bear reproduction. They are as follows:

Estimated Cost of New Bridge.

> The time allotted for preparing this report has not allowed for a detailed estimate of cost, but the following figures give a fair idea of the approximate cost of a bridge such as has been described. This estimate is based upon the construction of an entirely new bridge as well as new approaches which could be constructed to the east of the present bridge and approaches.
> The approach would consist of an earth fill to proper grade, stone rip-rap on sides and shoulders with a stone surfacing. The embankment would be carried out about 400 feet further into the Bay on the north side than the present Bay Bridge approach.
> The total estimated cost of the new bridge with the required approaches, at present day cost of labor and materials, would be $353,828. The cost would be about equally divided between the substructure cost and the superstructure, including concrete floors.
> Should the Provincial Government give 40 per cent. of the total cost of the above estimated cost, the proportions would be as follows:

Provincial Government, 40 p.c.	$141,531
City of Belleville, 30 p.c.	106,148
Other municipalities, 30 p.c.	106,145
Total	$353,828

> Should this highway be designated as part of the Provincial Highway System, and the Provincial Government contribute 60 per cent. of the total cost, the proportions would be as follows:

Provincial Government, 60 p.c.	$212,297
City of Belleville, 20 p.c.	70,765
Other municipalities, 20 p.c.	70,766
Total	$353,828

Mr. Allen sums up the two propositions, building an entirely new bridge or purchasing the present one as follows:

General Conclusions.

> Any decision as to the relative merits of the two propositions, namely, the construction of an entirely new bridge, or the purchase of the present Bay Bridge, should be very carefully weighed as to the present and future benefits to be derived by the public generally. Assuming that present bridge with its approaches can be acquired for $85,000 and brought up to a first class physical condition at an additional estimated expenditure of, say, $10,000, which would then provide a bridge which would safely carry the present and future traffic for a period of years, it would seem to have certain points in its favor, considering the high cost of a new structure at the present time.
> The value of the present approaches as a basis upon which to construct at some future time a new bridge represents, in my opinion, a very large proportion of the total value of the property. The present approach could be gradually extended by filling from time to time so that when a new superstructure was required, it could be very much shortened and the cost reduced considerably, and in the meantime the traffic could be accommodated by the present bridge.

Daylight saving, which has been adopted independently, in a few places, is receiving many angry knocks. Trail, B.C., after eight days experience of home-made daylight saving, gave it up and returned to standard time, and opposition is developing in other places where going-it-alone on the clock-tinkering question is not popular.

At the Indian Head Experimental Farm it is claimed that potatoes can be raised at a total cost of forty-five cents per bushel. The Kingston Whig, after making every possible allowance, claims that in Ontario potatoes can be produced for ninety cents a bag at the most. Potato raisers may dispute these figures but there is still a large margin for joyful anticipation on the part of the citizen who essays to raise his own potatoes in the back yard or vacant lot.

Common Sense
Hamilton Spectator

An attempt by the State of Missouri to have declared illegal the Migratory Bird treaty recently signed between Canada and the United States has been frustrated by the United States Supreme Court. Bird lovers everywhere will rejoice at this common sense decision.

A Question of Output
Regina Leader

If a few of the outstanding men in the ranks of Labor were to boldly say to their comrades: "We are wholeheartedly with you in your demands for high wages, reasonable working hours and proper living and working conditions, but, when our employers meet these demands, we, in turn are going to give them the best service in our power, working with a maximum of our efficiency, to the end of producing the largest possible output," a very rapid betterment in all economic conditions would be brought about. Such a policy on the part of the workers would create a tremendous revival in industry; more, not less, employment; and the resultant increase in output, would operate to bring down the cost of living which today are nullifying to a large extent the increase in wages which has taken place.

THE POET'S CORNER

A LAMENT FOR ARCHIBALD LAMPMAN.

His was not the glory of the shattering of spears;
He did not cross his sword with Death, where scarlet flags are hurled,
But death came to him softly, with his dark eyes dim with tears,
And broke a dream of woodland ways across a singing world.

So doff your hats, good poet-men!
No fingers lift the fallen pen,
The sun forgets to mark the time
With the music of his rhyme.

His was not the glory of the thundering of wars;
His was not a nation's voice—are his a nation's tears?
To him the night-winds whispered all the secrets of the stars,
He was priest of all the joyous springs and of the dying years.
So doff your hats, good gentlemen,
For hearts were made to bleed again,-
With Archie gone, and all his rhyme,
Who'll tell the world 'tis April-time?

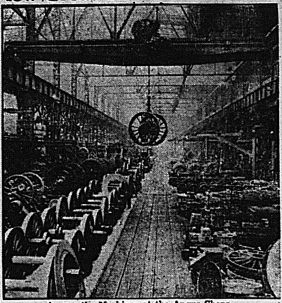
Senators View Great C.P.R. Works



Among the Machines at the Angus Shops.

The Hon. Smeaton White was the host of an interesting party to the C.P.R. Angus Shops at Montreal recently. In the party were Hon. Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor; Hon. Hewitt Bostock, leader of the Opposition in the Senate; and Senators Willoughby, Turriff, Schaffner, Fowler, Bennett, Murphy, Fisher, Blain, McMeans, Watson and Proudfoot, and Major John Bassett and Mr. Arthur Hines. The object of the visit was to further acquaint the Senators with the great industrial development in the Province of Quebec. They were met at the shops by the officials in charge of these great works.

The party were escorted through the works, spending over two hours to inspect only a portion of this great plant. First they visited the immense locomotive works and the organization and details were explained. Then they saw the salvage plant that turns what was formerly wasted and lost material into a valuable asset. They also inspected the passenger and freight car works, the offices, ambulance and dining halls. It was a splendid education in Canadian industrial development, and the Senators expressed their astonishment at the size of the works and their efficient organizaton. They all agreed that our legislators should seize every opportunity to familiarize themselves with Canada's industrial life.

The party was present when the great works closed for noon and it was a wonderful sight to see the thousands of employees streaming out of the works. Some conception of the immensity of this enterprise can be grasped from the statistics furnished. The area of the works is 200 acres, and number of employees 9,200 with an annual pay-roll of $12,780,000. As distinctive railway shops the Angus Works are the largest in North America, in fact, in the world.

Wonderful Efficiency.

Senator Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor, was deeply interested. He said of the visit: "It is eleven years since I have been here and the development is simply amazing. I am glad I came. I had no appreciation of the immensity of the enterprise. What most impressed me was the wonderful efficiency of the employees. I never saw an idle man and I believe each was striving to give a fair day's work. I am glad the relationship between the company and its employees is of such a cordial character."

Hon. Hewitt Bostock also was deeply interested and appreciative of this industrial development and said:

"One thinks of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a great transportation company with representatives in all the important centres of the world, but cannot realize until they visit the Angus shops, the amount of co-ordination and management required to keep the rolling stock, and the system generally, up to date and in an efficient state of repair. Whilst these shops are the principal shops of the railway they are by no means the only shops where repairs are made. On entering the locomotive building the first thing to attract the attention of the party was the big crane of 60 tons transporting the completed boiler of an engine to its place, to be placed into the bogey carriage. We realized that every effort had been made to instal the last machines for handling the material quickly and economically. The cutting of the metal is done by acetylene gas jets, the welding by electricity. All through the shops the machines are worked by compressed air wherever feasible, and the noise in the locomotive shop is deafening.

Salvage System.

"One of the most noticeable things is the way in which the scrap is worked up into something useful. In one case the wheel of the hand brake of a freight car was being made up as the wheel of a wheelbarrow. Old pipe is made into the framework of farm gates, showing the close and careful management which looks into every detail, and which has been successful in finding places not only for all the returned men who worked in the shops before serving at the front, but for many others who had not worked for the company before, the policy of the management being to give a preference to the returned soldier.

"At the commencement of the war some of the shops were given up to making ammunition and were the first to turn out brass shell cases for the Imperial Munitions Board, a number of women being employed for this work, but as soon as it was posble to get the supply of ammunition elsewhere the transfer to repair work was made as quickly as possible, as large arrears of work had to be overtaken.

"The whole tone of the shops and the way that the work was being carried on bespoke a good understanding and co-operation between the men and the management. One would go a long way before seeing a more active body of men than those who came off work at noon, largely due, no doubt, to the provision of ample athletic grounds and good ventilation throughout the works."

Elimination of Waste.

Senator George Fowler, of New Brunswick, said:

"Personally, I had no idea of the magnitude of the shops nor of their perfection from the industrial standpoint. The pride which I, as an intense Canadian, have always taken in having in our country the greatest transportation system in the world was considerably increased when this visit convinced me that its organization was about as near perfection as the inherent shortcomings of frail humanity can reach. The most modern machinery, the most expert mechanics, with superb organization can accomplish wonders, a statement proved by the work performed at the Angus Shops. We saw under the same roof the repairs to an insignificant car hinge, and the building of a magnificent engine such as Stephenson in his greatest visions never dreamed of, an engine weighing one hundred and seventy-five tons and capable of hauling a train of loaded cars over a mile in length. So perfectly has the automatic principle been developed in many of the machines in the works that they almost seem to be sentient things and capable of the expression of more intelligent thought than that sometimes exhibited by even a judge upon the bench.

"Another feature that struck me was the almost perfect elimination of waste. The C.P.R. management is evidently a strong believer in the old adage that, a penny saved is a penny earned. For nothing of the least value is allowed to be wasted. The shareholders of the great Canadian railway may rest content that their money is in safe hands and that if the present reasonable return upon their investment is not maintained in the future it will not be through any fault of the present management.

"You cannot, however, perfect your machinery, fail to reckon with the human element and in that regard what most roused my admiration was the splendid spirit of loyalty shown by all officials of whatever grade towards the company. With such a spirit emanating with such a magnificent organization, and with the driving force possessed by the young and vigorous president, the continued progress of the company is assured and the glories of its past will be far outshone by the magnificent triumphs of the future."

Impressed by Employees.

Senator W. H. Bennett, Ontario, was astonished at the great industry built up, and said:

"The visit of the party was most interesting and profitable. That the company was building such mammoth locomotives was the most impressive recollection of the trip, while in quite another direction the evidences of thorough and business acumen, in economic management, were manifest in the utilization of what would be considered as scrap by converting the same into useful parts for new work. The employment of the great force of 9,000 men, at the Angus Shops was an evidence of the most striking kind of the part played by the company, not only in the transportation interests of Canada, but in its industrial life. The party are under deep obligations for Senator White's kindness in giving them the trip."

Senator Turriff, Saskatchewan, said: "I thought I had some conception of the C.P.R. efficiency and magnitude, but no one can properly understand it until he sees these works. What impressed me was the fine appearance of the employees. I never saw a more intelligent body of men."

Senator John Fisher was equally appreciative. He was much impressed with the salvage department. "I now know," he said, "why the C. P. R is a success. There is no waste on the system."

Mr. W. F. Wanklyn, representing President Beatty, met the party at the works and on their return to the Windsor Street Station Mr. Grant Hall conveyed to the party the appreciation of the company for their visit.

Further Protest By Women's League

Wives of Ottawa Veterans Incensed Against General McLean

What General H. H. McLean, M.P. for Royal, N.B., said at the sitting of the Parliamentary Committee on Pensions, is causing a great deal of controversy in Ottawa. A further protest was made by the Veterans Women's League against the aspersions of the General. General McLean has also issued a statement as to the exact words he used.

Mr. C. Grant McNeil, Dominion secretary of the G.W.V.A. who was present when General McLean made his statement, is prepared to sign an affidavit that General McLean said: "Is it not a fact, anyway, that the majority of private soldiers' widows are from the servant class?"

Mr. McNeil is also supported by Mr. F. A. Walpole, of the staff of the G.W.V.A. Dominion Command, who was present.

General H. H. McLean is to be invited to meet the Veterans' Women's Association of Ottawa and to repeat his alleged remarks. This decision was reached at a large meeting of the Veterans' Women's Association held in the G.W.V.A. club annex.

Telegrams from branches of the G. W.V.A. in all parts of the Dominion were received by Mr. Grant McNeil, Dominion secretary protesting against the statement alleged to have been made by Brig.-Gen. Hugh McLean before the Parliamentary Committee on Pensions on the subject of the wives of private soldiers.

A resolution embodied in one telegram from Victoria, B.C., demanded the resignation from the committee of Brig.-Gen. McLean. Other wires inquire if the report of his statement is correct. All express surprise and indignation at such an utterance, and demand that some action be taken by the Dominion executive of the G.W. V.A. to repudiate it.

Authorities said tonight that Kelly has twice been an inmate of an institution for feeble minded.

WERE SHUT IN ROOM LIKE TURKISH BATH

Montreal, May 6.—A despatch to La Presse from St. Scholastique states that the action against the Knights of Columbus of St. Jerome Lodge for "imprisonment" taken at the instance of Joseph Fortier, prothonotary of the Superior Court of Ste. Scholastique, which was announced yesterday as having been put off until next Monday, will possibly be postponed to May 17. Mr. Fortier, according to La Press, has announced his firm intention of continuing the action.

Meantime La Presse interviewed Narcisse Forest, notary of Ste. Scholastique, who has given further details of the initiation which is the cause o the action. Mr. Forest says it occurred on Sunday evening, March 21 and that a party of 52 men were shut into an eight by ten foot room which was heated to the temperature of a Turkish bath. One of the party, Clement Fortier, son of the prothonotary, lost consciousness, and Mr. Forest claims that cries for help went unanswered. With the aid of Dr. Lavigne of Lachute, he held him up, and when the door was at last opened, Mr. Fortier, Sr., was also in a state of collapse.

London Times on S. A. Jubilee Appeal

Fifty years and a little more after its foundation, The Salvation Army to day makes a direct appeal to the sympathy, and practical generosity of the public for funds to enable it to pursue and enlarge the manifold philanthropic enterprises to which it is committed.

General Booth asks, for reasons which at this stage in the history of The Salvation Army should need neither explanation nor apology, a definite sum of money, large enough for the purposes which he indicates but not too large, in our opinion, for the purses of those who wish him God speed.

The demand, when all things are considered, cannot be regarded as immoderate. The Salvation Army bears the responsibility of a great and noble trust, which, out of piety to its Founder, and for the love of humanity, it cannot be expected to let suffer, especially, after the exhausting years of war, for want of that material basis on which even the most spiritual ideals, when embodied in a voluntary organization, must depend.

The Salvation Army is, perhaps, the freest of all Christian bodies; its work lies in many spheres, and is directed and performed by men and women who take no thought of the morrow; and therein lies no small part of the secret of its power. A truly apostolic simplicity of life, which has decided no hardship and shirked no danger, has enabled it, as everybody knows, to effect spiritual and moral regeneration where all other agencies have failed.

Funds, therefore, it must naturally have, and such has been the nature of its labors that when it asks for money it asks for it of a society which, even on the lowest and most selfish grounds, ought to recognize the unique value of its services. Schemes and dreams of social reformation and a new order, practical and unpractical, are just now on the lips and before the eyes of all; but collectivist effort, however prudently conceived and energetically promoted, must always leave a wide field for personal endeavor.

While thinking of the mass, we can never afford to forget the individual To raise up them that fall, to restore this or that victim of weakness or of circumstance to selfrespect and happiness, is beyond the capacity of legislative measures, which can at the best succeed in being only preventive. Philanthropy of such a kind as The Salvation Army's is not and cannot be, in any sense political. When the mischief is done, not the legislator, but the practical healer, has to undo it. It is not a case of doctoring the symptoms; the ills in the social body which The Salvation Army searches out are not such as can be cured by a tincture or an infusion into another part.

They demand, because their subjects are human beings with final values of their own, the remedy which the personal touch of human kindness can alone provide. Because The Salvation Army, with high devotion and persistent courage for over fifty years has set itself primarily to applying the only medicine which in the last resort is capable of rehabilitating the most abject and the most degraded its appeal today for more means deserves to meet the response of all who profess to have regard for their fellow men.

WESTERN PAPERS SAY NEWS PRINT REFUSED

Winnipeg, May 6.—Although the domestic production of newsprint is seven times the domestic consumption, the daily newspapers of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, for the second time in six months, are again facing suspension owing to inability to get newsprint.

Until recently these newspapers were supplied by the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company, Limited, whose mill because of its location, 200 miles east of Winnipeg, is their logical source of supply.

Early in April, following the Supreme Court judgment in the Price Bros. appeal, the Fort Frances Company notified its Canadian customers that they would have to get their supplies from another mill. It offered a limited supply in the meantime at $120 per ton, which was $30 per ton in excess of the standard contract price at which other Canadian newsprint manufacturers were exporting newsprint to the United States. The Canadian customers of the Fort Frances Company paid the price demanded and supplies continued for a few weeks.

Efforts to secure supplies from other sources were unsuccessful. Now the Fort Frances Company has again notified its Canadian customers that they must get their supplies elsewhere, and this time has actually stopped shipments. Unless the Fort Frances Company resumes shipments immediately several daily newspapers in Manitoba and Saskatchewan will be compelled to suspend publication next week.

What other phonograph dares this test?

DID you ask some one about the Edison Tone-Test recital given last Tuesday in City Hall? The startled audience heard Claire Lillian Peteler's living voice flood the packed house. It then heard the New Edison* match that voice, even unto its finest variation of shading and feeling. It heard Sibyl Sanderson Fagan repeat the experiment with her whistling selections,—and again the New Edison matched every quality of those fluted tones. Any one who was present will tell you.

The art of the living artist and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison can not be told apart.

It is not idle phrase that you can enjoy Case, Middleton, Hempel, Matzenaur, Spalding—in your own home. The New Edison brings all that the great artist can bring, except his physical presence. It is the phonographic triumph of the age.

PART IV—CHAPTER II

"Taste a bit, Mr. Dewy," she said, holding up to him a small circular piece of honeycomb that had been the last in the row of lobes and remaining still on her knees and flinging back her head to look in his face, "and then I'll taste a bit, too."

"And I, if you please," said Mr. Shinar. Nevertheless the farmer looked superior, as if he could even now hardly join the trifling from very importance of station and after receiving the honeycomb from Fancy, he turned it over in his hand till the cells began to be crushed, and the liquid honey ran down his fingers in a thin string.

Suddenly a faint cry from Fancy caused them to gaze at her.

"What's the matter, dear?" said Dick.

"It is nothing, but oh! oh! a bee has stung the inside of my lip! He was in one of the cells I was eating!"

"We must keep down the swelling or it may be serious!" said Shinar, stepping up and kneeling beside her. "Let me see it."

"No, no!"

"Just let me see it," said Dick, kneeling on the other side; and, after some hesitation, she pressed down her lip with one finger to show the place. "I hope 'twill soon be better. I don't mind a sting in ordinary places, but it is so bad upon your lip," she added, with tears in her eyes, and writhing a little from the pain.

Shinar held the light above his head and pushed his face close to Fancy's as if the lip had been shown exclusively to himself, upon which Dick pushed closer, as if Shinar were not there at all.

"It is swelling," said Dick to her right aspect.

"It isn't swelling," said Shinar, simultaneously.

"It doesn't hurt me so much now," said Fancy turning again to the hives.

"Hartshorn and oil is a good thing to put to it, Miss Day," said Shinar with great concern.

"Sweet oil and hartshorn I've found to be a good thing to cure stings Miss Day," said Dick, with greater concern.

"We have some mixed in-doors: would you kindly run and get it for me?" she said.

Now, whether by inadvertance, or whether by mischievous intention, the lessly denoted that both Dick and Shinar sprung to their feet like twin acrobats, and marched abreast to the door: both seized the latch and lifted it, and continued marching on shoulder to shoulder in the same manner to the dwelling-house. Not only so, but entering the room, they marched as before straight up to Mrs. Day's chair letting the door in the old oak partition slam so forcibly that the rows of pewter on the dresser rang like a bell.

"Mrs. Day, Fancy has stung her lip and wants you to give me the hartshorn, please," said Mr. Shinar, very close to Mrs. Day's face.

"Oh, Mrs. Day, Fancy has asked me to bring out the hartshorn, please because she has stung her lip!" said Dick, a little closer to Mrs. Day's face.

"Well, men alive! that's no reason why you should eat me, I suppose?" said Mrs. Day, drawing back.

She searched in the corner-cupboard produced the bottle, and began to dust the cork, the rim and every other part very carefully, Dick's hand and Shinar's hand waiting side by side.

"Which is head man?" said Mrs. Day. "Now don't come mumbudgeting so close again. Which is head man?"

Neither spoke; and the bottle was inclined toward Shinar. Shinar, as a high-class man, would not look in the least triumphant, and turned to go off with it as Geoffrey came downstairs after the search in his linen for concealed bees.

"Oh—that you, Master Dewy?"

Dick assured the keeper that it was and the young man then determined upon a bold stroke for the attainment of his end, forgetting that the worst of bold strokes is the disastrous consequences they involve if they fail.

"I've come o' purpose to speak to you very particularly, Mr. Day," he said, with a crushing emphasis intended for the ears of Mr. Shinar, who was vanishing around the door-post at that moment.

"Well, I've been forced to go upstairs and unwind myself, and shake some bees out o' me," said Geoffrey, walking slowly toward the open door and standing on the threshold. "The young rascals got into my shirt, and wouldn't be quiet nohow."

Dick followed him to the door.

"I've come to speak a word to you" he repeated, looking out at the pale mist creeping up from the gloom of the valley. "You may perhaps guess what it is about."

The keeper lowered his hands into the extreme depths of his pockets, twirled his eyes, balanced himself on his toes, looked perpendicularly downward as if his glance were a plumb-line, then scrupulously horizontal, gradually collecting together the cracks that lay about his face till they were all in the neighborhood of his eyes.

"Maybe I don't know," he replied.

Dick said nothing; and the stillness was disturbed only by some small bird that was being killed by an owl in the adjoining copse, whose cry passed into the silence without mingling with it.

"I've left my hat in the chammer," said Geoffrey; "wait while I step up and get en."

"I'll be in the garden," said Dick.

He went round by a side wicket into the garden, and Geoffrey went upstairs. It was the custom in Mellstock and its vicinity to discuss matters of pleasure and ordinary business inside the house, and to reserve the garden for very important affairs—a custom which, as is supposed, originated in the desirability of getting away at such times from the other members of the family, when there was only one room for living in, though it was now quite as frequently practiced by those who suffered from no such limitation to the size of their domiciles.

The keeper's form appeared in the dusky garden, and Dick walked toward him. The keeper paused, turned, and leaned over the rail of a piggery that stood on the left of the path upon which Dick did the same, and they both contemplated a whitish, shadowy form that was moving about and grunting among the straw of the interior.

"I've come to ask for Fancy," said Dick.

"I'd as lief you hadn't."

"Why should that be, Mr. Day?"

"Because it makes me say that you have come to ask for what ye ben't likely to have. Have ye come for any thing else?"

"Nothing."

"Then I'll just tell ye you've come on a very foolish errand. D'ye know what her mother was?"

"No."

"A governess in a county family, who was foolish enough to marry the keeper of the same establishment. D'ye think Fancy picked up her good manners, the smooth turn of her tongue, her musical skill, and sher knowledge of books, in a homely hole like this?"

"No."

Regina, Sask., May 8—Miss Isabelle Cummings has been appointed secretary of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and has the distinction of being the first woman in Canada to be appointed to such a position.

Delicate Girls Made Strong

Rich, Red Blood Needed to Keep Up Their Vitality

If growing girls are to become well developed, healthy women their blood supply must be carefully watched. Mothers should not ignore their unsettled moods or the various troubles that tell of approaching womanhood. It should be constantly borne in mind that pale, bloodless girls need plenty of nourishment, plenty of sleep and regular open air exercise. But a lack of appetite, and tired, aching limbs tend to hinder progress. To save the weak, thin-blood sufferer she must have new, rich, red blood and nothing meets a case of this kind so well as Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These pills not only enrich and increase the blood supply, they help the appetite and aid digestion, relieve the weary back and limbs, thus promptly restoring health and strength and transforming anaemic girls and women into cheerful happy people. Among the thousands who have obtained new health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills is Miss Violet Booth, Glenarm, Ont., who says: "For a long time I was in a badly run down condition. I was pale, breathless at the least exertion, and could hardly do any housework without stopping to rest. I often had severe headaches, and my appetite was poor and fickle, and I would get up in the morning without feeling the least bit rested. I had tried several medicines, but did not get benefit from anything until I began the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. When I had taken two boxes I could see an improvement and after using six boxes I found my health fully restored. I feel altogether different since I used the pills that I strongly advise them for all weak, run down people."

If you are weak or ailing in any way, avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams Pink Pills so easily afford, and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville.

SUBMARINES LOSE THEIR EFFECTIVENESS

London, May 7.—Submarines have lost two-thirds of their efficiency since 1914, according to Lieutenant W. S. King-Hall, R.N., in a recent address at the Royal United Service Institute on "The Submarine and Future Naval Warfare."

The speaker maintained that the advantage previously possessed by the submarine was steadily on the wane. Whereas, at the beginning of the war in 1914, it was as 9 to 1 against the surface ship, it was only 7 to 3 in 1919 and was likely to be only 6 to 7 in 1930. He was of the opinion that within the next few years there would be a great development of submarine detecting apparatus which would give large and important ships a certain measure of protection against tactical attack by submarnes.

He regarded as impracticable the proposal that battleships should be made submersible. He ventured the opinion that the use of gas might eventually revolutionize naval warfare much as gunpowder did when first introduced. It might be discharged with deadly effect on an enemy coast line. It was actually suggested during the German occupancy that the Belgian coast should be "gassed" but the plan was abandoned "in deference to Belgium's susceptibilities."

We understand that some $200,000 is behind the production of a new serial picture and the films will be produced here. Mr. Brownridge gave our citizens to understand that a full staff of actors, actresses and play directors will be here in readiness to start operations in the course of the next couple of weeks. "The World Shadow," produced in Trenton last year, has been well received both on this and the European continent and the success of their first Canadian picture has resulted in the reopening of the Trenton studio.—Trenton Advocate.

NARROW ESCAPE

Yesterday afternoon a collision between two autos was narrowly averted at the junction of Bridge and Front street. A man named Jose, residing outside of the city, was driving a car down Front street at, it is alleged, too fast a speed when a car driven by a citizen was approaching that thoroughfare from west Bridge street and having the right of way. Only by the dexterity of the latter was a collison averted. Jose will in all probability be summoned up on a charge of immoderate driving.

HIGH PRICES ON MARKET

Owing to the farmers being exceptionally busy at present the attendance upon the market this morning was not large. Good prices were obtained for all products offered for sale and in some cases the prices were high. Fresh dairy butter sold readily at from 62c to 65c per pound, the former price being for basket lots. The retailing price for eggs was 50c per dozen. Dressed chickens are a luxury selling high as $2 and $2.50 each according to size and quality. Potatoes were very scarce and sold as high as $7.50 per bag. Some small ones for planting purposes were disposed of at $3.50 to $4 per bushel. Garden products were quite plentiful and were readily disposed of.

MOTHER RECEIVES CROSS

Mrs. A. E. Grier, of Tweed, has received from the Department of Militia, Ottawa, the cross awarded to the mothers of the boys who gave up their lives in the Great War. The Cross is of sterling silver, and is surmounted by a crown with the number and name on the back, and is enclosed in a neat morocco case. The card which accompanied the Cross is signed by the Minister of Militia, and is as follows:—"This cross is presented to you in memory of one who in the Great War died for King and Country." Pte. Grier served nearly three years overseas. He was reported wounded and missing, and last fall was officially reported dead.

SPOKE AT KINGSTON.

Kingston Standard: A most enjoyable time was spent last evening when the Masonic brethren of Ancient St. John Lodge, held their regular meeting, which was supplemented by a banquet. The special speaker of the evening was Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, of Belleville. A toast to the Grand Lodge was responded to by P. M. John Nicholls, while the toast to the visitors was responded to by Mr. Graham, and Rev. J. P. Wright. Both referred to Mr. O'Flynn, P.D.D.G.M., of Prince Edward district, and whose presence was a source of pleasure to all. Mr. O'Flynn in his address, outlined his trip through the middle states to California, and also to Mexico, which he has visited. In a forcible and interesting manner, he spoke of the beauty of the country, and the sterling worth of Canadians everywhere. His address proved most enjoyable throughout.

Popular Ex-M.P.P. Presented With Cane

Mr. Sandy Grant, ex-M.P.P., who is leaving Tweed to take up his residence in Belleville, was the guest of honor at a banquet in the Auditorium at Tweed on Tuesday evening, when he was presented by the local Conservative Association with a beautiful gold-headed cane, suitably engraved.

In making the presentation, Mr. Tom Johnston, president of the Association, who occupied the chair, referred to Mr. Grant's honorable record in the Ontario Legislature, where he represented East Hastings for nine years, his sterling worth as a citizen and a friend, and his willingness at all times to offer his advice and counsel to those, who sought it. During a residence of thirty-four years in Tweed nearly every man with whom he came in contact was still his friend and his removal was a distinct loss to the village.

Brief speeches followed by many in attendance and each and every one took advantage of the opportunity to express their high regard for the departing guest, and their wish that good luck would follow in his new home.

The majority of those who composed the gathering were residents of Hungerford and Huntingdon townships, old friends of Mr. Grant's who had stood by him in his political career and were there to bear testimony of his worth, and express their regrets at his decision to take up his residence elsewhere.

"Auld Lang Syne" followed and the refreshments, when the meeting broke up.

The business office of The Intelligencer will close at 5 o'clock on Saturdays during the months of May, June, July and August.

Booze in Church Was A Disturber

Crow Lake Man Was Fined $200—One-Seventh Drunk

The aftermath of the dedication of the Methodist Church at Crow Lake on February 14th was heard before Justices of the Peace Hunter and Ruttan at Kingston when the Crow Lake resident, who was charged with being drunk in a public place to wit a place of public worship, was dismissed on the first charge and fined $200 and costs on the second charge.

Rev. Mr. Brown, of Crow Lake, gave evidence and said that he was sure the accused had been drinking. He smelled liquor off the accused, and also said that he had seen him drunk before. In Rev. Mr. Brown's opinion the accused was undoubtedly drunk. Other witnesses were of the opinion that the accused had been drinking and while none of them were willing to swear that the man was heavily intoxicated, they nevertheless, did not use the fractional reference that the accused was "one seventh drunk."

The accused denied the charge and said that on the night in question he had not had a drink. He admitted having a bottle of liquor last November. The first charge was dismissed and on having liquor in a public place the fine of $200 and costs was assessed.

None Will Escape Their Income Tax Thinks Collector

Government Intends to See That Its System Shall Be Worked Thoroughly.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 7.—With a strenuous plea that the Dominion income tax system in Canada was as yet in its infancy and expressing the hope that within five years it would be second to none in the world, R. W. Breadner, Commissioner of Taxation, made a lengthy reply to many criticisms of the system before a meeting of members of the Commons and Senate today.

Million Make Returns.

There would be about one million persons in Canada make returns this year, he showed, as compared with half that number in 1917, when the Act was passed. Every class in the community was being reached and there were only two now outside the pale of taxation. These were "coupon clippers" and miners or fishermen, who had a dozen homes in various parts of the country within a year. He hoped to see legislation passed to get the former into line, and as to the latter they might adopt a system of compelling employers to take one per cent. from the man's monthly salary, provided it went to $100.

"We intend to see that this system shall be worked, and worked thoroughly. No one will get out of paying the tax when we get through," said the commissioner, after detailing the wide scope of the work of his staff. There was a file kept for every person and they had details of his responsibility since the Act was passed.

Dealing more particularly with farmers returns, the commissioner said the questions were simple and placed the ruralite on an equality with the city dweller.

All Prosecutions Succeed.

Mr. Breadner said the department had been successful in every prosecution it had undertaken. "And there are others who will be so prosecuted," he added.

Breadner said he told Sir Thomas White when the system was inaugurated, that they must expect criticism and difficulty for the first five years. His staff went through telephone lists, auto owners' lists, etc., and this was only the start of their work.

Within the last two weeks over 10,000 letters were sent to persons who had not filed a return in Toronto. Last year between ten and twenty thousand such letters had been sent out. As to being cumbersome, both British and United States officials had complimented his staff on the simplicity of the Canadian form.

"Despite what anyone says to the contrary, the people of Canada are certainly honest," added Mr. Breadner.

BIRD FAR AT SEA

Victoria, B. C., May 8—Almost exhausted from its long flight, a bird of the plover species picked out the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Tajima Maru as a haven of refuge as the big steamship was plowing her way across the Pacific for this port. The liner was about nine hundred miles out from Victoria when the feathered visitor settled helplessly on the boat deck. Flying aimlessly above the broad expanse of the ship the bird had sought invitation for something to settle upon in order to rest its weary wings and it eagerly accepted the accommodation of the vessel to save itself from destruction.

The bird was picked up and soon revived when ministered to by a member of the ship's crew. It proved very tame and displayed no inclination to resume its flight.

ON THE SASKATCHEWAN

The Pas, Man., May 8—Water traffic on the Saskatchewan River at The Pas during the coming season gives early promise of breaking all records. There are millions of board feet of logs to come down from the Carrot River for The Pas Lumber Company; thousands of ties and large shipments of ore. The Mandy ore haul requires the largest number of boats and four steam tugs and eight barges have been placed in commission for this work. There are 8,000 tons of copper ore lying on the jump at Sturgeon Landing and it is planned to transport every pound of this to The Pas for transhipment to the smelter at Trail, B. C., before the end of September.

The only passenger boat in the north is the steamer Nipawin, of the Ross Navigation company, plying from The Pas to the mine fields at Athapapuskow and Flin-Flon and all river points, carrying passengers, mail, express and freight. She is modern throughout with stateroom accommodation for 30 people, and deck space accommodation for as many more.

ROYALTY ON FURS

Winnipeg, May 8—Hon. Valentine Winkler, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, states that the collection of the royalty on furs, established by statute at the last session of the legislature, was being made principally at The Pas, where the department has a representative to do this work. In addition to this, he said, the department received a monthly return from all fur dealers in Winnipeg in which they declared the amount of furs that they handled during the month as well as the source they received them from. A dealer, he said, could not get a fur tanned in the Province without a permit from the department which stated that the tax had been paid. Neither will the railway companies handle furs for shipment unless a similar permit has been received. Mr. Winkler said that some thousands of dollars had been received from this source of revenue already.

POTATOES FOR U. S.

Edmonton, Alta., May 8—Twenty-eight thousand dollars seems a fabulous price to pay for ten car loads of potatoes, but such a sum changed hands when a dealer of Yakima, Washington, purchased approximately 7,000 bushels of Edmonton grown tubers at $3.90 per bushel, the highest on record for such a large shipment. The potatoes are to be shipped to various points in the state of Montana.

PIAPOT INDIANS ROLLING IN RICHES

Indians on the Piapot reserves about 20 miles northeast of Regina find themselves in the fortunate position of being possessors of $150,000 in cash as the result of the sale of 24 sections of the Federal Government for soldier settlement purposes. The Department of Indian Affairs secured their surrenders and transferred them to the Soldier Settlement Board. One-half of the fund created by the sale will be kept as a permanent account and only the interest can be used.

AIRMAN AND MOTORBOAT TO CHECK SMUGGLING

Bridgeburg, May 7—Now that the ice from Lake Erie is passing out of the Niagara River here to such an extent that most navigation is safe, United States authorities across the border are taking steps to prevent liquor from being smuggled by rowboat or motorboat into Buffalo and other western New York points. Recently the Department of Internal Revenue across the line put an airman on the job, who will be partly a Customs Inspector and partly an Inland Revenue man. Now, it is said, the authorities across the line will shortly put a motor boat also into service.

Leaves you Feeling Good.

The best you can get

IF YOUR EARS RING WITH HEAD NOISES

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing, and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parment (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils will open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs but little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrahal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Railway Rates Inadequate Says C.P.R. President

INCREASED COSTS OF OPERATION HAVE OUTDISTANCED INCREASED RATES PERMITTED—SMALL RETURN ON INVESTMENT—IRRIGATION IN ALBERTA DESCRIBED BY PRESIDENT BEATTY AT ANNUAL MEETING.

MONTREAL, May 7—At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company held at Montreal Mr. E. W. Beatty, president of the company, gave the following address:

The annual report of the Company and statements attached which have been in your possession for some time reflect very vividly the situation prevailing generally in respect of increased costs of operation Notwithstanding that the gross earnings of the company were the largest in its history, and exceeded the gross earnings of 1918 by $19,391,362 the net earnings were less by $1,569,351 The largest increase in working expenses of $20,950,713 following as it does an increase of $17,191,993 in the working expenses during the year 1918. Or a total increase in 1919 over 1917 of $38,152,706 is a striking example of the effect of the increased cost of wages and material in the operations of a company even one conservatively and economically administered as are the affairs of your company.

While it is a matter of great gratification that even with these exceptional costs your company has been able during the past two years to earn its fixed charges and usual dividends and very moderate surpluses, it is nevertheless important that the relation between earnings and expenses should now receive the most careful consideration. The results of the operations during the past two years show an upward trend in costs, which even extensive increases in gross earnings and effective operating economics due to heavier loading, larger power and consequently reduced train mileage have not equalized For the past sixteen years the freight and passenger rates of all Canadian railways have been subject to review or have been fixed by the Dominion Railway Commission. The rates have been readjusted from time to time, first being lowered and then increased, but the extent of the increase has not equally the increased costs which have recently been forced upon all companies and reductions which cannot with any confidence be predicted at this time.

During the fiscal year ending June 1914 the working expenses of your company with a mileage somewhat less than the operated mileage of last year were $87,388,000 while for the year 1919 they had climbed to practically $144,000,000 an increase of 64 per cent within that period increases of nominally 40 per cent in freight rates and 15 per cent in passenger rates have been authorized by the railway commission. The actual increases owing to the adjustment of rates made by direction of the board were in fact 30 per cent in freight rates and 10 per cent in passenger rates. The result therefore has been that during the past five years the percentage increase in operating expenses was double the percentage increase in totals accorded to the companies. Owing to the parity of conditions existing between the United States and Canada, the Canadian roads were forced during the war to put into effect the high wage scale made effective under Government Control of the American roads and they were also compelled to continue operating under tariff of tolls substantial to the same as these in force in the United States. These tariffs were entirely inadequate as results in the United States clearly demonstrated by legislation recently enacted. The American carriers are assured of rates which will return a fixed percentage on the value of the undertakings used in the public service, which will mean a reconsideration of an increase in the rates now current in that country. No doubt the necessity of rate adjustments in Canada will be given earnest consideration by the government and the Dominion Railway Board.

Re-adjustment Warranted

While it is not my purpose to anticipate any action which may be taken it is only proper, I think, to say that a re-adjustment is amply warranted both on the ground of the value of the service rendered by the carriers and the cost to them of performing such service. It is further to be remembered, and I do not anticipate that it will be forgotten, that the value of any enterprise to people, it service depends greatly upon its ability to progress and develop and on the maintenance of a high credit, without which such development cannot take place. Waste, extravagance and improvidence must not be encouraged, but I can imagine nothing more detrimental to Canada than that its railway system should be unable to keep pace in their own development with the progress of the country and that they should be unable to aid that progress by the expansion of facilities, construction of necessary new lines and by meeting the increasing demands of the public in the way of efficiency and comfort in service based upon accepted principles in other countries governing compensation due to transportation and other public service corporations. The net earnings of your company have always yielded moderate returns upon the capital actually invested in the enterprise

4 Per Cent Return

The railway net earnings of the company for 1919 represent only a return of 4 per cent on the actual cash invested on the railway itself. The operations for the year 1919 after the payment of fixed charges and the usual cash invested on the railway itself. The operations for the year 1919 after the payment of fixed charges and the usual performance and common stock dividends showed a nominal surplus of $844, 249 which has been placed in reserve to meet the special taxation imposed by the Dominion Government, which special taxation ended in 1919. The fixed charges of the company are low, the interest on the preference stock is equally low and the dividend of seven per cent. payable on common stock from railway earnings is moderate. A factor which seems to be lost sight of in these discussions of the returns between expenses and revenue and the absolute necessity of reasonable surplus and in the case of any corporation conducting an enterprise as extensive as that of your company. The gross earnings of the company for the year exceeded $176,000,000 and the surplus, after deduction of the moderate fixed charges and dividends only amounted to less than half of one per cent of these earnings.

Considering the importance of reasonable provision for working capital annually from the operations of the company if its high credit and ability to progress is to be maintained, it will readily be appreciated that the revenues during the past two years have been, to say the least, inadequate. In the discussion which has taken place as to the desirability or otherwise of increased rates, and therefore increased revenues to the Canadian railways, two theories are publicly mentioned—the first that rates should be increased, but that any surplus earnings thereby accruing to your company should be taken back through the medium of a special tax, and the second that rates should not be increased, but that the government railways' deficits, if such occur, should be met out of the general revenues of the country. Both the cries, in my opinion are unsound. Rates should be established which represent a fair return for the service rendered, and if by efficiency and economy the character and extnt of its equipment and facilities a company can render its operations under such rates profitable, there is no warrant for the confiscation of those profits, nor can there be anything but doubtful honesty in the proposal that one company's revenues accruing to it from service actually rendered by it and well performed should be taken from it to supplement the revenues of a competitor whose operations do not show favorable results. It is scarcely necessary for me to say that the fairness or otherwise of any rate bias is not necessarily measured by the strength or resources of a company or by the lack of them. The second theory that rates should not be increased, but that any deficit should be met from the general revenues of the country is unsound economically and unfair alike to the government-owned and other railways. It is obvious that any system which permits services to shippers and others to be performed at unreasonable low rates, is discriminatory in their favor and discriminatory against the public whose taxes are increased as a contribution to those who use railway facilities.

Revision of Rates

In my opinion the rates of this country should be determined, having either to the cost and value of the service rendered by the company and to the legitimate needs of the companies if they are to meet the transportation requirements of the country. No doubt a question so important and so far-reaching in effect will be given the careful consideration to which it is entitled by those in authority and who are empowered to deal with it. I may say, however, that the properties of this company are in excellent condition and no time in its history has it been better equipped to perform its important public service or to place its full part in the advancement of the transportation future of this country.

Alberta Irrigation

In the annual report reference has been made to the company's irrigation project in Alberta, the construction of which was undertaken some years ago and in the earlier progress of which some difficulties were met—the project has now become fairly established and the success has been so pronounced during the past few years that future reference to this important undertaking is, I think, unwarranted.

An area of 643,526 acres has been brought under irrigation through the medium of 2,964 miles of irrigation ughtbroyeso f cl6.)be vx-r4b n-..r canals and distributing ditches of this area. 301,302 acres of this land has been sold. There is still for sale within the block 340,144 acres of irrigatable land for which there is at present a very active demand. During the period from the commencement of conservation to December 31st, 1919 the company has expended in connection with the construction and maintenance of these irrigation works the sum of $15,186,348 and in their operation, the sum of $1,761,268 The introduction of irrigation in Southern Alberta has made it possible to successfully produce on irrigated lands splendid crops of alfalfa, corn, small fruits and vegetables, which are not produced with equal success under dry farming connections. Careful statistics covering eleven years, indicate remarkable increases in ordinary crops grown on irrigated land over those produced on dry land and the wisdom of the decision to undertake this extensive project has been more than justified. We are amply warranted in the belief that the irrigation block will ultimately be a closely settled, extensively cultivated and considerably traffic producing area, tributary to the company's lines in South Alberta. The success of the company's undertaking in this respect, combined with the obvious necessities of that portion of the country, will, I hope, lead to the extension of irrigation projects under the auspices of the Federal and Provincial governments, which will, in the end, render the danger of crop failures in these districts practically negligible.

New Rolling Stock

As indicated in the annual report, your directors thought it necessary to make provision for the construction of necessary additions to your company's rolling stock. Since the report has been issued arrangements have been completed for an equipment trust agreement under which the payments of such equipment are spread over a period of twelve years The actual amount of the equipment trust issue is $12,000,000. By reason of the condition existing at the time the transaction was conceded highly favorable and interests were secured.

You will have observed since the issuance of the annual report for the year 1919 your board have considered it desirable to apply for amendments to the company's charter which will permit the increase of the number of directors from fifteen to eighteen should that at any time appear necessary. The statute is purely empowering and the amending bylaw will be submitted for your approval in the event of it being considered advisable to increase the directorate. The purpose of any increase will, of course, be to secure a larger representation of the board from those portions of Canada in which the company's interests are specially important.

I look forward to immigration to Canada on a large scale and while a period of retrenchment and financial conservation may conceivable be the part of wisdom, your directors have the same implicit faith in the future growth and prosperity for the country that they have always had and also the same confidence in the ability of your company to play an important part in its development and prosperity.

Whole World Is To Receive Time Signals From Belgium

BOON TO RAILROADS AND STEAMSHIPS IS EXPECTED FROM BRUSSELS RADIO—ALLIED COUNTRIES ENDORSE PLAN, EXPENSES OF WHICH MAY BE DISTRIBUTED.

Wireless telegraphy may yet prove to be the means of preventing many railway and sea catastrophes. To this end, in fact an International Time Bureau is being formed in Brussels, which intends to develop methods of transmitting throughout the world time signals of the greatest precision.

The bureau is in charge of M. Bigourdin, member of the French Academy of Sciences, who for many years has been attached to the Paris Observatory. Discussing the aims of this new organization, M. Bigourdin has called attention to the fact that all through the war the Eiffel Tower sent daily signals that were picked up in the most remote quarters of the globe.

"It is most essential that navigators know at every instant the precise time," says M. Bigourdin. "Extensive experiments have been carried out in the last year and we have reason to believe that the efforts will lead to unexpected discoveries concerning the variations in actual longitude similar to those known to exist with respect to latitude. With precise knowledge of the time, the sun's location and the consequent geographical position ships will more easily avoid dangerous areas."

M. Birgourdin is confident that many sea accidents have been due to the impossibility of ships picking up accurate time signals. He points out also the necessity for the most reliable records for despatching trains in all countries. Further experiments will be conducted with intermittent Hertian waves, approximately 2,600 metres long to replace those of shorter length now used.

M. Bigourdin, whose investigations are receiving support in all Allied countries, hopes to create a system whereby the expenses will be distributed among all nations for it is obvious that once the signals begin to work there is nothing to prevent any mariner from taking advantage of an organization in which French scientists are taking an important part in putting into operation.

Changes Announced In Succession Duties

The Provincial Treasurer Issues Statement in Queen's Park—How Fees Are Regulated.

Changes in the succession duties fees—reducing the rates suggested by the Provincial Treasurer in his budget speech—were announced at the Parliament Buildings. Where the amount exceeds $50,000, and not $100,000, in estates going to one person, the first rate suggested was 2½ per cent. It will now be 1½ per cent. for amounts exceeding $50,000, and up to $75,000. From $75,000 up to $100,000 it will be 2 per cent.

The rate advances every fifty thousand dollars, instead of every $100,000, until the sum of $300,000 is reached. After that the percentage is decreased on the large amounts, till when the large sums is reached the percentage is cut in half.

Where the estate does not pass to a member of the family, but goes to relatives, the fees have been changed. In this, there is no change until the estate exceeds $50,000, and then it is increased on amounts between $50,000 and $75,000, but between $75,000 and $100,000 there is a slight reduction. The reduction is then gradually increased until, where the estate exceeds $1,000,000, the tax is only 17 per cent., instead of 23 per cent.

Where the estate goes to one person who is not a direct member of the family, the surtax starts on amounts exceeding $10,000, instead of as before, amounts exceeding $25,000. After that the tax is about cut in half, so that in the case of a person getting an income exceeding $150,000, and not $250,000, the tax will be 3½ per cent., instead of 10 per cent.

Where the estate is left to a stranger in blood to the deceased, a few samples of the changes are:

Exceeding $5,000 and not $10,000, 1st tax, 10 per cent., new tax 12.

Exceeding $10,000 and not $50,000, 1st tax 15 per cent., new tax, 12.

Exceeding $50,000 and not $100,000, 1st tax 20 per cent., new tax 15.

Exceeding $100,000 and not $200,000, 1st tax 25 per cent., new tax 17½.

Exceeding $200,000 and not $300,000, 1st tax 30 per cent., new tax 20.

Exceeding $400,000 and not $500,000, 1st tax 40 per cent., new tax, 25.

Exceeding $800,000, 1st tax 60 per cent., new tax 35.

NO BIG UNION FOR BIG ANGUS MAC

"I think many of the members expected me to have horns under my hat," commented Mr. Angus McDonald, member for Timiskaming, in referring to his recent introduction in the House of Commons. Mr. McDonald takes a very philosophical view of the various ideas that have become current as to his opinions and his temperament.

There was one thing he did not want any misconception about, and that was as to his relation to organized Labor.

"One thing you can say, however," he said, "and that is that Angus McDonald does not belong to the One Big Union, and knows about the O.B.U. and its objects only what other citizens know, and that is through reading the newspapers. I have been with the international movement from the start, first with the United Mine Workers, and latterly with the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners."

"Where did you get your campaign fund?" he was asked.

"From the people themselves, and I can tell you there were very few dollars in it. It was mostly subscribed to in quarters and dimes.

Expert Advice On Potato Planting

Experimental Farm Notes by W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist.

The potato is one of our most important food crops, and yet it is one that very often does not receive the attention it should. It is the practice of many farmers to leave the planting of potatoes until practically all other crops are in. With the exception of, perhaps some parts of the Maritime Provinces this late planting means a much smaller yield than there would be if the planting were done before the middle or by the middle of May. By the end of May or beginning of June the seed potatoes have sprouted so much that when these are broken off at planting time the new shoots will not come with the same vigor as they did early in the season. Furthermore, it is important for the potato to get a good root system before the hot weather sets in.

Good Seed Necessary.

It is of the greatest importance to use good seed. Two lots of seed of the same variety which look very much alike may give a difference of three hundred or more bushels per acre in the crop, as has been shown in experiments at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa. In 1919, for instance, one lot of Irish Cobbler yielded at the rate of 378 bushels per acre and another 37 bushels per acre. The best Green Mountain stock yielded 330 bushels per acre and one of the poorest 46 bushels per acre.

If possible, one should know where the seed was grown the previous year that he is about to use. If it came from a crop, the plants of which grew vigorously until cut down by frost, then, if free from disease, it will, as a rule, yield a much better crop than if it is from a crop the plants of which withered in the middle of summer and the tubers lay in hot soil the rest of the season. This year when the price of potatoes is so high there will be a temptation to use small potatoes for seed. If these small potatoes come from a good crop the previous year the results are likely to be satisfactory if the season is favorable, but if they are from a small crop the previous year when the plants dried up early the plants this year are likely to be weak and the yield not very good. Good sized sets of from one and a half to two ounces have been found the most satisfactory taking one year with another, although if the season is particularly favorable, smaller sets will produce a good crop, but one cannot tell what the season will be, hence it is better to be on the safe side.

Planting Distance.

The distance of planting which has been found most economical in most places in Canada is, rows two and a half to three feet apart and sets twelve to fourteen inches apart in the rows. While quite shallow planting has given the highest average yields at Ottawa, it is necessary to plant about four inches deep for field culture to enable one to harrow before the potatoes are up without pulling up the sets.

The varieties which have been most generally satisfactory in Canada are Irish Cobbler as an early potato and Green Mountain as a main crop or later variety. Other varieties which cannot be distinguished from Green Mountain and are included in the Green Mountain group are Gold Coin, Uncle Sam, Wee MacGregor and Delaware. The Dooley of the Rural group has done well in the warmer parts of Ontario, and in coast climate Burbank is also popular.

$1465 F.O.B. CHATHAM WAR TAX EXTRA
GRAY-DORT

When the Gray-Dort was designed, our engineers had two definite orders.

"Build an economical, simple, low-priced car."

"Build a light car at least 50% stronger and finer and greater value than light-car purchasers have been getting."

The original Gray-Dort was built to these orders. Every improvement and refinement since that time has been in line with this policy.

And yet the price is only $1465. Note what you get in to-day's Gray-Dort for $1465.

A big motor—3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke—finely finished and smooth running. A forty-pound crankshaft, against the usual twenty-five pounds or so. Three-ringed pistons, instead of two-ringed. Cellular radiator, instead of tube and finn. Newly improved Carter carburetor. Improved Connecticut ignition. The starting and lighting system is Westinghouse, a big-car feature.

We designed a bigger and better rear axle for light cars—and we are having it built exclusively for the Gray-Dort here in Chatham. We solved the spring problem in the same way—and you'll realize what we've done when you see the long, cantilever rear springs of the Gray-Dort. We've set a new standard of safety by using Thermoid brake-lining. We've increased safety by building a steering gear 50% bigger and stronger. We've put in a bigger gas tank—and put it in the rear, with a vacuum feed system.

Your comfort in driving or riding has been attended to. With a shorter cowl, there is more room in the driving department. There are several inches more leg-room in the tonneau. The side-curtains open with the doors. You sink into the seats at the most comfortable angle. The top is really a one-man top. The gears can be shifted with two fingers' pressure. The emergency brake is now on a lever. The instruments are handy.

The Gray-Dort is just as outstanding in appearance. Its lines are the lines of the really fine big cars—reduced in proportion. It has big car style. There is not a line nor an angle which is extreme. And it has what no other car ever can have—the wonderful Gray-Dort finish which had its beginning 60 years ago in our body plant.

There are other style touches—many of them new this year. French-pleated upholstery. A hood with many long, narrow louvres. A particularly smart top, hand-tailored in our own shops. Lamps raised to a new location. Short, smart cowl. Straight top-edge to the body.

So much does the Gray-Dort dominate the field, that our production, doubled this year, will probably not meet the demand. We would advise you to see the Gray-Dort dealer now.

PRICES

The Gray-Dort 5-passenger car, finished in Gray-Dort green and black, and with standard equipment, is $1465 f.o.b. Chatham. War tax extra.

The roomy 2-passenger roadster is the same price.

The Gray-Dort Special

For the man who wishes something a little extra in his car, we have built the Gray-Dort Special. Maroon body, with brown rayntite top. Plate-glass rear window. Gipsy curtains. Rookie tan wheels. Motometer. Tilting steering wheel. Real leather upholstery. Mahogany instrument board. Just the touches which lift this car above the ordinary. $150 extra on the standard.

And the Ace!

The Gray-Dort Ace—the most beautiful light car of to-day. Sapper green body with handsome California top to match.

Trouble lamp and bull's-eye flashlight. Electric cigar lighter. Rear-vision mirror. Plate-glass windows. Over-size grooved-tread tires. This is the de luxe car for the man who does not wish to pile up a tremendous operating cost. $255 extra on the standard.

Home in Halifax roofed with Brantford Asphalt Slates

A handsome roof that defies the weather

An added touch of beauty to any house is a roof of Brantford Asphalt Slates, which are in soft, harmonious shades of reddish brown and dark green. The colors are permanent and unfadeable, being the natural shades of the slate just as it is taken out of the quarries.

It will also prove a very economical roof, because Brantford Asphalt Slates do not split, get loose, absorb water or rot. They are strongly fire-resistant and are classified as non-combustible by the fire insurance companies, and allowed to be used in cities where the most rigid fire-prevention By-laws are in force.

Brantford Asphalt Slates are very moderate in cost. The regular size of the slates and their pliability make them easily and quickly laid, thus saving time and cost of labor. Being made of high grade felt saturated and coated with asphalt, and with a surface of crushed slate, they make a roof that defies the elements and is a permanent part of the building, just like the walls and the foundation.

Brantford Asphalt Slates

are being used more extensively every year for city, country and summer homes, churches, golf clubs, stores, garages, and wherever an artistic effect is desired on a pitch roof.

If you are going to do any building this year or have an old roof that needs replacing, it will be to your advantage to investigate Brantford Asphalt Slates.

MOTOR CAR NEWS

About half-a-dozen Toronto motorists have made arrangements for shipping their cars to the Old Country shortly, for touring purposes. The cost of crating and shipping both ways is in the neighbourhood of $1,000 so that unless one is going to make a long stay in Great Britain it works out much more cheaply to hire a motor and a driver there at a cost of $25 or $30 a day and in addition for paying for one's own gas.

This will probably be the heaviest season of motor tourists Ontario has seen since automobiles first came into use. Now that all the war time restrictions are off and that the quarantine has been lifted, requests from automobile clubs in the United States are beginning to pour into the offices of the Ontario Motor League for touring information and copies of the League's new road map. Complete automobile license exchange is another factor which is giving a great impetus to touring, making the border as if it did not exist.

It is hard to make an estimate of the number of tourists who will cross into Ontario during the coming season, but it is thought possibly 100,000 counting four persons to a car, will come. Their outlay of money will mean much to hotels and dealers of all kinds.

So great is the rush anticipated that the Ontario Motor League are extending their offices in the Lumsden building in order to expand their touring department, and are putting in a switchboard with several trunk lines.

Many Ontario people intend making motor trips across the line. A good tip to them is not to concentrate on the study of United States regulations while forgetting to get a certificate from the Canadian customs before leaving, in order to bring their car back without having to pay duty. They should also carry their license card and their automobile card for purposes of identification.

Before starting out on the trip it would be well for them to note the numbers on their tires. Otherwise at the border they may have to crawl out and get under in the mud and darkness perhaps, to find out. The numbers are filed by the customs officials and checked upon return to prevent the substitution of new tires for old ones.

If a tourist expects to stay longer than thirty days in the United States he should make arrangements for bonding his car before leaving Toronto.

Later in the season the Ontario Motor League intend to send out circulars to the hotels in the United States to ascertain which of them are willing to take Canadian money at par.

Sordid Story Of Crime
Theft Followed By Murder

BANK MESSENGER IMPLICATED IN THEFT OF $178,000 WORTH OF SECURITIES, STABBED TO DEATH BY ASSOCIATES—BODY THROWN OUT OF AUTOMOBILE.

Evidence that Benjamin Binkowitz, the New York bank messenger, who was stabbed to death at Milford Conn. last August, after he had disappeared with $178,000 worth of stolen securities, was killed by a hired assassin because he refused to turn over the securities for $3,000 was developed, through information obtained at secret hearings held before U. S. Commissioner Alexander Gilchrist at New York in connection with the bankruptcy case agaist Nicholas Arnstein, a fugitive from justice.

LURED FROM HIDING PLACE

The plot was hatched, according to information received by the police in the apartment of a Cleveland gambler in the theatrical district, two days after the messenger disappeared Binkowitz was in hiding with his friends in an East Side tenement house. He is alleged to have been lured from his hiding place by the murderers, who induced him to accompany them in a limousine to Milford, where they claimed to have a purchaser for the stolen bonds.

LIVED WITH ASSASSINS

Binkowitz, according to the report, went to a hotel in Milford, where he remained with the men who were with him, several days. During his stay in the Connecticut town, the messenger is reported to have been taken on frequent joy rides, in which two or four women sometimes participated. On the night before the murder, Binkowitz, the evidence as made public says, was aroused about dawn and with the assassins got into an automobile, ostensibly to meet the man who was to purchase the securities from him. He is alleged to have boasted about having the securities hidden in the lining of his coat.

The automobile containing Binkowitz and the assassins started through the Milford turnpike. When about two miles from the town, one of the assassins is alleged to have pulled young Binkowitz from his seat while the other plunged a knife into his back. He was then thrown out of the car into a clump of bushes, where his body was found three days later.

PUT UP HARD STRUGGLE

The murderers then are reported to have stopped the car about a half a mile from the scene and to have walked back to the body. Binkowitz was still alive, the report says, and put up a hard struggle with the assassins who stabbed him upward of two dozen times before death blow was administered. The police are said to be in possession of four stilettos with which he met his death, as well as a number of pistols found in one of the hotel rooms occupied by the murderers.

EVIDENCE OF CRIME

The evidence of the crime is reported to be in possession of District Attorney Swann and Attorney Saulsmeyer, counsel in the bankruptcy proceedings.

Arnstein, who is wanted by the police as the "master mind" in security thefts exceeding $1,000,000 is still in hiding. Police detectives are alleged to have evidence that he is secreted on some large estate not far from the metropolitan district, but they have not been able to locate the exact hiding place. Advertisements were printed offering a reward of $2,500 for Arnstein's arrest.

Solve this Puzzle!

FOR Johnny's birthday his mother presented him with a dandy rifle, and Johnny took the four targets that came with the rifle and went out to the back yard to try his skill. Shortly after, his mother came out too to satisfy herself that Johnny knew how to use his gun. Upon examining the targets showing all the holes made by the bullets, and being a quick-thinking woman, she exclaimed: "Why, Johnny, what a good shot you are—and do you know that you have made every target spell a word? Can you tell me what each target spells?"

Can YOU Puzzle It Out?

Johnny couldn't, so his mother told him HOW TO DO IT. Each target spells a word. Each circle of each target shows a number of bullet holes, as you can see by the targets, and each circle represents a letter. The number of holes indicates the position of that letter in the alphabet. For instance "A" would be represented by one hole, "B" by two holes, "C" by three holes, and so on.

After you have worked out all the letters that are represented in each word, you will find that they are not in their proper order. Put them into their proper order to spell out correctly the names of the four things wanted.

In order to help you, we will tell you that the letter represented by the middle circle of first target is "A," because "A" is the first letter of the alphabet. This is not an easy puzzle, but with perseverance you can work it out—and the prizes are worth trying for.

Copy your answer upon a plain white sheet of paper as neatly as you can, because neatness, spelling, handwriting and punctuation count if more than one answer is correct. Put your name and address in the top right-hand corner of the paper. If you have to write a letter, or show anything else, put it upon a separate sheet of paper. We will write as soon as your answer is received and tell you if your solution is correct, and also send you a complete illustrated list of the grand prizes that you can win.

THE PRIZES:

First Prize - Genuine Culver Chummy Racer, value	$250.00
Second Prize - Magnificent Gold Watch and Chain, or Girl's Wrist Watch, value	25.00
Third Prize - Genuine Autographic Kodak Folding Camera, value	20.00
Fourth Prize - Solid Gold Ring for Boy or Girl, value	15.00
Fifth Prize - - Moving Picture Machine, with Film, value	10.00
Sixth to Tenth Prize - Self-Filler Fountain Pens, value, each	2.50

And 2,000 Extra Special Prizes Valued at $3,000.00.

Trial Marriage Successful Author Weds Pianist

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CEREMONY IN 1915 JUST MADE PUBLIC—PECULIAR MARRIED LIFE—COUPLE LIVE APART—HAVE OWN FRIENDS AND OWN AMUSEMENTS.

Miss Fannie Hurst, the New York authoress, has taken the occasion of her fifth wedding anniversary to announce her marriage on May 5, 1915, to Jacques S. Danielson, pianist and collaborator with the late Rafael Joseffy. With definite theories concerning marriage, they decided to sail into the sea of matrimony on a barque of their own designing.

"And it has not sprung a leak, during five years of high seas," said Miss Hurst. "Five years ago, when I met Jacques Danielson, I found my youthful determination that marriage was not for me, suddenly undermined. But my determination that marriage should never lessen my capacity for creative work or pull me down into a sedenatry state of fatmindedness, was not undurmined.

"Being firmly of the opinion that nine out of ten of the alliances, I saw about me were merely sordid endurance tests, overgrown with the fungi of familiarity and contempt; convinced that too often the most sacred human relationship wears off like a piece of high sheen damask, and in a few months becomes as a breakfast cloth, stale with soft boiled egg stains, I made certain resolutions concerning what my marriage should not be.

"First of all, I am anxious to emphasize that our marriage was neither the result of a fad or an 'ism' but simply the working out of a problem according to the highly specialized needs of two professional people.

DANIELSON IN ACCORD

"Fortunately, by grace, doubtless, of the very forces that drew us together, Mr. Danielson felt strongly in accord with me. We decided that our marriage should in no wise interfere with my work or my studies. My writing output has doubled since May 1915. We decided to live separately, maintaining our individual studio apartments and meeting as per inclination, not duty.

"We decided that seven breakfasts a week opposite to one another might prove irksome. Our average is two.

"We decided that invariably being invited to the same social functions might eventually resolve itself into the usual married wrangle of dragging one another to places we did not want to go. We have maintained our separate groups of friends.

"We decided that the antediluvian customs of a woman casting aside the name that had become as much a part of her personality as the color of her eyes, had neither rhyme or reason. I was born Fannie Hurst and I expect to die Fannie Hurst.

"We decided that in the event of offspring, the child should take the paternal name, until reaching the age of discretion, when the decision would lie with him.

"We decided that accounting for our time to one another would prove irksome and for five years have enjoyed our personal liberty precisely as we did before marriage using rather than abusing, the unusual privileges we grant one another. My husband telephones me for dinner engagements exactly the same as scores of my other friends. I have the same regard for his plans.

"We decided that since nature so often merely springs a trap as her means of inveigling two people into matrimony that we would try out marriage for a year and at the end of that period go quietly apart, should the venture prove itself a liability instead of an asset. But of course the proof of the pudding lies in the eating. The one year has stretched into five and—we are announcing, instead of annulling.

"For five years, in absolute secrecy we tried out our theories. And certainly it is more convincing to discuss theories from the vantage of experience than from the disadvantage of hypothesis. We have lived separately and shall continue to do so. We have our separate circles of friends, as well as a common group, and, at our pleasure, have enjoyed during these happy years (and I hope shall continue to enjoy) a fine and full companionship together.

INDIVIDUAL A UNIT

"I do not think our experiment could have been attempted outside of New York city, where the individual becomes a unit and not a person. One evening last week, for instance, I attended a theatre with a friend and quite by chance sat next to my husband and a party of his friends. And we were introduced to one another.

"With the exception of my parents, who have shared our secret from the very beginning, there are exactly six other persons who have known of our marriage during the period of these five years. And now with our experiment a proved success, we purpose to continue along precisely the same lines except, with our theories justified by practice, the need for secrecy vanishes.

"I consider 'two souls with but a single thought so often is vanished mean state of freak mentality; 'two hearts that beat as one' an anamolous condition particularly when that single thoughtt so often is vanished freedom—the heartbeat, a heartache.

"And, again, I want to emphasize our freedom from faddism. Neither my husband nor I live in Greenwich village or wear horn-rimmed spectacles. My hair reaches to my waist. His is clipped. We believe in love, but not free love. Rather, we are willing to pay the price in mutual sacrifices toward the perservation of one another's individuality.

"On these premises, in our case at least, after a five-year acid test, the dust is still on the butterfly wings of our adventure. The dew is on the rose."

The authoress was married, she said at Lakewood, N.J., by a justice of the peace, whose name she did not recall.

Fannie Hurst was born in St. Louis on October 19, 1889 and was graduated from Washington University in 1909. She took post-graduate work at Columbia University in 1910 and 1911. Some of her works are "Just Around the Corner," "Every Soul Hath Its Song," and "Gas Light Sonatas." She wrote the plays "Lands of the Free," and "The Good Provider." She has written many stories about marriage.

DAYLIGHT SAVING AFFECTS ELECTRIC LIGHT PROFITS

Rejection of the daylight saving measure will mean a difference in revenue for the season of approximately $15,000 to the Saskatoon power house, stated Saskatoon city officials, basing their calculations on the result last year, when its adoption caused a drop in revenue of nearly $11,000.

THE AWFUL REACTION OF INFLUENZA

May be Overcome by Vinol Because it Enriches the Blood and Creates Strength

Sickness always leaves the blood poor, thin and devitalized and the system weak, run-down and in a nervous condition. The one great remedy to create strength after sickness is VINOL, because it contains the tissue building elements of fresh cods' livers, aided by the blood, strength and vitality making elements of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites. It creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, quickens the circulation, and every nerve organ and muscle of the body is soon filled with new strength, energy and vitality.

If you are just recovering from influenza, the grippe, or any severe sickness, VINOL is what you need to build you up.

Your druggist will return your money if it fails to benefit you.

BENSON CONFESSES TO SIMS CHARGES

Washington, May 6—Admiral Wm. S. Benson, War-time Chief of Naval Operations, told the Senate Naval Investigating Committee today that both before and during the war he had warned Rear-Admiral Sims not to let his friendship for the British unduly influence his official acts.

Admiral Benson said he could not deny that he had told Admiral Sims in March, 1917 'not to let the British pull the wool over your eyes; we would as soon fight them as the Germans" as he could not recall all the details of the interview.

The witness did say, however, that a wrong interpretation had been placed on the statement attributed to him by Admiral Sims, and he added that as a result he had been done a grave injustice. He denied that he was in any way unfriendly to the British.

FARMERS COMPLAIN

A complaint is being voiced by western farmers that the implement companies have recently 'boosted' the price of farm implements another 10 per cent. without visible reason. The farmers point out that since the spring price list was made up and filed with the government under the act, a supplementary list has been put into force, which increases the price on an average of 10 per cent, and that the new prices will be felt seriously by those farmers who were not fortunate enough to contract for their implements last season.

$7.00 A BAG FOR SPUDS AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, May 7.—The farmers who came to market with potatoes asked the highest price ever demanded here, $7 per bag. None were offered at less than $6.50, and the farmers stated that the price would go higher, as potatoes are very scarce. They laughed at the women's potato boycott.

This city will make an effort to buy potatoes at Northbrook, Ont., where, it is said, they are being sold at $4.25 per bag. If it secures any, they will be sold at cost.

Deportation Not Asked.

Ottawa, May 7.—No application for the deportation of Werner Horne has reached the Department of Justice here, but after the war the German Government through diplomatic channels requested that Horne be released, on the grounds that he was a German officer and a prisoner of war. The Canadian Government replied that they had no German officer of that name in prison; there was, however, a criminal named Horne in custody, whose release would not be granted.

Farmer Govt. Tackling Job Of Keeping Farmers On Land

HON. MANNING DOHERTY, MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE, HAS SOME IDEAS THAT SHOULD HELP TO MAKE COUNTRY LIFE MORE ATTRACTIVE—BETTER CONDITIONS FOR THE HIRED MAN ESSENTIAL.

It is a paradoxical thing that at the time when the farmers of Ontario are threatened with near-extinction by rural depopulation, the Farmers' party should assume the government of the the Province.

According to U.F.O. statistics, 30 per cent. of the populatiin of Ontario is on the farms producing food for the 70 per cent. in towns and cities. And that 30 per cent. has gained control of the Legislature.

Apparently dire necessity has given power to the minority. And one of the greatest items of that necessity which has driven the farmers to seek political power is rural depopulation.

The facts and figures on this alarming decrease in our farming strength have been thoroughly aired since the Farmers'-Government was formed.

What does the new Government propose to do to meet the emergency.

Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture says that nothing drastic will be done.

It has taken forty or fifty years for the conditions causing rural depopulation to evolve. These conditions cannot be set right by an Act of Parliament.

To begin with, no effort will be made to induce city and town men to "go back to the land." Rather, the first care must be to try and induce those still on the farms to remain there. To check the exodus from farm to city by equalizing in some degree the advantages of farm and city; and to increase the attractions economical and human, of farm life, will be the immediate aim of the Farmers' Government.

As several of the Ministers pointed out, many of the more cloudy-minded of city dwellers seem to fear that the Farmers' Government is going to devote all its attention to farming affairs, and to ignore the industry and commerce of the cities and towns. So far is this from the truth that even in the pressing problem of rural depopulation no direct legislation of any kind is likely to be made. But each department of the Government, instead of, as in the past, practically ignoring it, will bear it continually in mind; and all will pull together to bring about conditions which will make farming appear worth while to those who now flock annually to the cities to seek a cheaper, easier and brighter life.

THE INITIAL REQUIREMENTS

The first requirements to offset rural depopulation as suggested by Hon. Manning Doherty are:

a. Better schools in the farm districts.

b. Training schools for teachers located in the farm districts.

c. Certain changes in the Ontario Agricultural College to make the training there point back to the farm and not so much theoretical work.

d. The creation of community spirit among farmers, either by means of a greatly enlarged co-operative system of marketing, or by some other practical means.

e. The increase of community interest and social life in farming districts to equal in some degree the tremendous development of social life and recreation and amusement in towns and cities.

These are some of the leading features of the needs of farm life, popularly stated, not academically as Mr. Doherty would present them for argument.

Forty Thousand Americans Take Peep At Canada

And 90 Per Cent. of Them Remain in The Western Provinces

WINNIPEG, May 10.—Forty thousand prospectors, out of which number 35,000 will become settlers will pass through Winnipeg in the next three months from the United States to examine land in Western Canada, according to reports to Rev. J. A. Bowman, local colonization agent from Canadian agents in the U. S.

Beginning next week the rush of land seekers from the United States will continue all through the summer with the majority coming in May.

"Judging from actual experience I would put the figure of prospects who decide to buy in Canada at 90 per cent," he declared.

American settlers drawn from Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Illinois and other northern and central States are flowing into Canada because of high rents asked for land, said Mr. Bowman. With the total rental at $20 an acre a farmer could pay the first installment on land in Canada and in three or four years, paying sums not greater than his year's rent, he would be the owner of a farm in a choice locality.

"It's a proposition that cannot help but come home to renters in the United States," he declared. "They have realized this for some years but the war has naturally discouraged migration. This year there is nothing to stop them and they are going to come at the rate of 30 and 50 per cent. more than other years."

The invasion of prospectors has been held back by Canadian land agents until spring had fairly set in. The roads are expected to be dry next week and the first wave will be released.

ANXIOUS TO ESTABLISH BRANCHES IN CANADA

It is stated at the Montreal offices of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that they had received inquiries from over twenty large manufacturing concerns who were anxious to establish branches in the Province of Quebec. The first reason for this step was stated to be the comparative immunity of this province from serious labor troubles, which have latterly caused so much loss to United States industry. These firms also desired to establish here in order to avoid the duty on goods coming into Canada.

Mexico City Abandoned Occupied By Insurgents

CARRANZA AND HIS CABINET AND FORCES LEFT CITY FOR VERA CRUZ—NEW REVOLUTION GAINING STRENGTH.

EL PASO, Texas, May 10.—An unconfirmed report reaching Juarez from Chihuahua City stated General Benjamin Hill had captured Mexico City and that President Carranza had fled.

The report of the fall of Mexico City reached rebel headquarters in Juarez shortly after noon. No details were given. A rebel army was reported earlier near Mexico City.

Accepting the report at full value, the citizens and rebel garrison of Juarez launched a celebration of the fall of Mexico City. Led by the military band, citizens and troops paraded the streets.

The report from Chihuahua City, according to a later version given out at Juarez headquarters, stated that General Hill, leading the Obregonista forces in conjunction with a force under General Pavio Gonzales, received the surrender of the Carranzista troops in the national capital.

Carranza's Administration in Mexico is fast toppling about his head, according to reports reaching rebel head quarters in Juarez today. The important cities of Saltilo, Zacatecas, Aguas, Calientes, Torreon and Daxaca have fallen into rebel hands with General Diguez, Castro and J. Austed Castro joining the revolution, the reports stated.

The report of Mexico City captured by the revolutionists was credited by American authorities here.

Benson Is Boastful On U.S. Naval Power

Says It Topped Britain In Personnel —"Transport Most Wonderful."

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The American navy had the largest personnel in the world at the armistice. Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations during the war, told the Senate Naval Investigating Committee.

"No navy ever expanded so rapidly as did ours after we declared war," Benson said.

"When the armistice was signed we had 500,000 officers and men more than the British. It is recognized we had the largest navy power the world has ever seen."

Admiral Benson did not elaborate this statement.

The French naval attache once complained that Benson was too partial toward the British, the witness said, the only criticism he recalled from the allies.

"I disagree most decidedly with Admiral Sims' charge that the navy prolonged the war by delay," Benson said.

"Our troops' transportation was the most wonderful feature the world has ever seen and dreamed of, and it shortened the war materially. Admiral Sims' complaint is the only one we have had. There is none from the allies or the people of the United States.

"His charge is an outrage to the American people as well as to the navy. If allowed to stand it will be to the everlasting disgrace of the navy It is too serious a charge to be allowed to stand and every officer in the navy should be called here if necessary to refute it."

Three Murders In Detroit City

One Day's Victims in Port on Straits —Italian Found Mangled

DETROIT, Mich., May 9.—Three men were murdered in Detroit today, and in each instance liquor played its part. An Italian was found in an east side alley with his head almost severed. One negro was killed in a brawl and a white man was slain during a fight with three companions. There were no arrests.

Nicholas Laferte, the Italian, was found this morning with his throat cut. The police believe he was attacked and slain while on his way home. He had left his home early in the evening to attend to some business downtown. When he had not returned at 2 a.m. his wife notified the police, and four hours later the man's body was found. There were five stab wounds in his head, five more in his back and three others in his side.

Hans Manson was killed during a fight with several companions on Gratiot avenue and Sylvester street. One of the men struck Manson on the head with a bottle and he died of a fractured skull.

The negro killed was Henry Spencer thirty-four years old. He was shot to death about daylight at the American Club, on Gratiot avenue, by an unidentifed negro.

Shipbuilders Want Work Continued

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 10.—Asking that the Government continue with the substantial shipbuilding program in order that as much work as possible be found for men now employed in the various yards throughout the Dominion, a deputation of returned soldier workers, over one hundred strong, waited on Sir George Foster and members of the Cabinet today. In the memorandum submitted, it was stated that the French Government was willing, if Canada would provide the credit to place orders for the merchant marine vessels which would keep the Canadian yards busy at high pressure for two or three years. The men also advocated the extension of the merchant marine and the granting of Government subsidies to private enterprises willing to build this year.

TRAINING MOUNTED POLICE

Regina, Sask., May 8—Regina will be a special training depot where every man who enlists in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police force will get his training. It was believed that another training depot would be established at Ottawa, but according to officers of the force, Regina will be the only training depot.

Express Trains Collide Passengers Lucky Escape

MANY MINOR INJURIES BUT NO DEATHS, AND NO ONE SERIOUSLY INJURED AS FAR AS KNOWN—C.P.R. MONTREAL-TORONTO EXPRESS NO. 19 IN COLLISION WITH NO. 38, EASTBOUND — CAR OF LIQUOR SHOCK ABSORBER—BELLEVILLE PEOPLE PASSENGERS.

Passengers on two C.P.R. express trains Saturday afternoon were severely shaken up and a number received injuries more or less painful, but none serious as far as known, when a head-on collision occurred at a flag station called Spicer, between Grafton and Cobourg. The trains in collision were No. 19 C.P.R. express from Montreal, which left Belleville at 2.28 Saturday afternoon, and No. 38, east bound, which left Toronto at 8.50 a.m., and was due in Belleville at 12.25.

Spicer, where the accident occurred, is the regular meeting place for these trains, but instead of one taking the siding, as is necessary, both occupied the main line, and the collision resulted.

No. 19, west bound express, was said to have been travelling at a good rate of speed, while No. 38, east bound, had slowed down for the meet. The east bound train has the right of way, but as it is a light train of local nature, and No. 19, the west bound train, a through train and heavy, it has been customary for the Toronto despatcher to order No. 38 to take the siding at Spicer and allow No. 19, the through express right-of-way, which is a saving of time and expense. On Saturday, it is alleged, the regular despatcher was off duty, that being his holiday, and the relief despatcher issued the regular order without any rider for No. 38 to take the siding. The result was that the east bound express, having the right of way unless ordered otherwise, kept to the main line, and No. 19, according to the orders issued, should have taken the siding, it is said. No doubt on account of it being customary for No. 38 to take the siding under special orders, No. 19 crew overlooked the necessity for taking the siding, and kept right on the main line.

NO SERIOUS INJURIES.

Under the circumstances it is a great wonder that the passengers escaped as lightly as they did, and that no loss of life occurred is considered a miracle by passengers on both trains. The first intimation of trouble on the east bound express was a sudden jerk and jolt, when the engineer, seeing that No. 19 was coming right along without any attention to the siding, applied the emergency brakes. The sudden application of the emergency brakes threw some of the passengers from their seats, but this was speedily followed by another and greater shock when No. 19 express plunged into the east bound train head-on. Passengers were thrown violently to the floor in all directions and in all shapes, while the flying glass from the smashed windows filled the car with dangerous missles. Suitcases, grips, parcels and wraps were scattered around promiscuously, and the occasion was one of keen anxiety, so sudden was the accident.

The passengers on both trains were soon reassured that no one had been killed or badly injured, and then all but those suffering from painful bruises or minor fractures rather enjoyed the situation watching the clearing up of the wreck and the restoring of traffic.

BELLEVILLE PEOPLE IN WRECK.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bowell, and daughter, Ida, were passengers on No. 38, returning to Belleville from a visit of several weeks in New York city, and were severely shaken up and bruised by the experience, from the shock of which they have not yet entirely recovered. They were sitting in the chair car and were thrown violently to the floor when the collision occurred. Miss Ida Parker Bowell had her hand caught between two of the chairs and it is thought some of the bones may be broken. Mr. and Mrs. Bowell were also painfully bruised and shaken up.

The tracks were cleared up in record time, and No. 38, with a new engine, arrived in Belleville only about three hours late.

UNIQUE SHOCK ABSORBER.

A carload of liquor, behind the locomotive drawing No. 19 was badly smashed, but acted as a shock absorber, and took much of the shock of the collision from the passenger cars behind. The car of booze was on its way to Toronto, but there will be some dry throats in the Queen City for a while, as far as that car was concerned. The smashing of the car revealed whisky, gin and other varieties of spirits and is said that some of the passengers and villagers got a cheap wet for Sunday.

Both engines were badly smashed and the damage to rolling stock will amount to considerable.

The engine crews leaped from the cabs and escaped injury.

Dr. Ivey, of Cobourg, was on the scene shortly after the accident and attended all who were injured. One gentleman suffered two fractured ribs, a lady had a bad cut over her eye, and her friend was also suffering pain from cuts and bruises. A number of others received cuts and bruises of a minor nature.

OTTAWA DOCTOR WOUNDED IN UNGAVA

Quebec, May 9.—H. F. Blake, the well-known Ungava explorer, arrived here Saturday evening, bringing with him Dr. Corbett of Ottawa, medical man of the expedition, who had been seriously wounded by gunshot about three weeks previously. The doctor had been in the act of taking a shot gun from the bottom of the canoe when it exploded, its contents lodging in his abdomen. The patient, after the wound had been dressed by Mr. Blake, had to be brought 160 miles to civilization, through dense forests. He was carried on a toboggan over the ice on the lakes, and then by canoe down the rivers. One of the canoes upset, and its occupants were rescued only with difficulty. Provisions and outfit were lost, and the party travelled for two days without food. Finally, eleven miles from the nearest house, two of the party pressed on and reached the little settlement of Riviere-a-Dore, with only enough strength to send help.

The accident occurred at a spot 350 miles north of Quebec.

GAVE HER $50,000 FOR HUSBAND'S LOVE

New York, May 6.—Lillie Aresoni won a verdict today in Justice Cohalan's part of the Supreme Court against Jessie Ullrey for $50,000 for alleged alienation of the affections of the plaintiff's husband, Enrico Aresoni, a tenor, who has sung with the Chicago and the Boston opera companies.

The Aresonis were married in 1933 and lived for several years in Chicago. The defendant is the daughter of a wealthy Cleveland judge. According to Mrs. Aresoni the defendant was one of her husband's singing pupils.

The defendant, although she originally denied the allegations in the wife's complaint, did not defend the action today and judgment was therefore taken against her by default. In the one-sided testimony it was brought out that the tenor and the defendant have been in San Diego, where they have taken an active part in the musical life of that city.

Brakeman's Terrible Plight Under Tender In River

PINNED FAST BENEATH LOCOMOTIVE TENDER, ONLY HEAD AND NECK OUT OF WATER—FRANTIC EFFORTS TO LIFT TENDER AND RELEASE HIM — ENGINEER MISSING—FIREMAN SCALDED—WAY FREIGHT THROWN INTO RIVER.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

FREDERICTON, N.B., May 10.—The locomotive of a way-freight train on the Canadian National Railway plunged into the Nashwaak River early this morning two miles north of Marysville, dragging the tender and one freight car into the river with it. Driver J. Gillis of Newcastle, is missing and it is believed his body is in the river. John Estabrook, brakeman, is pinned under the tender with only his head and neck out of water, while frantic efforts are being made to lift the tender and thus release him.

Clifford Hughes, fireman, was badly scalded.

Following a heavy rain on Sunday a dam on the Nashwaak river gave way and the rush of logs thus released tore away the embankment, causing the loss of the engine and cars, which rolled down the embankment, almost fifty feet.

Traffic on the eastern division of the C. N. R. is tied up.

BRAKEMAN DIED.

FREDERICTON, May 10.—About nine o'clock this morning Estabrook died before the tender could be raised because of other wreckage piled on it, and it was only by cutting off his leg below the knee that his body could be rescued from the water. The body of Engineer Gillis was found under the boiler of the locomotive, but cannot be removed until the wrecking crew succeed in moving the engine. He is married and leaves a widow and four children at Newcastle. Estabrook is married and resides in this city, but he has no children.

Soviet Refuses to Admit Delegates

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, May 10—A Central Soviet Moscow, wireless despatch says, announces that in view of the fact that certain members of League of Nations are actively supporting Ukraine and Poland, warring on Russia, it cannot by reason of military consideration admit into Russia any delegation which includes representatives of those nations, although the Soviet supports the Principles of the League decision to send an investigating delegation into Russia.

The statement complains that the League has failed to protest against Poland action.

Don't Wish To Capture Carranza

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

AGUA PRIETA, Sonora, May 10.—Should President Carranza be captured by revolutionary troops, he must stand trial in civil courts for any misdeeds of which he may have been guilty while chief executive. General Calles, commander of revolutionary troops in the Northwest, announced last night, just before he left for Juarez that if Carranza succeeds in getting out of Mexico, the revolutionists will be pleased. However, General Calles said, a Provincial President will be named to serve until the elections in accordance with the plan of Agua-Prieta.

Five Police Rout 300 Sinn Feiners--Barracks Burned

DRIVEN BY THE FIRE INTO AN OUTHOUSE, THE SMALL GARRISON SUCCESSFULLY CONTINUED THEIR GALLANT DEFENCE FOR OVER TWO HOURS, DRIVING OFF THE ATTACKERS.

DUBLIN, May 9.—The authorities are continuing the policy of shutting down the small police barracks in the rural districts and sending the men to the larger central stations. Two organized attacks occurred at small barracks last midnight. At Cloyne, County Cork, the small garrison of seven, after a prolonged fight, was compelled to surrender, one of the men being wounded.

The other raid was more serious. It took place at the village of Newtown Hamilton, South Armagh, where 300 Sinn Feiners attacked the barracks garrisoned by five men. The fight lasted two and a half hours. The building was sprinkled with petrol and burned, driving the garrison into an outhouse, where the men continued their gallant defence. The raiders ultimately retired.

Musical Service At St. Thomas

Strong Sermon on Prayer and Production by Rector—Delightful Musical Program

A large congregation attended St. Thomas Church last evening and the service was greatly appercialed. The rector, Rev. Archdeacon Beamish, preached a very timely sermon upon topics of the day, increased production, labor troubles, unrest, etc. It is necessary to cultivate every inch of available ground in the city this summer in order to combat the high cost of living, said the Archdeacon, who emphasized the necessity when making our plans of taking God into our confidence and asking for his assistance. He also giveth the increase. When there is such urgent need for greater production it is surprising that agitations continue for shorter hours, the eight-hour day, six hours, four hours, two hours and no hours at all, according to some radicals is the Utopian dream of the discontented. Temperance in all things, eating, drinking, etc., was counselled by the Archdeacon, not because the law says this or that but because it is right and good. Do everything as in God's presence and do nothing that his blessing can not be invoked upon and there can be no mistake.

The Archdeacon emphasized the value of prayer and the sure and certain assurance of answers to the petitions which ascend to the Great White Throne. Be good and do good and all do our share in the world's work and abnormal conditions will soon pass away.

After the regular service had concluded a beautiful musical service was given by the organist, Ernest Wheatley, Mus., Bac., and the choir. Prof. Wheatley played several organ solos and delighted all present by his mastery of the instrument, his expression, and ability to bring the rich mellow tones and the sweetest of music from the heart of the organ. Mrs. Wheatley sang very sweetly, Miss Joy Higgs, the talented violinist, played several selections in her usual able manner, and Mr. Percy Cook sang very pleasngly. The program was as follows:

Organ—Flute Concerto," Rinck.

Song—"The Lord is my Light," Mr. P. Cook.

Violin Solo—"Air by Bach," Miss J. Higgs.

Anthem—"Praise the Lord," The Choir.

Organ—"O Star of Eve and Romance," Wagner.

Song—"Hold Thou My Hand," Mrs Wheatley.

Violin—"Romance," Miss J. Higgs.

Duet—"Evening Song," Mrs. Wheatley and Mr. P. Cook.

Organ—"Toccata in D," Holloway.

Musical Director, Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O.

ACCUSED OF THEFT

Frank Wilson, Jr., of this city, was this morning placed under arrest on a charge of theft of a cheque. It appears that a letter was stolen from the officers quarters at the armories which continued a cheque for $25 and made by Capt. McManus one one R. Simpson. On Sunday Wilson, it is alleged, obtained from the proprietor of the Perfect Cafe here $10 as part payment for the cheque and was to get the balance later. It was learned that the cheque had been stolen and payment was ordered to be stopped. Wilson's story is that the cheque was given him to get cashed by another party who took it. The police are now on the track of the second party, who is alleged to be a young man working for a farmer some miles from the city.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

STUART WHYTE'S "RED RIDING HOOD"

Canadian interest in things theatrical is now centred upon Mr. Stuart Whyte's spectacular extravaganza, which surpasses in merit and magnitude the three great preceding pantomines staged under the same auspices Many thousands of theatre-goers have already seen 'Little Red Riding Hood' and are enthusiastic in their praises of the wonderful spectacle which Mr. Whyte has prepared for the present season. "Little Red Riding Hood" is a feast for both eye and ear. It is a series of beautiful stage pictures, glowing in rich colors and with lighting effects skilfully used in bringing out the beauty of the settings. No more charming investitures have been seen in any production than are offered in this attraction. The scenery of Red Riding Hood is developed along the usual pantomine lines. There are all the characters of nursery days, Mother Hubbard, Little Bo Peep, Boy Blue, Old King Cole and all the other celebrities of the story books, cleverly worked into an extravaganza that is full of melody and mirth. Variety is a feature of the performance. There are songs, dances, specialties in rapid succession amid beautiful settings, and with costumes that are the last word in richness and charm lavish as were 'Aladin," "Robinson Crusoe" and "Cinderella," under Mr. Whyte's direction, the present production outshines these three successes. Mr. Whyte has given "Little Red Riding Hood" a splendid cast of British artists. Miss Zara Clinton, charming as ever, is again the principal boy and she makes "Boy Blue" an outstanding feature of the production, both by her singing and her histronic ability. A new comedian is Mr. Johnny Osborne, late of the London Hippodrome in "Zig Zag" and the Follies Bergere, Paris, who invests the part of "Mother Hubbard" with a rich vein of humor and who is sure to be a pronounced favorite. The favorite J. V. Barrett-Lennard, long an able assistant of Mr. Whyte's is "Old King Cole" and is as amusing in this part as in the others in which he has been seen in Belleville in past seasons. Two old members of Mr. Whyte's earlier productions, who have been absentees during the past few years, are in this year's cast, Miss Harriett Fawn and Mr. Charles Cradle, who are, respectively Jack and Jill, and who will be heartily welcomed back. Miss Madge Locke as "Bo-Peep" sings with her old time charm as does Mr. Ian Hunter, while Mr. Will Hallett comes to Canada from Drury Lane to play the part of "Dog Trusty," gives a fine performance. There are thirty musical numbers and specialties the majority of them excellent. A feature of the play is the scene "Melodies of Yesterday" in which the song hits of "The Geisha," "San Toy," "The Belle of New York," "The Greek Slave" and other old time comic opera are introduced. Another number that makes a hit is the clever dancing of the Mackay troupe who are a decided acquisition to the company. "Little Red Riding Hood" will be seen at Griffin's this Wednesday night, May 12th and should draw a capacity audience. It is Mr. Whyte's masterpiece than which no higher praise can be given.

THRILLING WILD ANIMAL PLAY

Selig's million dallar wild animal picture, "The Lost City," is being shown on the double feature bill at Griffin's tonight and Tuesday. Words cannot describe its breathless suspense, filled with unbelievable deeds of daring and in which wild beasts of the jungle are slain before the very camera's eyes. Charles Ray is appearing on the same program in another of those country roles which he has made famous on the screen, in "Crooked Straight," his new photoplay produced by Thomas H. Ince. It is about a small town youth who goes to the city to make his fortune, falls into temptation and becomes the accomplice of crooks, then returns to the little country village to make good with a vengeance. The story was written by Julien Josephson, who has supplied Mr. Ray with most of his entertaining roles of the past, including "The Busher." The youthful star is said not only to have an opportunity to show his athletic prowess but also to shine in the brand new side line, that of safe cracking. Margery Wilson is Mr. Ray's leading lady. "Her Private Husband," a very funny two-reel Fox Sunshine comedy is also being shown on the same program.

SOME LOVER IS "BLUE BANDANNA"

"All the world loves a lover," at least, all the feminine world. When the lover happens to be a regular feller, good scout, straight-shooter, or whatever a real man's man is called, even the men will tolerate him. Jerry Jerome in "The Blue Bandanna" Wm. Desmond's new photoplay which is being shown at the Palace tonight to Wednesday, was a real guy, even if he did have seven or eight millions lying around loose. There was nothing up-stage about Jerry. He went west to galvanize his atrophied hemoglobin—whatever that is—into action, and when he caught sight of pretty Ruth Yancy feeding the chickens at the Yancy farm, he dropped right off the stage. "This is my home," said Jerry, and it was. But before he won the gal he had to scrub floors, wash dishes, make up beds and dish out the soup to the ornery farm hands. They called him "Lizzie," but Jerry showed he could weild an uppercut as well as he could mop. And all the time the girl laughed, not at him but with him, for she saw right away Jerry was a real man. All this was only the prelude to the big act, however. Before the final clinch with Ruth, Jerry ran down a bad stage bandit and made him confess he was trying to blackmail the girl's father. Great Stuff! But then, Jerry was a great lover and a regular feller too.

Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a new funnybone tickler, entitled "We Lead Others Follows," other varied plays of interest will also be shown on the same program.

Methodism Lost 57 Ministers In Single Year

Rev. R. J. D. Simpson Gives Specific Cases Which Will Startle the Church

During the fast church year Canadian Methodism lost a total of 81 preachers from the active ministry—31 by resignation and 50 by superannuation.

In the same year there were only 24 young men received as candidates for the ministry. That means a net loss to the church of 57 clergymen.

These figures were given to The Star by Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, Superannuation Fund Treasurer, and the natural deduction, he thinks, is that the low salaries paid to the preachers are keeping bright, young men out of the ministry.

He said:

Take one specific case—and it is an actual one. A country circuit with three appointments. A pastor whose salary in 1918-19 was less than $950. The private report shows that this circuit this year increased its minister's salary twenty-one per cent. No doubt the officials consider that increase not only adequate but possibly munificent. That pastor, however, being a human being, has to eat food, wear clothes, burn fuel just like any other mortal. These necessities will cost him at least eighty-five per cent. more now than did in 1914.

"In view of the conditions described it is pertinent now to enquire what is the result—what is happening in our parsonages? Well as a result of these conditions, here is what is happening:

1. Men are resigning from the ministry, not because of a lack of love for the Church—not because the vision which called them into the ministry has faded from their consciousness, but simply because of the stern necessities of the case.

2. Supplementing their scant income by engaging in some other occupation as a side line.

Unnecessary worry about physical necessities lessens efficiency.

4. Drawing upon hard-earned savings. Some few of our men are fortunate enough to have saved a few dollars.

"I could never ask any young woman to share my lot and make the sacrifices I have seen my dear mother make all the years I have known her." replied one young man when asked about entering the ministry.

Welcome Return Of Tyrone Power

The announcement of a return engagement by that eminent actor, Tyrone Power, on his return from his trans-Canada tour will be welcome news to all who witnessed "The Servant in the House." Mr. Power, on his return visit to Belleville, will present "The Little Brother," a drama which has received the endorsation not only of the most prominent dramatic critics of the United States and Canada, but also of many of the leading clergy of all denominations is a vivid lesson in religious tolerance and in the need of the universal brotherhood to overcome the limitations of creed bigotry.

Mr. Hector Charlesworth, the well known dramatic critic of the Toronto Saturday night, and one of the ablest writers in the Dominion, speaks of Tyrone Power thus:

"Actors possessing the legitimate gifts and nobility of style displayed by Tyrone Power have become so rare that they seem almost to belong to another age. The new Trans-Canada theatrical corporation makes a good beginning by sending him through this country in two plays that give his abilities real scope. Of these one prefers "The Little Brother," a drama which contains profoundly moving situations and in which the employment of coincidence has actual plausibility, now that the Russians, Jew and Gentile, have become a nomadic race that penetrates all the large cities of the western world. Mr. Power owes some of his distinction to the fact that he has always appeared in the best of company.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS SWEPT BY $250,000 FIRE

Chicago, May 10.—Fire swept through a portion of the Chicago Stock Yards yesterday, causing a property loss of $250,000. Two miles of barns were burned with 300 head of horses. Three firemen were injured. The fire raged for three hours and was not brought under control until late in the evening.

HUMAN ELECTRICITY.

The human body is full of electricity. Currents of electricity flow through the nerves. It is well that they do, as these currents are the life of the body. So long as they flow the body will live, and if their flow is unimpeded the body will be well. Impairment of health follows the obstruction of these currents and, if this imperfection reaches a certain degree, death ensues. The brain is the power house for the electric current of the body. From the brain the currents go to the organs, glands, muscles and parts of the body through a jelly-like substance in the centre of the nerve fibre. This substance is softer than anything else in the body and, as bone is the hardest tissue in the body, you can imagine that any deviation of bone toward the flow of the nerve current will prevent that flow in degree as the deviation is simple or severe. Chiropractic is not a theory. It is a demonstrated fact. Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments release pressure on nerves, and health follows naturally the restoration to normal of the flow of nerve currents. One hundred per cent. of power means one hundred per cent. of health. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. Drs. Redick & Redick, 283½ Front St., Belleville. Phone 900. Hours: 10—12; 2—5; 7—8.

CARPENTIER SAYS FRANCE LOVES CANADA

TORONTO, May 8—Sportsmen representing everything in the sporting line from walking to horse racing were present at the complimentary dinner tendered to Georges Carpentier and his wife by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association in the King Edward hotel this afternoon.

It was a notable gathering in more ways than one and will go down in sporting history as a milestone in the progress towards the proper recognition of sport in the national life of the country.

The esprit de corp was typically sportsmanlike. Speaker after speaker took high ground in calling for better encouragement of sports of all kinds and in the decision of the Drury Government in appointing an Athletic Commission they found cause for much praise.

Alfie Shrubb's Appeal

It was the speech of Alf. Shrubb, the veteran world's running champion, that carried a strong appeal. It was the duty of the colleges, he declared, to give their men a good athletic training. Major Wilson of London, England, added his view of sport epigrammatically; "Where you find men pledged to support sport you find men pledged to support humanity."

General Bickford testified to the great benefits accrued to men in military training by reason of their interest and participation in sports. Francis Nelson, the veteran sporting writer, recalled the fine influence of the Hanlan's on sport. "The fine popular enthusiasm for their great attainments was inspiring," he declared.

Col. R. McCausland, of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association spoke for that class which supports but does not personally participate in sports.

Speaking in French, Georges Carpentier referred feelingly to the sad days of the war. "I wish to tell you of the sentiments of the people of France to the boys from Canada whose wonderful heroism during the war has made them so beloved to the people of France. Next to our own nation, there is no one in the world that we love so much as the Canadian. During my service in Belgium I was stationed near the Canadians and know of the exploits of Bishop and Barker, whose feats in the air service contributed to such an extent in downing the Boche. All of France knows and appreciates what the Canadian soldier did in coming to the rescue of our dear nation. I would like to speak to you of all my thoughts, but unfortunately my words cannot express just what I would say."

Mayor Church described the French champion as a national hero. "We admire him not alone for his achievements in the ring, but as a glorious representative of the heroic French army. He has proved himself to be a character both of head and heart and by his presence in our midst the game of boxing will be elevated to greater heights than it has ever reached before."

Cherbourg, France, May 9—A serious leak was discovered on board the German battleship Thuringen, which recently was allocated to France, and is in port here. Spring Days In Hillier

Special Correspondence to The Intelligencer

To welcome May, the month of flowers,
Of breezes gay, and sunny hours,
Our feathered friends a welcome sing,
With the glad songs the welkin rings;
The wild flowers lift their faces bright.
To greet glad days of life and light,
The river from its fetters free
Sings as it journeys to the sea;
All Nature wakes to bear a part,
While there's a welcome in my heart.

All nature seems rejoicing in the advent of the month of May. The grass is springing green o'er pasture and meadow; the buds on the trees are bursting into leaf; the frogs are croaking in the cove and the birds are filling the fragrant air with song.

The entire countryside of the old township of Hillier is astir with life and activity in these early days of May. The sun calls the farmers at an early hour, and soon he is busy in the fields, harrowing, cultivating and seeding with team or tractor; the housewife, if not turning things topsy turvey in the home in order to accomplish the inevitable spring housecleaning, is busy in the garden, the hens are cackling and doing their share to increase production, demanding neither shorter hours nor higher pay; and the birds, the busiest of the busy, are an example to the idle, in beginning their daily work of nestbuilding as early as six o'clock in the mornng. And the big jobs they tackle would surprise some of the humans who are incessantly clamoring for lighter work and greater pay.

Seeing a robin tugging at what appeared to be a large string, I went to investigate and found that he had been pulling with all his might on the frayed end of large rope, which was held fast at the other extremity by a huge stick of wood. To render his work easier, I placed several strings about on the ground which were soon carried away to the nest he and his mate were building above the porch. A tiny gray bird is building its wee nest in the lilacs. Wise little builder! Its home will soon be surrounded by the breath of fragrant blossoms.

Mr. A. Lout, of Roblin's Mills, is making his regular spring calls in this locality purchasing rags, rubbers and hides. A change in farming methods is noticed, as according to Mr. Lout's report, very few calf skins are for sale, farmers either raising or vealing the young calves, instead of slaughtering them.

The public special service held by the members of the Melville W. M. S. in the church on Sunday evening was attended by a large and appreciative congregation. The service was in charge of Mrs. J. Kinnear. Special music was rendered by the choir, and a vocal duet by two small sisters, Kathleen and Gena French, was much enjoyed. Readings, pertaining to missionary effort in our own land, were given by Mrs. W. H. Anderson and Mrs. Albert Carley. The offering which was taken as an Easter thank offering amounted to fifteen dollars.

Farmers from this locality delivered a large number of veals to Wellington and Consecon on Friday last for shipment. The cheese factories being now in full operation, the traffice in veals will soon be over.

Robert Garret Drowned At Madoc

The village of Madoc is stirred by a tragedy which occurred there on Saturday. The disappearance of Mr. Robert Garrett, who had been receiving medical treatment in the village, led to an investigation and his lifeless body was found in Moira Lake, which is situated near the village.

Last winter Garrett's wife died at Madoc, a victim of sleeping sickness. Since her demise Garrett has not been well and came to Madoc from Toronto for rest and treatment.

He was upwards of 40 years of age and was well and favorably known in this city and vicinity. For some time he was employed here in Mr. John McIntosh's store and for a period conducted Mr. McIntosh's branch store at Madoc. Latterly he had been employed in Eaton's store at Toronto. A few days ago he came to Madoc where he was under medical treatment. One child survives. Mr. Garrett was deservedly popular with all who knew him, and his untimely death has caused much regret.

SCREEN SERMONS.

Sermons in stones, books in the running brooks, and all kinds of things in the movies—from custard pie comedies to how they drink tea in high society. But custard pie facial decoration farces are disappearing from the screen, to be succeeded by cartoon comedies, educational films, including travel pictures of great beauty and helpful interest, and even poetry and prose, witty and serious, by the world's best weavers of word pictures. Sermons are even creeping into the movies in stories and allegories with strong moral influences. One of the best of the screen sermon picture-plays is "The Miracle Man", recently shown in Belleville, which made a tremendous impression for good upon the great throngs which witnessed this production wherever shown. "The Miracle Man" depicts an intense struggle between the forces of good and evil, in a setting of present day conditions and surroundings, and the impressive triumph of good over evil is vividly depicted with the most startling of climaxes. That a beautiful thought never dies and rises superior to all evil influences, with the power of faith to move mountains, and the exposition of the power of a little child to lead them, is beautifully interwoven in this altogether human story of crooks, dope fiends and confidence men from the city being defeated and reformed through the refining influence of country surroundings and the evidences of divine approval of the sublime faith of the Miracle Man, blind and deaf, but with a vision clearer and brighter than any worldlyy vision could be.

THE JUDGMENT OF ONE JUDGE.

On December 6, 1917, two vessels collided in Halifax harbor and shortly thereafter occurred the explosion which shook Halifax to its foundations, caused hundreds of deaths and destroyed property worth several million dollars. The vessels which collided were the Mont Blanc laden with a cargo of high explosives, the war being then at its height, the other vessel was the Imo, in ballast, en route to New York.

The litigation which resulted from the collision and subsequent explosion was very interesting and recently terminated in a judgment by the Privy Council, the highest court of appeal, upon the question of responsibility for the collision, explosion, and damages involved.

The owners of the Mont Blanc claimed two million dollars damages, and the owners of the Imo counter-claimed for a similar amount.

The case was first tried before Mr. Justice Drysdale, assisted by nautical assessors, and after thirteen days of evidence and argument, the Judge pronounced the Mont Blanc solely to blame. An appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was heard by five judges, two of whom found the Mont Blanc wholly to blame, two found the Imo solely at fault, and the fifth judge was of the opinion that both were equally responsible. In the result the Supreme Court allowed the appeal and held both ships equally liable. From that decision both sides appealed to the Privy Council.

While the judgment of the Privy Council was favorable in the main to the Mont Blanc side of the case, "their lordships are clearly of the opinion that both ships are to blame for their reciprocal neglect to have reversed and gone astern earlier than they did." The Privy Council, thereupon, concurred in the verdict of the Supreme Court of Canada that both vessels were equally to blame.

Reviewing the case from trial court to Privy Council it will be seen that—

The trial Judge pronounced the Mont Blanc solely to blame.

Two judges of the Supreme Court also found the Mont Blanc wholly to blame.

Two found the Imo solely at fault.

One Judge of the Supreme Court was of the opinion that both vessels were equally responsible.

The opinion of one Judge of the Supreme Court out of five Judges sitting on the case seems to have prevailed, although his conclusion was at variance with the other four.

When the appeal reached the Privy Council six Judges had passed upon it.

Three Judges had found the Mont Blanc wholly to blame.

Two Judges found the Imo wholly to blame.

On Judge found that both ships were equally to blame.

And the Privy Council concurred in the finding of the one Judge; so minorities are not always wrong, apparently.

Mother's Day was well observed Sunday in floral and other gifts to the living Mothers and silent floral tokens of affection worn for the Mothers whose bright spirits have winged their way to a better world beyond the grassy mounds which mark the end of life's journey and the casting aside of its work and worry. In all of the churches appropriate references were made to the occasion and the many flowers in evidence everywhere proved that the beautiful thought expressed in the observance of Mother's Day has taken a firm hold upon the hearts of humanity.

Kingston needs a first-class, high-class hotel, has needed it for a long time, and the citizens of the Limestone City are realizing the fact more keenly now than ever before. The Kingston Whig, in urging immediate steps to provide a large modern hotel structure for that city, points to the advantage and beneficial advertising received by Belleville in the Hotel Quinte, known from coast to coast on both sides of the line, and in distant lands, as a travellers' rest, perfect in appointments, refreshments and service. Belleville citizens are proud of the Hotel Quinte and its efficient management, and Mine Host Jenkins can be justly proud of his achievement in proving that a metropolitan hotel service can be made possible even in a small city.

The agents of the Lenine Government sent over to buy locomotives in the States want a ten per cent. commission for themselves—on 5,000 this would be a tidy sum. A precious lot of rascals, worthy of their master. This is the first Soviet Commission to deal with the States.

Starting Them Wrong
Brantford Expositor

Anyone who is a careful observer cannot fail to see large numbers of the very young on the streets at too late an hour, or in places of public entertainment, and that at an age when it would be better, from every point of view, for them to be home in their beds.

Income Tax
Quebec Chronicle

A moderate rate of Income Tax spread over all forms and sizes of incomes would be productive of a much greater revenue to the Government than the tax as it presently exists. The present tax is hardly worth the trouble of collection in the case of small incomes, while in the case of larger incomes it is so exorbitant as to defeat its purposes.

THE POET'S CORNER

THE JOYS OF THE ROAD

Now the joys of the road are chiefly these:
A crimson touch of the hard wood trees;

A vagrant's morning wide and blue,
In early fall, when the wind walks, too

A shadowy highway cool and brown,
Alluring up and enticing down.

From rippled waters to dappled swamp
From purple glory to scarlet pomp;

The outward eye, the quiet will,
And the striding heart from hill to hill

The tempter apple over the fence,
The cobweb bloom on the yellow quince;

The palish asters along the wood—
A lyric touch of the solitude;

An open hand, an easy shoe,
Find a hope to make the day go through—

Another to sleep with and a third
To wake me up at the voice of a bird;

The resonant far-listening morn,
And the coarse whisper of the corn;

These are the joys of the open road—
For him who travels without a load.

An Irishman's Wonder

An Irishman spent a day in London, and saw the electric tramcars. He stared in amazement at the trolley boom on top of the cars. Then he said:

"Oi hev' seen cars drawn along by horses and driven by steam, but sure Oi've never seen 'em drawn along with a fishing rod before."

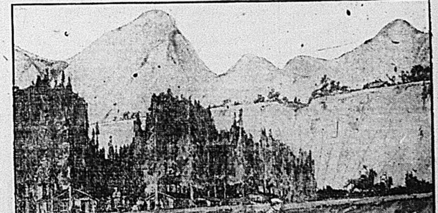
SUMMER CAMP FOR LAKE WINDERMERE



Rustic Cabin Camp being built to open up a new tourist resort in the Canadian Rockies at Lake Windermere, B.C.

A rustic cabin camp will be established this summer on the shore of Lake Windermere, which should help to popularize one of the most beautiful districts in British Columbia. From the site of the Camp, roads and trails radiate to the Canyons formed by the creeks, which in turn are fed from the icefields capping the surrounding mountains. From this centre it will be comparatively easy to visit the spectacular Horse Thief Glacier with its great ice cave, and the still more spectacular Lake of the Hanging Glaciers, where five great ice rivers melt into one marvelous lake.

Between the main line of the Rockies and the subsidiary but equally spectacular Selkirk Range lies a long and beautiful Valley traversed by two rivers, the Columbia and the Kootenay, which eventually after curious turns and twists unite their streams far to the south. In this Valley half way between Golden on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Cranbrook on the Crow's Nest Branch lies Lake Windermere, a warm water lake over ten miles in length and from one to three miles in breadth. The lake is surrounded by bench land, much of which has recently been transformed by irrigation into good farm land; behind the benches are the foothills and then the towering, jagged mountains typical of this region. Through a gap such as that of Horse Thief Creek one sees the peaks capped by eternal snow, and with the aid of auto and pony one can drive and ride on the same day from a fertile summerland to the foot of immense glaciers. Radiating from the lake into the surrounding mountains are creeks which have carved out Canyons for themselves through rocky precipices, and along these canyons are mountain roads and trails made to the silver and lead mines of the Selkirks, or for the hunter and tourist over the passes of the Rockies. Two interesting hot springs are within easy access—Fairmont to the south, and Sinclair Hot Springs in the Sinclair Canyon, to the north. At the Sinclair Hot Springs a concrete swimming bath has been built which attracts many visitors in the summer season on account of the curative properties of the water.

The peninsula on which Lake Windermere Camp has been located has already a well established nine hole golf course, and owing to its pleasant terraces of shady trees and its sandy beaches is ideally situated for a summer vacation. In addition to golf, bathing and boating, mountain ponies of local breed are available for riding the trails, and the neighboring village of Invermere has a garage with a fleet of automobiles for the excellent roads of the Valley. In several of the creeks and smaller lakes within easy reach good trout fishing in season may be had. The water of Lake Windermere itself is too warm for trout, though it contains countless spawn fish, many of large size.

Among the many expeditions easy to accomplish are those up Toby Creek, Sinclair Canyon and Horse Thief Creek. Nine miles up the Canyon Toby Creek is spanned by a spectacular bridge three hundred feet above the bed of the stream, uniting roads on either side so that a highly interesting round trip ride of eighteen miles can be made from Lake Windermere Camp. Beyond the bridge the road leads in the direction of Earl Grey or Wells Pass to Kootenay Lake with the well known silver-lead Paradise Mine at an elevation of 8,000 feet on the right.

Horse Thief Creek is an easy gateway to a very interesting glacier country. One can drive by auto for eighteen miles, after which there is a pony trail leading direct up towards Horse Thief Creek with a new trail to the wonderful Lake of the Hanging Glaciers. Or one can branch up Mackenzie Creek to Iron Cap, where on a ridge at an elevation of 10,000 feet one has a magnificent panorama of 100 miles of snowclad peaks. Such trips of course imply the necessity of camping out for a night or two.

Sinclair Canyon can be reached by automobile, being about 16 miles by road from Lake Windermere Camp. Here there is a popular hot springs swimming pool, with pronounced curative qualities. The Banff-Windermere road has now been built through the Iron Gates (ironstained cliffs of enormous size) to the Summit of the Brisco Range, where there is excellent fishing in season at Miriam Lake.

Very interesting are the Hot Springs at Fairmont, bubbling up on a rocky terrace in an amphitheatre of mountains. South west of Lake Windermere, the road to Fairmont passes through an Indian Reserve consisting of prosperous farms.

For bathing and boating, the waters of Lake Windermere are ideal. The summer temperature averages about 68° and the water is crystal clear. There are several islands in the Lake, each tempting the explorer. The Columbia River itself is full of charm, winding through a maze of forest at the base of the mountains.

The fishing in the lakes and streams is best in Spring or early Summer or in the Fall. The surface water of the lakes is apt to be too warm in July for fly fishing, and the streams are muddy with melting snow. In season, however, there is excellent trout fishing for instance at Fish Lakes or in Dutch Creek, while Premier Lake to the south is remarkable for landlocked salmon which have been caught up to 14 pounds in weight.

Lake Windermere Camp is on the shores of a promontory which has a four year old golf club, the course of which is available for visitors to the Camp.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

"D'ye know where?"

"Well, when I went a-wandering after her mother's death, she lived with her aunt, who kept a boarding school, till her aunt married Lawyer Green—a man as sharp as a needle—and the school was broken up. Did ye know that then she went to the training-school, and that her name stood first among the queen's scholars of her year?"

"I've heard so."

"And that when she sat for her certificate as government teacher, she had the highest of the first class?"

"Yes."

"Well, and do ye know what I live in such a miserly way for when I've got enough to do without it, and why I make her work as a school-mistress instead of living here?"

"No."

"That if any gentleman, who sees her to be his equal in polish should want to marry her, and she wanted to marry him, he sha'n't be superior to her in pocket. Now, do ye think after this, that you be good enough for her?"

"No."

"Then good-night t'ye Master Dewy."

"Good-night, Mr. Day."

Modest Dick's reply had faltered upon his tongue and he turned away wondering at his presumption in asking for a woman whom he had seen from the beginning to be so superior to him.

PART IV—CHAPTER III

The next scene is a tempestuous afternoon in the following month and Fancy Day is discovered walking from her father's home toward Mellstock.

A single vast gray cloud covered all the country from which the small rain and mist had just begun to blow down in wavy sheets alternately thick and thin. The trees of the old brown plantation writhed like miserable men as the air wended its way swiftly among them—the lowest portions of their trunks that had hardly ever been known to move, were visibly ricked by the fiercer gusts, distressing the mind by its painful unwontedness as when a strong man is seen to shed tears. Low-hanging boughs went up and down; high and erect boughs went to and fro; the blasts being so irregular, and divided into so many cross-currents, that neighboring branches of the same tree swept the skies in independent motions, crossed each other, passed, or became entangled. Across the open spaces flew flocks of green and yellowish leaves, which, after traveling a long distance from their parent trees reached the ground and lay there with their undersides upward.

As the rain and wind increased, and Fancy's bonnet-ribbons leaped more and more snappishly against her chin she paused to consider her latitude, and the distance to a place of shelter. The nearest house was Elizabeth Endorfield's whose cottage and garden stood at the junction of the lane with the highroad. Fancy hastened onward and in five minutes entered a gate, which shed upon her toes a flood of water-drops as she opened it.

"Come in, chiel!" a voice exclaimed, before Fancy had knocked—a promptness that would have surprised her, had she not known that Mrs. Endorfield was an exceedingly and exceptionally sharp woman in the use of her eyes and ears.

Fancy went in and sat down. Elizabeth was paring potatoes for her husband's supper.

Scrape, scrape, scrape; then a toss, and splash went a potato into a bucket of water.

Now, as Fancy listlessly noted these proceedings of the dame, she began to reconsider an old subject that lay uppermost in her heart. Since the interview between her father and Dick the days had been melancholy days for her. Geoffrey's firm opposition to the notion of Dick as a son-in-law was more than she had expected. She had frequently seen her lover since that time, it is true, and had loved him more for the opposition than she would have otherwise dreamed of doing—which was a happiness of a certain kind. Yet though love is thus an end in itself, it must be believed to be the means to another end if it is to assume the rosy hues of an unalloyed pleasure. And such a belief Fancy and Dick were emphatically denied just now.

Elizabeth Endorfield had a repute among women which was in its nature something between distinction and notoriety. It was founded on the following items of character: She was shrewd and penetrating; her house stood in a lonely place; she never went to church; she always retained her bonnet indoors and had a pointed chin. Thus far her attributes were distinctly Satanic; and those who looked no further called her, in plain terms, a witch. But she was not gaunt, nor ugly in the upper part of her face, nor particularly strange in manner; so that, when her more intimate acquaintances spoke of her, the term was softened, and she became simply a Deep Body, who was as long headed as she was high. It may be stated that Elizabeth belonged to a class of people who were gradually losing their mysterious characteristics under the administration of the young vicar, though during the long reign of Mr. Grinham, the parish of Mellstock had proved extremely favorable to the growth of witches.

While Fancy was revolving all this in her mind, and putting it to herself whether it was worth while to tell her troubles to Elizabeth, and ask her advice in getting out of them, the witch spoke.

"You are down—proper down," she said, suddenly dropping another potato into the bucket.

Fancy took no notice.

"About your young man."

Fancy reddened. Elizabeth seemed to be watching her thoughts. Really one would almost think she must have the powers people ascribed to her.

SPRING FEVER

Following Colds, Grip or Flu, Thin, Watery or Poisoned Blood

(By Dr. Valentine Mott.)

At this time of year most people suffer from what we term "spring fever" because of a stagnant condition of the blood, because of the toxins (poisons) stored up within the body during the long winter. We eat too much meat, with little or no green vegetables.

Bloodless people, thin, anemic people, those with pale cheeks and lips, who have a poor appetite and feel that tired, worn or feverish condition in the spring-time of the year, should try the refreshing tonic powers of a good alterative and blood purifier. Such a tonic as druggists have sold for fifty years, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a standard remedy that can be obtained in tablet or liquid form. Made without alcohol from wild roots and barks.

TILLSONBURG, ONT.—"Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines were used in our family at home and they never failed to give good results. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' was used as a tonic and blood purifier and for bronchial trouble and it proved excellent. I have personally taken it for bronchial trouble and the 'Favorite Prescription' to build me up when I was run-down and they were both very beneficial."—MRS. CLIFFORD MITCHELL.

HON. MR. FERGUSON TO GIVE EVIDENCE

Toronto, May 8—A cable has been received from Hon. G. H. Ferguson stating that he has wired Mr. Justice Riddell asking that the records of the Department of Lands and Forests in reference to the timber transactions now under investigation be availed of, and that the commission withhold its findings until he can be present and give testimony.

Mr. Justice Riddell has stated that the commission will not conclude its investigation until Mr. Ferguson can be heard, and that it was the intention to have him appear in respect of the information already obtained had he been in the city, but in his absence another officer of the department was called. In any event Mr. Ferguson will be given a full opportunity to present the facts from his own standpoint.

KAISER SELLING PRESENTS RECEIVED IN FORMER DAYS

Horses, carriages and harness belonging to the former German Emperor, including a set of gold-mounted harness presented to him by the Pope, are offered for sale in a display advertisement in last night's Handelsblad. The advertisement is signed only with a number, but it is agreed to furnish photographs and other information. So far as the Associated Press is able to learn, no doubt exists that it is Count Hohenzollern himself who is disposing of the goods. For some time past rumor at Amerongen has had it that the former Emperor's financial condition has not been thriving.

Kiddie's Clothes

How to Make Them Wear Longer

There is stringent need of it, as every mother can testify, in these days of mounting prices. Well—did it ever occur to you that harsh, common soaps, and the ordinary rub and scrub of the wash board, break down more clothes than are ever actually worn out in use? Its so. We've studied the question. That's why

METHODISTS ENDORSE S. A. JUBILEE APPEAL

The Salvation Army's Appeal for a Jubilee Fund will be received with sympathy throughout the world. No other organization has a higher place in the esteem and affection of the people. Its beneficent works are recognized alike by the King upon his throne and the captive in the dungeon.

It is not necessary to enlarge on The Army's stependous growth. It labours for Christ in more than sixty lands and in over forty languages. But it is needful to say that the very success of The Army may lead its well wishers to overlook the obligations of personal help. The Jubilee Fund will doubtless attract numerous large gifts.

But it must also receive the support of the masses of the people. The relations between The Army and Methodism are altogether cordial. We are blood-relations, and the best work of both is done in the same spirit of aggressive evangelism. We trust that from many individual Methodists General Booth will receive generous donations.

And we urge our Churches and Sunday-schools to arrange for taking collections on behalf of this unique regenerating and reconstructing Agency.

HORNE GONE INSANE

Fredericton, N.B., May 7.—Sheriff John B. Hawthorn, upon his return from taking prisoners to the Maritime Penitentiary at Dorchester, is quoted as declaring that Werner Horne, the former German army officer, who attempted to blow up the International bridge on the Canadian Pacific Railway at St. Croix, has gone insane. Horne has been working in the tailor shop since he entered the penitentiary, and has been a model prisoner, it is said. He will be deported to Germany if the Berlin Government will take him.

COAL PRICES LOWER

Prices of coal will be lowered throughout western Canada as the result of extensive developments to be carried out on the Alberta coal branch where steam shovels will be used instead of the more costly mining process to open a 30-foot seam of bituminous coal. This claim was made by George F. Macdonald, of Vancouver, who was a recent visitor here.

Chest colds and sore throat lead to grip. Stop them at once with Wizard Oil before they can develop into dangerous influenza.

STOLE OPERATOR'S COAT

G.T.R. Special Agent Haslam took to Belleville yesterday a youth of that city who was captured in the Manitoba yard here after he had made away with an overcoat belonging to F. H. Tackaberry, operator at Gananoque Junction. Tackaberry took pity on the boy and gave him half of his lunch. The reward was the theft of his overcoat and the hasty departure of the boy on a freight train. He was captured when he reached Brockville.—Brockville Recorder.

A GENEROUS ACT

A Lindsay citizen sold two hogs to a farmer for the sum of $97. The farmer being a U.F.O. man, shipped the two hogs along with others and having realized more than he expected sent the former a check for $2.05 additional. Queer things do happen in Lindsay.

LOST A HAND

Fred Hope, of Seagrave, near Port Perry, was handling a gun preparatory to going shooting for ground hogs The gun when tested refused to off, and as he attempted to repair it, the weapon exploded, tearing his hand to pieces so badly that it had to be amputated. He was operating a tractor when in some manner he was thrown, or fell under the machine which passed over him. The unfortunate young man is doing as well as could be expected and hopes are entertained for his ultimate recovery.

WILL RAISE KEYSTORM

Capt. William Leslie will leave shortly to resume operations on the raising of the sunken steamer Keystorm, off Scow Island, opposite Chippewa Bay. Capt. Leslie is making all the necessary preparation for getting at the work again. It will be recalled that the Keystorm, some few years ago, struck a rock and sank while en route to Montreal with 2,500 tons of soft coal. Examination of the wreck by divers showed that a large hole had been torn in the side of the vessel.

FAKE "HERO"

While it is not yet apple blossom time in Maryland, it is evidently the open season for some bold youth to blossom out as a post war hero and represent himself as a real great war veteran and a son of General Sir Sam Hughes, according to Mr. M. Burke, a friend of Sir Sam, who has recently come to Ottawa from that state. He told Sir Sam that this pseudo soldier was wearing the uniform of a Canadian officer with the long service chevrons and the proud decorations on his breast, representing himself as a son of Sir Sam and showing his strong attachment to "dad" by gratuitously cashing checks on Sir Sam. His lectures on the war showed that he himself had played no mean part in the great struggle.

RAILWAY WAGES

Early reports are expected regarding the results of negotiations in progress between a joint committee of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes and three International organizations of Railwaymen and the Grand Trunk. A common wage schedule providing for $4.50 a day for freight handlers $15 a month for checkers and an increase of $35 a month for railway clerks on a scale from $100 to $300 a month, including chief clerks and juniors, is under consideration. A bulletin received today from Montreal at the officers of W. J. MacPherson organizer for the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes stated that within a week a report will be made to the Board of Arbitration on the understanding reached by the company and the men. Should no common basis result Judge McLennan's Board will then arbitrate on the points still in dispute. According to Elroy Robson, C.P., organizer of Montreal who is in Toronto today, over 3,500 employes of the Grand Trunk in Ontario and Quebec will be affected. Of these about 500 are in Toronto.

At the junction of the street near where the silent policeman is stationed the cars came together. The result was that considerable damage was sustained to the Ford car and the fender of Mr. Newsonmes car was bent. It is alleged that the latter had the right of way and was in no way responsible for the collison.

CAPTAIN EARNEST HILL, of Portland, Me., who says he was not able to report for duty befor taking Tanlac. ..Declares he feels like a new man now and is on deck every day ready for work.

"I feel just like a new man since I began taking Tanlac and I am not only willing, but I am anxious to tell other people what this medicine has done for me," said Captain Earnest H. Hill, Portland, Me., recently.

Captain Hill is in command of the Ben Hur, plying between Portland and Casco Bay. He has been in the service for ten years and is held in high regard as an officer and citizen by all who know him.

"I have suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble for the past eight years," continued Captain Hill, "and at the time I started taking Tanlac I was in such a weakened condition I could hardly stand up. When I walked I would actually stagger like a drunken man, and, at times, would have to hold on to something to keep from falling. After every meal I would simply suffer torment. My food would sour and I would swell up so with gas I could hardly get my breath.

I would also have awful smothering spells at night and sometimes I would have to get up to get my breath. Lots of times I would have to open the windows and doors to let in fresh air, or go out into the open air in order to get my breath. I could not find anything to do me any good and along toward the last I became so weak and nervous I could not do my work.

"Five bottles of Tanlac have made a wonderful change in my condition. It helped me from the very first dose and now I feel as good as I did when I was twenty years old. I sleep fine and have a fine appetite and just feel like a new man in every way. I am now able to be on deck every day ready for duty."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

CAIRO-CAPE FLIGHT.

Colonel Van Ryneveld and Captain Brand are to be congratulated on the completion of their flight from Cairo to the Cape. The Silver Queen II. had crashed when leaving Bulawayo. The Government of the Union of South Africa sent another machine, the Voortrekker, to enable the courageous aviators to complete the flight and they arrived at Cape Town on March 20th. The flight was robbed of spectacular effect by the fact that three machines had to be employed. The original Silver Queen—a Vickers-Vimy-Rolls—crashed, it will be remembered, at Korosko, halfway between Cairo and Khartum, and her engines were transferred to a new machine, Silver Queen II, on which the journey to Bulawayo was made. Colonel Van Ryneveld states that the engine troubles from which he suffered during the flight were similar to those experienced by Captain Cockerell and Captain Broome, whose attempt was abandoned after a crash at Tabora. They had come to the conclusion that engine troubles may be attributed to the starting up of engines during the heat of the day.

Calls On Democratic Party To Stand "Four Square"

PRESIDENT WILSON WANTS CAMPAIGN CONDUCTED ON PLATFORM OF OPPOSITION TO LODGE RESERVATIONS AND SQUARELY IN FAVOR OF TREATY OF VERSAILLES—HONOR OF THE NATION AT STAKE, SAYS THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, May 11—A call to the Democratic party to go into the campaign standing four square in favor of the treaty of Versailles and against the Senate's reservations, was issued by President Wilson in a telegram to Oregon Democratic leaders, made public at the White House.

Declaring that the party had "the honor of the nation" in its hands, the President said that the Lodge reservations were "utterly inconsistent" with that honor, as well as destructive of the role of world leadership which the United States must assume.

The only true Americanism, the President said, was "that which puts America at the front of free nations and redeems the great promises which we made to the world." It would be a violation of such promises, he said, to attach reservations to the treaty, which "whittle down or weaken it as the Republican leaders of the Senate have proposed to do."

Wheat Price Again Increased

Board Adds 35 and 40 Cents to Prices to Mills—Bitter Criticism of Action by Millers and Bakers

WINNIPEG, May 11.—The Canadian Wheat Board issued new regulations effective at midnight, May 8, advancing the price to mills of all grades of Western wheat 5 cents per bushel, and British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec wheat 40 cents per bushel. Another regulation, effective at the same time, increases the maximum prices of bran and shorts to the extent of $3 per ton.

"Flour probably won't go up for some time," comented Mr. C. B. Watts, Secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, "because nobody will buy at the advanced price." Mr. Watts' explanation of the Wheat Board's increase in price was, that wheat is selling far more for export than it is here. Under the order in Council the Wheat Board has got to secure the same for domestic flour as it does for export.

Mr. Watts withheld criticism of the latest action of the board, but the head of one of the biggest flour mills was almost bitter in his comment. "I didn't think the Wheat Board would increase the cost of living any further here," he said. "I thought they would have some regard to the high cost of living prevailing. The Wheat Board is simply making a few Western grain growers wealthy at the expense of the consuming public of Canada."

This man corroborated the $1.55 and $1.80 estimate in the increase in flour prices. It was not true, he said, that Canadian flour mills were filled with flour. The truth was that the Canadian Government was shipping wheat out of the country to provide employment to foreign millers and keeping inactive the Canadian milling industry. "The milling industry," he commented "is in bad shape in Canada."

"Terrible" and "unfortunate" were two of the adjectives Z. Hilton, baker applied to the Wheat Board's action. "It is something the bakers never expected" he said. "The lowering of the price of everything will have to start with wheat. It is like gold, the basis of the cost of living." He described the 35 cent. increase as a "tremendous jilt" to bakers.

Dominion Budget Will Be Delayed

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 11—The Budget has been delayed, an official announcement was made last week that it would be presented tomorrow, but to quote high authority it is very doubtful if the budget will be brought down this week at all. In all probability it will be submitted next week. This afternoon, it is expected, Sir George Foster will announce the postponement of the budget and the government intentions in the matter. It is understood that the main cause of the postponement is the arrival of Sir Robert Borden tomorrow, who will be afforded and opportunity of studying the proposals before their presentation to the House.

Joe Beckett, heavyweight boxing champion of England, knocked out Bombardier Wells in the third round.

Toronto Leafs made a slight gain in the International League race by beating Syracuse. Spencer and Riley made home runs.

Police Frustrate Gigantic Plot To Seize Argentina

Reds Outwitted by Officers Who Took Part in Planning Uprising

BUENOS AYRES, May 11.—How the police of Argentina, before the date set for the Communist revolution in combination with the recent general strike here, outwitted the Reds and prevented the uprising has just been revealed by the Associated Press correspondent.

Radical elements, mostly of foreign extraction, had planned the reign of terror for the same day on which the Kapp revolution in Germany began. If the ambitious plans of the Communists for murder and pillage had succeeded the city would have been in control of a government of the Bolshevik soviet variety, backed by a Red army.

SWOOPED DOWN ON RESORTS

The police, who had learned of the plot long in advance, however, on the night before the revolution was to take place, descended upon the Communist resorts, arrested nearly 200 men and women and confiscated several arsenals of bombs, arms and ammunition, with large quantities of anarchistic literature.

The Government, it developed, sent detectives among the Communists, some of whom joined their organization and actually helped to manufacture the bombs with which the reign of terror was to be started. They also obtained secret circulars giving instructions as to how the revolution was to be accomplished.

The Communists, it is alleged, formed part of a labor organization known as the Fifth Congress of Anarchism, which some time ago separated from the Argentine Federation of Labor and which is supposed to control a number of unions.

BOMB FACTORY CAPTURED

Instructions had been issued by the Communists fixing the date of the revolution for Saturday afternoon, March 13th. Groups were assigned to destroy public services; electric lights and water plants, railroads, telephones and telegraphs and others were assigned to explode bombs in public places, seize military stores and assassinate judges and place the city under control of a central soviet committee.

Being fully aware of all these plans the Government authorities on the night before the date set for the revolution stationed troops at all places threatened. The police then raided the Communist plants and captured a complete bomb factory and a large assortment of arms and ammunition.

All was done quietly, but the people of Buenos Ayres soon realized that they had escaped a real danger when photographs of the collections of death-dealing implements were published in the newspapers and the police revealed the frustrated plans.

RADICAL UNIONS STRIKE

Squads of mounted police armed with rifles appeared in the streets for several days after the raids. Three radical unions struck and there were unsuccessful attempts to blow up a railroad bridge and a suburban tramline was forced to suspend until soldiers arrived to protect the cars from attacks on conductors and motormen.

The city, however, is now quiet awaiting with interest the trial of the alleged anarchists, 23 of whom have been sifted out as ringleaders. Only nine of them are native Argentines.

Socialist newspapers blame profiteers for the unrest here, landlords having trebled rents in many cases and the price of bread having been increased.

Celebrate Centenary Of Heroine Of Crimea

HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE TO BE OBSERVED THROUGHOUT DOMINION ON WEDNESDAY.

It will be just one hundred years ago on Wednesday that the founder of modern nursing, or as she is more lovingly called, "The Foster Mother of the Race," such character being Miss Florence Nightingale, the heroine of the Crimea, was born in England, and now that the centenary of her birth has arrived, the nurses throughout the whole of the Dominion intend to hold mass meetings in their various localities for the purpose of reviewing her life-work.

Florence Nightingale was by no means a sweet-tempered woman, but rather aggressively constructive in her undertakings, but she was able by the virtue of the esteem that she was held in by the general public after her Crimean experiences, to hold the attention of the men in office and so accomplish what up to that time was considered the impossible, namely, to break down the old traditions that were met with in every house of sickness, and to gradually replace the untrained, but charitable neighbor by the trained and efficient nurse of her period. Her two chief ideals were first, that out of her teachings would gradually arise, the highly trained and efficient nurse for the care of the sick and secondly the highly trained woman and nurse that would carry on the instruction in the field of preventive medicine, to the, up to that time, ignorant householder.

Both Ideals Reached

After a long and by no means easy road, her first ideal has arrived at the goal that she desired as it is witnessed by the decreased death rate wherever the public health nurse has had a fair chance to cope with the existing evil; and her second ideal, also, judging from the action of the Progressive Health Board of England, which is practically the most complete and highly organized institute of its kind in the world, and that branches of the institution have spread to the States and are gradually being established in Canada. Their introduction will in all events see in the near future the vast majority of the sick-room work being left to the efficient and capable nurse working under the instruction nurse that is always with us, while the more important work of proper education along the lines of educating the general public in the field of preventive medicine will be left to the more recent graduates of the 391 training schools for nurses that are scattered throughout the Dominion.

Dominion-Wide Action

It is this latter class that is having the most attention paid to it at the present time by the physicians and teachers in charge of the training schools, for at a recent meeting of 60 of the leading nurse representatives of various organizations in North America, at which Dr. Vincent of the Rockefeller Foundation presided, the two important Canadian organizations namely, the Canadian National Association of Trained Nurses and the Canadian National Association for Nurse Education, formulated plans which will be Dominion-wide in their action for emphasizing the fact that at the present time the training schools for nurses need more of the high-school graduate type of girl, than any other class, principally because the nurse of the present day is more and more becoming the teacher rather than the minister of the patients' wants.

War Romance Shattered For English Girl

WIARTON, May 11—A pitiable aftermath of a war-time marriage in England has, if it correctly reported, been brought to light here today. Early in the war Laurence Keeshing, a member of the Cape Croker Indian band enlisted, went overseas and was wounded while on active service. While convalescing he became acquainted with a beautiful English maiden, and later, it is said, succeeded in having her go through a form of marriage with him.

Keeshig, who is a well-educated Indian, having graduated from the local high school, speaks English fluently, and is possessed of a personality that would make a favorable impression.

Late Saturday evening the English girl arrived here with a babe several months old. The later is a beautiful, happy child and apparently shows no trace of Indian ancestry, being of a very blonde type. Keeshig met the couple at the train, and they have remained at a local hotel, not being taken to his home on the Indian Reserve for reason, it is alleged, that at that point resides an Indian wife with two or three children, whom he left behind when he went overseas.

Just what will be the outcome of the situation cannot yet be conjectured, as the English girl is keeping her own counsel and says little or nothing to any townspeople. Her plight has aroused the sympathy of all and any assistance that can be given her will be rendered with despatch. So far as can be ascertained no officials of the law have been notified, or received any instructions regarding the case.

It is rumored that the English girl has cabled to her family, who are said to be very well to do and it is deemed probable that she may slip quietly away without causing any trouble to her erring Indian lover.

BUFFALO PROFITEER WAS FINED $1,000

Buffalo, N.Y., May 11.—Stanislaus Lipowicz, local wholesale grocer, was fined $1,000 by Judge Hazel in the Federal Court for receiving an unjust and unreasonable profit for sugar last January. The indictment charged that Lipowicz paid $11.66 per hundred pounds and charged $17.25 per hundred pounds of beet sugar.

U.S. Naval Sec'y Makes Counter Charge

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, May 11—A counter charge that the establishment of the North Sea mine barrage was delayed six months because of the opposition of Rear Admiral Sims and the British Admiralty was made before the Senate Naval Investigation Committee today by Secretary Daniels in presenting the second part of his reply to the officers charged that the United States Navy Department has unnecessarily prolonged the war through failure to co-operate fully at first with allied naval forces. Mr. Daniels claimed that barrage was wholly an American idea. The secretary also charged that Sims attempted in his testimony to rob the American navy of the credit for this project and give it to the British.

The decision of the Government to seek dissolution came after hours of discussion by the Council of Ministers presided over by President Deschanel.

Denunciation Of Divorce Courts

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

BRANTFORD, May 11—The denunciation of divorce courts for Ontario and of extreme radicalism were features of the charge Bishop David Williams, of Huron, delivered at the annual meeting of the synod of Huron here today. Bishop Williams recommended that the church maintain its present stand in relation to divorce and the marriage of divorced people. He believed that the establishment of a divorce court in Ontario would be a calamity of just magnitude to extend the causes of divorce.

Widows Will Get Assistance From Ontario

Bill Introduced by Hon. Walter Rollo Passes Legislature

TORONTO, May 11.—After July 1 of this year pensions for widows with two or more children will be a reality in Ontario, if Hon. Walter Rollo's Mothers' Allowances Bill, introduced into the Legislature passes the House at its present sitting. As with the Minimum Wage Board, two of the members of the Commission will be women and the five persons who will constitute the Commission will serve without remuneration.

In the act as introduced there are no figures showing the extent of pensions to be given. This is apparently left to the board. It will decide the amount of assistance to be given.

Besides widows, the act extends its benefits to the family of a man asylum, or of a man who is permanently disabled and incapable of contributing to the support of his family. There are stipulations as to residence in Canada and Ontario, and the act as at present introduced, limits its scope to mothers with "two or more of her own children under fourteen years of age and has not adequate means to care properly for them without the assistance of allowance under this act."

RESIDENTIAL RULES

The residential regulations state that the mother must be resident in Canada at the time of the death or total disability of the father and for a period of three years immediately prior to the application for an allowance, and who was a resident of Ontario at the time application for allowance is made, and for two years prior thereto. She must stay in Ontario while in receipt of such allowance, must be a British subject by birth, or the wife of a British subject, and a fit and proper person to have the custody of her children.

The widest powers of investigation and administration of the fund, including the right to declare the amount of the monthly allowance are to be conferred on the Commission. The cost is to be borne jointly by the Province and the municipality in which the pensioner is resident, except in judicial districts outside of cities, where the Province will bear the whole cost.

MODE OF DISTRIBUTION

In brief explanation to the members of the House, Hon. M. Rollo explained that the allowances would be distributed through local Commissions acting under the general direction of a Provincial Board. He believed a greater degree of care would be exercised locally if the municipalities bore a part of the burden. It was not the intention of the Government to include stated amounts as pensions, but to see that the family in need of pension had sufficient to prevent them from being in want.

The legislation follows very closely the suggestions laid down by Dr. W. A. Riddell, Deputy Minister of Labor in his recent report to the Government on mothers' allowances.

Claim Revolution In Mexico Is In The Final Stage

ACTIVE FIGHTING ABOUT OVER, IN OPINION OF REVOLUTIONARY LEADERS IN CONTROL OF MEXICO CITY—FOREIGN CAPITAL AND LIVES AND PROPERTY TO BE PROTECTED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Officials of the new revolutionary party in virtual control of Mexico City today maintained that the Revolutions in the final stage so far as active fighting is concerned. Statements from Revolutionary leaders at Juarez opposite El Paso indicate that all efforts would now be bent towards the restoration of the country's industry and prosperity.

Foreign industry and capital in the development of the country's resources was welcomed in a statement in which lives and property were promised protection.

U.S. Plans To Save 30,000,000 Tons Of Coal Every Year

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Thirty million tons of coal can be saved annually under the proposal which has been made to link up electric power stations throughout the eastern stations in one big power system, Nathar C. Grover, of the Interior Department says.

Grover plans to conduct for the Interior Department, a survey of the cost of establishing a single intercommunicating electric power system.

"The big saving of coal involved probably would make all coal prices cheaper throughout the country," he said: "It would relieve the railroads of a large part of the heavy coal traffic they now carry, leaving them free to carry an additional load of food and other commodities. This would reduce living costs very materially.

"Manufacturers in the Eastern States between Boston and Washington would probably be able to get their power 25 per cent. cheaper. This also would tend to lower prices.

"Generation of power in electrical units a few big stations is far more efficient than the present plan of burning tons of coal in each individual plant to manufacture power for use there only.

ELEVEN FARMERS FINED TOTAL OF $10,500

Windsor, May 11—Eleven French-Canadian farmers living at Petite Cote, a small settlement seven miles west of Windsor and on the river front, whose extensive receipts of liquor from Montreal had attracted the attention of License Inspector Mousseau, found themselves in difficulty when they were unable to satisfactorily explain to the Inspector what had become of the liquor. As a result ten of the men were fined the maximum of $1,000 with costs, while the eleventh escaped with $500 and costs.

Their names are Gordon Reaume, Buck Reaume, Joseph Roaume, M. Renaud, M. Boismier, Albert Evon, A. Meloche, Joseph Millen, Wallace Meloche, Albert Martin and Alenby Bondy.

Shipments of 50, 100 and 200 cases of whiskey at a time have been made to some of these men, according to the License Inspector. It was learned that most of the stuff had crossed the river to Detroit.

Minimum Wages For Women And Girls

Bill Authorizing Appointment of Commission is Introduced in the Legislature.

Toronto, May 11.—Five persons, two of them women, will constitute a commission, with wide powers of investigation and negotiation, to set minimum wages for women and girls in all industries. Hon. Walter Rollo's expected bill, authorizing its appointment, was introduced in the Legislature with comparatively few members in their seats.

The authority to appoint the members rests with the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, and Hon. Mr. Rollo's bill stipulates that the position shall be honorary except for per diem allowances when members are carrying on investigations on behalf of the act. "The board," says the act, "shall have authority to conduct investigations as it may be necessary for purpose of ascertaining conditions prevailing in any class of employment." After due investigation the board can establish a minimum wage for employees in any trade, and can at the same time establish a lower scale for employees classified as handicapped or part-time employees.

Conferences between employers and employees can be called by the board where the wage scale is deemed too low. If the result of such conference is unsatisfactory the board can order a new conference, or can forthwith establish a minimum wage.

Heavy penalties are provided for nonconformance with Minimum Wage Board regulations. Every employer, says the act, who contravenes an order of the board by paying less than the established minimum is liable to a penalty not exceeding $500 a day, and not less than $50 per day, for each employee affected, and will also be required to make good the difference between the minimum established and the wages paid. In default of payment of such fine the employer renders himself liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, and not less than two months.

THE BACK YARD GARDENER.

By Robert Drysdale.

I have had to take a chance this week on planting out a lot of stuff which I had growing in flats in the house. These things were gradually hardening off by being taken out of doors during the day. There may be some frosts yet, but most of these are hardy flowers, and will stand very low temperatures. Of course, frosts may occur here at any time except July and August, so all gardening work is more or less of a gamble.

I have mixed up a small heap of black muck from a cedar swamp with some clay from a neighbor's garden. This is to be spread on a bed of Iceberg lettuce. I have always found that a little clay is a great help in getting good heads of lettuce. It retains the moisture and helps to keep the roots cool in hot weather.

It is really too early to plant corn yet, but we have about 40 hills of Golden Bantam in the ground. If the weather warms up this corn will come early, and we shall be ahead of the game. There is a great deal of satisfaction in getting corn really early.

Anyone who is planting a good-sized patch of wax beans should use the Davis White Wax. It very often happens that wax beans are not picked soon enough and the pods get too tough to be used green. If this happens to Davis White Wax the beans can be allowed to dry and later on they can be shelled or threshed out for winter use. This variety has a thin slender shell like the ordinary small white bean. The outside coat of most wax beans is too hard and leathery and they do not cook well for this reason.

Those who are planting Dooley potatoes will find them large croppers, good cookers and excellent keepers. Moreover, they grow large and smooth. I have seen some excellent crops of this variety.

The assassins fired point-blank at a range of a few feet.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

"BOMBS" HIDDEN IN LEAD PENCILS

Paris, May 11—A Frenchman visiting the Somme region found what he thought was a good German pencil with metal casing. Returning to Paris he called in some friends to see his souvenir.

While it wrote perfectly well, he decided to see how the pencil was encased. In unscrewing the casing he exploded a tiny powder magazine, with the result that his friends were injured, he had to be removed to the hospital suffering from severe burns and all the crockery in the room was smashed, but little remained of the pencil.

Such accidents are said to be numerous, not infrequently resulting in loss of life.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

"RED RIDING HOOD"

R's for Red Riding Hood, gorgeous and bright elaborately staged by F. Stewart White, coming to Griffin's to-morrow night, for one night only. In answer to the Dominion demand, which has been created by "Alladin," "Robinson Crusoe" and "Cinderella," Mr. Whyte is offering as his fourth annual English musical pantomine, "Little Red Riding Hood." This, his latest effort is said to surpass in every way all his previous productions, both by the manner in which it has been staged and the wonderful cast and chorus of pantomine artists who have been brought here direct from the leading London theatres.

In addition to Miss Zara Clinton, Mr. J. V. Barrett, Lennard and Miss Pauline Harvey, all favorites of former years, he is bringing Mr. Johnny Osborne, of "Zig Zag" from the London Hippodrome and the Follies Bergere, Paris, Mr. Will Hallett, the famous animal impersonator from the Drury Lane, Miss Dorothy Mackay, the eleven-year-old leading lady, who will play the role of Red Riding Hood Mr. Charles Cardel and Miss Harriett Fawn, International stars; Miss Madge Locke, Scotch comedienne, and a host of others who are destined to become as great favorites in this country as they now are in England.

Mr. Whyte's production of the piece comprises eleven wonderful scenes and is studded with thirty tinkling musical gems, including the song hits from "San Toy," "The Geisha," "The Belle of New York," "The Greek Slave," and other old time comic operas. A double dozen of dimpled chorusters, veritable fashion plates, also helps to make, this, truly Mr. Whyte's masterpiece.

DESMOND AT HIS BEST

William Desmond, the star with a smile in every punch, blarneys and fights his way through five thrilling reels in "The Blue Bandanna," his latest production which was screened at the Palace last evening. "The Blue Bandanna" is an original story by Eugene B. Lewis, of the West, as Jerry Jerome, (William Desmond), a young New York millionaire, found it. When the doctor told Jerry his hemoglobin was forty points shy which accounted for several cylinders in his brain motor missing Jerry hiked for the West in order to get away from the excitement of Wall Street and feed on the mental pep of the wild and wooly. But Jerry ran into more excitement in Wyoming in a few weeks than the bulls and bears of "The Street" had ever stirred up. The stage driver told him "They ain't no excitement in the West no more," but Jerry hadn't been there twenty-four hours when the bandits got busy. Jerry got busy too, and with the enthusiasm of a kid started out to emulate Nick Carter and run the bandits to earth. When he found one the bandit was the father of the girl he had fallen in love with, and was an ex-convict besides, it complicated matters all around. Desmond was never better than in this role, and that is saying a lot, for the genial William has had some splendid mediums for his talent in the past. Jean Acker wins ne wfavor in the role of Ruth Yancy. Others in the excellent cast are Russell Simpson, Frank Lanning and Richard LaReno. Harold Lloyd in a comedy, "He Leads, Others Follow," Babies of the Farm, an amusing animal study, a very interesting Bruce reel, and a Katzenjammer cartoon comedy were also being screened on the same program.

THRILLING ANIMAL PICTURE

Before a capacity audience at Griffin's last night, Selig's wonderful animal picture, "The Lost City," was presented. If the circus may be said to be the greatest show on earth, it may be truthfully stated that "The Lost City," is the greatest animal film of the screen. It goes the circus one better—in fact, several better. So while introducing all of the wild animals usually found in the bigger circuses, "The Lost City" pictures them in their native haunts, unfettered and free. It is a distinct surprise in production going further in its thrills and sensations than anything yet produced on the screen. One thing is certain, this attraction will grip and hold any audience, as it possesses every element of sensation and thrills that makes one intensely anxious to know the outcome of each episode. It just takes one word to give our idea of "Crooked Straight," which is also being shown on the same program, featuring Charles Ray and that one word is Great! The picture is great and the star is great. Charles Ray is our idea of a perfect actor. That is, a natural actor. No one would ever think that the easy-going, unassuming Charles Ray would be cast as a crook. But that is just what has happened. "Crooked Straight," is not the usual story of a man sunk in the depths who turns straight after spending the most of his life behind prison bars, but of a man who gets just one taste of crime and then decides to be good thereafter for he has learned his lesson. And, of course, there is the girl. It would take all the thrill out of seeing the picture if we told you how he outwitted his enemy, so we will leave it to you to find out the ending. Julian Josephson, who is responsible for so many of Mr. Ray's successes, is the author of "Crooked Straight." Most of us like our screen heroes with a dash of bad in them. That's the way most of us are ourselves, and since Charlie Ray is just about the most true-to-life star in the movies today, he and "Crooked Straight" fit each other like a new pair of kid gloves. "Her Private Husband," a funny 2-reel Fox Sunshine comedy was also shown during the evening in addition to the above offering. The entire program is being repeated again to-night for the last time.

Bishop Fallon Talks Of Divorce

Attacks Evils of Separation and Asks Where are the Uplifters

LONDON, Ont., May 10—Bishop M. F. Fallon, addressing a class of confirmation candidates at St. Mary's Church launched an attack on the evils of divorce and upon moral reformers who champion other causes and ignore the move for the establishment of Canadian divorce courts.

"For twelve years this province has been subjected to an orgy of moral uplift," the Bishop declared. The Dominion Alliance, the Methodist Alliance, the Anti-Cigarette League, and the Anti-Betting League, the Banish the Bar League, and the Women's Christian Association have striven for salvation by statute, to legislate us into holiness. It has been their work through the Legislature, or through those who control the legislature to make us holy at all costs, if it takes a new statute to do it.

"Now, so far as I am aware no one ever went to hell through smoking a cigarette. I must confess that when I was a boy about so high," and the Bishop indicated, "I went to the race track and saw a race and I found it interesting. They banished the bar and I am glad of it. But during recent months an attempt has been made to open wide the door to easy divorce.

Let Go Unchallenged

Yet this evil, ten thousand times worse than anything battered and hammered by the uplifters for the last twelve years, is allowed to go unchallenged; this most insidious of all evils, that strike at the root and foundation of the nation, the morality of the house, threatens, and there is not a squeak out of them. What is the taking of a drink, the smoking of a cigarette or attending a horse race to the breaking up of a Christian home?

The uplifters are horrified if a man takes another drink, but they're satisfied if he takes another wife. I would rather have a thousand drunkards than one divorced man.

"Where are the uplifters? Where are the Dominion Alliance, the referendum committee, the Women's Christian Asociation, the Ministerial Association? They will tell you that you will go to hell if you buy a newspaper on Sunday, but you may have Mrs. X. on Monday and a different Mrs. X. on Thursday.

"When they launch a campaign against divorce we Catholics will be with them to a man but till they do laugh at them and what they teach. To-morrow some jellyfish Catholics will say why doesn't this man leave such subjects alone? My duty is plain. I know this will go out through the papers; let it. In letters a foot high let the world know that you Catholic and myself are hereby on record against the inroads of immorality through easy divorce."

The bishop declared that Canadians today have the spectacle of divorce courts being given to Ontario without the people having asked for it and of divorce courts being inflicted on Prince Edward Island against the expressed protests of the people of that province.

French Caught In Ambush And Cut To Pieces

Of Detachment of 500 Men who Left Urfa Only 133 Returned

ALEPPO, Syria, May 11.—The slaughter of the little French garrison which evacuated Urfa on a promise of safe conduct by the Turkish Nationalist troops, after the town had been besieged for sixty-one days, is described in the diary of General Wood ward, accountant for the American Commission for Relief in the Near East, who was an eye-witness of the massacre. He escaped and returned to Urfa after several hundred French soldiers had been killed or made prisoners by tribesmen.

The French were ambushed by tribesmen in violation of an agreement made by Namik Effendi, who came from Angora as the Turkish Nationalist Government's representative the diary says, and promised the Frenchmen safe conduct if they would evacuate. At that time the French had only four days' rations left and had eaten all their horses and mules, and evacuation was considered inevitable, as the garrison was greatly outnumbered by the enemy.

KILLED WOUNDED MEN

General Woodward says, in his diary, that he saw the Turks killing the French wounded on the field, and that he and an officer of the gendarmerie saw prisoners killed by the Turks after they had surrendered.

"Namik Effendi agreed to protect the Christian population, provide a guard of gendarmerie and a transport of sixty camels and thirty horses if the French would leave," the diary says. "The garrison evacuated at 1.30 o'clock in the morning.

"We were suddenly attacked from the rear and from both flanks while we were moving as a column spaced at regular intervals. The order was given to deploy, and this was carried out into the hills occupied by the enemy, who almost surrounded us.

"The attack lasted for two hours, the Turks having 2,000 irregular troops and one machine gun. They made a special target of our transport doubtless for plunder. As the firing increased other tribes joined in the attack. Our rear guard was caught in a trap from which few escaped alive.

CUT OFF REAR GUARD

"With the transport destroyed, the rear guard cut off, and our line of defense broken, we could only surrender and an officer of the genarmerie was sent with a white flag. I accompanied him with an American flag. We were continually fired upon as we approached the enemy, asking for his commander. We were told there was no commander as the troops were irregular, and finally we sent messengers to the flanks and at 10.20 the firing ceased, but another party of Kurds arrived almost immediately and the firing was reopened. I asked the chief of the gendarmerie to return to Urfa with me, which we managed to do by a side trail.

"Of the detachment of five hundred only one hundred and thirty two soldiers and one officer returned to Urfa The remainder presumably were killed."

THIS WILL REMOVE HAIR OR FUZZY GROWTHS

(Toilet Tips)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin, and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is adviseable to see that you get genuine delatone.

BASEBALL

Kelso, the crack southpaw pitcher for Oshawa Team whose past baseball history has been given in the Ontario Reformer and who is expected to play with the Williams Piano Co. team in the Senior Town League this year, was on hand and from his pitching on Saturday he looks like "Goyer II." He is shaping up like real, fine timber.—Oshawa Reformer.

FORM IA WON—SCORE 8-7

On Friday night on the High school ground Form IA won another victory, their victims this time being Form IB. The game was full of thrills, first one team would forge ahead, then the other. Before the game commenced it was agreed upon by the captains that only five innings should be played. At the end of the fifth the score was tied and an extra innings was played with the result that IA scored one run and IB none. Arnott twirled a good game for IB but was given rather poor support. Firth pitched a fair game and was well backed by his team mates. Turner connected for a number of safe hits and these seemed to come at exactly the right time. Boyle and Curry did the best work with the bat for IA, out of four chances at bat making three safe hits. A return game will be played in the near future.

INOCULATION OF SEED

Nitro-Cultures for Increasing Legume Production.

Friendly Bacteria Perform the Trick—Preparation and Distribution of Cultures Described—How to Procure Supplies.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

LEGUMINOUS crops, such as alfalfa, clover, peas, beans, vetches, etc., have long been known, under certain conditions, to leave the land on which they were grown in a richer condition than it was in before the crop. The necessary conditions are, in addition to the soil being in good tilth and well drained, that there should be in the soil certain species of bacteria known as Legume Bacteria. These legume bacteria penetrate the young roots of the legumes where they produce little swellings or nodules, singly or in bunches. On clovers these nodules are very small but numerous, while on peas and beans they are comparatively large and few in number. The bacteria in these nodules fix the free nitrogen of the atmosphere so that the plant can use it as food. Without the aid of the bacteria the plants cannot do this and no crops other than the legumes can do it, even with the bacteria present in the soil.

On old soils, or where clovers or other legumes are successfully grown in crop rotation, the bacteria are usually present. In new soils, however, or when new legume crops, as alfalfa, are grown in old soil, the appropriate bacteria are apt not to be present and in such cases some method of inoculation should be adopted to supply the bacteria. Numerous experiments and prolonged experience have shown that the best way to do this is to inoculate the seed with the necessary bacteria.

For such seed inoculation, artificially grown cultures of the bacteria originally secured from the nodules on the roots of the same species of plant which is to be sown, are applied to the seed shortly before it is sown. By this method the bacteria are carried into the soil with the seed, and in ample numbers to practically insure infection of the roots, with consequent increased growth of the crop.

The Bacteriological Laboratory of the Ontario Agricultural College has prepared and distributed legume nitro-culture to Canadian farmers each season since 1905. For ten years blanks were sent to those farmers who received cultures, on which they reported the results of the seed inoculation as to whether it had been of benefit to the seeding. During this time 27,750 cultures were sent out, and reports received showed that 80 per cent. alfalfa and 70 per cent. red clover gave increased returns following seed inoculation.

The cultures for inoculating seed are grown in the Bacteriological Laboratory on a specially prepared "culture medium" and each one contains a sufficient number of bacteria to inoculate a bushel of seed.

For inoculating the seed, the culture is simply mixed with a little skim-milk, or whey, or whole milk, then mixed thoroughly with the seed, which is allowed to dry a few minutes and sown in the usual way.

Cultures are distributed from the Bacteriological Laboratory for inoculating seed of alfalfa, red clover, white clover, crimson clover, alsike clover, sweet clover, vetches, peas, sweet peas, cow peas, field peas and soy beans.

Each kind of seed requires a different kind of culture. The cultures are for use on seed only. There is only one size package, this being sufficient for 60 pounds of seed, though the entire culture may be used on less seed without harm. The cultures are sent by mail with complete directions for their use.

Price.—A nominal charge of 25c for each culture is made to cover expense of preparation and postage.

Application for Nitro-Cultures.—Applications for cultures should state the kind and amount of seed to be inoculated and the approximate date of seeding. Applications should be sent early, and should be accompanied with remittance to pay in full for the number of cultures desired (twenty-five cents per culture). Address as follows: Prof. D. H. Jones, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Canada. It is important that the application should state plainly the kind and amount of seed to be treated, and the Name, Post Office, County and Province of the applicant.

Letters received from those who have received these cultures speak very highly of this method of inoculation as shown by the following:

Messrs. J. J. Murray & Co., Seed Merchants, Edmonton, Alta.: "We wish to congratulate you on your products which we have made use of many times. We made many tests in Ontario which proved to us that even alfalfa screenings would produce a greater growth the first and second year after being treated with the bacterial culture than the very best quality of alfalfa seed would without treatment."

Mr. J. B. Munro, Fort William, Ont.: "The cultures were used on peas of an early variety. The larger portion of the seed was inoculated, but part was planted in the ordinary way as a check plot. In twelve weeks the whole field had reached maturity with the exception of the uninoculated strip which was still green. I was not aware that the use of cultures hastened maturity of this legume, but it appears from this experiment that the crop was not only improved in yield, but growth and maturity were hastened. The part of the crop grown from inoculated seed gave excellent results and in future cultures will be used on all legumes grown on the home farm."—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

ZAM-BUK MAMA!

Mothers who have used Zam-Buk say it is so fine for the many little accidents of daily occurrence in the home—and especially where there are children—that they would not be without it. Not only so, but children who have had Zam-Buk applied to an injury or sore, when again injured, cry for Zam-Buk to be applied. They know that Zam-Buk stops pain. Nothing ends the pain of a cut, bruise, burn, or skin disease like Zam-Buk, and nothing soothes, draws out the soreness and heals so quickly.

Mrs. I. Wilson of Sarnia, Ont., says: "I could not do without Zam-Buk for my children. It is the best ointment we have ever used for burns, sores and cuts."

Mr. L. B. Andresen of 1407 E. 22nd St., Minneapolis, Minn., writes: "When any of the children, my wife or self meet with an accident, we immediately apply Zam-Buk. It has saved us many a doctor's bill."

Mrs. C. B. Ritcey of Riverport, N.S., writes: "My baby had sores on her face, caused by teething. Zam-Buk completely healed them."

Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, ringworm, running sores, blood-poison, ulcers, abscesses, piles, boils and pimples. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp for free trial.

Conservatives Will Call A Convention

Will Be Held in Ottawa—Caucus Arrives at Decision

TORONTO, May 11—Conservatives from all parts of the Dominion in closed sessions here this afternoon decided to call the Dominion party convention to be held in Ottawa at the earliest date for the purpose of selecting the leader to succeed Sir Robert Borden.

Eleven resolutions were passed in which the dominant notes were the urgency of re-organizing the Conservative party to restore the traditional policy of Sir John Macdonald, and an indirect slap at the Labor and Farmer parties, as being representatives of class interest.

The resolutions passed were, in brief:

1 Reorganization of the party.

2 A tribute of appreciation of soldiers' services.

3 An expression of faith in the awakened sense of duty, which women bring to the political.

4 An appeal to the people to rise above class prejudices. "No class," says the resolution, "whether agriculture, industry, labor, banker, lawyer, or any other class, can live and prosper within themselves."

5 That no handicap must be allowed to impede the progress of farmers.

6 A warning against the insidious influence of the criminal element of the I.W.W. from taking hold in the ranks of real labor.

7 The coordination of all branches of industry to prevent the exploitation of any one class by an other.

8 "That if Canada is to grow and prosper, the present ambiguity and vacillation in the national council of our country must give place to definite and firm practices, which will alone make for stability of Government and assure us the adequate development of our great wealth. This is the time to grasp our opportunity with decision and determination."

9 A return to the straight Conservative platform.

10 Immediate steps to reorganize the Conservative party in all Provinces.

11 The calling of a Dominion convention in Ottawa as soon as possible to select a leader.

OCEAN PASSENGERS ROBBED OF JEWELRY

New York, May 11—The loss of jewelry, estimated to be worth $40,000, while the Red Star steamer Finland was coming here from Antwerp was reported when the ship docked, one of the chief sufferers, it was said, being Robert Peel, a grandson of Sir Robert Peel, once Prime Minister of England. On Friday night a $3,000 diamond brooch belonging to Mrs. Peel disappeared, as did various other valuables belonging to other passengers. The mystery was not unraveled, despite a careful search.

WHERE THE KIDDIES LEARN TO SWIM.

The art of swimming is an accomplishment, a healthful exercise, and a preventative of drowning accidents. The summer swimming classes are now in full swing at the Y.M.C.A., and from the little girl or boy of nine or ten to the young men and maidens, and even people well along in life's journey, the swimming pool is being taken advantage of, and the art of correct swimming is being mastered under capable instructors. To those of us self-made swimmers who took our first strokes in the "old swimming hole," the river or the lake, and managed to attain more or less proficiency in straight swimming, treading water, floating, etc., the modern idea of teaching the art of sustaining oneself in the water under all conditions in a Y.M.C.A. tank is very interesting. Self-taught swimmers, as a rule, are crude amateurs compared to the modern swimmers who have been taught how to swim with the least exertion and how to remain above the water for a long time without physical exhaustion.

To the little girls, especially, is the Y.M.C.A. tank a great boon—they enjoy the sport, and the exercise is healthful and invigorating. They also master the art made famous by Annette Kellerman and are in a position to take care of themselves in the event of accidents upon the water.

Old fashioned mothers who do not hold with the many innovations of present day life and are not over-enamored with the idea of girls learning to swim, should visit the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool when the little tots are having their hour. Hard and fast prejudices would be adamant indeed to withstand the ocular evidence of present benefit and future promise in the spectacle of a group of wee nymphs disporting themselves in the water and learning to swim under the watchful eyes of a capable Y.M.C.A. instructor.

OIL IN EDEN.

British capital is going to develop oil wells in the Garden of Eden, or at any rate Mesopotamia, where the Garden is supposed to have been, says the Toronto Star. But if there are those who have the idea that Mesopotamia is today a land which blossoms like the rose, or is likely to so blossom now that its resources are to be exploited, almost any British soldier who was there during the great war, and who suffered "Eden's" climatic tortures, can undeceive them. The country has a glorious past, but to give it a similar future would require a more elaborate system of canals and a more thorough artificial irrigation than are likely to materialize.

Mesopotamia is today "a miserable wilderness of barren desert, alternating with vast swamps." All traces of ancient civilization have disappeared, except the mounds which cover the remains of Ur of the Chaldees (that sacred city of the moon, where Abraham was born), Babylon, Nineveh (where Jonah labored), and Selucia, which replaced Babylon and at one time boasted a population greater than Toronto's. "Ancient Bagdad," says a recent authority, "is represented by a vast area of broken bricks and rubbish, while the inhabitants of Mesopotamia, who used to number many millions, aggregate, at the present time, one to one and one-half million souls. Between Basra (the seaport) and Bagdad, all that can be seen is a vast alluvial plain, unrelieved by a single hill or natural eminence of any size. There are no trees other than the date palm and no stone of any description, and the climate is divided between intense heat in the summer and considerable cold in the winter."

It does not sound very inviting, but an oil welll is next thing to a gold mine, and Britain will make Mesopotamia a paying proposition even if it continues to be Eden un-Edenized.

CRISP COMMENT

Twin Beds may be Fair and Warmer, but a Twin-Six is easier to get these days than a Parlor, Bedroom and Bath. If you don't believe it, Please Get Married.

The acute housing situation in Toronto might be ameliorated by evicting the automobiles and allowing human beings to occupy the garages. Parking people in the parks may be a good idea, but parking autos in the parks might be better.

If the Drury Government would spend more time trying to reduce expenditure and less time in devising new methods of taxation a long-suffering public would have some reason to hope for a lightening of burdens already too heavy.

As the members of the Ontario Legislature are nearly all apprentices they should be well satisfied that a generous public spirit permits them to draw $1400 while learning the business. To ask for journeymen's wages, plus a whole lot more at the beginning of their apprenticeship is drawing it rather strong.

First things should be first and the housing question is easily the first thing of importance in Belleville today. Apparently resolutions will not build houses, so a public meeting is to be held to discuss the question. Seems as if the first thing necessary is to find out if an ambitious housing project can be financed, and then ascertain how many citizens are prepared to take advantage of a municipal housing scheme to become owners of their own homes. Public meetings seldom get anywhere.

Rotarian Billy Doyle has taken unto himself a motor car, large enough for his growing family, so naturally it is rather a large car. Then Billy's family of friends is so large that the car will necessarily be not only roomy but of the "lift" variety, for Billy is just naturally that kind of a Rotarian who believes in giving people a lift instead of a kick—an uplifter in the broadest sense. Because Billy is an enthusiastic Rotarian is no reason to believe that his motor car will be inclined to rotate, for being naturally inclined to pick up things quickly, Billy was not long mastering the car's innards and out'ards, the why and wherefore, to go, to stop, to slow, to speed, to climb a tree or jump a ditch—or, as Billy says, "to be or not to be, when the bees leave the beehive and monopolize the King's Highway." However, and also, because, etc., there's a reason—the Government is going hard after Income Tax Dodgers and Mr. William Doyle, being the man behind the Income Tax gun in this district, hence the gasolene buggy. A good many people may come to believe that he is driving an armored car before the summer is out—so better be good or the tax collector will get you if you don't watch out.

No Arbitrary Action
Toronto Globe

If there is a considerable body of labor opinion in Canada in favor of extending the provisions of the industrial disputes act, more generally known as the Lemieux Act, to disputes not connected with public utilities, a great deal may be accomplished for the general benefit. It is not easy in these days of close connection between all phases of the industrial business, and social life of the community to say just where the line as between necessary work and output and those which are non-essential to be drawn. There is an ever-widening acknowledgement of the fact that no man or association of men, employees or employers, can be allowed arbitrarily to map out a line of action for themselves if that is to bring suffering and hardship to larger number of citizens who are in no way responsible for or connected with the dispute.

The Sessional Indemnity
Grain Growers' Guide

Though not much has been said about it publicly, it is known that there is a movement on foot at Ottawa to increase the sessional indemnity from $2,500 to $4,000. Raising one's own salary is naturally a somewhat delicate matter, but we fail to see any good reason why members of parliament should have the distinction of being practically the only body of workingmen who have to meet the increased cost of living without any increase of pay. Members of the provincial legislatures of Manitoba and Alberta receive an indemnity of $1,500 while in Saskatchewan the indemnity is $1,500. Considering that the provincial legislatures sit only for a few weeks each year, while the sessions of the Dominion parliament usually last about five months, it must be admitted that our Dominion legislators are by comparison inadequately compensated for the time which they must sacrifice from their own business concerns to attend to the affairs of the nation at Ottawa. It is certainly not desirable that membership of the Dominion parliament should be confined to men or wealth, or that members should be under the necessity of accepting financial assistance from political or personal friends There is not much danger that men will succeed in being elected to parliament whose sole object is to secure an indemnity of $4,000 a session. The people should see that they only elect representatives who are worthy to sit in Parliament, and having done that no one should object to paying them an allowance that will enable them to live.

THE POET'S CORNER

FOR THE FUTURE

An old man going a lone highway,
Came at evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide.
The old man crossed at the twilight dim.
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.

"Old man," said a fellow pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building here;
Your journeys will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide
Why build you this bridge at eventide?"

The builder lifted his old grey head—
"Good friend, in the path I've come," he said,
"There followed after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way,
This chasm that has been as naught to me
To the fair-haired youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him."

Literary Notes

MAY ROD AND GUN

The leaping brook trout painted in natural colors on the cover of the May issue of ROD AND GUN IN CANADA will quicken the pulse of every nature lover. This issue of Canada's leading sportsmen's monthly contains the first instalment of Harry M. Moore's thrilling story of adventure entitled, "The Silver King." "The Kananaskis Lakes" is the title of an interesting fishing story from the Elbow River valley, it has seven clear cut photos to illustrate it. Bonnycastle Dale tells in his own gripping manner the story of the wild cat it range and habits throughout Canada. S. C. Cain humorously relates the story of four fishermen on a week end trip to Lake Scugog after bass. The Guns and Ammunition and Fishing Notes Departments are up to their usual high standard in this number. A valuable addition to the fisherman is the inclusion of the open fishing seasons for the Dominion. ROD AND GUN IN CANADA is published monthly by W. J. TAYLOR LIMITED at Woodstock, Ont.

ALCOHOLIC WARDS FILLING UP AGAIN

New York, May 11—Alcoholic wards in city hospitals are filling up because of the disregard of the prohibition law, Bird S. Color, city commissioner of charities, declared here today. Mr. Color said that if conditions did not improve within the next month he would send out inspectors to uncover the real facts and aid in a more rigid enforcement of the dry law.

FORTY BODIES FOUND IN YPRES CELLAR

Brussels, May 11—The bodies of forty soldiers have been found in the cellar of a ruins at Ypres. It was believed they were gassed during the fierce fighting in this district in 1915. The men probably were overcome while asleep, it was indicated. The bodies were all well preserved and were identified.

WINGHAM DAM COLLAPSES, CARRYING AWAY BRIDGE

Wingham, May 10—Only prompt action in putting the brakes on his auto and reversing the engine prevented Roy Mundy, a local grocer, from being carried down the river with masses of debris, when the upper town bridge and dam suddenly collapsed in front of him yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Mundy had stopped on the far side of the bridge, which was a narrow wooden structure, to allow two vehicles coming from the opposite direction to cross over when he was startled by seeing the floor of the bridge suddenly sink into the eighteen feet of water at the back of the dam which provided power for a grist mill.

The collapse of the dam, dragging with it the bridge, is believed to have resulted from damage done to the abutments by ice during the winter. The dam held back a two mile stretch of water with a head of from seventeen to eighteen feet. The damage is estimated at between $1,7000 and $2,000.

The sudden rush of water let loose by the collapse of the dam caused considerable consternation in lower Wingham, and for a brief time threatened several of the houses with flood conditions, but this danger was soon over.

URBAN DWELLERS HEAD FOR RURAL DISTRICTS

Winnipeg, May 11—A back-to-the-country movement has started in Canada.

An average of at least 100 families a week are moving from Winnipeg to the country, according to an estimate given today by John Wardrop, colonization agent of the Canadian National Railways. For the last six weeks fully 300 city families have obtained locations in country districts from his office alone. The movement, as far as can be learned from reports, is general throughout Canada, he asserted.

Blacksmiths, carpenters, masons, automobile mechanics, artisans of building trades make up the army going out of town. Practically all are family men and practically all have the same tale to tell. Wages are going up, but living costs are going higher.

"It's strange, but it takes economics to make things go," said Mr. Wardrop. "I have heard the preachings from the pulpit and platform and seen them in the press for years, about the dismal future in store for the country if the procession from the farms to the cities continued. Nevertheless, it continued. Now, they are going back, but it is not the persuasion but the economic necessity that is actuating them."

FELL IN CISTERN AND WAS DROWNED

Newmarket, May 8—Charles Wilson, a native of Whitechurch Township, where he farmed up to fifteen years ago, when he retired to Newmarket, was drowned in the water cistern in the yard of his house. He was repairing the cistern and as he had been in poor health it is thought was seized with dizzy spell. His wife is an invalid, and when their daughter, came home from down town, the mother sent her to see what had became of Mr. Wilson. Mrs. Riley found the body in the water.

The Friendly Smoke

THERE is something mighty comforting and satisfying about "OLD CHUM" Tobacco; a sort of soothing restfulness that pipe smokers have come to associate with this friendly smoke.

"OLD CHUM" is an old, old chum with all pipe smokers.

It has the perfect tobacco taste—the mellow richness—and men know that they can be chummy with "OLD CHUM" all day long and that the "good night pipeful" will be as sweet and cool as the one enjoyed just after breakfast.

For years and years "OLD CHUM" has been Canada's favourite pipe tobacco and today is more popular than ever.

Duty Of Citizenship To Make City Better

MEN'S BROTHERHOOD ADDRESSED BY MR. FREDERICKS UPON "CIVIC RIGHTEOUSNESS" — WHERE CO-OPERATION IS FOUND ANTAGONISM IS REVEALED TO PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENTS—FREE BAY BRIDGE OBSTACLES.

At the Men's Brotherhood meeting in John Street Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon the speaker was Mr. Ernest P. Fredericks, Secretary-Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, his subject being "Civic Righteousness." He said:

As a preface to my talk to you today on Civic Righteousness, and as a sort of keynote to the subject as it has appealed to me, I want to read to you a little verse that I have often read and admired because of its strong application in the case of communities undertaking the sort of work that we are engaged in here at the present time:

"God give us men. The time demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
Denounce his treacherous flatteries without winking;"
Big men, sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking."

The City's Soul.

Those of us who have delved beneath the surface of civic affairs and have penetrated beneath the skin of community life know that the city has a heart as well as a body and that it is a spiritual entity as well as a physical organism. We are too prone to pin our efforts and gauge our results by the standard of the material things. Factories, pavements, bridges sewers—all very essential and a necessary part of the city's development, but not the beginning and end of all things. Back of the smoke from the chimneys, back of the roar of traffic back of the busy life and the headlong struggle for material gain is the soul of the city.

Official Opposition.

Since coming to this city it has been part of my work and one of my chief desires to co-ordinate local effort along the line of civic betterment in many directions. Strange as it may seem I have encountered more opposition than co-operation and there is rampant a certain antagonism that is as inexcusable and unjustified as are some other things that have been allowed to weave themselves into the local situation. That some of this antagonism should emanate from official circles does not endow it with any special claim for recognition and its existence would be unimportant if it were not for the fact that it is made to appear that every effort to improve conditions here is an attempt to usurp the powers and functions of someone else.

If a real honest effort and a whole-hearted desire to make the city better, to aid in the realization of some of its [illegible] to give to the people today and to future generations some of the things they are entitled to and to develop to the utmost the natural advantages of the city, if such an effort can be called an attempt to usurp the rights of some petty officials, then I want to go on record now as saying that the more such usurpation of authority is attempted the better it will be for the city. If such people feel that they have been robbed of any of such authority they will be likely to have still further occasion to express themselves if I stay here and carry on with the work in hand.

Bay Bridge Politics.

Such critics of every effort to help the city have merely failed to realize that there is such a thing as the soul of a city; they are not willing to sink personal feeling in the consideration of the bigger and broader issue that has to do with the common good. As an instance of this I might mention the case of the Bay Bridge. For weeks we have been endeavoring to get to a successful disposition of this matter. Wherever one turns he finds unlooked for conditions that only befog and complicate the main issue. On one hand it is a desire for personal aggrandizement; another turn and we find that the issue is being used for political advancement or recognition; at another turn we find an apparently unwarranted desire for financial gain, and all these attendant conditions merely operate against the working out of the problem for the great mass of the people. Here again, we encounter that absolute lack of the recognition of the principle of civic righteousness which has its fountainhead in the soul of the city.

Co-operation Needed.

For many years the people of this city have been desirous of attaining certain ends so far as the city's welfare is concerned, yet when these matters are launched in the direction of attainment there is no apparent desire to co-operate in carrying them out. We have men in this city who are loud in their praise of a movement to beautify and improve the city but who will not even consider painting the buildings they own on the principal streets of the city. There are people who are loud in declaring that the city should have parks and playgrounds and who in the next breath will oppose the grant of a few dollars by the city to aid in the maintenance of a park in one of the most conspicuous sections of the city. We lack co-operation; team-work is at a low-ebb and unless we all pull together on these matters and refuse to permit personal glorification to overshadow the city's welfare we may as well sink back into the slumber which is characteristic of places that are cities only because an Act of Parliament has designated them as such.

Commission Government.

A notable forward step in a general improvement of conditions would be taken if we should abolish the present form of civic government and adopt the more modern commission form of city administration. The present system is cumbersome, obsolete, and, judging from everyday comment, far from satisfactory to the rank and file of people throughout the city. The most important business in any city is running the city, but if the average private concern was to conduct its affairs as many cities are being conducted they would soon collapse. I confidently believe that the people of Belleville will soon awake to the realization that a simplified and more efficient form of city administration, one conducted along modern business lines, will be necessary before long if the city is to take the place that belongs to it in the ranks of progressive communities in Canada.

And right here I want to read you another little verse that seems to have been written to fit just such a situation as confronts us here at the present time:

What makes a city great? Huge piles of stone
Heaped Heavenward? Vast multitudes who dwell
Within wide circling walls? Palace and throne
And riches past the count of man to tell
And wide domain? Nay, these are the empty husk
Of musty centuries and vain conceit.
In Athens, Sparta, Florence, 'twas the soul
That was the city's bright immortal part,
The splendor of the spirit was their goal,
Their jewel the unconquerable heart.
So may the city that we love be great,
Till every stone shall be articulate.

Duties of Citizenship.

Paying taxes is not the only requirement of citizenship any more than going to church is the only requisite of Christianity. If we fail in the desire and willingness to serve our city then we have failed in the real principles of civic righteousness. We are a long way from the ideal city. It lies far ahead, but it is a goal worth striving for. We picture the city of our dreams as a great centre throbbing with life and light; a place of joy and happiness, radiant with the inspiration of higher motives, clean living and a brotherhood of man, where social justice and the common good are ever the highest object of human aspiration and hope. This then is the spirit of civic righteousness and until we awake to the potent influence of this factor in civic development and progress we have failed to touch the soul of the city.

FOR LIFE

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

"Father not in the humor for't eh?' Another potato was finished and flung in. "Ah, I know about it. Little birds tell me things that people don't dream of my knowin."

Fancy was desperate about Dick, and here was a chance—oh, such a wicked chance!—of getting help; but what was goodness beside love!

"I wish you'd tell me how to put him in the humor for it," she said.

"That I could soon do," said the witch, quietly.

"Really? Oh, do; anyhow—I don't care—so that it is done. How could I do it, Mrs. Endorfield.

"Nothing so mighty wonderful in it."

"Well, but how?"

"By witchery, of course," said Elizabeth.

"No," said Fancy.

"'Tis, I assure ye. Didn't you ever hear I was a witch?"

"Well," said Fancy, hesitatingly, "I have heard you called so."

"And you believed it."

"I can't say that I did exactly believe it, for 'tis very horrible and wicked; but oh, how I do wish it was possible for you to be one!"

"So I am. And I'll tell ye how to bewitch your father, to let you marry Dick Dewy."

PART IV—CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Endorfield's advice was duly followed. "I be proper sorry that your daughter isn't so well as she might be," said a Mellstock man to Geoffrey one morning.

"But is there anything in it?" said Geoffrey, uneasily. He shifted his hat slightly to the right. "I can't understand the report. She didn't complain to me at all when I seed her."

"No appetite at all, they say."

Geoffrey called at the school that afternoon. Fancy welcomed him as usual, and asked him to stay and take tea with her.

"I be'n't much for tea this time o' day," he said, but stayed.

During the meal he watched her narrowly, and, to his great consternation, discovered the following unprecedented change in the healthy girl—that she cut herself only a diaphanous slice of bread and butter, and laying it on her plate, passed the meal in breaking it into pieces, but eating no more than about one tenth of the slice. Geoffrey hoped she would say something about Dick, and finish up by weeping, as she had done after the decision against him a few days subsequent to the interview in the garden. But nothing was said and in due time Geoffrey departed again for Yalbury Wood.

"'Tis to be hoped poor Miss Fancy will be able to keep on at her school," said Geoffrey's man, Enoch, to Geoffrey the following week, as they were shoveling up ant-hills in the woods.

Geoffrey stuck in the shovel, swept seven or eight ants from his sleeve and killed another that was prowling around his ear, then looked perpendicularly into the earth, waiting for Enoch to say more. "Well, why shouldn't she?" said the keeper at last.

"The baker told me yesterday," continued Enoch, shaking out another emmet that had run merrily up his thigh, "that the bread he've left at that there school-house this last month would starve any mouse in the three creations; that 'twould so. And afterward I had a pint o' small at the Old Souls, and there I heard more."

"What might that ha' been?"

"That she used to have half a pound o' the best rolled butter a week, regular as clock-work from Dairyman Quenton's; but now the same quantity d'last her three weeks, and then 'tis thoughted she throws it away sour."

"Finish doing the emmets, and carry the bag homealong." The keeper resumed his gun, tucked it under his arm, and went on without whistling to the dogs, who, however, followed, with a bearing meant to imply that they did not expect any such attentions when their master was reflecting.

On Saturday morning a note came from Fancy. He was not to trouble about sending her the couple of early young rabbits, as was intended, because she feared she should not want them. Later in the day Geoffrey went to Casterbridge, and called upon the butcher who served Fancy with fresh meat, which put down to her father's account.

"I've called to pay up our little bill naibor Sabley, and you can gie me the chiel's account at the same time."

Mr. Sabley turned round three quarters of a circle in the midst of a heap of joints, altered the expression of his face from meat to money, went into a little office consisting only of a door and a window, loked very vigorously into a book which possessed length but no breadth, and then, seizing a piece of paper and scribbling thereupon, handed the bill.

Probably it was the first time in the history of commercial transactions that the quality of shortness in a butcher's bill was a cause of tribulation to the debtor.

"Why this isn't all she've had in a whole month!" said Geoffrey.

"Every mossel," said the butcher—(now Dan take that leg and shoulder to Mrs. White's, and this eleven pound here to Mr. Martin's—you've been tarting her to smaller joints lately, to my thinking, Mr. Day."

"Only two or three little scram rabbits this last week, as I be alive—I wish I had."

THE DISCOVERY OF "VITAMINES"

The study of beriberi and pellagra led to the discovery of a group of food essentials known as "vitamines." They are necessary to normal nutrition and to normal growth. They are found in the whole wheat grain. In making Shredded Wheat Biscuit all the vitamines are retained—all the elements that are needed for building a perfect body. Two of these little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk or cream (or hot water) make a nourishing, satisfying meal for a few cents.

Woman's Wages Fall Below Living Costs

Forty-Two Per Cent. of Female Workers Earn Less Than $10 Weekly.

While bricklayers successfully negotiate wage schedules calling for remuneration at the rate of $1.00 per hour; and while civic employees, regardless of the amount or lack of skil required in their particular work, receive a weekly minimum of $28.80, there are women and girls who struggle through a long day's work, sometimes of 10 hours, for less than $5 a week in Toronto and elsewhere in Ontario.

These figures are not taken from the statements of alarmists, but are enumerated in the report of an industrial survey made by Dr. W. A. Riddell, Deputy Minister of Labor. This survey was spread over 23 industrial centres of the province and covers the main industries in which female labor is in the greatest demand. The investigation was authorized by Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid, during the late Hearst regime.

Below Living Standard.

Tentative budgets of the living cost of a single woman set the minimum line between $12 and $14 per week, yet Dr. Riddell's report indicates that there are 42 per cent. of the female workers who receive less than $10 per week.

Statistics were gathered regarding employes in the manufacture of bread, men's custom clothing, women's custom clothing, dyeing and cleaning, foundry and machine shop products, slaughtering and meat packing, agricultural implements, biscuits and confectionery, boots and shoes, boxes and paper bags, carpets, men's clothing, department stores, dresses and waists, electrical apparatus and supplies, furniture and upholstery, harness and saddlery, hosiery and underwear, laundry, lithographing and engraving, printing and bookbinding, suits and cloaks, and woollen goods. The wages of the office employees of all these industries are also included and as these are on a much larger scale they tend to raise the general average, as only 17 per cent. of this number receive under $10 per week.

Laundry Workers Earn Least.

Percentages from the survey of the bookbinding and printing industry, laundry, harness and saddlery indicate the lowest scales, which are as follows:

	Bookbinding.	Laundry.	Harness.	Paper Box.
Under $5 ..	9.5	.5	6.7	6.1
$ 5-$ 6 ..	17.1	1.0	23.3	11.3
6- 7 ..	25.2	10.5	35.0	22.6
7- 8 ..	34.4	49.0	41.7	36.8
8- 9 ..	49.6	75.0	55.0	64.6
9- 10 ..	59.1	87.5	68.3	76.4
10- 12 ..	87.8	95.5	78.3	92.9

Other industries compare equally with the above scale, such as the manufacture of biscuits and confectionery, in which 64.6 per cent. of the female help receive less than $10 per week, but of all the wages paid the laundry establishments are by far the poorest, according to the survey, where only 1 per cent. reach the maximum of between $15 and $20 per week.

PREVENT APPLE SCAB

Much of the Loss Through This Disease Is Needless.

Careful Spraying Will Do the Trick—Three Sprayings Necessary—Either Lime Sulphur or Bordeaux Mixture May Be Used.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THIS is the most common and most serious disease of apples in Ontario. It occurs wherever apples are grown, and the scab spots on the fruit and leaves are familiar to almost every fruit grower. In wet seasons it causes a financial loss of many thousands of dollars to the fruit growers of the Province. This is to a large extent a needless loss, for Apple Scab can almost always be prevented no matter how wet the season may be, by thorough, timely and intelligent spraying, in combination with the proper pruning of the trees. The scab only develops and spreads during wet weather. The times of the year therefore when we get our wet weather are the times we have to spray if we are going to prevent scab. One spraying with either lime sulphur or Bordeaux mixture is not sufficient to prevent scab, as the rain gradually washes the spray off, and as the leaves and fruits by growing larger develop more surface to cover. In order to be sure of preventing the disease we must spray from three to six times during the season, the number of sprayings depending upon whether the weather is wept or dry. The first spraying should be done just as or soon after the leaf buds burst. For this application use commercial lime-sulphur, strength 1 gallon commercial to 7 gallons of water. If the grower is certain that there is no San Jose Scale in the orchard and very little Oyster Shell Scale, a weaker solution may be used, 1 gallon to about 20 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture 4.4.40 formula may be substituted.

The second spraying should be given just before the blossoms open, that is, just when they are showing pink, using commercial lime-sulphur strength 1 gallon to 35 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture 4.4.40 formula.

In average seasons the third application should be given immediately after the blossoms have all or nearly all fallen, with lime-sulphur strength 1 gallon to 40 gallons of water. This is generally the most important spray for the control of Apple Scab and always for Codling Moth, and it must be promptly applied, as a delay of a day or two may make all the difference between success and failure. Bordeau mixture should not be used at this time, as it is almost sure to cause the fruit to be russeted. Arsenate of lead should be added for the second and third sprayings to control Codling Moth and other biting insects.

In seasons of normal weather conditions these first three sprayings should control the scab completely. In some seasons, however, additional applications are absolutely necessary if the scab is to be prevented. The time of these will depend upon when we get our cold, wet weather. In some seasons there is a long period of cold, wet weather between the date when the blossoms begin to burst and when they fall. Sometimes the length of this period is three or four weeks. In such cases it is necessary to give an intermediate spraying between the second and third. Hence, if the grower finds at the end of twelve days or two weeks after he has applied the second spray that the weather is still cold and wet and development of the blossoms is very slow, another spraying should be given at once to protect the young blossoms and foliage. This should be of the same strength as for the third regular spraying, but poison should be omitted because of the bees. It is very important to observe carefully the weather conditions and apply this spray when necessary.

Spraying early in August is an insurance against late infection of Apple Scab and Sooty Fungus. In wet autumns such spraying is necessary to prevent late attacks of scab, especially with varieties such as McIntosh Red and Snows, which are very susceptible to scab. For this application use a weak lime-sulphur solution, 1 gallon to 40 or 45 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture. No poison should be used at this time. Often if the spraying is done later than the first or second week in August there is a chance of the fruit being discolored at picking time. Should the dust method prove satisfactory it could be used at any time in the fall without danger of staining the fruit. If the early sprayings are thoroughly done, and the fall is not extremely wet, usually the crop will remain clean without this last application.

Thoroughness in Spraying.—Very few men spray thoroughly enough to get the best results. The object of spraying is to cover the surfaces of the leaves and fruits with a good fungicide (a substance which destroys the spores of fungi), such as lime-sulphur or Bordeaux mixture, so that when a spore reaches leaf or fruit it is destroyed and cannot grow and cause scab. We see, therefore, that if spraying is to accomplish it's object it must be very thoroughly done; every fruit and leaf must be completely covered with the fungicide so that there is not the least space on which a spore can germinate. Thorough spraying necessitates the liberal use of the spray mixture. A large apple tree will require from six to ten gallons or more to cover it properly. Care must be taken to reach every side of the young forming fruit or (in other words) of the calyces or flower cup which develop into the fruits.—Prof. J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

WAR CEMETERIES

In view of the early opening of War Cemeteries in France and Belgium, relatives, anxious to visit the resting places of their men-folk who made the great sacrifice, will note with interest that The General has instituted a branch of service embracing an Inquiry Bureau, Hostels at the ports of Ostend, Calais, and Boulogne, and Hostels at what might be termed the cemetery-gates of Ypres, Amiens, and Arras.

Already many requests for aid in this direction have reached International Headquarters, and these are receiving the personal attention of Mrs. Commissioner Higgins, who will be closely associated with the matter.

This new departure means that people desirous of journeying to France and Belgium for the purpose outlined above can do so under The Army's care at the minimum cost of transit and food expenses; Salvation service, as ever, is gratis.

Travelling by rail and boat is arranged by The Army's Chipping Department; Salvationists attend to the travellers at the ports of arrival, conducting them to the Hostels established for their benefit, and later directing, and in needy cases accompanying them to the sacred places of rest.

Further particulars concerning this valuable scheme of service may be had on application to International Headquarters, 101 Queen Victoria St., London, England. Communications should be addressed to Mrs. Commissioner Higgins.

Agriculture And Manufacturing Interests Ably Debated

AFFIRMATIVE AND NEGATIVE SUPPORTED BY WELL-KNOWN SPEAKERS—JUDGES DECIDE IN FAVOR OF THE NEGATIVE.

An interesting debate was held in the school room of St. Andrew's Church last evening on the subject "Resolved that for the development of Canada, Agriculture is more important than Manufacturing." The affirmative was ably supported by Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., and Mr. I. L. Moore representing the Brotherhood of John Street Church. The negative was taken by Mr. W. J. Campbell and Major R. D. Pinton, representing the Men's Club of St. Andrew's Church.

Mr. Mikel gave an eloquent and masterly address in support of the Agricultural interests of the country, pointing out that Agriculture was the country's greatest wealth producer. In Rome, the citizen who faithfully tilled the soil was regarded as an example in Patriotism. The unrest of the country had its source not with the Farmers, but was rather associated with manufacturing.

Mr. Campbell, who was the first speaker for the negative contended that manufacturing made agriculture possible and moreover, was the source of the nation. The moral and mental enlightment of the nation. Manufacturing, not only making agriculture possible, but books and papers and in fact all education.

Mr. Moore for the affirmative pointed out that three-fifths of the population of Canada was agricultural. The farmer worked longer and harder than the mechanic. The farmer was an owner in the majority of cases and took more interest in his work than the employe. The raw material of Agriculture was never exhausted. The raw material in the manufacturing industries often was difficult to obtain and in many cases was exploited. The farmer never went out on strike. His occupation tended to longevity which was an asset in National Development.

Major Ponton compared manufacturing to the hub of a wheel and mines forests, rivers, land—to the spokes. Without manufacturing nothing moves—nothing is exported. Agriculture was not the only source of a nation's wealth. Employes in manufacturing plants learned discipline which was necessary to good citizenship. The manufacturing interests produced the shells, the guns that helped to win the war.. If it were not for tractors and other farm machinery, the farmer could not carry on.

Mr. Mikel in his five minutes, concluding the debate, indulged in some good-natured banter in dealing with his opponents in the debate and gave a rapid fire summary of arguments in support of his contention that Agriculture was the more important industry.

The judges were, Revs. Swayne, Wallace and Elliott and gave their decision in favor of the negative.

Mr. J. G. Moffat acted as chairman. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Convention Price To Be $41 A Pint

DETROIT, May 12.—Bootleggers booze smugglers and other violaters of Federal prohibiliton laws, who have defied Government agents in Detroit and Michigan will soon be populating prisons and contributing heavy fines to the United States Treasury.

This is the promise of Major A. V. Dalrymple, Prohibition Enforcement Officer for the Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin district, who declared that plans had been completed for an enforcement campaign caluculated to put Detroit outlaws permanently out of business.

Because of its proximity to the Canadian border and opportunities for smuggling liquor across the river, Detroit requires special attention, Dalrymple said.

Major Dalrymple admitted it was true that liquor would be plentiful in Chicago during the Republican National Convention next month, but the "bell boys" at leading hotels had got together and decided that $41 a pint was the price they would charge thirsty delegates for supplying it.

He added that his agents had recently captured 50,000 bogus doctors' prescriptions for liquors in Chicago, and that he had learned that 200,000 were being prepared to take care of the convention business.

$150,000 In Bonds Reported Missing

New Phase in Mystery of Ambrose J. Small's Disappearance

TORONTO, May 12—In connection with the continued absence of A. J. Small, the millionaire theatrical man who has been missing for five months, the Toronto World says: "The case of Ambrose J. Small, the missing Toronto millionaire, has entered upon another new phase.

"It will be remembered that Mr. Small was the holder of $350,000 worth of Victory Bonds, and these were placed in a safety vault at the Dominion Bank for safe keeping. On the day before he so mysteriously disappeared, Mr. Small sent a messenger to the vault for the bonds, and that they were duly handed to him is proved by subsequent events. Two hundred thousand dollars out of the $350,000 worth of the bonds are satisfactorily accounted for. Bonds for $100,000 were given to Mrs. Small and $100,000 handed to the Dominion Bank to be sent to Ottawa to be transferred into registered bonds. The remaining $150,000 which were bearer bonds, were to be returned to the safety deposit vault. Whether or not this was done could no possibly be ascertained until the safe was opened.

"The World has reason to believe that the vault was opened during the latter part of last week and that some, if not all, of the bonds were discovered to be missing.

"An effort undertaken by some of Mr. Small's friends who think he may have been the victim of foul play is very soon to be made to try to find his body. As a commencement, the Don River is to be dragged so that if his body had been weighed down to prevent its rising to the surface, it may be caught up in the irons and brought to the surface. Other localities may be similarly explored."

Ask Government To Continue Ship Building Program

OTTAWA, May 12.—Asking that the Government continue with a substantial shipbuilding programme, in order that as much work as possible be found for the men now employed in the various yards throughout the Dominion, a deputation of returned soldier workers, over 100 strong, waited upon Sir George Foster and members of the Cabinet. In a memorandum submitted by the deputation, it was stated that the French Government was willing if Canada would provide the credit, to place orders for merchant vessels, which would keep the Canadian yards going at high pressure for two or three years. The men also advocated extension of the merchant marine and the granting of Government subsides to private enterprise, which was willing to build this year.

Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Naval Affairs and Sir George Foster, Acting-Premier, said that the Government had heard the case of the deputation, and they assured their hearers, they would give it every consideration. The need for rigid economy was the cause of cutting down the shipbuilding programme.

Bill Was Killed In Strange Way

OTTAWA, May 12.—Bill 50 to amend the Fish Inspection Act, in regard to uniformity of containers, inspection and grading of fish, affecting both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, died an unnatural death in committee today. So far as this session is concerned, members of the Marine and Fisheries committee claim that the bill is gone beyond recall. This is the first bill so killed his session and also it is said o tbe the first killed in a similar manner in many years.

After the committee had proceeded for some time last week, the chairman's attention was called to lack of a quorum. Then a motion for the committee to rise was carried. D. D. McKenzie (Cape Breton North) and others, claimed that this killed the bill. However, when the committee again met today an attempt was made to revive it.

The chairman's ruling was asked for. He said he must bring the bill again to the notice of the committee.

W. A. Duff moved to report progress. R. W. Wigmore moved that the committee approve the principle of the bill. On the vote, Wigmore's motion was defeated, seven to six and the Duff motion carried by the same figures. It was then moved "that the chairman do now leave the chair." This carried by six to five, and the bill was killed for this session.

Will Spare Lives Of Soldiers

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, May 12.—Russian Bolshevik authorities have agreed to spare the lives of soldiers captured from General Denikine's army in Southern Russia and those of the other anti-Soviet troops who may in future be taken prisoners. A note to this effect was received by the British officials in answer to the appeals sent to Moscow during the past fortnight.

G.T.R. System Now Property Of Canada

OTTAWA, May 12.—As the G.T.R. System became Canada's property at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the Governor-General gave assent to the Grand Trunk Bill, an order in Council will be passed this week in all probability constituting the joint board of management provided for in the agreement to operate the system until the decision of the Board of Arbitration is known.

The Canadian National Railways will appoint Messrs. S. J. Hungerford and C. A. Hayes, it is understood, as their representatives on the joint board. For the Grand Trunk Railway two will be chosen from Messrs. W. D. Robb, Frank Scott and J. E. Dalrymple. The Chairman is to be chosen by the four men thus appointed, but it is generally understood that their choice will be Mr. Howard G. Kelley, the present General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway.

The Board of Arbitration is not expected to come to a definite conclusion on the matters submitted to it for a year, as full information from the Grand Trunk Railway Company's books will have to be obtained, and investigation will have to be made to determine the value of its physical assets in many particulars.

Settlers Bringing Millions In Cash

Thirty Thousand From Across the Border Last Year Carried Over $19,000,000.

OTTAWA, May 11.—Working feverishly night and day in its efforts to keep abreast of the constantly swelling volume of work, the Department of Immigration at Ottawa is now easily one of the busiest branches of the Government.

There has been a decidedly pronounced tightening up of regulations under which immigrants are now given permission to settle in this country. Last December an order-in-Council was passed to be effective between January 1 and March 31 this year specifying that no immigrant of the mechanic, skilled or unskilled laboring class be admitted to Canada without having at least $250 in addition to his transportation to point of destination in Canada. Formerly only $50 was required. No additional restriction was placed against the farming class or domestic servants. This regulation caused considerable falling off from November, 1919, on, but this regulation has since been lifted and there has been a great jump in the number of mechanics coming to Canada.

Wealth is Amazing.

The amount of wealth being brought into the Dominion by these settlers when taken in the aggregate is amazing. In cash and effects American settlers brought to this country during the fiscal year ending March 30, 1920, the sum of $19,507,656, which represents an increase over 1918 of over $2,000,000.

Of the Americans who took up residence in Canada last year Alberta attracted more than any other province. The number who went there was 13,883; Ontario got 12,093, Saskatchewan 8,672, Quebec 6,617, Manitoba, 4,465, British Columbia 3,601, Maritime Provinces 2,503, and the Yukon Territory 140.

For the fiscal year ending March 30 the number of immigrants from all countries entering Canada was 117,337, representing an increase of 103 per cent.

Humor Creeps In.

All the work of the department in dealing with the immigration question is not dry and of a statistical nature. Indeed a great deal that is amusing comes before the heads of various departments in going over the papers of immigrants who wish to enter this fair Dominion. For example one man writes that he wants to come to Canada because it is easy to obtain a cup of the stuff that cheers in Canada. Another man who gave his age as 80 put on his papers that he had been an inmate of a house of refuge for the last 20 years in the United States and was desirous of coming to Canada to obtain work. Another man who was held at the border became became very wrathy because he could not at once satisfy the inspectors that he was qualified for admission. He claimed to be a cousin of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Gen. Sir A. Currie M'Gill Principal

MONTREAL, May 12.—It is understood that General Sir Arthur Currie Inspector-General of the Canadian Forces, has been offered the appointment as principal of McGill University and that General Currie has apparently accepted the appointment. The matter was considered this after noon at a meeting of the Board of Governors.

A further meeting of the board will be held when an official statement will be issued which will, it is believed contain the formal announcement that General Currie has been offered and has accepted the appointment.

This appointment if confirmed will create a new precedent, since General Currie is not a University man, although he had an education that qualified him for a high-school teacher and he taught in a high school, for six years in his earlier days, before entering real estate which he found his real metier as a soldier.

It is considered that the selection of General Currie as principal of McGill University will be a distinct advantage to the institution, not only by reason of his war record, but also because of his commanding personality, his ability as a speaker and a writer and his record as a citizen who will be able to bring the university into ever-closer touch with the people.

Important Civic Matters To Be Discussed At Meeting

HOUSING PROPOSITION, CIVIC COMMISSION AND SALVATION ARMY DRIVE TO BE TOPICS FOR A MASS MEETING OF CITIZENS.

The Forum Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, at a conference yesterday afternoon, arranged to consolidate the public meeting at the City Hall on Friday night with the Rotary Club meeting for the same evening on which occasion the Salvation Army drive for funds will be given new impetus. The meeting will also consider two important questions which have been before the people for some time. The first is the housing programme and it is expected that the Director of Housing, or his assistant, will be here to explain the new housing legislation under which the city is about to begin operations. The new Housing Act provides for the appointment of a housing commission in each city; the plan is to take advantage of the provisions of the Act and, as this is the first step in any work that may be undertaken by the city, it is not unlikely that the City Council will immediately appoint such a commission in order that the housing programme can be undertaken at once.

The second question to be considered is the establishment of a commission form of government for Belleville. This question has been under sonsideration for some time and is rapidly gaining favor here. An invitation to attend the meeting has been extended to the City Manager of Westmount, and, if the meeting goes on record as favoring such a change in city administration, the City Council will be asked to put the matter before the people to vote upon this year.

President Wilson In A Criticising Mood

UNITED STATES PRESIDENT THOUGHT BRITISH NAVY TOO SLOW AND URGED AMERICAN EXPERTS TO SHOW HOW THE WORK OF HUNTING SUBS SHOULD BE DONE.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHIIGTON, May 12.—A confidential cablegram from President Wilson to Rear-Admiral Sims, in London, sent during the war, was read to the Senate Naval Investigating Committee today by Secretary Daniels. It disclosed the fact that the American President was not satisfied with the way the British Admiralty was directing the work of the British navy and also indicated that Mr. Wilson could not understand why naval experts there were reluctant to allow the American experts to tell them just how things should be done. Mr. Wilson intimated that he considered the British naval men too prudent and expressed surprise that the British Admiralty had failed to use Great Britain's great naval superiority effectively against the submarines. He called on Admiral Sims for comments and suggestions based on independent thought and without regard to the judgment of any one on that side of the water. Secretary Daniels said Admiral Sims' reply was a long telegram of generalities of what the British Admiralty was doing.

Pointers Regarding Care Of The Eyes

Special Attention Should Be Paid to Correcting Children's Eyesight.

1. The continued use of the eyes at close work is harmful even if the eyesight is perfect. Rest the eyes every few minutes when studying or writing by looking up from the book or paper; if they still feel tired, do something else for a while.

2. To read or study when tired is to overstrain the eye. Therefore, avoid night study as far as possible.

3. When using artificial light, do not let the light shine directly into the eyes. The light should come from behind you and from the left side. On no account let the artificial light come from in front.

4. When the child experiences difficulty in seeing the blackboard from the back part of the room, or suffers from headache in school, or shows evidences of eye strain, his eyes should be examined to ascertain the cause, and it should be corrected by glasses prescribed by a competent specialist.

5. When glasses have been thus prescribed, they must be worn constantly. If needed in school, they are necessary all the time.

6. Keep the glasses clean.

7. The adjustment of the frame is of as much importance as the correctness of the lenses. The child should look through the optical centre of each lens. As frames get bent and children grow, this adjustment should be made at frequent intervals.

8. Glasses ordered for astigmatism or any severe refractive error require most accurate adjustment and should be mounted in spectacle frames.

9. Eyes should be re-examined for glasses each year of school life, because eyes often change in refraction, as children grow older, and lenses suitable at one age are unsuitable at a later period.

10. The immature eyes of childhood are very susceptible to having their defective sight made worse by using glasses not suited to their special defect. They require constant attention.

As children obtain their knowledge both in and out of school chiefly through their eyes, it is essential that parents should exercise an intelligent and careful supervision. They should remember that it is better for the child to lose his chance of high marks in school than to have weak eyes for the remainder of his life.

A child's eyes are priceless. The slow progress in school of many a boy or girl is due to poor eyesight, which might easily, in most cases, be remedied by the use of proper glasses.

GOV'T. WON'T PASS INDEMNITY BOOST

OTTAWA, May 11—The Government has decided, it is understood not to increase the indemnity of the members either to $4,000 or $5,000 this session. It had been intended to do so, and the matter has been discussed in caucuses of the various parties.

The Government, however, knows that any increase in the indemnity would be followed at once by a renewed demand from the returned men all over Canada who are believers in the gratuity idea.

The failure of the attempt to get an increased indemnity in the Ontario House has also made the Government fearful of venturing on the dangerous ground.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

TRIPLE FEATURE AT PALACE

A triple feature photoplay bill of unusual excellence has been arranged for exhibition at the Palace tonight only consisting of Charles Ray in one of the finest pictures of his career, "Crooked Straight," Harold Lloyd in a new comedy, "He Leads Others Follow," William Desmond in a thrilling western picture, "The Blue Bandanna," Selig's Million Dollar wild animal picture, "The Lost City," featuring Juanita Hansen, and a funny two reel Fox Sunshine comedy, "Her Private Husband." Owing to the length of the program the performance will commence at 7.30 sharp tonight.

MARY PICKFORD

If Steve Honeycott and Widow Hawn had followed the advice of their children, Mary Pickford wouldn't be able to offer such a wonderful picture as "Heart O' The Hills," adapted from the story by John Fox, Jr., which will be shown at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. As Mavis Hawn, Miss Pickford takes the part of a Kentucky Mountain girl at war with certain factors which she knows nothing of and determined at least to put an end for all time to come to the whippings which her mother has been liberally inflicting. A love tale is interwoven in the plot about a mountain feud of long standing and the story affords Miss Pickford ample opportunity to score such triumphs as characterized 'Daddy Long Legs' and 'The Hoodlum,' the two previous attractions from her own studio. Mavis and her sweetheart, Jason Honeycott, oppose the marriage of their parents for the reason that Honeycott's prime motive is prompted by a desire to secure Widow Hawn's valuable coal lands. The children, when grown, fire a double shot that ends Honeycott's life, when they find he is responsible for the murder of Mavis' mother.

Through the courtesy of the official movie photographer who accompanied His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales on his never-to-be-forgotten trip through Canada, the Griffin management have made arrangements to show four of the most amusing episodes of the Prince's tour human incidents taken along the way and in the various cities visited, these wonderful scenes are taken close-up and spectators would actually think that they were in the various groups photographed. 'The smile that won't come off' is worn during the whole trip and the boys who have seen the same smile in the front line trenches in France, this will indeed be a treat. The first chapter of this historical record will be shown at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, and one every week for four consecutive weeks. A funny two-reel Big V comedy, 'Knight and Knighties' is also announced for exhibition on the same program.

VIVIAN MARTIN

In her newest picture, "Husbands and Wives," from the famous novel, "Making Her His Wife," by Cora Harris, Vivian Martin, as the wife, begins wedded life by replying to her husband's statement, "The first thing every wife should learn is to obey her husband— that "the first thing every husband does learn is that she won't." The difference of opinion is caused by her having been a northern society girl who marries a small town hardware merchant in the south. Quite naturally their ideas of life differ greatly.' The struggle to gain mastery over each other gives Miss Martin the opportunity of once again demonstrating her histrionic talent. Three other comedy, and varied attractions have also been arranged for exhibition in addition to the above Vivian Martin feature offering.

"RED RIDING HOOD"

"Little Red Riding Hood," an elaborate production of the famous English pantomine, founded upon the favorite Mother Goose tale, is Mr. F. Stuart Whyte' fourth annual pantomine offering in Canada and which is being presented at Griffin's tonight for one night only. Mr. Whyte has already established a clientile for the popular British form of extravaganza in Canada and his annual importations have become a Dominion demand, without which no theatrical season would be complete. In view of the fact that there are so few characters in the story of Red Riding Hood is has been the custom to introduce all the other favorites of Mother Goose into the action, at the same time retaining the dramatic plot of Red Riding Hood, which makes an ideal basis for gorgeous settings, delightful dialogue and tuneful melodies. Mr. Whyte's production of the piece comprises eleven wonderful scenes, each one more beautiful and thrilling than the last, leading the auditor on through a maize of facts, fancy and fairyland, until the sublime climax is reached when we arrive at the solid-gold palace of the King of Hearts. Seats are now on sale at Griffins. Phone 509.

Canada Must Develop Her Own Coal Reserves

Consulting Engineer of Conservation Commission Warns Us Against Depending on U. S.

Canada's position in regard to coal is strikingly set forth in an address made by Mr. Arthur V. White, consulting engineer of the Commission of Conservation of Canada, at the recent annual convention of the Canadian Gas Association, and which has been published in pamphlet form.

Mr. White, after summing up the serious situation resulting from reduced production of coal throughout the world, says:

It is gratifying to realize that serious effort is now being made towards the development of Canadian lignite and peat resources; also, towards the increased utilization of our coal fields in the east and in the west. I understand that work preparatory to the construction of the carbonized lignite briquetting plant to be erected under the direction of the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research for the Dominion Government is being pressed ahead with despatch. This is to have a capacity of 30,000 tons of briquettes per annum. It would take over 600 such plants to replace our present coal importation from the States. However, we are very glad that this start has been made.

Nevertheless, I am firmly convinced that there is no menace to Canada's economic and general welfare at all comparable to the fact that she is so largely dependent upon a foreign country for her fuel needs. Without this foreign supply Canada most assuredly would be put to desperate straits.

Canada, it is true, is richly endowed with waterpowers, but she can never depend upon this asset as a sole source of heat. We have about 19,000,000 estimated 24-hour low-water horse-power, of which less than 2,500,000 horse-power has been developed. By no means may all the waterpowers be economically developed. And there is no use whatever entertaining hope that hydro-electric energy as a heating agent may become an adequate substitute for coal for the citizens of Canada.

What, then, is to be done? In a word, we must develop our own coal reserves. Considering the country as a whole Canada in respect of quantity quality and accessibility for mining purposes, possesses coal deposits which compare favorably with those of the greatest coal mining countries of the world. She has nearly 1,000,000,000 tons of semi-anthracite coal, 315,000,000 tons of bituminous coal and 10,000,000,000 tons of sub-bituminous coal and lignite.

When the population of the Prairie Provinces is insured against yearly fuel shortage, we shall be more interested in hearing emphasis laid upon the enormous fuel reserves of these Provinces; and when Canada produces more than her present amount of ? per cent. of her total annual oil consumption we shall be more interested in hearing emphasis placed upon the statement that we have the biggest oil fields in the world.

Canada's only sane policy is to develop, as rapidly as possible, both her own fuel and power resources and to provide for the distribution and storage of fuel in all communities of the Dominion. Provision should also be made to aid that large proportion of the wage-earning population who covet the ability to lay in their coal early but who are unable to finance the proposition.

WILL BUILD NEW PLANT IN CANADA

WASHINGTON, May 10—Testifying today before the Senate committee investigating newsprint prices and supply, Chester W. Lyman, vice-president of the International Paper Co. said that although the company controls three million acres of pulp timber land in Canada, it cannot utilize all the timber because it has no mills in Canada and is prohibited from sending outside of the Dominion lumber taken from crown lands. The result had been, he said, to force the company into the open market for wood pulp.

The International Company, the witness said, produces approximately 300,000 tons of print paper annually of which 97 per cent is sold under contract to publishers and the remainder to jobbers and brokers at the same prices charged publishers. Under present conditions, Mr. Lyman said, the prices charged by the company are not unreasonable.

He recommended immediate curtailment of consumption by newspapers, declaring that it would be two years before production would meet the demand. Prices were to go up again July 1.

Mr. Lyman said that in an effort to increase production his company was building a new plant in Canada.

JAPANESE AND SOVIET REACH AN AGREEMENT

Washington, May 12.—Japan has begun to make peace with the Bolsheviki of Siberia, it was learned today. An agreement which probably will lead to the withdrawal of about 20,000 Japanese troops from the region of Vladivostok and may pave the way for the evacuation of all the Japanese forces in Siberia, has been concluded between Japanese and Soviet authorities at Vladivostok confidential advices to the Japanese Embassy here today stated.

The agreement is aimed expressly at preventing conflicts between the Japanese and Russians, such as the fighting which broke out when the Japanese disarmed the Bolshevik troops at Vladivostok recently, and is intended to allow evacuation of Japanese forces from the city and region of Vladivostok, it was stated at the embassy.

By the agreement a neutral zone is created between the Russian armed forces and the Japanese troops, 30 kilometers on each side of the Usuri railroad from Vladivostok to Khabarovsk the centre of the coast Provinces of Siberia. The Russian Soviet police under the agreement will take over the policing of this neutral zone and be responsible for the maintenance of order.

THE DEAF ARE MADE TO HEAR, BUT NOT IN EVERY CASE.

A gentleman in Ohio took thirty Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments, and fully recovered his hearing permanently. That was nearly three years ago, and considering that he was totally deaf before he began adjustments, it speaks well for Chiropractic in relation to such trouble.

We would not have our readers feel that every case of deafness will yield and result in this way. There are a number of instances on record where Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments have not affected improvement in lost hearing. On the other hand, there is on record a generous number of reports from patients, in most cases made quite a while after quitting adjustments, showing appreciable benefits to their hearing, and quite often full recovery of same.

From our limited and unauthoritative viewpoint, it would appear that catarrhal deafness is the slowest form of deafness to respond to Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments. We are quite willing to state our belief that adjustments will do much for such trouble, and where they are taken long enough, will eventually effect full restoration of the congested parts of the middle ear to normal function. An Appeal to Landowners

There is a big demand for land for home gardens. The city property available for this purpose has all been taken up. Many who are willing to plant gardens are unable to secure the necessary land.

THE NEED FOR A GREATER PRODUCTION OF FARM PRODUCE IS AS URGENT THIS YEAR AS AT ANY TIME DURING THE WAR.

You will be performing a real service and discharging a patriotic duty by giving the use of idle land for home garden use this summer.

CHICAGOAN PLANS HOTEL FOR HOMELESS BOYS

Chicago, May 12.—The stray boy who for dinner flattens his nose against the bakery window and who at night, sleeps with grown-up tramps in the park, or in the back alley shed will come upon better days if the plan of George W. Brown of Chicago works out.

A hotel for boys, to be operated so far as feasible by boys, and fitted up in a way to attract the youngster who finds himself in vast Chicago temporarily or permanently without a home is the idea of Mr. Brown, who for a decade has given most of his time to volunteer work among homeless boys. His work has brought him in touch with juvenile court officials in many cities, and he has enlisted their support in his efforts to obtain a "transient hotel for boys" between the ages of fourteen and seventeen.

"The Y.M.C.A. conducts in Chicago a transient hotel for men, a high skyscraper, calculated to give its tenants clean surroundings, morally and physically, but homeless boys under seventeen, hundreds of whom drift into Chicago every week, may rely on the dangerous expedient of seeking a rooming house or, if without funds, sleep behind ash barrels," Mr. Brown said. "I have housed scores of these boys in my home until jobs and recurrent paydays lifted them off the rocks and I know what even a few days of decent surroundings can do for them.

"The large and properly conducted hotel for which we are working and which will not be a 'boys' home,' will be equipped to do for thousands and thousands of kids what my feeble efforts have accomplished for a few hundred.'."

REMAINING MEMBERS STICK TO COMMITTEE

Ottawa, May 12.—There are not likely to be any further resignations from the special committee on pensions over the McLean incident, according to one of the members of the committee, who intimated that most of the remaining members proposed to draft letters explaining their stand on the matter, and forwarding these to their returned soldier constituents.

Several members claim they can do more for their returned soldier constituents by remaining on the committee than they could do by any other course at this time.

The committee met today in private and is understood to have under discussion the procedure to be followed when the hearing of re-establishment evidence is begun.

No list of the witnesses to be called has been announced, but it is likely that officials of the D. S. C. R. and Land Settlement Board will be among the first called when the public sessions open this afetrnoon or to-morrow.

PENSION BOARD IS UNDER FIRE

Ottawa, May 11.—Several personal questions dealing with the staff of the Pensions Board will be asked in the House on Monday by C. A. Gauvreau, Temiscouata. He gives the names of eighteen members of the staff and asks for their respective salaries and war records, also if they can not be replaced by returned men. Mr. Gauvreau also wants to know if the services of female clerks receiving over $900 per year cannot be replaced by returned men.

M'Lean Incident Has Been Settled

OTTAWA, May 11—The resignation of Col. C. W. Peck, V. C., and Col. R. C. Cooper, from the Pensions Committee of the House of Commons have been withdrawn. A statement from Brig Gen. H. H. McLean apologizing for any offence which his words may unintentionally have caused to returned soldiers, their wives or widows, was made at a public meeting of the committee today, and the whole "McLean incident," which for a time threatened to disrupt the committee has been settled.

The committee also met today in private and is understood to have had under discussion the procedure to be followed when the hearing of re-establishment evidence is begun.

No list of witnesses to be called has yet been announced, but it is likely that officials of the D.S.C.R. and Land Settlement Board will be among the first called when the public sessions open this afternoon or tomorrow.

Rumored Invasion Of Pulp Industry

MONTREAL, May 11—It is rumored in the United States paper circles that English capital is to enter Canada, perhaps abetted by some United States money, with the purpose of buying up isolated groundwood pulp mills, which make the raw material used in making newsprint. The report has it that a sum, variously set at amounts up to $40,000,000 will be expended for this purpose, for the purchase and development of water powers and for the enlargement and perfection of the mills purchased.

A prominent executive in the industry, however, declares that this will be exceedingly difficult. To begin with, he points out, $40,000,000 will not go a great way when applied to the purchase of pulp mills now at the peak of prosperity. The whole paper industry, in fact, is characterized by the heavy investment which is tied up in the various units. For one thing the great reserves of timber lands which must be carried are very expensive; for another thing, wood which is cut at the beginning of a winter is not floated down until the spring, and some of it does not become pulp until nearly the next spring

"To start the organization of a company and construction of a mill now would mean a wait of eighteen months or two years before it would be operated," said this authority. "The machinery could not be got before then. We have to wait five or six months, even, for spare parts. I do not know of any new mill building in the United States and Canadian mills that have been built in the last couple of years have got the bulk of their machinery from the other side where it had been contracted for.

"I believe Alaska presents a more attractive field for new pulp making projects," he continued. "They have a tremendous amount of raw material up there, and the country and the climate present no more difficulties than are experienced in Maine, Wisconsin or Canada. They are reported to have plenty of water power up there; the snow keeps the ground from freezing deep enough to lock up all the water it has soaked up, so that there is a small continuous supply of water to the water courses all winter.

"I believe pulp mills could be established near the mouths of rivers which flow to the coast, so that river steamers could come up for the pulp and tranship it at the coast to seagoing vessels. Of course this pulp would have to come down to San Francisco and then across the country, and that will mean high priced paper, but if we are to believe some recent prophecies we may have to do something like that within forty years or so."

SENDS ANONYMOUS GIFT OF $650,000

London, May 11.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain announces that he has received an anonymous gift of £130,000 of the war loan for cancellation and as a contribution to the reduction of the national debt.

The donor explains, says Mr. Chamberlain, that he was denied the privilege of fighting for his country and that he desires to encourage other persons to similar patriotic acts.

NOT A FAIR TEST.

In the discussion of the high price of necessities the statement frequently appears that a merchant can place two articles identically the same on sale. one with a price mark of five dollars and the other marked at ten dollars and the higher priced article will be purchased in preference to the same article at half the price. This recalls the story of the man who tried to give gold pieces away but found no one willing to accept them. When something is offered for nothing the element of suspicion in human nature always governs. When an article is marked ten dollars the shopper naturally assumes that is the value of the article, and when "something just as good" is offered for five dollars suspicion prevents acceptance. Let there be a bargain sale, however, with prices marked down from ten to five dollars, and see what a rush there will be for the five dollar article, providing, of course, that the shopper has confidence in the integrity of the dealer. To place two articles, one at five dollars and the other at ten dollars, side by side, and tell the public both are the same quality induces suspicion that there is a trick somewhere.

The test is not fair.

P. T. Barnum, the great showman, said "the people like to be humbugged." Perhaps they did in his day, but they don't now.

They do dearly love a bargain, however, and let any reputable dealer advertise ten dollar goods at five dollars, with his guarantee of quality, and see how quickly the supply will be swamped. Bargains advertised in the daily papers do not go begging purchasers; they are snapped up quickly as the purchasers know they carry the dealer's printed guarantee.

Two articles, not advertised, but placed in the window or elsewhere side by side may look alike and be alike, but as far as the purchaser's knowledge is concerned one may be worth ten dollars and the other nothing at all In that case the only guide except to experts would be the price marks.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, 1820-1920.

When Florence Nightingale was born, a hundred years ago, the great "age of invention" was in its infancy, says the Toronto Star in reviewing the wonderful advances made in science and arts since the heroic nurse's day. Electro-magnetic action had just been discovered. The telephone was as yet afar off, though a crude electric telegraph was in process of evolution. Only 20 years before, electric light had been produced with carbon points, and it was not until six years after her birth that even gas lighting was introduced upon the streets of London. Candles were commonly used. When little Florence was a girl of five the plaited wick was discovered and did away with "snuffing." She was a woman of twenty-seven before paraffin candles were utilized. Transportation as we now have it was just beginning to emerge from a mass of experiments. Steamboats did not play between Dover and Calais until 1821, and the first Stephenson locomotive, which panted along at a speed of six miles an hour, antedated the birth of Florence Nightingale by only six years.

Even in 1854, when Miss Nightingale left for Scutari with her devoted band of 37 nurses who had been touched by the terrible sufferings of British soldiers in the Crimea, the progress of "modern invention" had not reached an advanced stage. Equipment for the prevention and cure of disease was as far behind that of a present day army as the candle was behind the incandescent tungsten lamp. The commencement of antiseptic surgery was not to come for another decade. Hospital accommodation at the suburb of Constantinople was of a kind unimaginably crude. And it is startling to read that, despite the ministrations of Miss Nightingale and her nurses, 4,200 of the British perished in the Crimea from cholera alone and nearly 16,000 from other diseases. Out of a total loss of about 24,000, 20,000 British soldiers died from sickness and only 4,000 from the effects of battle.

The story of Miss Nightingale's life is being utilized by the nursing profession as a stimulus to the girls to enter the ranks of nurses. The heroine of the Crimea had, of course, a special inborn taste for nursing. It is told of her that as a child she bandaged the arms and legs of her dolls and even acted the part of surgeon-extraordinary to a shepherd's dog. But there are doubtless many young women who feel prompted nowadays to a similar career of usefulness, and these it is hoped to reach with an appeal for service. There are no such barriers as strewed the path in 1854. And the barriers which still exist—the overwork which is sometimes unavoidable owing to the slimness of funds available for hospital support—should be substantially removed within the next few years. The public must be brought to a realization of the importance of hospital work as an economic factor. The State must take a larger part in the provision of funds so that a more thorough and less arduous training will be possible for those who are willing to devote themselves to the care of their suffering fellow-beings.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, a Canadian minister who has achieved much distinction in the United States by his comments on industrial relations, created somewhat of a stir at the annual convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Atlantic City when he asserted that the cost of living would not come down until there is greater production, and that greater production cannot be accomplished until the open shop existed. Dr. Eaton said he was in favor of the one big union, made up of representatives of the government, the people of the country, the employers and the workingmen.

A Favorite Loophole.

Hamilton Herald.

If there has been any crooked work in connection with the administration of the Canadian National railway, says D. B. Hanna, the president, he is anxious to know about it, and with this object in view he has taken action for slander against F. S. Cahill, M. P. for Pontiac, who is reported to have made charges of irregularities both in the house and at a Reform club meeting in Montreal. It would not be surprising to hear of reporters being blamed for all the trouble.

Good Advice.

THE POET'S CORNER

LEMNOS.

And now the war is done, the fighting o'er,
Departed are the ships and busy throng
That filled the isle with action and with life.
Now doze the natives as of yore;
For thousand years they lived the same,
No change to mark the passing of the time.
But now they have a trust—to guard
The graves of those that stayed behind:
Neat mounds, row upon row, and each
Its wooden cross that bears the honored name
Of one that died in honor's cause.

Here they shall rest; and in the years to come
Shall pilgrims journey from a thousand ports,
To pay their homage to the sacred dust!

Beneath the pale white brilliance of a tropic moon,
That soaks the scene in its transparent night,
Outlined by shadows, floating velvet gloom,
There lies a waste of rocky barrenness:
A vibrant silence fills all space with dread,
And thousand soldier spirits seem to roam
Between the glistening waters and the hills
That guard the land-locked harbor from the sea.

Dangerous Practice.

At the final rehearsal the principal actress came on the stage dressed in walking-out costume and began to sing.

"My dear," cried the manager, "you are surely not going to sing with your veil on?"

"Of course, I am," she replied. "I want to hurry off as soon as I have finished. I have to meet a friend."

"But singing with your veil on!" expostulated the manager. "Well, well," he added, in a resigned tone, "I can't help it if you want to strain your voice!"

A Tragedy.

It was a cold night, and the wind was howling round the trees. The weary wayfarer was wandering along without knowing and not much caring where he was. He had lost his way.

Stop! What is that? A signpost?

The weary wayfarer fumbled in his pocket, and brought out his box of matches. Luckily there was one left.

Carefully and slowly he toiled up the signpost, and at the top struck the match to see what was written thereon. The flickering glare of the match showed these words: "Try Poot's Pills."

CAN WOMEN JUDGE?

At last courts are being humanized; women are being introduced into the court room as judges. In fact, New York City already has a woman criminal court judge. Anne Shannon Monroe in April Good Housekeeping says:

"Women know the terrific cost of bringing human life into being, and after this original investment none other seems too costly, and no application of a curative plan too involved, if it will tend toward that life's proper adjustment to the world in which it is asked to serve. Human reclamation is not philanthropy—rather, it is economy—and the price, however high, is low compared to the cost to the state if that life is not reclaimed. The mother nature sees reclamation as the thing, as against destruction for the sake of example, and this is the theory on which women judges proceed.

THE DWINDLING DOLLAR.

Drop of Value Since 1896 Is Very Sensational.

The purchasing power of the dollar has declined greatly since 1914, but it was back in 1896 that the dollar had its greatest buying power.

Some figures have been given out from Washington showing how the value of the dollar has gone down steadily year by year since 1896. Taking the price in that year of about one hundred different commodities in general use and comparing the prices on these representative articles each year since, the purchasing value of the dollar is said to have decline as follows:

1896......	$1.00	1908......	$ .74
1897......	.97	1909......	.69
1898......	.90	1910......	.66
1899......	.82	1911......	.68
1900......	.75	1912......	.64
1901......	.78	1913......	.61
1902......	.75	1914......	.65
1903......	.75	1915......	.60
1904......	.74	1916......	.50
1905......	.73	1917......	.36
1906......	.70	1918......	.32
1907......	.66	1919......	.32

In the last month of 1919 the decline is said to have gone to 29 cents, although the average for the year was 32. These are American figures, but in Canada pretty much the same experience has been gone through. If the hundred commodities on which this calculation is based included everything a family would ordinarily purchase, or if in everything else there has been a similar increase in prices or decline in the buying power of money, it means that the man who earned $20 a week in 1895 was as well paid as he is to-day if he draws $60 per week, and the man who earned $2,000 in 1896 was as well off at that sum as he is now if he earns $6,000 a year. In the latter case, however, if a man saved one-twentieth of his salary ($100) in 1896, and saved the same percentage now ($30) he might be better off to that extent, because it is the dollar that is spent, not the dollar saved, that has declined in value. The dollar that is saved may recover its purchasing value, or some part of it, in course of time.

It is not probable, and perhaps it is not at all desirable, that prices should ever drop to the 1896 level, or the dollar be as scarce and powerful as it then was. To-day a Toronto housekeeper pays $2.20 for a chicken; in 1896 she used to buy two for 35 cents—not as good chickens as those bought now, but deemed good at that time. Nearly everything is three or four times the price of 1896. No matter how wages may go up, it seems to be comparatively easy for prices to over-top them.

Not so with a NEPONSET ROOF

THIS is a portion of an illustration recently used to demonstrate the superiority of metal over wood shingles as a protection against the elements.

It shows the wind ripping great holes in the wood-shingled roof. No such comparison could be made as between a metal roof and a Neponset Paroid roof.

NEPONSET PAROID

is impervious to rain, sun, wind or hail, and gives assured protection to farm buildings. There are many instances in which a Neponset Paroid roof has stood the test of every variety of weather condition for more than twenty years and is still water-tight.

If you consider roofing, don't experiment, don't waste your money—start right in the commencement and use a roofing material that relieves you of all future cares and worries—specify Neponset Paroid and be sure you receive Neponset—the name that spells honest roofing satisfaction.

The base of Neponset Paroid is a high-grade rag felt thoroughly impregnated with asphalt, making it positively waterproof and fire-resisting.

It is further reinforced with a talc surface, grey in color; or with a permanent slate surface, red or green in color.

EASY TO LAY—With every roll of Neponset Paroid is supplied sufficient nails and cement with full directions.

There is a Neponset dealer in your district. Write us for his name and a copy of our illustrated booklet "Roofing Canada."

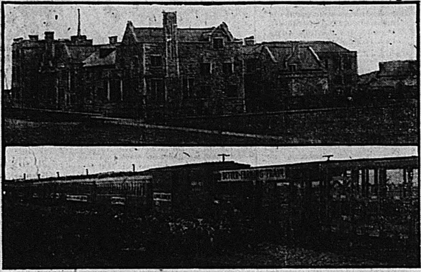
SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE IN SASKATCHEWAN



Upper Picture.—Students' Residence, University of Saskatchewan. Live Stock Pavilion in the background.
Lower Picture.—"Better Farming Train," showing how instruction is carried to the farmers.

Long after the ivy peered in at the upper windows of such splendid universities as Oxford, Cambridge or Harvard, such an institution as the University of Saskatchewan had not even been imagined. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who laid the corner stone of this new university July 29th, 1910, was a student poring over his books few but Indians had stood on the height of land which is the site of the buildings shown in the accompanying photographs, and watched the waters of the South Saskatchewan River gliding swiftly and silently northward.

Although the prairie soil was as rich and the river as broad and full then as now, the City of Saskatoon was unconceived. Even as late as twenty years ago, where now stands a city of 30,000 people on three lines of railway, there were not one hundred men, women and children and these were housed in a few tents and shacks. The wildest enthusiast would hardly have dared to prophesy that one day a university would grow there—yet there it stands!

The buildings of the University of Saskatchewan crown the height of land north east of Saskatoon and the site could hardly have been more fortunately chosen. It includes half a mile of well-wooded river front and altogether embraces 1,333 acres of rich land, 293 acres of which are set aside for a campus, 160 acres for purposes of agricultural experimentation and 880 for the Agricultural College farm. The plan provides for the eventual accommodation of 5,000 students.

The present buildings consists of an administration building, containing a hall and offices for the different departments as well as class rooms, two students' residences, one containing a spacious dining hall and the other a gymnasium and swimming pool; an engineering building; livestock pavilion and up-to-date model farm buildings. All the buildings conform to the preconceived plan and will, like those already erected, be of stone in the Gothic style. Work has just recently begun on a new science building. There are also several private residences on the campus, the two principal stone ones provided for in the architect's plan being those of the President of the University and the Dean of Agriculture. The buildings of Emmanual College, a church of England Divinity School, the first of its kind in Saskatchewan also occupy a part of the campus. The University grants sites of from three to five acres to such affiliated colleges at a nominal rental. Eight thousand dollars has already been subscribed towards a beautiful structure which will be the home of the Presbyterian College.

The university provides degrees in Arts, Science, Law, Agriculture, Civil Engineering and a Diploma in Pharmacy.

The present enrolment is between 1,400 and 1,500, including returned soldiers who are retraining in various branches of skilled work, particularly engineering. Scores of promising returned soldiers have been turned out as capable motor mechanics. Steam engineering and the handling and repairing of farm tractors are also taught. Agricultural students, principally the sons of farmers, are training in livestock handling and judging, and even in the care and management of poultry.

An important feature of the work of the University of Saskatchewan has been its Extension Department consisting of short instructional courses at seasonable times for farmers and farmers' wives. Each year a special train is fitted out and a regular course of instruction mapped out including lectures to farmers. This train is widely advertised as the "Better Farming Train." It makes a tour of the Province, stopping at all important points and the farmers drive in for miles to examine the exhibits, talk over their problems with experts and hear the lectures. Realizing that the average busy farmer cannot go to the University, an effort is made to take the University to him and to let him know at first hand the results of experiments with special varities of grain, the latest information about methods of soil tillage and the like.

During the recent winter evening lecture courses have been given at a nominal fee for the benefit of city residents. Some of the best educated people in the community have attended these classes.

From an educational standpoint Saskatoon offers as great opportunities as any city in Canada. Complete training from Kindergarten to University is provided through a fine set of public schools, thirteen large public schools, which ranged in cost from $118,000.00 to $156,000.00 at pre-war building prices. An accompanying photograph shows two of them in one block in the working class section of the city. The enrolment of pupils in the public schools is now well over 4,000.

The Collegiate Institute, which provides the intermediate stage between the Public Schools and the University, has an enrolment of about 2,000.

WOULD VACCINATE HOGS

Calgary, Alta., May 11—According to John Cahill, of Calgary, hog cholera, is being conquered by vaccination. Two treatments are necessary, a single injection when animals are four weeks old and the double treatment when they are four months old. This is said to safeguard them against cholera for one year and the treatment can be repeated with good results twelve months after the double injection. This is a tremendous boon to western hog raisers who were about discouraged by the ravages of this disease.

MOTORCAR NEWS

"JAY-WALKER" MENACE

"Every now and then someone asks about the attitude of Safety League towards traffic accidents," says R. B. Morely, General Manager of the Ontario Safety League. "Our attitude was clearly defined years ago when we began our educational campaign in 1914. There are five classes of people using our streets who have to be considered in the question of traffic. These classes are: street-car operators automobile drivers, teamsters, cyclists, and pedestrians. Each one of these classes has certain rights on the highways. Each has certain liabilities. Each must respect the rights of the others as the use of our streets is not confined to any one class. We need all classes of traffic for the complex life of our communities."

"The careless pedestrian known as the "jay-walker" is a menace to any city. The cyclist who does not obey the rules of the road is a menace. The teamster who hogs the road and takes unnecessary chances is a menace. The automobile driver who uses the streets regardless of the safety of others is a menace. The street-car operator who drives his car without adequate care for all who may be on the streets is a menace. Let us get together on this matter. Let us all use the streets in a proper and sane fashion. Let us each respect the rights of others. And above all let us have more safety on the public highways by the exercise of ordinary care."

WOMEN'S MOTOR PARTY UPSET INTO CREEK

Kitchener, May 8—An auto party, consisting of five women and one child, had a miraculous escape from death while driving on the Breslau-Chicopee road, when the car overturned on the side of a culvert and threw the occupants into the creek. Fortunately none of the party were injured beyond a bad shaking up. The car, which was driven by Mrs. William Meisner, stalled on a hill, and the brakes refusing to work, the car back down until the culvert was reached, and turned completely over the top. There was no railing on the bridge across the creek, which would have prevented the car from capsizing. The women were rescued from their plight by a farmer who was passing.

"P. C."

A pastor tells of a young candidate for the ministry who called upon him. "Why do you want to preach?" asked the clergyman. "I feel called of God," was the answer. "What makes you think you are called?" "I felt it and my mother told me so. She said I was cut out to be either a minister or an undertaker." "In choosing the ministry you are making a great financial sacrifice," the doctor answered. He tells of another student who declared that he beheld in a vision the letters "P.C." and that these letters stood for "Preach Christ." This young man came from a farm in the Middle West, where harvest hands were sorely needed. "I think you have made a mistake," said the church official whose counsel he had sought. "Those letters undoubtedly stood for 'Plant Corn'."

How He Told It.

The atmosphere of the smoking car lent itself to reminiscence, says a correspondent. "Captain," asked the hardware salesman, "would you mind telling me how you lost your arm?" "Not at all, not at all," replied the bronzed officer with the empty sleeve. "It happened this way: We were due for another turn in the trenches the next day, so they were giving a dance for us that night back in the rest camp. A few welfare workers were there, and among them was the cutest little girl I ever met. I managed to dance with her most of the evening, and toward the end we wandered out in the moonlight. 'Captain,' she said, after a while, 'please remove your arm.' And, you know, she was such a little queen I just couldn't refuse her."

Australian Small Notes.

Though the 10-shilling note has become popular in Australia no attempt has been made to introduce a medium of exchange equivalent to the dollar bill. The high cost of silver, however, is rendering it prohibitive for coinage purposes, unless a durable ringing coin difficult to counterfeit can be produced with a small percentage of silver. While the Commonwealth mint is endeavoring to solve the problem of percentage everything is in readiness for the immediate issue of five-shilling bank notes by the Federal Treasury. There is no apparent reason why these notes should not become popular at once and restrict the use of silver to the half crown and smaller denominations, though again, nickel coinage is likely to supersede silver even there.

Testing the Minister's Faith.

A little Scotch lad greatly coveted a fine Jersey cow belonging to the minister of the local kirk.

"Do you believe in prayer?" said the good little boy to the minister.

"Most certainly I do," was the reply.

"But," insisted the questioner, "do you believe if I prayed hard enough God would give me a cow like ours?"

"Certainly, if you had equally good reasons for possessing a cow, and your faith was sufficiently strong."

"Then," came the immediate rejoinder, "you give me your cow and you pray for another."—Tit-Bits.

Experience Saves Money in this Maxwell

THE 300,000 Maxwells built to date saves you many a worth while dollar in the new Post-War Maxwell. Those 300,000 saved in many ways.

1. They taught "short cuts" in manufacturing.
2. They eliminated all experimental work—you don't have to pay for a single engineering mistake.
3. They developed quantity production which has reduced "overhead."
4. They enabled quantity purchases; and better materials are bought at lower costs.
5. They taught how to build an almost trouble-proof car; you seldom take a Post-War Maxwell to a repair shop.
6. They taught how to get the most mileage out of a gallon of gasoline, a pint of oil and a set of tires.
7. They taught how to build a car that the less skilled driver would find simple to operate and take care of.
8. They taught that it was better to build more and take less profit per car rather than build less and take more profit per car.
9. They taught how to put more and more value in the car without increasing the cost.

This Post-War Maxwell is next year's car. It contains features developed during the war, many of which will find their way into other cars in the summer of 1920.

FREMONT'S SERVICE ENDED IN MOVIES

Seventy years ago in a Philadelphia shipyard, the barkentine Fremont was built, which from the time of its launching had had a varied and romantic career. If the title of "soldier of fortune" could be applied to ships, she would deserve that term, for she has been in every port in the world and engaged in all sorts of callings, some of them not altogether creditable.

There seems to be very little doubt that she was a slave ship in her early days, and made various trips to Africa for human cargo. She was a blockade runner in the civil war and reports have it she was also a pirate at some time in her career. The log of the old ship at least in her earlier years, has been lost, so that only tradition and the stories of seamen can be relied on to account for some years of her activity.

For a little while she was engaged in callings less picturesque, being in the service of an canning company of Alaska. From the fishing business to becoming a "star" in the movies was a distinct advance for the old boat. She was first owned by the Triangle Film Company, of New, and later became the property of the Maurice Tourneur Company, of Culver City, California.

While starring in the movies, she went from place to place, finally coming to anchor in a tranquil bay on the Southern California coast, where she fitted into the scenery as if she belonged there. Her tall masts etched themselves against the clear California skies like an old painting. Here she received a "Spanishizing" at the hands of the movie folks, and was rechristened the Hispanola, so she could star in Stevenson's famous "Treasure Island." The fancy scroll work added to stern and bow heightened the effect of antiquity, and when her great sails were spread she was an object of beauty and nobility that lent grace to all the surrounding landscape.

Like other stars, she commanded a large salary. From $100 to $800 per day and even more than that were the prices paid by the different film companies for the use of her; for there was no other boat just like her in all Southern California which is the land of moviedom. And she was in almost constant use.

The months slipped peacefully over her head as she lay in the snug harbor, until one day a heartbreaking event ended her career.

The captain had taken her outside the bay for pictures, and in bringing her in she went aground in the narrow channel, endangering the lives of the 45 people on board. All night she was buffeted by the waves and it was impossible to rescue even the fim folks until the next day.

When it became clear that the old sea rover was too deeply imbedded in the sand to be gotten clear, she was dynamitted, going up in a blaze of glory and dying as adventurously as she had lived; with her boots on so to speak.

OVER 435,000 GRAVES HAVE BEEN IDENTIFIED

In France and Belgium, up to mid-April, there have been 435,000 graves identified and registered. In addition, 117,000 burials have been reported. Scattered and isolated graves to the number of 128,000 have been attended to and re-interment made. Another 100,000 graves in other theatres of war have been identified, and another 150,000 burials outside France and Belgium have yet to be dealt with.

These facts were given by W. L. Griffith, secretary of the High Commissioner's Office in London, England who is in Canada on departmental affairs.

PROHIBS VOTE $150,000 FOR COMING CAMPAIGN

A campaign "to secure such a great majority as will make our victory decisive" has been planned by the Executive Committee of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance in connection with the coming referendum on the importation of liquor. To carry out this campaign a budget of $150,000 was voted, the amount to cover also the regular work of the year.

The campaign calls for the holding of conventions in every county, or electoral district in the Province at the earliest possible date. Field men are to be put on to assist the county organizations. One of the first duties of the organizers will be to look after the voters' lists. In a statement issued by the executive the opinion is expressed that the vote will be taken under the provisions of the new Franchise and Elections Act, which, however, has not been passed by the Dominion Parliament. The statement continues:

"In such case, if the vote is taken before July 1, the list used in the Provincial Referendum last fall will be taken as the basis, authority being given to add and strike off names. . . If the vote is taken in October or November it may mean the preparation of an entirely new list especially for this voting."

Arrangements are to be made for a number of public meetings and a "speakers' bureau" for the purpose of supplying speakers established. Field day services in all churches possible are to be held before voting day.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE!

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

"Well my wife said to me—(Dar not too much, not too much at a time better go twice)—my wife said to me as she posted up the books: 'Sabley,' she ses, 'Miss Day must have been affronted this summer during that hoe, muggy weather that spoiled so much for us; for depend upon't,' she ses, 'she've been trying Joe Grimmett unknown to us—see her account else.' 'Tis little, of course, at the best o' times, being only for one, but now 'tis next kin to nothing."

"I'll inquire," said Geoffrey despondingly.

He returned by way of Mellstock and called upon Fancy, in fulfillment of a promise. It being Saturday, the children were enjoying a holiday, and on entering the residence Fancy was nowhere to be seen. Nan, the charwoman, was sweeping the kitchen.

"Where's my da'ter?" said the keeper.

"Well, you see, she was tired with the week's work, and this morning she said, 'Nan I sha'n't get up till the evening.' You see, Mr. Day, if people don't eat, they can't work; and as she gie'd up eating, she must gie up working."

"Have you carried up any dinner to her?"

"No; she don't want -- There we all know that such things don't come without a good reason—not that I wish to say anything about a broken heart, or anything of the kind."

Geoffrey's own heart felt inconveniently large just then. He went to the staircase and ascended to his daughter's door.

"Fancy!"

"Come in, father."

To see a person in bed from any cause whatever, on a fine afternoon is depressing enough; and here was his only child, Fancy, not only in bed but looking very pale. Geoffrey was visibly disturbed.

"Fancy, I didn't expect to see thee here, chiel," he said. "What's the mattter?"

"I'm not well, father."

"How's that?"

"Because I think of things."

"What things can you have to think so martel much of?"

"You know, father."

"You think I've been cruel to thee in saying that that penniless Dick o' thine sha'n't marry thee, I suppose?"

No answer.

"Well, you know, Fancy, I do it for the best, and he isn't good enough for thee. You know that well enough.'" Here he again looked at her as she lay. "Well Fancy, I can't let my only chiel die; and if you can't live without en you must ha' en I suppose."

"Oh, I don't want him like that—all against your will, and everything so disobedient!" sighed the invalid.

"No, no; 'tisn't against my will. My wish is, now I d'see how 'tis hurten thee as soon as we've considered a little. That's my wish, flat and plain, Fancy. There, never cry, my little maid! You ought to ha' cried afore; no need o' crying now 'tis all over. Well, howsoever, try to step over and see me and mother-law to-morrow, and ha' a bit of dinner wi' us."

"And—Dick, too?"

"Ay, Dick, too, 'far's I know."

"And when do you think you'll have considered, father, and he may marry me?" she coaxed.

"Well, there, say next midsummer; that's not a day too long to wait."

On leaving the school, Geoffrey went to the tranter's. Old William opened the door.

"Is you Grandson Dick in 'ithin, William?"

"No not just now, Geoffrey. Though he've been at home a good deal lately."

"Oh, how's that?"

"What wi' one thing, and what wi' t'other, he's all in a mope, as m't be said. Don't seem the feller 't used to. Ay, 'a will sit studding and thinking as if 'a were going to turn chapel-member, and then 'a don't do nothing but traypsing and wambling about. Used to be such a chatty feller, too, Dick did; and now 'a don't spak at all. But won't ye step inside? Reuben will be home soon, 'a b'lieve."

"No, thank you, I can't stay now. Will ye just ask Dick if he'll do me the kindness to stap over to Yalbury to-morrow with my da'ter Fancy, if she's well enough? I don't like her to come by herself, now she's not so terrible topping in health."

"So I've heard. Ay, sure, I'll tell 'en without fail."

PART IV—CHAPTER V

The visit to Geoffrey passed off as delightfully as a visit might have been expected to pass off when it was the first day of smooth experience in a hitherto obstructed love-course. And then came a series of several happy days of the same undisturbed serenity. Dick could court her when he chose, stay away when he chose—which was never; walk with her by winding streams and waterfalls and autumn scenery till dews and twilight sent them home. And thus they drew near the day of the Harvest Thanksgiving which was also the time chosen for opening the organ in Mellstock Church.

It chanced that Dick on that very day was called away from Mellstock. A young acquaintance had died of consumption at Stoneley, a neighboring village, on the previous Monday, and Dick, in fulfillment of a long-standing promise, was to assist in carrying him to the grave. When, on Tuesday, Dick went toward the school to acquaint Fancy of the fact, it is difficult to say whether his own disappointment, at being denied the sight of her triumphant debut as organist, was greater than his vexation that his pet should on this great occasion be deprived of the pleasure of his presence. However, the intelligence was communicated. She bore it as she best could, not without many expressions of regret, and convictions that he per- of regret and convictions that the per- now.

Just before eleven o'clock on Sunday he set out upon his sad errand. The funeral was to be immediately after the morning service and as there were four good miles to walk, it became necessary to start comparatively early. Half an hour later would certainly have answered his purpose quite as well, yet nothing would content his ardent mind but that he must go a mile out of his way, in the direction of the school in the hope of getting a glimpse of his love as she started for church.

Striking into the path between the church and the school, he proceeded toward the latter spot, and arrived opposite her door as his goddess emerged.

If ever a woman looked a divinity, Fancy Day apeared one that morning as she floated down those school steps in the form of a nebulous collection of colors inclining to blue. With an audacity unparalleled in the whole history of school-mistresses—partly owing, no doubt to papa's accumulation of cash which rendered her profession not altogether one of necessity—she had actually donned a hat and feather, and lowered her hitherto plainly looped-up hair, which now fell about her shoulders in a profusion of curls. Poor Dick was astonished—he had never seen her look so distractingly beautiful before, save on Christmas-eve when her hair was in the same luxuriant condition of freedom. But his first burst of delighted surprise was followed by less comfortable feelings, as soon as his brain recovered its power to think.

U. S. METHODISTS ENDORSE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Des Moines, Ia., May 11—The Methodist general conference here turned its attention from spiritual affairs to material needs of the world. It took up the question of the League of Nations, basing discussions on two different reports by a committee.

The majority reported a resolution favoring a league of nations in which the United States should have a place, without touching upon the President's part in the controversy. The minority report supported the treaty reservationists.

Industrial needs were considered following an address last night by Governor Henry Allen of Kansas, who explained the State's industrial court law.

BANKS AVERTED CRISIS

Winnipeg, May 11—Through the action of the banks of Canada and the United States, said Hon. Edward Brown, provincial treasurer, who returned from the east, a financial crisis of the most serious character has been averted. The banks, he said, by curtailing credits and forcing business men to face the situation clearly had already caused a reduction in the price of goods.

"We have entered into a period," said the Provincial Treasurer "when decreases in the cost of living will gradually begin to be felt and when adjustments will have to be made."

ASQUITH MOVES ONE PARLIAMENT FOR ERIN

London, May 11—An important debate on the Government's Irish Home Rule Bill in the committee stage began this afternoon, when Mr. Asquith moved an amendmnt altering the bill so that Ireland would have one Parliament instead of separate parliaments for the North and South as provided in the Government measure.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA HAS FLU

London, May 11—Queen Alexandra, it is learned, is prostrated with influenza which swept through the household. She has been confined to bed for several days, but her condition is not regarded as serious. There is anxiety because of her advanced age.

Portugal mines less coal than any other European nation, the annual production being about 22,000 tons.

In the Spring Time

Any fool knows enough to carry an umbrella when it rains, but the wise man is he who carries one when it is only cloudy. Any man will send for a doctor when he gets bedfast, but the wiser one is he who adopts proper measures before his ills become serious. During a hard winter or the following spring one feels run-down, tired out, weak and nervous. Probably you have suffered from a cold, the Grip or flu, which has left you thin, weak and pale. This is the time to put your system in order. It is time for house-cleaning.

A good, old-fashioned alterative and temperance tonic is one made of wild roots and barks, without the use of alcohol, and called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in tablet or liquid form. This is nature's tonic, which restores the tone of the stomach, activity of the liver and steadiness to the nerves, strengthening the whole system. First put up by Dr. Pierce over 50 years ago, now procurable at any drug store; or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package.

NATIONAL FIGURES.

Canada's Population Is Growing and So Is Her Debt.

Canada's population is estimated for 1920 at nine million people; her total revenue per head for 1920, $36.11; total expenditure per head, 1920, $75.01, and consolidated fund expenditure per head for 1920, $30.

These figures were tabled in the House of Commons at the request of Hon. W. S. Fielding, former Liberal Minister of Finance. Mr. Fielding asked for details as to revenue, expenditure and population for the years 1891 to 1920 inclusive.

The return showed that in 1891 Canada's total revenue was $38,579,310.88. By 1919 that revenue had grown to $312,946,747.18, and the estimated total revenue for 1920 is $325,000,000.

Expenditures chargeable to consolidated fund were: 1891, $36,343,567.00; 1919, $232,731,282.98; 1920 (estimated), $270,000,000.

Expenditures chargeable to capital: 1891, $3,115,960.04; 1919, $25,031,266.30; 1920 (estimated), $55,000,000.00.

Railway subsidies: 1891, $1,265,705.87; 1919, $43,805.32; 1920, $125,000.00.

War expenditure in 1919 reached its peak load with $446,519,439.48. For 1920 the sum set aside under this heading totals $350,000,000.00. Under the heading of "other charges" are the sums of $68,071.32 in 1891, and $7,283,581.61 in 1919. There is no estimate under this heading for 1920.

Total expenditures for the years named were: 1891, $40,793,306.19; 1919, $697,042,212.47; 1920 (estimated), $675,125,000.

Estimated population in each of the three years follows: 1891, 4,833,239; 1919, 8,835,000; 1920 (for the purposes of this return), 9,000,000.

Revenue per head of population, 1891, $7.98; 1919, $35.42; 1920, $30.00.

Total expenditure, including war, per head: 1891, $8.44; 1919, $78.90; 1920, $75.01.

The figures in the return were prepared by the Department of Finance.

Moore's Lone Hand.

In the Alberta Legislature to-day, the United Farmers of Alberta political party is composed of one member, A. A. Moore, of Cochrane, a farmer and rancher, who came from that famous Ontario county, Bruce. He was born at Lion's Head on October 1, 1876, and studied at the Public Schools of his native town and at the High School at Owen Sound. He farmed and farmed hard in Ontario, and spent his winters in the woods taking out timber. In 1907 he went West and took up a homestead in the Cochrane district northwest of Calgary. He proved up on his homestead, sold it and moved to the environs of the town of Cochrane, where he operated and still operates a dairy farm.

He was raised as a straight Liberal with an interesting break as a youth when he was a Patron of Industry. He is more farmer than Liberal, however, and welcomed the opportunity to try a tilt with the Government's candidate in the by-election rendered necessary by the death of the former Speaker of the Alberta Legislature, Charles W. Fisher. Against an array of speakers that included the Premier, Hon. A. G. Mackay, that seasoned political war horse from Ontario; Hon. G. P. Smith, Hon. C. R. Mitchell and other spellbinders and stump speakers, Mr. Moore waged a plucky fight that brought him a well-earned victory, and immediately the older parties, Liberals and Conservatives, began to see that it was time for them to prepare for a long and bitter battle with the U. F. A.

Mr. Moore has the happy knowledge that he also awakened the U. F. A. to a sense of their political opportunities. He was the pioneer in the field and with his success, the U. F. A. throughout the province decided that it was time for thorough political organization and this is now being accomplished on the basis that their party must be strictly a farmer's affair.

Mr. Moore stands alone in the House, but represents a power that stretches to every nook and corner of Alberta.

CHOOSING LUBRICANTS

Practical Advice Regarding Use of Machine Oils.

They Should Possess the Qualities of Adhesion and Cohesion—Mineral, Vegetable and Fish Oils All In Use—Planting Potatoes for Seed.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

WHILE possibly every care and attention is given to the mechanism of farm machinery, few, if any, give consideration to the quality of the lubricants used.

The efficiency of any power is seriously affected by poor or improper lubrication of surfaces in frictional contact, indeed, it is estimated at about 50 per cent. of the available amount of energy in useful work.

The object of lubrication is not only to reduce friction, but also to carry away whatever excess of heat may be generated, for a certain amount of work will produce a given quantity of heat, but the carrying away of the heat is only an incidental condition, for heating of the bearing should not arise.

Oils for lubricating purposes should possess two qualities—that of cohesion and adhesion. Their cohesive properties lie in the character of their molecules to cling to each other, and their adhesive quality to stick to anything else. The union of these two properties make up what is known as viscosity, that is the body of the lubricant. This in a greater degree than any other factor determines the lubricating value of the oils. While viscosity of an oil determines its value as a lubricant, fluidity indicates its adaptability to any one particular machine. It is because of the struggle between viscosity and fluidity that the same oil will not do for the heavy engine shaft, and for light weight machinery. Each requires an oil with just sufficient "body" to carry the load without being squeezed out of the bearing. Beyond this condition the more fluid and easier moving the oil the better.

A thick lubricating film of good resisting body is needed for the line shaft of an ocean liner, but a drop of the same oil would put a watch out of commission.

Practically all the lubricants now in use are of the mineral oil foundation treated to free them from acid, and to improve their suitability for special purposes. Sperm oil is specially good for high speed light machinery: for heavy bearings castor oil, but both are expensive. For great pressure at slow speed lard, tallow, and other solid lubricants are suitable. If pressure is great, and speed high, castor, sperm, and heavy mineral oils are used. For low pressure at high speed, olive, sperm, rape and refined petroleum give satisfaction.

Vegetable and fish oils are drying oils, that is, they oxidize rapidly, causing gumming or clogging of the bearings to which they are applied. A mineral oil does not oxidize, neither does an animal oil. But mineral oils have a low flash point: that is, they fire at a low temperature. Animal oils develop fatty acids; these corrode and pit the metal they are used to lubricate.

Adulterants of various kinds are added to oils and greases to give them "body." Gum, soap, lime, resin, tar, soda and free acids all have their own distinct purpose to serve. Simple tests may be applied to lubricants for quality and viscosity. To test for acid saturate a bit of cotton waste with the suspected oil, and lay it open upon the surface of polished steel or brass for twenty-four hours. If steel shows even a slight corrosion or, if the brass turns green, free acid is present. To test for gummy adulterants place a drop of oil upon a piece of glass inclined at such an angle as to permit it to flow gently down. If any gum, resins or other viscosity producing elements are present, they will be apparent by the color of the oil streak, as the adulterants deposit themselves upon the glass in the form of sediment.

A good quality of lubricant will not break down, when rubbed between the finger tips, as quickly, as a poor one.

It would be economy in three ways at least to use two different kinds of oil; economy of power, of machine wear, and of oil, and in addition there would be greater efficiency.—Jno. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

Planting Potatoes for Seed.

This refers entirely to the production of seed potatoes; not those intended for human consumption. The growing of seed potatoes is better divided into two sections, the early and the late. For growing early potatoes of the Irish Cobbler variety the seed should be selected true to type and free as possible from any of the various diseases which affect the potato plant or tuber. These should be from 8 to 12 ounces in weight and cut up into pieces 2 ounces in weight with two eyes to the piece. They are planted about the 10th of June and are given every possible cultivation with the soil in a state of high fertility; better having been clover sod well fertilized with barnyard manure to which has been added a considerable quantity of commercial fertilizer, about 800 lbs. per acre. Thorough spraying to control leaf diseases and the Colorado Beetle should be given throughout the season. For the late seed the Green Mountain or Rural New Yorker is used. The planting is generally done about June 1st to June 5th under similar conditions to the former. In all cases it is necessary to select a soil that does not dry out during the summer time, as potatoes for seed should not be subjected to a check at any time during their growing period.

An abundance of water is absolutely essential for thrift.

UNCLE SAM TO SEND 500 MORE ALIENS HOME

Washington, May 11—Another "Soviet ark" loaded with radical aliens will be started on its way to Russia shortly, according to information given the House Operations Committee by Anthonq Caminetti, director-general of immigration.

About 50 aliens are now awaiting deportation, and most of them are Russians. Plans are rapidly being completed, it was learned, for sending a large shipload to Odessa or some other point on the Black Sea.

"Difficulties have been encountered in obtaining transportation facilities, but it is probable an army transport will be used," Caminetti said.

CONGRESS MAY LOAN BERLIN $250,000,000

Washington, May 8.—A bill designed to assist Germany's purchase in the United States of such materials as are necessary to the rehabilitation of that country, and which would help meet reparation demands, was introduced by Senator France, Republican. It would authorize loans to a total of $250,000,000 by the war finance corporation to German purchasers of food stuffs and raw materials in the United States, the corporation being authorized to accept Germany six per cent. securities which met its approval in payment.

A flax industry is to be located at Orono, Durham County, Messrs. Wilder and Hutchinson, who are the heads of the firm have leased the Waddell old furniture factory building for a term of ten years, for a mill, and Mr. R. R. Waddell will at once proceed to put it into repair, and repair the mill dam. A part of the machinery has already arrived, and the balance is to be here early in July. The prices paid for flax seems to have appealed to the farmers of the district who have readily contracted a satisfactory acreage.

STOLE WET GOODS

A daring burglary was pulled off in Lindsay Saturday night last when the home of Mr. Peter Kennedy, Glenelg Street, was entered by thieves and a quantity of bottled ale, porter etc., used for medicinal purposes, was carried away. It is surmised that the robbery was carefully planned and that the thieves had previously entered the house and placed the five cases inside the kitchen door so that when the automobile came along all they had to do was open the door and carry the goods out, which was done shortly after the midnight hour.

AN ENJOYABLE DANCE

Under the auspices of the Elliott Machinery Association of this city a successful At Home was held last evening at Johnstone's Academy and it proved to be a delightful function. Many were present and thoroughly enjoyed the program. In the early part of the evening euchre was indulged in by some present but dancing was the chief attraction. The Sills' Orchestra provided an excellent program of music while the floor was all that could be desired. It was an informal affair and all entered heartily into the enjoyment provided. At midnight luncheon was provided. The success of the affair was due to the following members of a committee which did all in its power for the enjoyment of the guests. Messrs W. A. Elliott, G. W. Elliott, N. J. Barrett, W. L. Goyer, M. Cummings, F. Goyer, Wm. Dyson and C. Coleman.

Friends Amazed At Big Change

Eats Anything, Sleeps Soundly and Is Full of Energy and Ambition

"When a man has been in a weak and run down condition for seven years and is suddenly restored to health, so that he is full of energy and eager for work, he naturally wants to tell everybody about it," said Arthur Galarneau, who resides at 108 Chateauguay St., Quebec, when the Tanlac representative called to see how he was getting on with the medicine, a few days ago.

"I was in a terribly run-down condition," he continued. "My stomach was out of order and whatever I ate would lie on my chest like a lump of lead. After my meals I always felt drowsy, and yet at night could not sleep well, for my rest would be disturbed by dreadful nightmares when I would jump up and start to yell, I got so weak at last that I used to dread going to work and it always seemed as if the day would never end. I had no energy and my work was like a martyrdom. I can assure you I lost all hope and my case was about desperate.

"If I had all the money I spent on medicines trying to get relief during the last seven years I would be well-to do today. And when I first read the statements in the papers about what Tanlac was doing I was very skeptical about it helping me, for my case was exceptionally bad. Still I decided to give it a trial, and I've been congratulating myself ever since that I did. Every dose I took seemed to bring me new relief. My appetite got keen, I began to enjoy my food and found out I could digest it perfectly. I got stronger every day, and now my friends are all amazed at the great change in my condition. I am full of energy and my daily work is just a cinch. I have now got some ambition in life and feel that there is some hope in the future. I shall always be grateful for what Tanlac has done for me and I am glad of this opportunity of recommending it."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

AIRMAN DISAPPEARED IN A MYSTERIOUS MANNER

Toronto, May 12—One of the strange disappearances of the war has to do with Captain William Fulton Cleghorn, D.F.C., son of Mr. J. B. Cleghorn, formerly of Dovercourt Road, as the relatives have been unable to secure any information concerning the airman since he was shot down in Germany on October 2, 1918, during the allied advance. Capt. Cleghorn, with Lieut. Eric Stringer as observer, had taken food to the advanced French line, and upon the return trip became confused and flew into Germany instead of back to France. Mr. Cleghorn has heard from Lieut. Stringer, who states that Captain Cleghorn was shot in the leg and was evidently taken to a hospital, as when they separated, Stringer was to go to a prison camp and Cleghorn was listed for hospital treatment. Since that moment no trace has been found of the missing officer and the combined efforts of the British, French and Belgian Governments have been unable to learn what happened to Captain Cleghorn. Recently the family received word that the son had been declared dead "for official reasons," meaning, as they believe, that the authorities have given up all hope of tracing him. Advertising in Germany for the missing captain has failed to produce any satisfactory results.

KINGS AND QUEENS GRACE THIS WEDDING

London, May 11—King George and Queen Mary and King Albert, of Belgium, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, were among the distinguished personages who attended the wedding of Lady Cynthia Curzon, daughter of Earl Curzon the Foreign Secretary, and Lieut. Oswald Ernald Mosley, M. P., in the Chapel Royal.

An additional notable touch was lent to the occasion by the fact that the King and Queen of the Belgians had come by airplane on Saturday from Brussels for the express purpose of attending the wedding. They were week-end guests of Lord Curzon.

After the ceremony Lady Curzon gave a reception at Carlton House Terrace to which some hundred guests were invited.

The bride was attended by seven bridesmaids. She was given away by her father. The wedding presents were many in number and of great value. King George and Queen Mary sent the bride a diamond brooch.

Miss A. C. Mackenzie and Miss Florence Harvey, Canadian competitors in the British women's golf championship qualified for the second round.

CANNOT DRILL A HOLE IN BOTTOM OF A BOTTLE

The interesting story of how clever individuals have been able to drill a hole in the bottom of machine made glass bottles, extract the high grade booze and fill up the container with wood alcohol or cold tea is just a figment of a wild imagination, according to inspectors of the liquor department of the United States Revenue Service, who say this can't be done. A knowledge of modern machine bottle blowing confirms the inspectors' statement.

There is no way, it is said, that a hole can be drilled in the bottom of the bottle and so plugged as to leave undamaged the bottle itself. Experts employed in glass factories, with the equipment of laboratories at their command, cannot do the trick.

The inside of the circular disc which appears on the bottom of all glass blown bottles, indicating that this is the place where that particular bottle was cut off, is always smooth, while the outside is not so, invariably. A "doctor" of these bottles could be at once detected, because he could not smooth out the inside of the disc. A forgotten fact is that all machine made bottles show the same circular mark, whether intended for preserved food, pickles, beverages or medicines. The assertion that any of these may be drilled through by an electric needle is disproved by a moment's reflection that glass is a non-conductor of electricity. The electric needle is almost all-powerful, but not quite.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS TO CURE THE SAVAGE GRIP

Paris, May 11.—"Music hath charms to cure the savage grippe," is the latest slogan of a group of Spanish doctors who have invaded the medical world of Paris. Recently when an outbreak of grippe at Madrid included the unusual symptoms of sleeping sickness, the doctors tried an experiment on a patient, a prominent banker. They carried him, asleep, to a dark room. Then they called in two musicians, who commenced to play soft melodies on guitars. After two hours slumber under the lulling music the patient awoke and the next day was completely cured. The Spanish medical group in Paris declare the "music cure" is infallible for all forms of encyphalitis and sleeping grippe.

QUEEN TURNED AWAY BY HOTEL MANAGERS

The Queen of the Belgians arrived incognito a few weeks ago at Fontainbleau, near Paris, late at night—too late, she thought, to disturb the domestic staff of the villa she had taken in the Rue Royale.

So, accompanied by a lady-in-waiting, an officer, and two maids, the Queen applied for accommodation at one of the chief hotels of the town. The management turned her away. She tried the other leading hotel with the same result.

After all, in order not to sleep in the open, the Queen had to awaken the staff of her villa.

Next day the two hotel managers discovered the identity of the applicants for rooms, and their sorrow at an opportunity missed may be imagined.

Threatened Strike Of Civil Servants In Canada

DISSATISFACTION EXPRESSED OVER COMMISSION'S REPORT—STRIKE MAY BE AVERTED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

VANCOUVER, May 13—A general strike of civil servants extending from coast to coast is now being mooted, according to high officials in the postal service here as a protest against alleged unsatisfactory salary provisions contained within reclassification subject, announced recently by the Civil Service Commission. During the last few days, it is declared, telegrams have been despatched between eastern and western cities pledge full support to any action embracing the whole of Canada, which may be decided upon in protest.

Sweeping Reforms In Ont. Schools Urged

TORONTO, May 12—Sweeping reforms in Ontario's educational system were urged by Thomas Marshall, Liberal member for Lincoln, in a speech in the Legislature last night. Briefly, the suggestions made by Mr. Marshall in his speech are as follows:

The abolition of all public written examinations.

The establishment of Township or County Board of Trustees.

The reduction to a minimum of the pressure of compulsory homework in public schools.

More freedom be granted local educational authorities in determining the details of the curriculum.

A reformation of the present inspectoral system, that county inspectors be made county public school Principals, upon whose shoulders shall rest the responsibility of an intimate and accurate knowledge of the progress of each school.

That the present system of high school inspectors be abolished, and that this work devolve upon an enlarged teaching staff in the Faculties of Education.

The present system of educational government by departmental regulation be largely modified.

A much larger contribution from the Provincial Government toward the cost of education, with special reference to teachers' salaries.

That more attention be directed to the professional training of teachers, with a view to elevating the profession status of teachers, and an improvement in the quality of the teaching done in the schools.

That in view of the fact that the County Councils are not elected for educational purposes, the appointment of county public school principals be placed in the hands of the County Board of Trustees.

Following Mr. Marshall, the member for Sturgeon Falls, Z. Mageau, spoke briefly, and Major J. C. Tolmie, member for Windsor, adjourned the debate.

Heavy Expense Over A Trifling Amount

MEAFORD, Ont., May 11—A case that probably is without precedent in the annals of Canadian law courts, has just been disposed of by Judge Sutherland in the Division Court here. R. J. Orr, a farmer residing at Fairmont, about eight miles from Meaford sued the Township of Euphrasia for the recovery of 71 cents which he claimed to have overpaid the township collector in the way of taxes. The plaintiff, in his testimony, stated that he had been at a loss of $58.67 in trying to have the alleged error rectified. In the meantime Orr had a petition circulated alleging that the township treasurer was behind in his accounts, and asking that his books be audited by a chartered accountant. This was done, and the result was that the books were found to be correct, with the exception of a few cents. The audit cost the township $800. The judge dismissed the action with costs to the plaintiff. It is said that the Township Council will bring an action against Orr for the recovery of the amount paid for the audit.

Another Huerta To Rule Mexico

WASHINGTON, May 11—Following the complete collapse of the Carranza regime in Mexico, a new government, with General Adolfo de La Huerta at its head has been formed. This announcement was made here today by the mission of the revolution, whose chief is Senor Alvaro Torre Diaz.

The new government is already functioning and it is understood to have indicated that it desires the recognition of the United States. A telegram on that subject has been received from Sonora, east of the new Mexican Government.

A peaceful outcome is indicated by the fact that the despatches today from United States Consuls and naval officers in Mexican waters declare that all is quiet.

The personel of the new government follows:

General Adolfo de La Huerta, Provisional President; General Salvador Alvarado, Minister of Finance; General Plutarco Calles, Minister of War; Alonzo Torre Diaz, Minister of State ad interim.

Senor Diaz belongs to the old Diaz family, but General De La Huerta has no family connection with former President Huerta. Interesting as indicating the closeness of the relations between General Pablo Gonzales and General Obregon, it was said here that Diaz is a closer friend of Gonzales and was suggested by Obregon for his present post.

General de La Huerta is about 43 years of age, and is described as a man of great executive ability, both as an official and in commercial business. He was prominent in the revolution of 1913, and since that time has been employed by Carranza on special missions to settle internal troubles. Carranza, however, early in April, endeavored to persuade de La Huerta to kill off the Obregon boom in Sonora and in Mexico generally. De La Heurta resisted and Carranza troops under Manuel Dieguez invaded Sonora to interfere and then the revolution broke out. Sonora achieved its independence and other States of Mexico followed in rapid succession.

The revolutionists held a meeting at Agua Priest about April 6, declared de La Huerta, provisional president, and agreed upon some of the necessary members of the Cabinet for an emergency government.

According to the present plan of the revolution, the selection of de La Huerta will be ratified by the Governors of the States of Mexico, and he will be endorsed as provisional president, ad interim. The next step will be the convocation of the Congress, which will endorse de La Huerta as provisional president in order that the constitutional continuity of the succession may be preserved and prevent the injection of any objections by outside powers as to the legality of the new regime. Following this, the election will be ordered for July of this year and then a constitutional convention will be called to revise the Carranza constitution of 1917.

The President chosen by an election will be inaugurated January 1st, 1921.

So far, the most prominent candidates are Gen. Obregon and General Pablo Gonzales. Their platforms agree on a peaceful policy towards the United States and other nations. The fact that these two generals, who, with General Benjamin Hill, dominate the country with large military forces, have subordinated themselves to the new civil government, points to a peaceful election without any further coup d'etat.

The State Department has despatches concerning affairs at the Mexican capital, but of not later date than Sunday night. These despatches refer to the arrival in the city of Gen. Obregon with several thousand men to augment the troops of Generals Hill and Gonzales. The city is reported as quiet with business resumed.

Drury Stands By Civil Service

TORONTO, May 12—Despite the protests of J. J. Morrison and the central office of the U. F. O., the Superannuation Bill will not be withdrawn in the Legislature. The letter of the secretary was responsible for a Government caucus being held yesterday afternoon. Premier Drury came out of that caucus determined to carry the bill forward.

Early in the day certain Farmer members, heeding a call of Mr. Morrison, started a 'round robin' to ask the premier to withdraw the bill. Following the caucus "Mr. Round Robin" evidently went south, and nothing more was heard from him during the day. It now seems assured that, despite the ultimatum issued by J. J. Morrison, the majority of Farmer members will support the bill. Even if they do not, the House will carry the measure easily.

No Conservative or Liberal members were approached by those hearing the petition. At the height of its success thirteen names were on the petition asking for the withdrawal of the bill.

Premier Drury has said nothing yet about the Morrison circular. He had nothing to say when the caucus ended, except that the bill would be pushed forward. There is absolutely no doubt about the fate of the bill. It will carry with a substantial majority. Farmer members last night were weakening in opposition. Undoubtedly the Morrison letter carried some of the men off their feet with its first appearance, but they were getting back behind the Government after the caucus.

Morale Of People Her Only Asset

LONDON, May 12—Hon. W. A. Watt, treasurer of the Australian Commonwealth, who arrived here today in the course of interview remarked that Australia had piled up a debt of £300,000,000 and had no assets beyond the morale of its people. Australia had a debt of £60 per head through the war. Canada's debt was only £30 a head and whereas she was a debtor nation, she was now a creditor nation. Mr. Watt said further that the situation in the Pacific was very delicate owing to the attitude of Japan, which tried at the Peace Conference unsuccessfully to ensure equality of races in all allied and associated countries, which would have given the Japanese free entry into any allied territories. Having failed in this she had apparently by diplomatic means delayed the issue of the mandate to the Australian Government for the Pacific Islands, which would give to that Government power to enforce restrictions on colored immigration.

POTATOES SHOW APPRECIABLE DROP

Montreal, May 13.—The wholesale price for potatoes is down to $5.50 per 90 pound bag, an appreciable drop, according to a large wholesale house in the city, following the arrival of fresh supplies for Montreal. This drop has not yet been felt by the retail trade, and the price remains steady, 90 cents per 12 pounds. There has been practically no decrease in the demand for potatoes noticed in the stores in spite of the high prices and the general public still remains faithful to the spud, though food experts have pointed out that it is useful as a filler only, and contains a comparatively small amount of nourishment.

Claims Authorship Of "Tipperary"

NEW YORK, May 11—"It's a long, long way to Tipperary," which inspired hundreds of thousands of British Tommies as they went into battle singing the well-known song flowed from the pen—at least the music of it did—of Mrs. Alice Smythe B. Jay, of Yakima, Wash., and was first sung Feb. 26, 1909 in that city by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church, according to testimony given today by Mrs. Jay in the Supreme Court here.

Mrs. Jay is suing the Chappell Co., Ltd., a British publishing house, demanding an accounting of all profits from the war song.

The feature of the suit today, was testimony given by a violinist, O. A. Asche, after swearing his fiddle would play the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, sat in the witness chair and played the "Booster Chorus" written by Mrs. Jay for her home city in 1909. Then he rendered the Tipperary battle song, repeating each twice over, and many who listened declared they detected no difference in the music of the war song and the "Booster Chorus."

Synod Of Huron Settles Stipend

BRANTFORD, Ont., May 13.—The important question of ministerial stipend was settled for the Diocese of Huron at the meeting of the Synod here when the recommendation of Bishop Williams that the minimum stipend be $1,200 for juniors, and $1,400 for seniors, with free rectory was changed by amendment to $1.300 without respect to seniority. A second amendment, that the minimum be $1,500 per annum, was defeated. There was a lengthy debate on the matter. A civic welcome was extended the 300 delegates here by Mayor Macbride, who reminded the Synod that the Queen Anne Church near the city was the oldest in Diocese. Col. Wiglo of Windsor and Canon Gunn replied the the welcome. Rev. S. E. Marshall, of the Brantford Ministerial Alliance expressed the hope that Canada's divorce laws would be made most stringent. John Raynster, of Clinton referring to the Bishop's charge, stated that the forces of evil were many times worse than the forces which stood against the country during the war. He asked that Church union be furthered and believed that Canada was an excellent place for such union to commence. The cardinal points of Christian religion were identical in all great creeds. Minor points alone made a sectarian division.

Conditions Of Peace May Be Accepted

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

BUDAPEST, May 13—The acceptance by the Hungarian Government of conditions of peace laid down at Paris is expected here unless extreme nationalist counsels prevail. The action of the Government in preventing a great demonstration by the league of territorial integrity and taking down of posters bearing the inscription: 'Damned be the hand that signs the treaty,'" give observers reason to think that the treaty will ultimately be accepted, in addition military patrols have been strengthened to prevent disorders.

NELSON, N.Z., May 13.—The Prince of Wales with his entourage arrived in this city in the southern part of New Zealand by motor from Picton yesterday afternoon, after having travelled ninety-two miles by road over the Whangamoa Pass. The Prince and his party lunched in the bush en route.

Nelson was one blaze of illumination last night and the Prince's motor car was surrounded by people sending up great scintillating masses of fireworks as he drove.

The citizens' ball in the Town Hall added to the air of festival, to which the remarkable street scenes, with bonfires blazing high and fireworks flashing in the sky lent added glamor.

Sir Robert Borden Resumes His Office

OTTAWA, May 12.—Sir Robert Borden has taken up the reins of office which he laid down four months ago, for the purpose of seeking rest for nerves, exhausted by the onerous duties and responsibilities of the Premiership of Canada during four years of war and the period of peace negotiations. If appearances are any criterion, moreover, the Prime Minister is physically fit to handle the reins for some time to come. His clear complexion, somewhat tanned by exposure to the sun, his bright eye, his springy step and general air of briskness and his apparent high spirits, all seemed to indicate that his health has greatly improved. His close friends say that he has returned from his holiday with the idea of resuming his place at the head of the Government, and with no present intention of retiring from that place. "I have come back to work," he said himself in the course of a brief interview. He was not prepared to make any statement as to his plans for the future, but intimated that later he might have an announcement to make to the House of Commons. Before making any public pronouncement upon his intentions, he would naturally desire to consult his colleagues in the Cabinet and meet his followers in Parliament at a party caucus.

AN Enthusiastic Reception.

Sir Robert was accorded an enthusiastic reception when he stepped from the train at the Central depot. A hundred members of Parliament and all his Cabinet colleagues had gathered there to greet him and when he appeared, they hailed him with a stentorian outburst of cheering. The Prime Minister shook hands with every one, and, finally, after the reception was over, departed for home with Lady Borden. Two hours later he unobtrusively took his seat in the House of Commons. He entered by a side door from the lobby and, as one observer remarked, his presence was only noted when he endeavored to locate a desk marked with the name of "Borden."

He was, however, greeted by applause and by a noisy pounding of desks on both sides of the Chamber. D. D. McKenzie, of North Cape Breton and Victoria, who chanced to be speaking at the time, commented upon the Premier's entry into the Chamber for the first time during the session, and expressed satisfaction that a member of the Opposition had the floor and was, therefore, permitted to say the first words of welcome to the Commons.

The Premier crossed the floor of the Chamber to shake hands and exchange greetings with Hon. Mackenzie King, and other leading members of the Opposition. He spent some time moving about among the occupants of the Government benches, and three hours after his arrival in Ottawa was in his own office in the Parliament Buildings in conference with members of the Cabinet.

Official Board Meeting Of Bridge Street Church

OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES SELECTED—LARGE AMOUNT RAISED FOR MISSIONS — DR. SCOTT'S SERVICES APPRECIATED.

The Quarterly Official Board of Bridge Street Methodist Church held its fourth regular meeting on Tuesday the 11th of May, in the Church Parlours. There was a very large attendance of the officials and members of the Board. Rev. Dr. Scott, presided. The reports of the different departments of the Church were brought before the Board.

Miss Annetta Deacon, the President of the W. M. S. presented the report for the Women's Missionary Society, the Young Ladies' Mission Circle, and the Golden Rule Mission Band. These three associations alone raised nearly $1500.00 for missions. Mrs. Robert McCoy presented the report for the Ladies' Aid. Mr. E. P. Frederick gave the report for the Sunday School. Mr. Wotten, President of the League, presented the League report. Mr. George F. Stewart presented the Missionary report, Mr. Charles Hyde the report of the Forward Movement, Mr. F. S. Deacon, the report of the Benevolent Fund.

Mr. George F. Ostrom was appointed Treasurer of the Social and Moral Reform Committee in the place of Mr. R. B. Morden, deceased. Mr. A. E. Thrasher was appointed Treasurer of the Educational Committee, in place of Mr. Thomas Gardiner, who has removed from the city. Rev. George Brown was appointed Assistant Pastor of the Church, and members of the Board expressed their gratification at their good fortune in being able to secure Rev. Mr. Brown for this position.

A Committee was appointed consisting of the Trustees, the Stewards' Board and the Sunday School Representative to prepare a budget of the estimates for the ensuing year. The pastor presented the report of the membership of the church, showing that the number is 721. The following Stewards were elected for the ensuing year: W. B. Deacon, J. H. P. Young, F. E. O'Flynn, George F. Stewart, Judge Deroche, E. P. Frederick, C. M. Reid, H. W. Ackerman, C. S. Clapp.

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn was re-elected Recording Steward and Secretary of the Board. Mr. Wotten, Chairman, Mr. Bird, Mr. Stewart, Mrs. J. H. P. Young and Mrs. Capt. Hunter were appointed a Committee to prepare the annual statement and reports.

Wednesday evening, the 19th of May, was fixed for the election of the Nine Society Representatives of the Congregation, on the Official Board and Wednesday evening, the 26th of May, was the date fixed for the annual meeting of the congregation at which the year's reports are submitted and the business of the Church publicly discussed.

The District visitors of the past year were re-appointed, being, as follows:

Foster Ward—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. [illegible]iske.

Samson Ward—B. D. Harns and Mrs. A. E. Thrasher.

Ketcheson Ward—Judge Deroche, H. J. Clarke and Mrs. J. H. P. Young.

Baldwin and Bleecker Wards—E. A. Ridley, Mrs. E. J. Ketcheson and Mrs. Capt. Fleming.

Coleman Ward—Mrs. Fowlie and Mr. Charles Elvins.

Murney Ward—Mrs. G. F. Stewart and R. B. Wiseman.

It was moved by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn that the Board would place on record its appreciation of the splendid services rendered by the Rev. Dr. Scott during the past four years and especially of his association with the members of the Church in their secular matters, their sports and his splendid work in the prayer meeting and other departments of the church, also the appreciation of the Board and congregation of the splendid services of Mrs. Dr. Scott whose influence and assistance will be very much missed when she leaves, and their appreciation of the splendid services of Mr. Douglas Scott, overseas at the front in defence of his country. The regret of the Board and congregation that the rules of the church require his pastorate to now terminate and this regret was lessened by the knowledge that he was going to a larger field and a splendid charge and that his successor, the Rev. Dr. Cleaver, is a man of such splendid reputation and well known ability. That our wish is that Dr. Scott and his wife would be long spared to enjoy the afternoon and evening of life and the rewards of lives well spent and that when the work was done here, we should meet them in the home prepared for His children by Our Lord and Master.

The motion was eloquently seconded by His Honour Judge Deroche and ably supported by Mr. C. M. Reid, both of the speakers expressing the great love the officials and congregation have for the pastor and his family and of the great work he has done in our midst.

The motion was put by the Rev. Dr. Baker carried unanimously by a standing vote and replied to by Dr. Scott was very much moved, but eloquently thanked the officials for their kindly expressions of love and sympathy. The session was then closed by Benediction pronounced by Rev. Dr. Baker.

POLICE BARRACKS IN VARIOUS PARTS OF IRELAND ATTACKED AND DESTROYED — CUSTOMS OFFICES RAIDED AND PAPERS BURNED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

DUBLIN, May 13.—At least nineteen police barracks in various parts of Ireland were wiped out in the course of widespread destruction of public property and other activities by bands of armed and masked men, in various parts of Ireland last night. Five income tax and customs offices were raided and the papers found in them were burned.

LONDON, May 13.—As at Easter time many police barracks were attacked and a large number of them were destroyed. Income tax offices also were again attacked and many documents destroyed. A notable instance of such attacks was the raid upon an income tax office in the heart of Belfast. At the Irish office it was said this afternoon that the office was without advices concerning the events mentioned in reports. Meanwhile Viscount French, viceroy, was in conference with Andrew Bonar Law regarding the policy to be pursued with a view to the restoration of order.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE!

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

"Little Red Riding Hood"

Scored a Great Success at Griffin's last Night

It would be hard to find a person who has not been entertained by the famous fairy tales of Mother Goose. Both the young and the old like them. They have a charm that make them everlasting.

F. Stuart-Whyte's "Little Red Riding Hood" was the attraction at Griffin's Opera House last night and that it scored a big hit, was manifested by the rounds of applause that greeted the production. It was witnessed by a large audience and everyone was delighted with it. In this, his fourth annual English pantomine, Mr. White has excelled himself, for in it there is everything to give it a finished touch. With all the characters, so well known to everyone and brimfull of sweet music, good dancing add gorgeous settings, it forms a rare treat for theatre goers. The entire cast and chorus is a strong one. From beginning to end it goes with a dash and swing that is most pleasing and has a number of noteworthy features. There are several well-known people to Belleville in the cast including Johnny Osborne, who takes the part of Old Mother Hubbard; J. V. Barrett Lennard as Old King Cole the second; Miss Zara Clinton, as Boy Blue; and Miss Pauline Harvey as the fairy queen. Johnny Osborne is one of the funniest men on the stage today and kept the audience in roars of laughter. As King Cole, Mr. Barrett Lennard shared honors with him. Miss Clinton captivated her audience from her first appearance. She is a most charming actress, and was warmly received. Her work throughout was exceedingly good and she was showered with applause. Wee Dorothy Mackay, as Little Red Riding Hood endeared herself to everyone in the audience, and the man who made out the programme made no mistake when he put her down as "Everybody's Sweetheart." In her role she was all that could be desired. Her acting calls for special mention, also her singing and dancing. The work of Charles Cardle, as Jack, and Miss Harriet Fawn, as Jill, is most outstanding and calls for more than a passing note. Their song, "Harmonize With Me," made one of the biggest hits of the evening. There are twenty or more musical selections and all are good.

Red Riding Hood captivated her audience with her sweet voice in "A Wedding in Fairyland," while the rendition of "Brave Old Contemptibles," by Ian Hunter provided a rich treat. Space would not permit mention of all the song hits, but reference should be made of "Love Me Just the Same," by Jack and Jill; "Jogging Along the Highway," by Boy Blue; "If You Could Care For Me," by Boy Blue and Bo-Peep; "The Old Four-Posted Bed," by Red Riding Hood and First Page; "A Bachelor Gay," by Boy Blue; "Back to the Land of Yesterday," by the Fairy; "A Modest Little Thing," by Bo-Peep; Song Memories and "Rot" by Boy Blue; "In the Days When Cole Was King," by Old King Cole. The MacKay dancers gave an excellent exhibition.

The entire production is wonderfully staged. The various settings are rich. The corridors in the "Palace of Hearts," is most gorgeous. The costumes are beautiful.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

SHOOTS OWN FATHER TO SAVE STEPMOTHER

Rather than see his sweetheart's mother murdered, Jason Honeycott shoots his own father in "Heart O' The Hills" adapted from the story by John Fox Jr., starring Mary Pickford, and which will be shown at Griffin's to-night to Saturday, with three performances Saturday, special children's matinee Saturday morning at 10 a.m. and usual Saturday matinee at 2.30 and usual evening performance. The marriage of the widow Hawn to Steve Honeycott was bitterly opposed by the children who knew that the elder Honeycott's love pleas were nothing more than trickery to enable him to marry the widow in order to get control of her valuable Kentucky Mountain lands. This production is Miss Pickford's latest from her own studios, and she has accomplished the unique feat of mixing heart throbs with chuckles in a most delightful manner in this attraction and the management of Griffin's predicts that "Heart O' The Hills," will be one of the most pleasing of Miss Pickford's long list of international successes. "Across Canada With Our Prince Of Wales," showing humorous anecdotes of the happy days the Prince spent in Canada and showing him as a Goodfellow, Golfer, Indian, Sailor, Baseball fan, and Cowboy, will be shown on the above program, one episode will be shown at Griffin's each Thursday to Saturday for four weeks. "Knights and Knighties," a funny 2-reel special big V comedy will also be shown on the same program.

SOUTHERN ATMOSPHERE IN VIVIAN MARTIN'S PICTURE

Atlanta, Georgia, had a big time not so very long ago, the occasion being the filming of scenes for Vivian Martin's newest picture, "Husbands and Wives," from the famous novel, "Making Her His Wife" by Cora Harris, who by the way, is a southern woman living just outside Atlanta. Atlanta's "400" and her debutantes took part in the scenes made at the country club and in one of the famous restaurants. As the wealthy Northern girl, who, on a visit to her aunt, marries a Southern hardware merchant, Vivian Martin has a splendid opportunity, of which she ably takes advantage, in proving she is an artist of the highest class. The struggle between husband and wife to bend each other to their way of thinking make for many highly dramatic situations. Three other selected comedy and varied attractions have also been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

MR. TYRONE POWER "THE LITTLE BROTHER"

That Belleville theatregoers appreciated the wholesome drama was in evidence by the patronage which was extended to Mr. Tyrone Power, the eminent English actor, when seen in this city in "The Servant in the House," a few months ago, and it is to that effect and to the tremendous success that was achieved by Mr. Power and his excellent company of English artists that Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited has booked Mr. Power, and his notable company for a return engagement at Griffin's Theatre, for one night, next Monday, May 17th in another of his great successes, "The Little Brother," a drama of love and power written by Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James, "The Little Brother," is a plea for religious tolerance. The two chief characters are a Jewish rabbi and a priest of the Russian Orthodox Church. Each one detests and mistrusts the religion of the other. They are brought into conflict by the love affair that develops between them. When this conflict of will holds and the young people are determined not to permit the antagonisms of their two faiths to stand between them. When his conflict of wills is precipitated the priest and the rabbi are forced to meet. Then the dramatic interest of the play develops. Years before in Russia the rabbi had lost his little brother who had been a victim of Russian hatred of the Jews. He discovers that the priest who hates all hebrews so bitterly is his brother, who had been brought up by strictly orthodox people. The play handles a big theme in a serious and highminded maner. It contains plenty of material that will interest thoughtful theatregoers. Mr. Power will be seen in the role of the fanatical priest, a role that suits his dignified and powerful style of acting.

Canada Prepares Formal Reply To Gen. Underwood

Dominion Government to Send Brief to State Department at Washington

THAT BIG STICK

Those Washington Politicians and Other Parties Waxing Eloquent and Pugnacious In Their Indignation

MONTREAL—Word has reached the city that the Dominion Government is preparing a brief in regard to pulpwood conditions in the various provinces of Canada with a view to placing the real facts of the case before the authorities at Washington. Whether this information will come formally before the committee of the House or be transmitted direct to President Wilson, who would deal with it as a State affair, is not known. In any case the information was received with considerable satisfaction in pulp and paper circles here, as it was felt that the mis-statements of Senator Underwood and Col. Haskell, a representative of the International Paper Company and others before the committee should hardly be allowed to go unchallenged.

The Canadian Pulp & Paper Association, whose representative Edward Beck, was down at Washington during some of the hearings before the committee, has published a bulletin dealing with the trend of the proceedings there. Among some of the interesting statements that are published are the following:

"A great deal of acrimony was displayed throughout the hearing towards the Dominion of Canada and the Canadian paper manufacturers. It was asserted, in all seriousness, by representatives of the American paper manufacturers that the sole object actuating the provinces of Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick in placing restrictions upon the export of pulpwood cut from Crown lands in those provinces was to injure and destroy the United States paper making industry, and that it had been inspired by a group of Canadian manufacturers interested in maintaining a high level of manufacturing costs in the paper mills of the United States."

"It was argued throughout the hearing that the removal of restrictions from the use of pulpwood cut on the Crown lands in Canada would result in cheaper and more abundant paper for the publishers of the United States, and that during the proposed process of stripping Canadian Crown lands of their pulpwood for the benefit of the American paper manufacturers and newspaper publishers therefrom through "the improvement of the rivers, the building of camps, the constructing of taking-out and wood-preparing plants and the recruiting and employment of lumbering crews," which, it was asserted, "would yield so great a harvest to labor that the provinces would begin an era of unending prosperity!" "Moreover," it was asserted, "the army of men that would be employed in the bush would provide at all times effective forces for fighting forest fires," the fact apparently being overlooked that the cutting season in Canada do not synchronize."

It is stated in the Bulletin that "the attitude of the committee was palpably on the side of the petitioners" for the appointment of a commission to bring the question before the Canadian authorities.

The "Big Stick"

One statement on page 6 is quoted, one of Senator Underwood's, in which he said: "The Commission is to find the most effective 'big stick' we can lay on their necks in case they refuse." The bulletin goes on to say he made frequent references to the employment of the "big stick," and said he favored "strong-arm methods" in dealing with Canada, and also that "unless we use the strong arm nothing would be accomplished."

"The 'big stick' is the real thing in this resolution," insisted the Senator, and in this he was backed up later by Congressman Treadwell and others. Col. Haskell, of the International Paper Co., endorsed this view to the extent of saying that "with a group of Canadian manufacturers interested in keeping a high level of manufacturing costs in this country, a stick behind the back is good thing to have."

When someone suggested approaching Canada in a conciliatory spirit, a member of the committee replied, "Be conciliatory, but carry a club."

Retaliatory Duties

Several suggestions were made of cutting off Canada's imports of coal, oil, sulphur and other commodities, and some suggestions were made of a "retaliatory tariff," one being to place a prohibitory duty on eggs and other Canadian "farm truck."

Another statement in the bulletin is that Mr. Baldwin and some of the other speakers told the committee that they would be willing to see the American market made as free to every grade of paper and pulp in Canada in exchange for the unrestricted right to import pulpwood as it is now for newsprint.

Further on it is stated that a representative of a group of Wisconsin mills declared that many mills in that part of the country had ceased to make newsprint because of the scarcity of raw material.

"In reply to a question of the chairman as to why the paper manufacturers had waited ten years before protesting the Canadian wood cutting regulations, this witness admitted that the present agitation was due to the depletion of American supplies of pulpwood and the dwindling supply at present available from free hold lands in Canada.

Exporting During Scarcity

The latest official figures from the United States throw some light on the scarcity of pulpwood in that country. During the past year the consumption of newsprint was 1,889,794 tons but in addition there was exported 110,295 tons. Canada's exports during the year to the United States amounted to 624,304, or one-third of the total consumption. With a scarcity, it is asked, why the large export?

Rode On Horseback Into Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—A "man on horseback" rode into Mexico City Sunday noon. General Alvaro Obregon who fled from the capital alone disguised in a brakeman's greasy clothes, in the early morning hours before dawn, April 30, returned at the head of several thousand troops. From Tacubaya, a few miles south-west of Mexico City, the Presidential candidate rode on a prancing bay stallion, through the crowded street as far as the palace. Halting the procession for a few moments, General Obregon mounted to the balcony of the hotel fronting the Plaza de La Reforma and delivered a short speech, explaining the ideals that caused him to force President Carranza to evacuate the capital.

The appearance of the Sonoran's short figure, coatless and with face heavily bearded and right sleeve hanging empty at his side, was the signal for cheers. Descending, Obregon resumed his ride.

MAY HOLD BOTH POSITIONS

Ottawa, May 12.—Speculation as to the probable successor to General Currie as Inspector-General of Canadian forces should he resign from that position, brings up the probability that the post will not be filled at present, but that his duties will be filled by the chief of the general staff.

It is possible, General Currie may occupy both positions, and the active direction of the Canadian militia would devolve on the chief of the general staff, which post may be taken over shortly by Brig.-General J. H. MacBrien, D.S.O., on the retirement of General Gwatkin, who has taken over the direction of Canada's new militia air force.

WOMEN'S HOTEL

Winnipeg, Man., May 13.—A women's hotel is a possibility of the near future for Winnipeg. The Women's Council have a proposition under advisement which will be brought before a public meeting of wage earning women called for May 14. It involves forming a joint stock company and the purchase of a down town hotel. Eighty thousand dollars is the sum mentioned as the needed capital.

WANT A GRANT

Winnipeg, Man., May 13.—Representatives of the Boy Scouts Association of Manitoba have asked the Provincial Government for a grant of $2,000 to assist in sending 26 scouts and four officers to represent this province at the International Jamboree of Boy Scouts to be held in London, England, the first week in August. It is believed that the request will be granted.

BLOATING IN CATTLE

Gases From Fermenting Foods Create the Trouble.

The Cause and Symptoms of the Ailment Fully Described — Methods of Relief Suggested, Both Simple and Heroic.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THIS condition, known as Tympanitis, Bloating, Hoven or Blown in cattle, consists of distension of the rumen or paunch with gas. The most common cause is a sudden change from dry food to a liberal supply of green food of any kind, principally to the different varieties of clover, and more particularly when the clover is in flower. It frequently occurs from the voracity with which cattle that have been accustomed to dry food consume green fodder. Hence it is more prevalent in the spring than in other seasons. It may result from feeding too freely on green food of any kind, especially on that upon which dew or rain is present, and more particularly when frosted; hence is not uncommon in the fall when cattle are allowed to consume clover, rape, turnip tops, etc., when frosted. Any food that readily ferments, if taken in sufficient quantities to temporarily check digestion, will quickly form gases and cause bloating. It is often a complication in cases of choking, the mechanical impediment in the gullet being the direct cause by preventing escape of gas through that organ. Sudden changes of diet of any kind may cause the trouble, and insufficient secretion of saliva may have the same effect.

While some of the above-named causes usually precede an attack, it is not uncommon to notice a well-marked case for which no well-marked cause can be traced. Such cases are doubtless due to some unsuspected and not well understood temporary derangement of the digestive glands and muscular coat of the rumen. Any condition that causes torpidity of the rumen may cause bloating, even though no change of food of a dangerous nature has taken place. Torpidity of the rumen occurs in debilitating diseases, in fact in most diseases of the ox, and also from the introduction of excessively cold material, as frosted fodder, into the organ.

Symptoms.—The patient exhibits symptoms of pain and uneasiness by lying down and rising frequently, kicking at the belly, etc. Rumination is suspended and food refused. There is general depression, protrusion of the muzzle, projection and congestion of the eyes, increased flow of saliva, and usually moaning during expiration. The back is arched and there is a more or less well-marked swelling of the abdomen, especially marked on the left side between the point of the hip and the last rib. If this be pressed with the finger it will yield, but at once regain its former condition when pressure is relieved. If tapped with the fingers a resonic, tympanic or drum-like sound will be heard, hence the name "tympanitis." Distension of the rumen causes forward pressure upon the diaphragm (the muscular partition between the abdomen and lung cavity), hence lessens the space of the lung cavity and causes difficulty in respiration in proportion to the degree of bloating. Death may occur quickly from rupture of the rumen, rupture of the diaphragm, suffocation, or absorption of gases.

Treatment must be directed to remove or neutralize the gases, and prevent the formation of more. It will depend upon the severity of the attack and the degree of distension of the rumen, whether it will be wise to attempt the immediate removal of the gases by an operation, or administer drugs to neutralize them. When bloating is not excessive, with little or no danger of death occurring quickly, the administration of any drug that will neutralize the gases may and should be effective.

For this purpose oil of turpentine, commonly called "spirits of turpentine" is probably the best simple remedy. This is given in 2 to 4 oz. doses (a tablespoon holds about ½ oz.) according to the size of the patient and state of distension. This should be mixed with a pint of raw linseed oil. When this cannot be procured, melted butter or lard or new milk answers the purpose well. If necessary the dose may be repeated in one to two hours.

Carbonate of ammonia, 4 to 6 drams, or bi-carobnate of soda, (baking soda) 1 to 1½ oz. in a pint of water, also acts well, but not so surely and promptly as turpentine. It is also good practice to put a hay rope or piece of wood about 2 inches in diameter into the patient's mouth and fasten it there. This facilitates the escape of gas through the gullet.

In cases where bloating is extreme the gases should be removed by mechanical or surgical means. In some cases the passing of a rubber tube down the gullet to the rumen will give immediate relief. When this fails an opening must be made through the skin and coats of the rumen at the most prominent part in front of the point of the left hip. The hair should be clipped off the seat of operation, and it, with the hands of the operator and instruments, disinfected with a 5 per cent. solution of Carbolic acid or one of the coal tar antiseptics. The proper instrument for this operation is a trocar and canula, but when this is not on hand an ordinary pocket-knife can be used and the lips of the wound kept apart to allow escape of the gases.

After bloating has disappeared it is good practice to administer a laxative of about 1 lb. epsom salts or 1½ pints raw linseed oil, and feed lightly for a few days.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. UNIQUE CEREMONY

Winnipeg, Man., May 12—The ceremonies at lower Fort Garry which renewed in the smoke of the peace pipe the ancient pledges of friendship between the Indian tribes of Canada and the Hudson's Bay Company were perhaps the most quaintly interesting features of the celebration of the old fur company's 250th anniversary. Indians of a dozen tribes gorgeous in paint, feathers and beaded buckskin, squatted upon the grass within the stone walls of the old fort about the tabel of Sir Robert Kindersley, governor of the Hudson's Bay Company. Kinnewakan, chief of the Wapheton Sioux, stepped forward. With fine dignity, the magnificent old savage delivered an address of welcome in his native tongue.

From his beaded tobacco pouch the old chief filled a great calumet of red sandstone four feet long upon whose stem of white wood were painted the totems of all the tribes. He held the pipe aloft towards the sun and called upon the Great Spirit to witness the sacredness of the rite he was performing. While Kinnewakan held a lighted match to the bowl, Governor Kindersley took six long puffs. When Kinnewakan had taken a puff, he carried the pipe about the circle and the chiefs of the tribes each drew deeply upon it. Then the pipe was presented to the governor as a souvenir.

While the smoke of the peace pipe was still fragrant on the air, Governor Kindersley delivered an address to the tribe. The governor's speech was interpreted into four Indian languages by Willie Charles McKay of Prince Rupert. At the conclusion of the ceremonies Governor Kindersley pinned on the breasts of the Indians medals especially struck in commemoration of the event and the Indians presented to him an elaborately beaded belt of wampum a sa symbol of their renewed friendship and allegiance.

DEFEAT OF SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

The Kansas City Star may be said to have spoken for all who use the English language in an article which tells of the admitted defeat of the Modern Language Association in its attempt to popularize simplified spelling. The association gives it up in its own publication and admits the world does not want to be torn from its old habits. Doesn't want to be and won't be. The Star continues:

"There was, of course, hardly any rational argument that could be used againt many of the simplified forms. They corrected cumbersome and involved combinations of letters that took time and space to form and looked like anything but the word intended. Most everybody admitted that, but most everybody strongly resisted the conclusion that because reason and argument had the best of it they should prevail to overthrow habit and tradition. The new spelling may have appealed to our heads, but the old spelling possessed our hearts. The Star's defences were repeatedly thrown down and emissaries penetrated our innermost citadel with the articles of capitulation all written out. This newspaper, although utterly exhausted, refused to sign. It admitted, all the facts of the new spellers. It surrendered everything but conviction. It conceded its opinion was only prejudice, but it stood on that and rejected all terms. Even with its back to the wall it could not look at "thru" and accept it as through. The Star conceded its engaging shortness and its appealing simplicity, but it was not the word of our altars and fires. Violent wrenches of this sort seldom further the process of change. The more we are pulled the more we pull back. Yet changes do come, even in spelling. But they do not come by edict. We have simplified Shakespeare's spelling and even Franklin's, but it was not done by system or prescription. We hardly know when we lost the "k" off the end of traffic. If we had known when it was dropped we would have picked it up again, but we imagine it was just allowed to slip without any publicity or remark. If a society had taken that "k" in hand to banish it there would have been a pretty fight. These quiet processions will doubtless go on and a few generations hence some progress in simplification of spelling may be remarked. But they will come to notice so unobtrusively that none will know just when they took place. That is the process by which our language was formed; its reform must come about by the same methods."

THE ROBBERS' ROOST.

"The United States has become a Robbers' Roost!" according to Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, in an address before the Senate of the United States upon the profiteering scandal which he characterizes as "rampant, long-continued unrestricted profiteering," and responsible for the industrial unrest.. Senator Capper charged that the net profits of one cotton-manufacturing concern for 1919 were "seven times greater than those of 1917"; that the net profits of another had been increased 100 per cent.; that tin-plate and sheet-steel mills made a profit "of over 1,000 per cent."; that the profits of our largest sugar-refining company "were $15,000,000 for 1919," and those of a fruit-importing company 40 per cent. on fifty millions of stock outstanding. The Senator said further:

Most Brazen Challenge.

At this moment the most brazen challenge the Government has had comes from gamblers in sugar. We are told refineries are unable to provide for the enormous new stocks of sugar, but a corner in sugar has evidently been formed right under the eyes of the Department of Justice. As a consequence no such wild scramble for sugar shares ever was known.

"The people are helpless. It is piracy so colossal and criminal that Captain Kidd and all the famed pirates become Sunday-school characters by comparison. These profiteers are known, but they go unhanged. . . .

"The extent to which people have been bled by extortion is almost unbelievable. The speculation and profiteering in cotton and cotton goods have been open, flagrant, and scandalous. A recent Senate investigation received proof that the spread between farm and store prices of cotton material was about 1,800 per cent., and that the retail price of cotton goods is so high that ordinary persons can scarcely buy bedding, cotton, muslins and gingham.

"I offer a few corporations that have recently declared stock dividends from one-fifth to twice and triple their capital. Note their high percentages:

"Continental Oil, 200 per cent.; United Fuel Gas, 200 per cent.; Ohio Fuel Supply, 100 per cent.; Nonquit Spinning Company, 100 per cent.; Amoskeaf Cotton, 100 per cent.; Stutz Motors, 100 per cent.; Nashua Manufacturing Company, 100 per cent. . . .

"Patriotic melon-cutters who have made their millions and millions during and since the war now are urging that the soldiers' bonus be raised by 1 per cent. tax on sales to be paid on every dollar spent by every man, woman and child in the country, including the ex-service men themselves. I shall favor placing this tax right where it belongs—on war-profits—and taking from these huge stock dividends, from excess war-profits, and from the profiteers, all that is needful to compensate the men who sacrificed themselves, instead of their country or their countrymen, in time of war."

A New Magic City

Boston Herald

Akron, Ohio, always an enterprising town, but not rated until lately as a city of any size, now counts the population well over 200,000 and at a single jump passes such cities of long standing as Dayton, Memphis, Nashville, Syracuse and Albany. In the last ten years, say the census statisticians, Akron has grown at the rate of 201.8 per cent. This report is the most suggestive return yet made by the 1920 census. For Akron's growth is to be interpreted in terms of an industry that was practically unknown until this century was four or five years old. Three American industries nowadays reach the billion mark in their products. The first is steel, the second is the food products industry, the third is the new industry of the automobile. Most of our great industries merely repeat old stories with variations; they write a new chapter in the history of oil, or steel, or agriculture. But the motor car business is different. And Detroit no more stands for automobiles than does Akron for one of the essentials of the motor car. For Akron is a tire town and the automobile has made that Ohio community one of the magic cities of the land. Rubber accounts for Akron, just as shoes account for Brockton, and textiles for Fall River and Lawrence, and the movies for Los Angeles. Other ambitious towns may profit by the example set by such cities which had the enterprise to capture an industry and then held on to it and helped it to grow.

A LAUGH OR TWO

The Retort Crisp

After a grand review of the German troops at Potsdam some years ago the Kaiser called out to the officer commanding the Prussian Guard in a voice loud enough to be heard by all the distinguished guests who were grouped in front of the palace:

"Pick me out a hundred men from the Prussian Guard."

Then, taking the arm of King Edward VII, who was there, he said: "Come with me."

He escorted King Edward very delicately round the hundred men, and then said banteringly:

"Well, do you think you could find a hundred men in England to beat them?"

"I don't know so much about that," promptly replied the late King, "but I could easily find 50 who would try."—San Francisco Argonaut.

An Unexpected Question

A party of four, just returning from the theatre, called in at a fashionable restaurant. The prim old maid, who was the guest of the evening was charmed with everything, especially the music.

While the waiter was standing by the table, she asked him to find out the title of the piece the orchestra was playing. And the willing waiter promised.

But other duties claimed him for a time, and when he returned the lady had completely forgotten her request.

When he bent towards her, and softly whispered something in her ear, she recoiled in horror. Then recovering from the shock, she turned with cold, relentless fury upon the hapless man who waited.

"How dare you?" she cried. "How dare you?"

And it took the terrified waiter quite a time to explain why he had merely breathed the title of the piece so softly—"What Can I Do To Make You Love Me?"

THE POET'S CORNER

HEAVENLY GUESTS

I heed no medium's occult call,
No hieroglyphics on the wall,
No shrouded light in salons dim—
Decoying spectres gaunt and grim—
No silly little ouija board,
To be cajoled, urged and implored;
For when at eventide I sit,
With mellow ingles softly lit,
My grandame comes in sweet attire
From other spheres to share my fire.

From out a broidered bag she takes
A bit of needlework that wakes,
With scent of lavender and vine,
The silver ways of auld lang syne,
Our hearts' hold converse passing sweet
While crickets chirrup at our feet;
We thread the lilac-bordered walks
In these our happy memory talks—
"The old rose garden's gone," I say,
'And jonquils there are holding sway.'

"Nay, nay," she answers, smiling wise—
I mold their falling petals dear
Into a rosary each year—
Forever lengthening out a chain
To mitigate the old world's pain."
As thus we speak of treasured days,
There comes to use, 'long amethyst ways,
A little child well loved of yore,
Between grandame and me there sits
A tiny chair that she just fits;
No word speaks she, but slips in mine
Five fingers warm from Mary's shrine
Six golden years God gave to me,
Of her most precious company.
How sweet for those beloved to wait
At eve beside the wicket gate!

Great Nations Scrambling for Oil

Baron "Jackie" Fisher, one of the wisest men who ever sat in the British Admiralty, urges that coal be discarded altogether in favor of oil on British warships, and declares that the future of the British Navy and merchant marine "absolutely rests on the internal combustion engine." A ton of oil used for fuel is equal to two tons of coal; if used in an internal combustion engine, it is equal to six tons of coal.

"We floated to victory on a sea of oil," declared a British Admiral. Canadian aviators flew to victory on wings of oil. Oil drove the great tanks that spread consternation, ruin and death among the Germans. It is the age of oil.

World supremacy will rest in the future with the nation that controls this great, new, economical fuel. The great nations in the world are now in a mad scramble to explore, develop and control their oil resources. It is a fight for their very existence—whole empires are at stake.

None realizes this better than Great Britain. With practically all her latest warships and ocean greyhounds equipped as oil-burners, it is absolutely imperative that she should have an inexhaustible supply of oil, if she is to maintain her maritime supremacy.

The British Government is seeking control of the Shell Transport Company, one of the greatest oil companies in the world. It is understood that even if the British Government should gain what they seek, the Canadian Government will still refuse to give the Shell Transport Company the exclusive right to drill on a large section of the Peace River oil fields. Everyone is to have an equal chance in our Canadian North-West.

In a situation such as this THE FIRST CALL ON CANADIAN MONEY IS FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF OUR OWN EMPIRE'S OIL RESOURCES. Our naval supremacy, our very existence as an Empire, depend on our developing huge reservoirs of this new fuel.

Canada Has the Oil

AND WE IN CANADA HAVE THE OIL—have it for the seeking—have it in quantities that it is believed will surpass anything in the wide world.

As far back as 1888, Doctor G. M. Dawson, eminent Dominion Government Geologist, declared that the oil in Canada's North-West was practically inexhaustible.

Prof. McLearn, of Saskatchewan University, says that the sands of Alberta hold enough oil to last the entire world for three hundred years.

Dr. Bosworth, chief geologist of the Imperial Oil Company, estimates there are three hundred billion barrels of oil in Canada's North-West.

If geology is a science, then speculation has here been reduced to a minimum.

With the reports of geologists before them, the British Government and the great oil companies of the Empire are now turning to Canada's Peace River country. This last great West—a miracle land of vast lakes, rivers, forests and plains—is destined, we believe, TO PROVE THE GREAT RESERVOIR THAT WILL GUARANTEE OIL FOR THE EMPIRE'S SHIPS AND INDUSTRIES FOR HUNDREDS OF YEARS.

Thousands of acres have been fyled upon by some of the greatest oil companies in the world, and men and equipment are being rushed into the field, and vast sums of money will be spent in exploration work during the next few months. It seems almost certain that THE BIG OIL POOLS WILL BE TAPPED THIS SUMMER and an oil field brought in that will place Canada and the Empire far in the lead.

The D'Arcy Exploration Company, a subsidiary of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, in which the British Government owns a controlling interest, is seeking a concession of 90 square miles. They offer to spend $25,000,000 in exploration work and laying pipe lines, and agree to pay the Government a royalty of one-eighth on the oil at the casing head.

The Union Oil & Gas Co., Ltd., of California, is reported to be sending in six complete drilling outfits this Summer. It is reported that this giant rival of the Standard Oil Company has fyled upon over 50,000 acres.

Six geologists from Great Britain are now on the field representing the Anglo-Dominion Oil Co. This big British company has announced that it will spend $2,500,000 in exploration work this year.

The Pioneer Company

But of all the companies now in the Peace River district, we believe that Tar Island Oil & Gas Company, Limited, has the best chance to be the first to tap the big oil pools.

This pioneer company, which takes its name from Tar Island—famous all over the North-West for its oil seepages and gas jets—secured 3,000 acres of the choicest locations of the Peace River district—and commenced drilling in 1918 on the Western bank of the Peace River, thirteen miles from Peace River Town.

They struck gas at 230 feet. This was increased 20 feet down. At 325 feet they ran into their first oil.

At 857 feet they struck a gas strata of 1,500,000 cubic feet capacity daily, that blew sand pumpings and water high over the drilling rig.

At 960 feet the Tar Island driller struck the same oil sands that had shown a yield of from 22 to 30 barrels of oil daily when tested in the McArthur wells across the river.

Even a production of this size is valuable. For, while one hears much of big gushers in Texas, it must be remembered that the average production of the Texas wells is but eighteen barrels per day.

A large number of wells could be sunk very quickly to this depth. And as all could be pumped as cheaply as one, it will be seen that the seventy feet of oil sand already struck would yield a very gratifying return to the shareholders.

But it is those big pools farther down that the Company wants to reach. The upper sands have been disregarded temporarily and drilling pushed on.

Winter came on and drilling was suspended.

When the Tar Island officials revisited their well in the Spring they found 75 to 100 barrels of oil had been blown out by the gas. Another large quantity of petroleum had to be baled out of the casing.

Drilling was resumed under the direction of W. J. Cole, a driller of years of experience in the Persian, Mexican and Pennsylvanian fields.

At 1,060 feet they struck a strata of sulphur water—declared to be one of the best indications of oil being not far below.

At 1,068 feet it was decided to stop. Thirty-nine feet beyond lay the big strata of wet gas that had brought disaster to the McArthur wells. And it was decided to put down a thirty-two pound California Diamond B X casing, a very heavy casing that would prevent any possible chance of disaster.

An Expert Driller's Opinion

Mr. Cole, the driller, was enthusiastic over the formations passed through. The strata of sulphur water, he declared, was a particularly good sign. And the formations enclosing this sulphur water were found to be a hard lime and shale that was impervious to gas. This proved that the big strata of wet gas at 1,125 feet—4,500,000 cubic feet to 5,000,000 cubic feet capacity daily—could only be an evaporation of a pool of oil below.

Mr. Cole declared that the formations were practically identical with those he had passed through in the Persian field, which had invariably led to big oil. In fact, all his experience led him to expect a gusher of big proportions rather than one of medium size. He predicted big oil at around 1,500-2,000 feet.

With the drilling records of the Tar Island well and other wells in that vicinity before them experts now showed that the Tar Island well was just about at the apex of a considerable anti-cline. This location assured them the cream of the oil production of the district.

The heavier casing ordered is now about to be delivered and drilling resumed under the direction of E. B. Mott, an expert driller from Petrolia. And as the average monthly drilling in that district is around 300 feet per month, the Tar Island officials feel reasonably confident that they will strike the big oil pools of the Peace River district this Summer.

Just how large those oil pools will prove to be, no man knows. But when a driller of the experience and standing of W. J. Cole predicts big oil as a practical certainty; when a geologist such as Prof. R. D. McLearn of Saskatchewan University estimates that "there is sufficient oil in the sands of Alberta to supply the world's demands for 300 years"; when Dr. Bosworth, chief geologist of the Imperial Oil Company, estimates that there are three hundred billion barrels of oil in Alberta; then, one cannot but feel that here are possibilities of tremendous magnitude, possibilities that justify thorough investigation.

With oil of the grade already obtained netting $2.50 a barrel, a big flow of oil will mean an annual return far in excess of the Tar Island Company's total capitalization.

Transportation

There will be no difficulty in getting oil to the refineries. A pipe line will be laid from the well to Peace River Town—only thirteen miles—whence the oil will be shipped in tank cars over the Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia Railroad.

Summing Up

The directors have shown outstanding energy, courage and faith to make the Company a success. Filled with an abiding faith and confidence that Peace River is going to prove the greatest oil field in the world they and a small group of their friends have borne the entire expenses up to the present.

Additional funds are now needed to clinch the success that they feel is practically within their grasp.

Figure out how many of these shares you can take and send in your order at once. That great country in Canada's North-West is going to mean tremendous things for Canadian investors, for Canada and for the Empire.

Application will later be made to list the shares on the Standard Stock Exchange. The prospectus has been filed at the office of the Provincial Secretary of Ontario.

HOUSEWIVES!

AN open letter to every housewife who reads this reliable paper. You are no doubt crying out against the high cost of living. You probably think you are saving, but are you? We do not think you are, or

WHY DO YOU PAY

10 cents for a cake of soap weighing 8 ounces and costing you at the rate of 20 cents for a full pound, or at the rate of 40 cents per pound for soap flakes or powders advertised specially for "washing flannels" and another article advertised specially for "Cleaning Hands and costing over 30 cents for a full pound?

WHY DO YOU PAY

WHY DO YOU PAY.

such high prices, and waste such an amount of money monthly through life, when you can make our

CHALLENGE SOAP

The best and cheapest Soap for all purposes on earth,

FOR 3½ CENTS PER POUND

And you have in this one soap a better soap than any other, or all the special soaps combined, or any of the soap powders. This soap will save you at least one half the labor every washing, one half the time, one half the fuel, saves the clothes by not rubbing to pieces, will wash the most delicate fabrics and laces beautifully and without slightest injury, and will wash and cleanse perfectly the dirtiest and coarsest clothing easily. It has no equal for all white or colored goods. Wash flannels with this soap and you will never again use anything else. This soap will remove perfectly from the hands and clothing, carpets, etc., pitch, paint, tar, oil, blood-stains, etc. For the hands and bath it has no equal, and for housecleaning, cleaning and polishing windows and mirrors and varnished woodwork, and for glassware, tinware and silverware it is a gem. This soap will do all this and more, and that is why we claim it is the best and cheapest Soap on earth, and we prove it by the testimonials of those who have purchased "Rights," made and tested the Soap. What better proof can you ask? Considering the money this Soap will save you and all it will do for you, we know it will save you atleast

ONE DOLLAR EVERY MONTH THROUGH LIFE.

The price of a "Family Right," containing full printed directions for making and using in your own family only, is at present only One Dollar for life, and any one who can afford to take a paper can afford to spend one dollar for life to have this the name given it by Mrs. J. Doupe, Brandon, Manitoba, in her testimonial, and the lady named it appropriately.

"WONDERFUL SOAP,"

WE WILL NOT BEG

of you to purchase a "Family Right." If you cannot see that we are trying to help you save money, which you are now wasting, and will waste, unless you have this Soap, we cannot help you if you will not help yourselves, by getting a "Family Right" and be your own

SOAP CONTROLLER,

And when you have this Soap, you will not have to listen to the usual cry, "Oh, it has gone up again in price on account of the war." The war was terrible, but you housewives have now the power to make war on high prices and waste of money in your home.

AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST

We say to each and all, that if our claims for our Soap and Syrup were not true, or our testimonials not genuine, the people and every reputable paper would put us out of business. And we would deserve it.

DON'T YOU KNOW that when thousands of dollars spent in advertising soap or any article you buy, that you, the consumers, are paying every time you buy the article the cost of advertising, because it is part of the expenses and has to be done.

IT IS NOT SO

in the sale of our valuable "Rights", as we receive only one profit for life, and cannot afford to spend large sums of money in advertising and still sell our "Rights" at one dollar each. And we give you now fair warning that if you do not send within the time limit given below we will certainly raise the price to the readers of this paper.

CAN'T YOU SEE

that if we spent a million dollars in advertising our "Rights" we could not make our Soap or Syrup any better than it is now, but you would have to pay for the advertising by paying us a high price for the "Rights," while the price now is within the reach of all. Please read just a line from only two letters written some time ago. "Since using your soap, Mrs. Otto says she would not be without it if a "Right" cost $4.00."—Stephen Otto, Rapid City, Manitoba.

Sowerby, Ont.—"It is superior to any soap I have ever used in my house for twenty years. I am highly pleased with it."—James Ralph.

ANOTHER MONEY SAVER

is a "Family Right" for making our "Pure White Syrup." Our Syrup is clear as crystal, tastes fine, and can be made into different kinds of sauce to suit any taste by adding a few drops of any extract, or you can make a perfect honey syrup of it by using a little honey, as it has a honey taste itself. Can be used to sweeten anything and saves sugar. Please note what Mr. J. Montgomery says of our Syrup in his testimonial for soap. The price of a "Family Right" is at present time only $1.00 for life. It is fine as a sauce just as it is without adding anything, and we believe that in the saving of butter, sauce and sugar it will save any family $10.00 per year through life.

Now please read the following from a lady reader of "Witness", March, 1919:—

"Received your "Rights." I have made ½ imperial gallon of your "Pure White Syrup" with hardly any trouble, costing me 50 cents. It is excellent, and my husband says it tastes like honey."—Mrs. T. Mathewson, Coboconk, Ont.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER TO READERS OF THIS PAPER, AND OUR LAST — GOOD ONLY FOUR MONTHS FROM THIS DATE

We Have Told the Whole Truth and Nothing But the Truth and Proved It.

And now, if you want a "Family Right" for making the "Best Soap on earth," send us $1.00 now, and we will also send you as a Gift, Free, a "Family Right" for making our "Pure White Syrup," which is also $1.00, but costs you nothing in this offer, and these two "Rights" will save you, we firmly believe $20.00 per year through life. Do as Mr. Montgomery did, get a "Right" at once, make and test the Soap and Syrup quickly, then tell your neighbors what you know about the Soap and Syrup, and tell them each one of them will get the "Syrup Right" free.

City Farmerettes Will Again Grace Orchards

The farmers have been applying for fruit pickers. A change of policy made by the government in the department of farm work means that new arrangements will be made in connection with the camps established for farmerettes who wish to return this season for the fruit-picking.

This year the fruit growers will establish and maintain their own camps under a permit which will be obtained from the government. Many of the farmers are making preparations to establish attractive lake-shore camps on the order of those conducted by the W.C.A. under the direction of the Ontario government employment bureau of the past five years. This year the Y.W.C.A. will not assume the responsibility of the camps, but the farmers who have successfully employed the farmerettes during the war and last year, are seeking house mothers and assistants who helped in this work in former years.

NO REST CURE

"Although our camps will be the best yet, and we are doing our best to make them comfortable, we are not establishing 'health resorts' and places for 'rest cures'," declared the progressive fruit-grower. There will be more camps this year of the smaller order, requiring from ten to twenty-five girls. The largest camp so far arranged for is to take from forty to fifty and is to be established at Fenwick in the Niagara district. Here a new building is being erected on an attractive spot. The house will have an office, living-room, dining-room and kitchen and will accommodate forty to fifty girls. A housekeeper and matron will be in charge. These extensive plans, with the idea of making fruit-picking attractive as a summer occupation points to the conclusion that the farmerette has come to stay.

When the war-created farmerette stepped out in her smart khaki-colored uniform, declaring she was ready to serve in the great land army for the war period and to help to save the fruit crop of 1915 in Ontario, she was acceptable as something new and untried and with no great assurance that she would "stick it." Oold wise-acres declared that a few blistering suns would end the brave show. This experiment of establishing girls in camps to work on the land was a risky business. "Girls ain't no good at hoeing," declared the hired man, who used a great deal of "judgment" in regard to the length of time one ought to rest at the ends of rows.

CAME TO STAY

But Miss Farmarette was enthusiastic; she was photographed, much "written up"; she was praised and blamed; declared a success; declared a failure, but she stayed. She remained to replace the hired man, and returned season after season in many cases to the same camp and to the same farmer. During the war and in one year following, the girls have helped on the land and it looks as if the farmera do not wish them to drop the business.

Fruit-picking is practically a summer holiday occupation. No one admits that it is easy; nine or ten hours a day of it is rather tiresome, in fact, but as in all things there are compensations and these might be described at length by those who have had the experience of a summer in a camp of "farmarettes." The location of the camp has much to do with the general comfort and enjoyment of the workers after hours. The farmers this year are preparing ground and choosing sites for their camps which will be suitable and attractive.

WILL BE UP TO STANDARD

Although the government is released from the control of camps in the matter of details and equipment, those to be established this year will be quite up to the standard of the best and most successful camps of other years.

WAGES

Last year the earnings of the girls in one of the most ppopular camps of in one of the most popular camps of afternoon free and approximately an eight-hour day. The scale of wages for piece work formerly has been set by the government and there were endless adjustments to be made in this connection. This year the matter of wages is to be settled by employer and employe. Many farmers are offering two dollars a day and transportation one way. Piece rates will be paid for rush seasons and then it is possible for the worker to earn much more.

The farmer will arrange also with the house mother the amount of board which the girls will pay.

The direct duties of the department of farm work will be to accept registrations of women wishing to work on farms, to go over with them the vacancies and endeavor to place them in the most suitable way. The farmer will be informed from time to time in regard to the labor supply. The department will also assist in supplying help by notifying schools and colleges that the camps will be continued. "We shall also do our best to place capable and respectable women through this department in camps as house mothers and cooks," reads the announcement to the farmers, sent out by the Ontario government public employment bureau.

If the camps are not maintained and conducted to the satisfaction of the government the government will withdraw the permit.

ANNETTE KELLERMAN TURNS DOWN OFFER

The lure of the footlights has no appeal for Annette Kellerman, for she has turned down an offer of $5,000 a week for a ten weeks' tour in Australia, her native land.

The offer came from the American representatives of the Hugh McIntosh enterprises, who, hearing that Miss Kellerman had completed the final scenes for her new modern comedy-drama she has been making for Sol Lesser, made her a flattering proposition to take her diving act on a tour of the Antipodes.

Miss Kellerman did not treat the offer seriously.

"Rest and vacation are going to be my middle names," said the maritime star, when the offer was made to her.

"I have put in sixteen weeks of the most strenuous work in my life in making this new picture, and the stunts that I have been put through have been a constant drain of my nerves and vitality.

"Diving from aeroplanes and making playful leaps from the mastheads of yachts, wrestling with lustful villains, towing several persons in a stormy sea, boxing with Bull Montana and various other tea-time diversions have all been a matter of daily routine for the past few weeks, and now I'm going to enjoy myself at my new seaside home while the picture is being cut and titled, so that I will be hitting on all twelve again when Sol Lesser is ready to start the production on a road show tour."

Miss Kellerman also refused an offer from another producing company to make a big aquatic spectacle, but she refused to because of her contract with Sol Lesser, who plans to star the diving Venus only in modern vehicles with real stories.

PALE, ANAEMIC WOMEN NEED BETTER BLOOD

Vinol Will Enrich the Blood and Create Strength

Physicians Recommend It and Druggists Guarantee It

How many women do you know who are perfectly well, strong and healthy as a woman should be? They may not be sick enough to lie in bed, but they are thin, nervous, run-down, tired and devitalized.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them that they constantly overdo, and suffer from headaches, backache, nervousness and kindred ills.

Such women need VINOL, our non-secret cod liver, iron and hypophosphite tonic. It creates a healthy appetite, aids digestion, makes rich red blood and imparts strength and energy to every nerve, muscle and tissue of the body.

One woman recently wrote us saying: "I was all run-down, thin, pale, and oh, so nervous, but two bottles of VINOL put me on my feet again and made me strong and well. VINOL has done me more good than all other medicines I have ever taken put together."

VINOL is a wonderful strength creator—so why not try it on the guarantee of your druggist.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

PART IV—CHAPTER VI

Fancy had blushed; was it with confusion? She had also involuntarily pressed back her curls. She had not expected him.

"Fancy, you didn't know me for a moment in my funeral clothes, did you?"

"Good-morning, Dick—no, really, I didn't recognize you for an instant."

He looked again at the gay tresses and hat. "You've never dressed so charmingly before, dearest."

"I like to hear you praise me in that way, Dick," she said, smiling archly. "It is meat and drink to a woman. Do I look nice, really?"

"Fancy—fy! you know it. Did you remember—I mean didn't you remember about my going away today?"

"Well, yes; I did, Dick; but, you know, I wanted to look well—forgive me."

"Yes darling; yes, of course—there is nothing to forgive. No; I was only thinking that when we talked on Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday about my absence today and I regretted it so, you said, Fancy, so did you regret it, and almost cried and said it would be no pleasure to you to be the attraction of the church today, since I could not be there."

"My dear one, neither will it be so much pleasure to me......But I do take a little delight in my life, I suppose," she pouted.

"Apart from mine?"

She looked at him with perplexed eyes. "I know you are vexed with me, Dick, and it is because the first Sunday I have curls and a hat and feather since I have been here happens to be the very day you are away and won't be with me. Yes, say it is, for that is it! And you think that all this week I ought to have remembered you wouldn't be here and not have cared to be better dressed than usual. Yes, you do, Dick, and it is rather unkind."

"No, no," said Dick, earnestly and simply. "I didn't think so badly of you as that. I only thought that, if you had been going away, I shouldn't have adopted new attractions for the eyes of other people. But then, you and I are different, naturally."

"Well, perhaps we are."

"What ever will the vicar say, Fancy?"

"I don't fear what he says in the least," she answered, proudly. "But he won't say anything of the sort you think. No, no."

"He can hardly have conscience to, indeed."

"Now, come; you say, Dick, that you quite forgive me, for I must go,." she said, with sudden gayety, and skipped backward into the porch. "Come here, sir!—say you forgive me and then you shall kiss me—you never have yet when I have worn curls, you know. Yes, in the very middle of my mouth, where you want to so much—yes, you may."

Dick followed her into the inner corner, where he was not slow in availing himself of the privilege offered.

"Now that's a treat for you, isn't it?" she continued. "Good-bye, or I shall be late. Come and see me tomorrow—you'll be tired to-night."

Thus they parted, and Fancy proceeded to the church. The organ stood on one side of the chancel, close to and under the immediate eye of the vicar when he was in the pulpit and also in full view of the whole congregation. Here she sat down, for the first time in such a conspicuous position, her seat having previously been a remote spot in the aisle. "Good heavens—disgraceful! Curls and a hat and feather!" said the daughters of the small gentry, who had either only curly hair without a hat and feather, or a hat and feather without curling hair. "A bonnet for church always!" said sober matrons.

That Mr. Maybold was conscious of her presence close beside him during his sermon; that he was not at all angry at her development of costume; that he admired her, she perceived. But she did not see that he loved her during that sermon-time as he had never loved a woman before; that her proximity was a strange delight to him; and that he gloried in her musical success that morning in spirit quite beyond a mere cleric's glory at the inauguration of a new order of things.

The old choir, with humbled hearts no longer took their seats in the gallery as heretofore (which was now given up to the school-children who were not singers and a pupil-teacher), but were scattered about with their wives in different parts of the church. Having nothing to do with conducting the service for almost the first time in their lives, they all felt awkward, out of place, abashed, and inconvenienced by their hands. The tranter had proposed that they should stay away today and go nutting, but Grandfather William would not hear of such a thing for a moment. "No," he replied reproachfully and quoted a verse: "Though this has come upon us, let not our hearts be turned back, or our steps go out of the way.' " So they stood and watched the curls of hair trailing down the back of the successful rival, and the waving of her feather as she swayed her head. After a few timid notes and uncertain touches her playing became markedly correct and toward the end, full and free. But whether from prejudice or unbiased judgment, the venerable body of musicians cuold not help thinking that the simpler notes they had been wont to bring forth were more in keeping with the simplicity of their old church than the crowded chords and interludes it was her pleasure to produce.

The day was done, and Fancy was again in the school-house. About five o'clock it began to rain, and in rather a dull frame of mind she wandered into the school-room, for want of something better to do. She was thinking—of her lover, Dick Dewy? Not precisely. Of how weary she was of living alone: how unbearable it would be to return to Yalbury under the rule of her strange-tempered step-mother; that it was far better to be married to anybody than that; that eight or nine long months had yet to be lived through ere the wedding could take place.

At the end of the room was a high window, upon the sill of which she could sit by first mounting a desk and using as a footstool. As the evening advanced, here she perched herself, as was her custom on such wet and gloomy occasions, put on a light shawl and bonnet, opened the window and looked out at the rain.

The window overlooked a field and a foot-path across it, and it was the position from which she used to survey the crown of Dick's hat in the early days of their acquaintance and meetings. Not a living soul was now visible anywhere, the rain kept all people indoors who were not forced abroad by necessity and necessity was less importunate on Sundays than during the week.

Sitting here and thinking again—of her lover, or of the sensation she had created at church that day?—well it is unknown—thinking and thinking she saw a dark, masculine figure arising into distinctness at the further end of the path—a man without an umbrella. Nearer and nearer he came and she perceived that he was in deep mourning, and then that it was Dick. Yes, in the fondness and foolishness of his young heart, after walking four miles in a drizzling rain without over coat or umbrella, and in face of a remark from his love that he was not to come because he would be tired he had made it his business to wander this mile out of his way again, from sheer love of spending ten minutes in her beloved presence.

OLD CANNON BALL HELD AN EXPLOSIFE

Newport, R. I., May 11—Old "solid shot" relics of the Civil War days are good things to leave alone as was demonstrated at the Naval Torpedo Station this afternoon, for four of the civilian employees of the station are now on the injured list, one of them seriously. Desirous of using one of the old cannon balls, thought to have been solid, which have been piled up at the station for years as ornaments, it was decided to heat and anneal it. It was put into a forge and had been there just a little over a minute when there was a blinding explosion and the four men about the forge were thrown about, cut and lacerated, as well as burned by fragments of the shell.

COCOANUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thorouhly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Zepplin Factory May Remove To U.S.

BERLIN, May 11—Allied pressure to forbid Germany to construct any aerial craft whatsoever, together with Germany's fear that the Government may be forced to obey such a permanent injunction, may make America the home of the Zeppelins and Schuette-Lanz air cruisers.

The director-General of the Zeppelin works is now on the way to New York and Prof. John Schuette, head of the Schuette-Lanz Airship Building Yards, leaves for New York next week both with the view to negotiating the transfer of their respective works to the United States.

The Germans insist that the Versailles Treaty does not prohibit Germany from having a commercial air fleet. On the other hand, they realize the Allies may interpret the treaty provisions to that effect, and that Germany, in that case, will be able to do little more than protest.

For that reason, preparations are already being made to transfer the big airship and air cruiser building yards to America in the event of the forthcoming negotiations resulting in a mutually satisfactory deal.

Vanstone was returning from his day's trip collecting eggs and produce, and was crossing the track at Cambray station, when the train was on him before he noticed it. The truck and train met at the crossing simultaneously and Mr. Vanstone had barely time to make a dive from the seat to safety at the side of the tracks. The truck wheels were smashed, as well as the axle and the body of the car.

A PROFITABLE ADDRESS

Under the auspices of the Baptist Church Young People's Union a special service was held last evening in the auditorium of the church and the speaker was Dr. James A. White, of Chicago, who sustained his reputation as a public speaker. Members of the Baptist Churches of Picton and Sidney were in attendance as were also members of the Young People's Societies of various churches in the city. The pastor Rev. W. H. Wallace, occupied the chair and those present weer welcomed by Miss Gastrell. A solo was rendered by Miss Prest and a scripture leson was read by Miss Myrtle Reid. Dr. White was formally introduced by the chairman and gave an address on "Service." The doctor, in his remarks, stated that there was in the world today great necessity for service, and this was an especial claim upon the young people. The power of service was in Bible study. More Bible study and prayer. These two important factors were to day being neglected by both old and young. He recommended group study which would prove beneficial to those taking part. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Dr. White, it having been moved by Mr. A. A. Affleck and seconded by Miss. Ella Rowlands, which was suitably acknowledged. Those present then repaired to the Sunday School rooms where refreshments were served.

EIGHTY-FIVE CENT WEDDINGS

There is no more respectable, nor deserving ornament of any community than the conscientious, self-sacrificing clergyman. He suffers from the high cost of worldly existence like almost everybody else who is worthy of his hire. The bitter cry of ordained poverty is raised in every English-speaking land, and in some places it is combined with protest against too much work at the wrong time.

Here is a vicar's sore complaint in a Mansfield (Nottinghamshire) parish magazine, written of weddings on bank holidays. He says that if nine out of ten couples want to be married on the same morning, some of the weddings must be taken together, and he adds: "The payment of a 3s 6d fee hardly entitles a man to treat the parson as a doormat."

Eighty-five cents for a wedding ceremony is a ridiculously low entrance fee to the holy estate of matrimony. It suggests that the poor old saying about marrying in haste and repenting at leisure might be changed to "marry on the cheap and repent it dearly." Perhaps some of the Mansfield grooms would like to tip the parson with a tanner.

Not all are like the Irish boy who had just been married to a pretty colleen.

"How much?" he asked the preacher.

"Whatever you think it is worth," was the reply.

"Oh," said the groom, glancing at the bride, "but I'm not a millionaire."

ARE SERMONS INDESPENSIBLE

London, May 13.—Are sermons indispensible? This is one of the questions on which a decision may be taken by the bishops of the Anglican Church at their meeting in Lambeth in July.

A section of churchmen are declared to be of the opinion that the day of the sermon has passed. They hold that if a man has not the gift of preaching it would be better for everyone that he should not preach. The "two sermons each Sunday" custom, they say imposes a great strain on the clergy—a strain equally if not more heavily felt by the laity who are required to listen to these effusions. The unpopularity of published volumes of sermons, once in great demand, is cited by this faction as evidence of the sermon's waning effectiveness.

AMERICA'S CUP CHALLENGER

London, May 13—Athough Shamrock IV, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup is an Irish yacht, the challenge being sent by the Royal Ulster Club of Belfast, she will have an entire English crew. She also was built in England.

Capt. Albert Turner, her professional skipper, and all but two of her crew are from Essex. The two exceptions are from Cornwall. The average age of the men is 35 years.

Three were in the crew of Shamrock III when she raced in the United States seventeen years ago. They are Edward Herd, mate; Wm Clark, chief cook and Arthur Darnet, seaman. Herd was a seaman on the old challenger. Clark is looking after the stomachs of the men, but is a veteran at trimming sheets and will take a hand in the forthcoming races.

All the men were in the war. Several who went to the United States on the challenger in 1914 hurried back home when the war started. Most of them wore on patrol vessels. A few planted mines.

Shamrock IV is Capt. Turner's largest racing yacht. He had been racing thirty years, however, one of the craft he handled being the 19-metre Octavia. He has had 15-metre craft, 20-tonners and half raters.

Big Railway Problems Are Keeping Reed Busy

IMPORTANT STEP IN CO-ORDINATION OF RAILWAY SYSTEMS TO BE TAKEN THIS WEEK—TORONTO UNION STATION DELAY CONSIDERED—CONFERENCE WITH BECK ON RADIALS.

OTTAWA, May 14.—Hon. Dr. Reid minister of railways is very busy these days with the necessary steps to get the co-ordination of the Grand Trunk and the National Railways started, and, before the week is over, or very early next week, he will have the necessary order-in-council passed for the appointment of two railway men to represent the National Railways, and two men of the Grand Trunk to be a committee to effect the co-ordination of these two systems. A chairman of the committee will also be appointed by the same order-in-council and they ought to be busy on the work at a very early date.

Dr. Reid has also had his attention called by a number of the members to apparent delay in using the new Union Station at Toronto. It is believed here that the main cause of the delay is the order that the board of railway commissioners passed when Sir Henry Drayton was chairman, ordering the city and railways to elevate the tracks leading out of the station to the east elevated above the Esplanade and there is very little prospect of this order being carried out at the present time from the fact that it will cost anything from $60,000,000 up. It has been suggested that the government ask the railway board to suspend the order for an elevated track system for some time, so that the public can get immediate use of the new station for parcel, express and passenger business. It is also believed that the C. P. R. are willing to build temporary bridges at the foot of Yonge and Bay streets, over the Esplanade, thereby giving the public better access to the water front, and altogether better approach for street cars and all kinds of vehicles to the new building. Dr. Reid has promised to give this question his immediate attention.

Taking Over Colors Of 21st Battalion

Ceremony is Scheduled for Morning of June 3rd on Cricket Field

KINGSTON, May 13.—At a meeting of the 21st Battalion Club in the G.W.V.A. hall on Wednesday evening details in connection wtih the transfer of the Battalion colors were discussed. It was arranged that members of the local club will form the personnel of the escort for the colors at the ceremony on the Cricket Field on the morning of June 3rd. The president of the club and ex-commanding officer of the 21st will address a letter to the battalion clubs of Ottawa, Toronto and Peterboro requesting them to send representatives to Kingston for the event, and that places will be reserved for them in the escort. It is hoped that ex-members of the unit will be present, from other outside places.

While on service the 21st Battalion was a unit of the Eastern Ontario Regiment. In accordance with the recent re-organization of the Canadian Militia, this unit will be perpetuated in the first (or active) battalion of the local Princess of Wales' Own Regiment, the other overseas battalions affiliated being the 59th and the 253rd. These are slated as reserve battalions.

The ex-commanding officers and trustees of the 21st have been notified that the approval of Militia headquarters has been granted for the colors to be taken over by the local battalion. So far as is known this is the policy to be followed throughout the Dominion.

Major W. E. Kidd, the chaplain of the old unit, was present at the meeting on Wednesday and spoke briefly.

Franchise Debate Causes Several Lively Incidents

Voters' List Clause Leads to Attack by R. H. Butts on W. S. Fielding in House

OTTAWA, May 14.—Again in the House the franchise bill held the stage During practically the whole afternoon and evening, one clause was under discussion in committee—the clause providing for the preparation of voters' lists. Discussion ranged chiefly round a suggestion by Hon. W. S. Fielding that in Nova Scotia provincial lists would be used. The suggestion was combatted by the solicitor general. He did not think the Nova Scotia lists would be satisfactory. For one reason, appeals in Nova Scotia went to a sheriff who generally had no legal training and was not qualified to give an opinion on a legal point.

A rather prosaic day was interspersed with lively incidents. Early in the sitting, R. H. Butts of Cape Breton attacked Hon. W. S. Fielding. When prime minister of Nova Scotia Mr. Butts declared, Mr. Fielding had disfranchised British subjects. Now, Mr. Fielding was leading the cause of the alien. "In '96," shouted Mr. Butts, "you were taken by some freak of fortune into the Laurier cabinet" The chairman intervened, but banging his desk, Mr. Butts demanded an answer. "No," Mr. Butts called out, "don't answer me. If you do, I will drag you across to the library and show you Hansard of the debate.' But Mr. Fielding paid no attention to the attack.

Inherits A Million At Ninety Dies Without Spending Any

JUDSON PHELPS NEITHER SURPRISED NOR ELATED AT NEWS OF FORTUNE—HAD NO DESIRES TO GRATIFY WITH PALTRY PELF.

DETROIT, May 14.—Ninety-year-old Judson Phelps, to whom news of riches beyond his dreams came through months when he no longer had dreams and when he had forgotten any unsatisfied youthful ambitions or desires, is dead without having spent a penny of his fortune.

Phelps, who in February was notified that he was one of three heirs to the $3,000,000 estate of the late Wm. P. Cowan, former President of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, died of apoplexy at his home, 219 Lincoln avenue.

One million dollars and Judson's hands for most of his life had been toil-marked. He exhibited neither surprise nor elation when he received news of his luck. What would he do with it?

"I ain't figured out," he said.

But if he ever had hoped to sail strange seas, to speak in authoritative voice, to carve his name on some high peak, at 90 he had ceased to hope the apple of plenty he eyed with no enthusiasm. "Thirty" might have run clamoring through the house. "Ninety" never skipped a pulse beat.

Why should he? He was comfortable in the clothes he had. What better shoes, did he want? And the money, he opined, would not make the lilac bush at the window more fragrant or cause one star to change. He had ceased to be one of the constant, hurrying seekers, and was content to just watch the parade pass and pat his granchildren's heads, and, materially poor, be spiritually rich. When it arrived, Arcadia looked no different from his quiet street.

He had no longings for old art or precious books.

Relatives urged him, "friends" came forward with offers to invest his wealth for him, but to all the old man turned a deaf ear.

"I cannot change now, just let me rest," he said in response and today came the rest he craved—the rest eternal. At the home of Mrs. Mary H. Phelps, his daughter-in-law, it was stated that Mr. Phelps had willed his share of the Cowan estate to his daughter-in-law and his two little grandchildren.

4 Days' Battle In Mexico Carranza Forces Fighting

BREAK REPORTED IN CARRANZA LINES — STRUGGLE CONTINUES—REBEL REINFORCEMENTS REACH BATTLE GROUND—TROOPS STILL LOYAL TO CARRANZA.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

EL PASO, Texas, May 14.—Mexican rebel forces have apparently won the first phase in the battle against troops still loyal to President Carranza which have been fighting in a desperate battle north of San Marcos, State of Puebla, for the past four days. Advices from Vera Cruz indicate a break in the Carranza lines and an effort on the part of the President's men to break through the rebel lines and march northward. The struggle is still continuing and new rebel reinforcements are reported to have reached the scene, coming up from the south.

Turkish Grand Vizier Shot At

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, May 14—Another attempt to assassinate Damad Ferid, Turkish Grand Vizier, was made on Thursday, according to a Constantinople despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. The attack occurred at the Grand Vizier's residence and was made by a policeman who fired upon Ferid but only wounded the latter's armed attendant. The assailant was arrested.

Carranza Hiding In The Mountains

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The leaders of the Mexican revolution are all standing together, according to advices reaching Washington from various sources.

Full protection is being accorded all foreigners by the rebel troops. The protection of foreigners and property and the treatment of Carranza officials as mere civil prisoners is a feature of the new regime.

Headquarters of the revolution here regard it as entirely improbable that Carranza can escape from the country. He is now believed to be hiding in the mountains to which he fled after failing to reach Vera Cruz.

Illiterate Indians And The Lumbermen

SUDBURY, Ont., May 13—Indians who contracted to cut logs for the Spanish River Lumber Company, Ltd., revealed through an interpreter to the Riddell-Latchford Commission yesterday how the white man had taken advantage of them in the matter of affidavits purporting to be sworn by them to the effect that they had examined the culler' books and could certify to the accuracy of log returns. They had merely been asked to sign papers they said which in some instances were not filled out with the necessary facts and to which were not appended the accounts attached to the documents produced to the Commission. Some of the Red Men swore that the affidavits were left at their places and were signed by them in the absence of an administrator of oaths. Others declared that when they signed in his presence they were not asked to take the oath. The name of S. J. Hawkins, Crown Timber Agent at Webbwood, appeared on some affidavits as the oath administrator who, it was said, was not present when they were made.

Justice Riddell intimated that Spreadborough and Arnell, mentioned by witnesses as having distributed the documents, would be brought before the Commission for explanation.

Has Framed Plans For Better Order In Troubled Erin

Bonar Law Announces That Military Commander Has Already Taken Steps

LONDON, May 14—General Sir Nevil Macready, military commander of Ireland, has framed new plans, in which he believes better order will be established in Ireland shortly, Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons that the presentations had been approved by the Cabinet.

The government leader's statement followed questions regarding the sensational murder of two policemen at Cork last evening and queries as to whether General Macready had taken steps to co-ordinate the police and the military forces. Mr. Bonar Law said that the military commander had already taken most important steps and at the cabinet meeting yesterday had proposed others, which met with the approval of the government. What these steps were Mr. Bonar Law did not say. He declared, however, that the government would take any action which, in its belief, would restore decent conditions.

General Macready is at present in London for consultation with the officials and the newspapers predict important developments. In this connection, it is unofficially stated that additional troops are to be sent to Ireland and that the government is prepared to give the Irish executive all assistance necessary to suppress lawlessness.

Take Excise Duty Off Industrial Alcohol

OTTAWA, May 14.—A resolution of importance to manufacturing, farming, chemical and other industries of Canada is likely to come before the House today in the form of proposed amendments to the Inland Revenue Act respecting the distillation of denature and specially denatured alcohol. One of the clauses of the resolution provides:

"That denatured alcohol and specially denatured alcohol which is intended for use in the arts and industries, of for fuel, light or power, or for any mechanical purpose may be manufactured in Canada free from excise duty."

This is the legislation which was urged by the Advisory Council on Scientific Research as a means of bringing "industrial alcohol" within the reach of all users, in the hope that it would prove a cheap and suitable substitute for gasoline which is becoming scarcer and dearer each season.

STRANGE CURE OF SISTER IN CONVENT

Fort William, Ot., May 14—A remarkable incident happened in St. Joseph's convent here recently. One of the sisters who for the past twelve months has been unable to walk, suffering from a tubercular knee, and who was told by several doctors that it would be absolutely impossible for her to walk again, fell from a chair in trying to get to a wheel chair that was close by and in falling she regained her strength. The strange thing was she started to walk; in fact ran around the convent, and she is now walking, it is said, as if she had never been sick.

50 Police Barracks Destroyed In One Day

SINN FEIN VERY ACTIVE IN ATTACKS ON BARRACKS IN IRELAND—TAX OFFICES ALSO RAIDED AND DESTROYED—OUTRAGE IN BELFAST.

LONDON, May 14.—Reports of an unusual number of activities by armed and masked men in various sections of Ireland were received in London today. The reports began trickling in early in the morning and by noon had reached the proportions of an avalanche. As at Easter time many police barracke were attacked, and a large number of them were destroyed. Most of the barracks which were the object of attack were not occupied by the regular police force, which had been sent to the larger centres.

Income tax offices also were again attacked and many documents were destroyed. A notable instance of such attacks was a raid upon an income tax office in the heart of Belfast. At the Irish office it was said at mid-afternoon that that office was without advices concerning the events mentioned in the reports.

TWO HUNDRED BESIEGE BARRACKS.

DUBLIN, May 13.—Two hundred men besieged the Hollyford police barracks in County Tipperary for four hours early Wednesday morning, using rifles and bombs. A part of the building was set on fire, but the ten officers defending the place withdrew to another section of the structure and continued their resistance. The attackers eventually retired. No casualties were reported.

FIFTY BARRACKS WIPED OUT.

DUBLIN, May 13.—At least nineteen police barracks in various parts of Ireland were wiped out in the course of widespread destruction of public property and other activities by bands of armed and masked men in various parts of Ireland last night. Twenty income tax and customs offices were also raided and papers found in them burned.

Two mail cars and one mail train were held up and official papers taken from them.

One person was killed in the outskirts of Dublin, where the barracks were being burned. Rev. T. G. Kilkinson, one of the canons of Down Cathedral, at Downpatrick, was shot and critically wounded while pursuing raiders on the street. The houses of two newspaper editors were raided and one anti-Sinn Fein editor was tarred and feathered. The reports of the raiders' activities have been pouring in all day from numerous sections.

Stole Halt Million Dollars Killed By Chicago Police

BOLD ROBBER CLEANS OUT RAILWAY MAIL CAR — SHOT POLICEMAN THROUGH THE HEAD — SURROUNDED BY POLICE RIFLE SQUAD AND SHOT TO DEATH.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, May 14.—The rifle squad of the Chicago police early today cornered and shot a train robber who robbed an Illinois Central Railroad mail car of currency estimated at half a million dollars. The train arrived here this morning about one o'clock, three hours late, and the robber left the mail car a few blocks away. Two policemen accosted him and he shot one through the head. This attracted a squad of patrolmen, who cornered the robber in an apartment building. The rifle squad was summoned, and after two hours sniping the train robber was killed.

British Consul Dissappears In Mexico

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, May 14.—John B. Body, British Consul at Vera Cruz, has disappeared, and much concern is felt for his safety. Mr. Body left Mexico City several days ago to return to Vera Cruz. He traveled on the train which formed a convoy for President Carranza, but up to today no word has been received from him since he left Mexico City.

The Charge d'Affaires of the British Government in Mexico City has made representations to Gen. Obregon who has promised to do all he can to ascertain the fate of the missing British Consul.

The British Government has ordered one of its warships from Bermuda to proceed at once to these waters in response to a request from British subjects in Mexico that a battleship be sent immediately to Vera Cruz.

Will Not Advance $500,000,000 To The United States Railroads

SENATE TURNS DOWN REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT FUNDS FOR PURCHASE OF EQUIPMENT—PARTIAL RELIEF WILL, HOWEVER, BE GIVEN.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Railroad requests for Government funds to the extent of $500,000,000 for the purchase of equipment necessary to restore the lines to a "normally efficient basis" were turned down by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. It was pointed out that the Government already holds $1,100,000,000 in railroad securities.

However, the committee have some recognition of the necessity for rehabilitation of the transportation lines to keep in step with the industries of the nation. Senator Cummins of Iowa was instructed to bring in an amendment to the Transportation Act whereby partial relief will be given.

The plan is to amend the Act with reference to the so-called revolving fund. Under the terms of the original bill there was created a fund of $300,000,000. As the name implies, that money is available to the different lines in turn for the purchase of motive power and rolling stock, the Government taking equipment certificates.

It was contemplated that the Government would invest that $300,000,000 for five successive years as an aid to rehabilitation. Director-General Hines has estimated that $1,000,000,000 will be necessary to make the rail lines normally efficient. The proposed Cummins amendment will extend the revolving period from five to fifteen years.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

(What the Press Agents Say)

RETURN ENGAGEMENT OF MR .TYRONE POWER

It is doubtful if any play ever presented in a Canadian Theatre held as much interest and absorbing type as the one in which the eminent English actor, Mr. Tyrone Power, was seen in "The Servant in the House" when he palyed the part of "The Drainman" at the Griffin's last March. The play was a morality one it was a play that preached the timely doctrine of human brotherhood between all classes in "The Little Brother" which will be the play in which he will be seen at Griffin's this Monday night, May 17th as a special return engagement the lesson of tolerance as between one creed and another will be driven home with a tremendous force.

Mr. Power's impersonation of the priest is said to be one of the most vivid and intense dramatic portraits ever seen upon the modern stage.

He will be supported by the same excellent company which was seen here in "The Servant in the House" which includes, Mr. Harvey Hays, Mr Walter Edwin, Mr. Harold De Becker, Mr. J. Irwing White, Miss Alma Chester, Miss Chela Knight, two new members will be seen in "The Little Brother." Mr. Robert Taber and Miss Edna Holland, daughter of the late E. M. Holland, known throughout the United States and Canada as one of the greatest English actors of his day.

John Fox Story Heart O' The Hills

Gives Mary Pickford Opportunity For Full Display of Her Talents—Vivian Martin at Palace

When Pendelton Gray met Mavis Hawn, the Kentucky Mountain girl, was constrained to scoff at her. He didn't realize that ten years later the same Mavis shining under the brilliancy of education would break his heart. This is one of the situations in 'Heart O' The Hills' adapted from the story by John Fox, jr., and in which Mary Pickford makes her latest appearance at Griffin's tonight and Saturday. As Mavis Hawn Miss Pickford takes the role of a girl whose father has been killed by an unidentified mountaineer and whose mother is on the verge of remarrying. Mavis opposes the marriage for she believes the suitor merely wants to wed her mother in order to get possession of valuable coal lands owned by the Hawns. Oddly, Mavis is in love with the son of the widower who is courting her mother. Both Mavis and young John Honeycott are displeased with the life they have been leading and they plan to marry when they are of sufficient age. Other influences enter their lives, however, and they separate in going to different schools. They return to the mountain homes in time to find that their parents' marriage has been a terrible mistake. Widow Hawn is frail and weak under the cruel treatment of the rough Steve Honeycott and she sorely regrets the marriage. Mavis and Jayson arrive at the home of their unhappy parents to hear the widow Hawn threaten to disclose the fact that Steve Honeycott killed Mavis' father, to reveal the rest of the story here would hinder the spectator's enjoyment of it ,suffice it to state that "Heart O' the Hills' is one of the best starring vehicles the famous Mary has yet appeared in.

VIVIAN MARTIN AT PALACE

"Husbands and Wives," Vivian Martin's newest picture, is adapted from the well-known novel "Making Her His Wife," by Cora Harris. The story is laid in Atlanta, Georgia and its beautiful surrounding country. Miss Martin and her company spent several weeks making scenes on the exact locale called for in the book. They were ably assisted in many scenes by the "400" and debutants of the southern city. The story is of a northern society girl who is literally carried away by a southern man of moderate means. Her new life in a small, southern narrow-minded town, so different from her former life in the north, seems to her to be a series of "don'ts." How he struggles to bend her to his will and she, though struggling back, is finally subdued by the wonderful power of love. A beautiful Outing Chester Travelogue, a funny Lyons Moran comedy, "Old Clothes and New" and a very interesting British Canadian News Graphic are also being shown on the same program.

Called by Death

STEWART WILSON.

On Tuesday, May 11th, there passed away one of the old citizens of Prince Edward county in the person of Stewart Wilson of Picton, at the advanced age of 88 years, 5 months. The deceased had been in failing health for some time and his death was not unexpected.

Stewart Wilson was born in Jefferson County, N.Y., moving to Prince Edward county when 23 years of age. He was engaged at farming for some years in the township of North Marysburg. Coming to Picton some 44 years ago, he resided in this town about 20 years. After several years again spent on the farm, he returned to Picton, residing with his son, Mr. C. D. Wilson, for the past ten years.

The deceased was prominent in municipal matters for some years and was for two years Mayor of the town of Picton.

Two sisters, Miss Jane Wilson and Mrs. Daniel Haight, predeceased him some years ago.

Mr. Wilson's wife died several years ago. Of four children, two survive: Mr. Chas. D. Wilson of Picton, and Mrs. Farrar of Fort Erie, Ont. Those deceased are James Wilson of Chicago, who died three years ago, and Mrs. Swinton of Saginaw, Mich.

LEWIS N. BROWNSON

Death's remorseless hand has again visited Madoc and taken from its midst one of its bright and promising young men, Lewis (Lewy) N. Brownson. Deceased was in good health up to the moment of his sudden demise. On Friday he was cultivating his land getting ready for seeding the next day. Saturday morning, May 1, he rose bright and early and cheerful, preparing for another good day in seeding. On going to his brothers on the adjoining farm for a seed drill, he got it out of the shed alone and was starting for home. He was found by his brothers a short time after lying on the ground. One of the horses whinnied which showed them where he was. They went over to help him get the drill out of the shed as supposed and found him lying a few feet behind the drill. All that could be done to save him was done. When Dr. Eagleson arrived he pronounced heart failure as the cause of death. He was loved by all who knew him and a gloom has been cast over the family which can never be forgotten. He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing father and mother, four brothers and three sisters, namely; James and Albert of the adjoining farm, Perry of Stirling; Mrs. G. D. Watson, of Wellman's Corners; Mrs. H. J. Lloyd of Holloway and Nellie and Dan at home. The funeral was the largest held in this vicinity for some time. He was taken to the Methodist Church where most impressive hymns were rendered by the choir, then the remains of a bright and dear boy were laid to rest. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. Higgs, Madoc.

A Tribute To Thorough Training

Following is an extract from a letter received yesterday by Mr. I. L. Moore, Principal of Ontario Business College, from Mr. Thomas J. Brownbill of St. Kitts, West Indies.

"I am gratified to learn that my daughter's work throughout her courses is regarded as excellent. From her reports I consider her success is due to the kindness shown her by yourself and staff and the very great interest evinced in her generally. Accept my sincerest thanks. I shall have great pleasure in recommending Ontario Business College to any one desiring thoroughly good courses in bookkeeping, shorthand and typewriting. My nephew, Mr. Titley, reports that my daughter has a good position in Toronto and is giving satisfaction."

Anjo and A. Camacho from Antigua, E. Hadley from St. Vincent and A. E. Mercer from St. Kitts. There are now students on the way to the College from Barbados.

Mr. Titley, referred to in the above letter, came from the West Indies and took a course at O. B. C. about fifteen years ago. He is now a well-known and successful public accountant and auditor in Toronto.

PETERBORO NURSES FAVOR TWELVE HOUR DAY PLAN

Peterboro, May 14—Fifteen members of the Graduate Nurses' Association met and expressed their sympathy with the twelve-hour-day which has been proposed. In the discussion it was pointed out that on some private cases the nurse is practically on 24 hours a day. The only way of remedying the extended hours of duty was by introducing it into the hospitals and let it gradually work out into private nursing. The matter will be fully dealt with.

NO MORE FAKING IN BOXING BOUTS

Toronto, May 14.—Designed to put an end to fake boxing and wrestling bouts, with all their attendant evils, the bill of Hon. Col. Carmichael received a second reading in the Legislature without a word of dissent. The measure, Col. Carmichael explained, authorized the appointment of a commission to control boxing and wrestling and generally encourage amateur sports in the province.

In the past there had been a number of professional boxing bouts staged by various organizations, and some of them had been very indifferently conducted. Fake exhibitions had been given, and the referees were not always what they might be. The proposed bill would put an end to all this, and raise the status of sports.

A second reading was also given to the Provincial Secretary's bill, amending the O.T.A. The principal amendment gives the license commissioners control over the doctors in the matter of issuing prescriptions, and provision is also made for the better regulation of the penalties imposed under the act.

MISS A. C. M'KENZIE BEATEN.

Newcastle, County Devon, Ireland, May 14.—Miss A. C. Mackenzie, of Toronto, went down to defeat in the second round of the British women's golf championship. She was defeated by Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, of Philadelphia, three and two. The other remaining United States contestant, Miss Marion Hollins, West Brook, L.I., also won her place in the next round, by defeating Mrs. Hankey, Sunnidale, four and three. Miss Cecil Leitch, the present champion, and favorite in the contesting field, won easily from Mrs. Hezlet, Royal Portrush, nine and eight.

A DOUBLE FUNCTION

Last evening a most enjoyable time was spent at the residence of Mr. C. J. Peppin, corner of John and Queen streets by a number of young people who assembled there. The affair was of a double nature, namely a presentation and a shower. Mr. William Patterson and his sister, Miss Flora, who are leaving the city were made the recipients of remembrances by their friends and a shower was given Miss Hilda Barrett upon her approaching marriage. The young lady received many valuable and beautiful gifts. Those present were handsomely entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Peppin who were voted ideal host and hostess.

APATHY OF PUBLIC TOWARD GOOD PLAYS

Winnipeg, Man., May 11.—A vigorous invective of the apathy and indifference of the general public towards the production of good plays was delivered by Tyrone Power, when he addressed delegates to the Local Council of Women, at their annual meeting, on the subject "The Relation of the Theatre to the Community." "There is no such relation," he declared. "People are not interested in the theatre and know nothing about it. They do not take the theatre and the actor seriously or realize that they can have the best plays and playwrights if they cared enough to ask for them. There is some talk about uplifting the stage, but I tell you, it is not the actors who require uplifting but the public who must be uplifted to our standard. Let the theatre be more than a place of amusement—one of the noblest platforms in the world for spreading truth and light," he said. In conclusion Powers declared: "I would suggest that if you want good drama, instead of twaddle and trash, that you form an organization similar to the Drama League of America, which has already accomplished wonderful things."

NEWSPAPERS NOT CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Newspapers have always been so generous in donating free space to promote all kinds of movements that many people have come to regard free newspaper space as theirs for the asking, by divine right or governmental decree, or right of custom.. Free hand-outs of space cost considerable money to the publisher and as the cost of production mounts ever higher the strain of unproductive space reaches the breaking point. Discussing the question of newspaper charity the Philadelphia Corn Exchange sums the matter up as follows:

> Were Philadelphia to pay at commercial rates for all the free advertising which the newspapers now contribute gratis, the annual outlay for that item would exceed the whole cost of the police department.
> There is never a single copy of any of those papers printed on any day of the year which does not contain from one to twenty items, either so-called news or editorial, that is a gratuity handed out for the common welfare and from which the paper directly and indirectly never received a penny of profit.
>
> The people of this city never expect a shipyard to do anything but build ships. A locomotive plant has done its duty when it constructs railway engines. A hat factory, flour mill, clothing factory, bank, store, trolley road and telephone is not reckoned upon to give its time, service or capital for boosting any enterprise excepting its own.
> But a newspaper has dozens of requests every day to print or to urge, to commend or damn, to beg or promote something out of which the owner of the paper can derive no financial benefit. He is expected to employ his capital in that way for the common welfare.
> A newspaper has but two possible sources of income. One is from the sale of the paper and the other from the sale of advertising space.
> Whatever in a paper does not attract readers to buy is not a profitable thing for the owner financially.
>
> Whatever in a paper takes up space where an advertisement might be printed is a direct and immediate loss. Very little of what is called "civic boosting" ever brings to a newspaper a single reader. Certainly no begging proposition does.
> Armenians always require "relief," so it seems, and the papers are expected to print columns of appeals. But no person would ever think of buying a newspaper just to read an article asking him to contribute money to some one 6,000 miles away.
> An account of a prize fight, baseball game, murder, election, elopement in high social circles, a horse race, a battle or a hot debate in Congress, would sell papers. Readers would buy to see that sort of thing.
> Yet the Philadelphia papers give daily many columns of space on white paper that costs them dearly to the boosting or begging or promoting propositions. And let Philadelphians remember that such is not the case everywhere.
> The journal which for a century and a quarter has been regarded in all parts of the world as the greatest newspaper published is the London Times. But so far as booming anything in London goes, the Times might as well be printed in Tokio. It devotes but little of its resources and capital to that sort of thing.
> It may be contended that it is a newspaper's legitimate business to urge and beg and boost. But it is no more the function of a newspaper than of a magazine, and magazines thrive by publishing only such articles as their editors believe the public wishes to read.
> The magazine tries and does secure circulation by interesting its readers. It publishes no Belgian, no Polish, nor Armenian appeals, never urges better street paving and cleaning; does not coax people to contribute for the support of hospitals and colleges; makes no demonstration for saving babies, swatting the fly or any of those public things which daily newspapers are constantly asked to help.
> Every newspaper publisher knows that there is neither circulation nor financial gain in such a policy, yet they all do it.
> So the newspaper gives more of its services free than almost any other institution that is not an endowed charity, while at the same time it voluntarily, for what it deems to be the public good, refuses to accept profitable advertising. Who can estimate, therefore, the sum total of such a policy, day in and day out, adhered to by our newspapers?

The Speed Limit
Toronto Mail and Empire

The legal speed limit of 20 miles an hour in the cities is too high. When 15 miles was the limit, few prosecutions occured unless actual speed was more than 20 miles. Now about 25 miles seems to be the prosecution rate. When children and vehicles abound on the streets of the large cities, a maximum of 20 miles is sufficient for any careful motorist.

Chasing Profiteers
Sun and New York Herald

England has had an experience like America's in chasing profiteers. She set up 1,900 anti-profiteer tribunals. Each heard an average of one case, and twenty-four convictions were obtained at an average cost of $5,000 each. "And," says the indignant M. P., "the cost of living has gone up." England will discover that profiteering, however evil it is of itself, is not so much the cause of excessive costs as a symptom of them. The real causes are government waste, individual extravagance and sloth and the exactions of organized workers.

THE POET'S CORNER

A SAD CASE
(Walker's Club)

Twelve little bottles, must have come from Heaven,
Met a friend, pulled a cork, then there's but eleven—
Eleven little bottles, sitting in your den,
Along comes a Chummie, then there's only ten—
Ten little bottles, Gosh! they're looking fine
"Set 'em up again boys," now there's only nine—
Nine little bottles, sticking up so straight,
You spend a pleasant evening, afterwards there's eight—
Eight little bottles, you feel you are in heaven,
Just and then drink old chap and then we find but seven—
Seven little bottles, what an awful fix;
When you finish this one, alas,
there's only six—
Six little bottles, all that now survive,
Come and have a drink gents, now there's only five—
Five little bottles, ranged along the floor,
Never mind, fill up again, that leaves only four—
Four little bottles, enough to have a spree,
Guzzle up just one of them then you have but three—
Three little bottles! This will hardly do,
Invite an old Booze artist! What remains? just two—
Two little bottles, now there's not much fun,
Lap it up my thirsty lads! My gawd!
there's only one—
One little bottle, the last of all the store,
You win! Wesley Rowell, we'll never drink no more.

CANADA --- THE NEW SWITZERLAND

Mount Assiniboine, Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Where the Appetite is Always Keen.

Sections of the Alpine Club of Canada in all parts of the Dominion have received the anniversary message of the director, Arthur O. Wheeler, interprovincial boundary survey commissioner for B.C. There is much in this document of special interest to members of the club, but there is also a great deal which affects the general public, since it looks forward to a greatly increased tide of summer travel into the fastnesses of the great hills.

The director's message opens with comments on the prosperous standing of the club and the success of the camp at Yoho lake last summer. Thanks are also tendered to many who helped to make the camp successful. Mention is made of renewed photographic activities in the mountains and of the fact that the challenge cup for competition by amateur mountain photographers was won last summer by Dr. H. E. Bulyea of Edmonton.

With reference to the erection of a suitable memorial to the soldier members of the Alpine club, the director says: "It is decided to do this on two separate lines, first, to place a record of all our members on military service and particularly those who have joined the supreme honor roll, on the club house grounds at Banff, and second, the erection of a hut above timber line at some serviceable place in the Canadian Rockies for the use of our members and possibly the public who are interested in making mountain climbs."

With reference to independent mountaineering during the past year mention is made of the first ascents of Mt. King George, and several other peaks of the Royal Group, lying in a hitherto unexplored district fifty miles shouthwest of Banff. Mt. Sir Douglas and Mt. Joffre were also climbed for the first time last summer.

After some comment on the Banff winter carnival, in which the Alpine club takes an active interest, having been donors of a challenge cup for hockey, the director takes up the matter of the forthcoming "Welcome Home" camp to be held at Mt. Assiniboine from July 20th to 31st, 1920. At this camp more than 300 people will be placed under canvas and the special feature will be the fact that all returned members will attend as guests of the club. The camp will be situated three days' journey from the railroad and transportation of baggage will be by a specially organized pack train known as the "Alpine club pack train." Of special interest to the general public is the fact that this pack train will be in operation throughout the summer and anyone wishing to make a really interesting trip into the heart of the mountains can do so at a minimum expense. The camp at Mt. Assiniboine and the "Overnight Camps" on the way thither from Banff will be open to the public from the first of July until the end of September, except during the two weeks when they will be occupied by members of the Alpine club. At any time during the summer walking tours may be taken to Mount Assiniboine and these camps will be open to furnish good meals and a bed to the tramper at the end of his day's journey. There is only one way to really see the mountain and that is on foot, but so far this pleasure has been confined to the very few, on account of the difficulty of carrying food and bedding. These difficulties are now to be removed and it is planned in coming years to arrange many such walking and riding tours for the benefit of the public.

In conclusion the director quotes the verses of a gifted Calgary poetess, Miss Marian L. Moodie:

Oh wind that comes out of the West,
the land of the sunset skies,
Where far o'er yon mountain's crest
those glorious colors rise.
You bring me the fragrance of pine,
the coolness of mountain snow,
The music of falling streams by the hills where the lilies grow.

Oh wind that comes out of the West,
you sigh on your way to the plain.
The mountain land is the best. Will you not come back again?
Glow skies with your golden light,
Blow softly wind from the hill-
For my heart has a longing tonight, that only the mountains can fill.

INSECT ARMIES TO CARRY DISEASE

Mobilization of the mosquito, the housefly, the louse and various other disease-carrying pests for the dissemination of deadly germs in enemy territory is a possibility of "the next war" pictured by Professor Maxwell Lefroy, a scientist of London.

"I forsee the mosquito from Brazil starting yellow fever in new lands, the house fly, duly infested with cholera, dysentery or enteric and the typhus—laden louse doing their deadly work much more effectively than spies poisoning wells," said Professor Lefroy in a recent address.

"This would be part of the work of a War Office of entomologists—the working out of strategic plans for the distribution of these pests by airplane. It seems that the world is intent upon furnishing an airplane service for these pests, many of which are now held somewhat in check by natural enemies in their native clime. This will give them just the means of transit they have required. It will be a peace-time danger as well as one that could be used very offensively in war. The danger from these winged battalions of death is more serious than one dare estimate."

TO HAVE MASONIC LODGE CALLED BY HIS NAME

Montreal, Que., May 14.—As probably the oldest Mason in Canada, ex-Alderman Isaac Henry Stearns, of this city, will be given the unusual honor of having a lodge instituted in Montreal, bearing his name as the Isaac Henry Stearns Lodge A. Hell Fire Corner In War Museum

Signposts bearing the inscriptions, "Hell-Fire Corner," "Piccadilly" and "Haig Avenue," erected by British troops just behind the front lines in France, are among the more than 10,000 exhibits being assembled at Crystal Palace, London, to form the Imperial Museum. It will be opened by the King in June and will continue for four years.

Exhibits innumerable have been gathered from every land where the war cast its trail to show the common effort of the Empire during the great conflict. Shortly after the signing of the armistice, the memorable signposts mentioned were found discarded as lumber. In addition to those bearing "street" names, which, to many of the men who knew them best had meant so many direction posts to avenues of agony, there was found the rallying trench sign of Verdun with its "no thoroughfare." They were all rescued and are now to be preserved as relics of posterity.

There will be on display the gun that fired the first British shot in the war—from the decks of destroyer Lance at the mine-layer Koenig Louise; the E. battery gun that opened the military hostilities; the anti-aircraft pom-pom which, mounted at Gresham College, fired the first shot ever directed at a foreign foe from London since the days of the Romans—the occasion being the Zeppelin raid in September, 1915—and scores of other entries which have equally vivid associations.

The larger pieces of ordnance, some of which weigh 14 tons, are being arranged on the floor of the spacious hall. But the galleries will hold displays of equal, if not greater interest. These include war paintings and trench implements, realistic scenic models and protective devices and curios that throw an illuminating light on conditions which existed in the German army. Some of these are amusing, some tragic.

There is a cycle with a dynamo attachment for lighting an officer's dug out upon which two of the worst offenders had to sit in shifts and pedal in order that those within might have illumination while they devised new plans of aggression.

Far less amusing is a specimen of the enemy's "bear trap" A soldier exploring No Man's Land might step into its ugly spikes, concealed in the grass, and escape from their grip was virtually hopeless.

Looking at the lifebuoys of the Lusitania, the shattered funnel of the Vindictive, the portion of the Zeebrugge Mole and the formidable mines that bestrewed the Dardanelles, the exhibit will recall to "those who were there" many chapters of the great epic.

DYSPEPTIC DIET NO LONGER NECESSARY

The old plan of prescribing strict diet for dyspeptics and stomach sufferers is no longer popular among progressive medical men partly because of its weakening effect but mostly because of the discovery that nearly all stomach trouble is due to excessive acidity. The organs of digestion are themselves all right but acids in the stomach irritate and inflame the delicate stomach lining and cause sourness and premature food fermentation. The logical treatment, therefore, is to get rid of the acid, when natural painless digestion will follow.

For this purpose a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water neutralizes the acid stops the fermentation of the food, dispels the gas, and thus permits the stomach to proceed with its work without hindrance. Owing to its prompt and certain action Bisurated Magnesia, which is obtainable from any druggist, in either tablet or powder form, should always be used in preference to the other forms of magnesia, such as the milks, citrates, carbonates or oxides. Stomach sufferers are advised to try this plan for three weeks and note results.

The body of A. J. Scobba, Minneapolis, drowned with D. Aikenhead, returned soldier, at Gowganda was also recovered and was sent to Minneapolis for interment. They were both drowned last fall when their canoe upset. Andrew Nation, found in the Montreal River at Latchford, was the fifth. Under the Greenwood Tree

"Oh, Dick, how wet you are!" she said, as he drew up under the window. "Why your coat shines as if it had been varnished, and your hat—my goodness, there's a streaming hat!"

"Oh, I don't mind, darling!" said Dick, cheerfully. "Wet never hurts me, though I am rather sorry for my best clothes. However, it couldn't be helped; they lent all the umbrellas to the women."

"And look, there's a nasty patch of something just on your shoulder."

"Ah, that's japanning; it rubbed off the clamps of poor Jack's coffin when we lowered him from off our shoulders upon the bier. I don't care about that, for 'twas the last deed I could do for him; and 'tis hard if you can't afford a coat to an old friend."

Fancy put her hand to her mouth for half a minute. Underneath the palm of that little hand there existed for that half minute a little yawn.

"Dick, I don't like you to stand there in the wet. Go home and change your things. Don't stay another minute."

"One kiss after coming so far," he pleaded.

"If I can reach, then."

He looked rather disappointed at not being invited round to the door. She left her seated position and bent herself downward; but not even by standing on the plinth was it possible for Dick to get his mouth into contact with hers as she held it. By great exertion she might have reached a little lower; but then she would have exposed her head to the rain.

"Never mind, Dick; kiss my hand" she said, flinging it down to him. "Now, good-bye."

"Good-bye!"

He walked slowly away turning and turning again to look at her till he was out of sight. During the retreat she said to herself, almost involuntarily, and still conscious of that morning's triumph:

"I like Dick, and I love him; but how poor and mean a man looks in the rain, with no umbrella and wet through!"

As he vanished, she made as if to descend from her seat; but glancing in the other direction she saw another form coming along the same path. It was also that of a man. He too, was in black from top to toe; but he carried an umbrella.

He drew nearer and the direction of the rain caused him to slant his umbrella, that from her height above the ground his head was invisible, as she also to him. He passed in due time directly beneath her, and in looking down upon the exterior of his umbrella, her feminine eyes instinctively perceived it to be of superior silk and elegant make. He reached the angle of the building, and Fancy suddenly lost sight of him. Instead of pursuing the straight path as Dick had done he had turned sharply round to her own door.

She jumped to the floor, hastily flung off the shawl and bonnet smoothed and parted her hair till the curls hung in passable condition, and listened. No knock. Nearly a minute passed, and still there was no knock. Then there arose a soft series of raps, no louder than the tapping of a distant woodpecker, and barely distinct enough to reach her ears. She composed herself and flung open the door.

In the porch stood Mr. Maybold.

There was a warm flush upon his face and a bright flash in his eyes, which made him look handsomer than she had ever seen him before.

"Good-evening, Miss Day."

"Good-evening, Mr. Maybold," she said in a strange state of mind. She had noticed, beyond the arden hue on his face, that his voice had a singular tremor in it, and that his hand shook like an aspen leaf when he laid his umbrella in the corner of the porch. Without another word being spoken by either, he came into the school-room, shut the door, and moved close to her. Once inside, the expression of his face was no more discernible, by reason of the increasing dusk of the evening.

"I want to speak to you," he then said; "seriously—on a perhaps unexpected subject, but one which is all the world to me—I don't know what it may be to you, Miss Day."

No reply.

"Fancy, I have come to ask you to be my wife?"

As a person who has been idly amusing himself with rolling a snowball might start at finding he had set in motion an avalanche, so did Fancy start at these words from the vicar. And in the dead silence which followed them, the breathings of the man and of the woman could be distinctly and separately heard; and there was this difference between them—his respirations gradually grew quieter and less rapid after the enunciation; hers from having been low and regular, increased in quickness and force, till she almost panted.

"I can not—I can not, Mr. Maybold—I can not. Don't ask me!" she said.

"Don't answer in a hurry!" he entreated. "And do listen to me. This is no sudden feeling on my part. I have loved you for more than six months. Perhaps my late interest in teaching the children here has not been so single-minded as it seemed. You will understand my motive—like me better, perhaps—for honestly telling you that I have struggled against my emotion continually because I have thought that it was not well for me to love you. But I resolved to struggle no longer; I have examined the feeling; and the love I bear you is as genuine as that I could bear any woman. I see your great beauty; I respect your natural talents, and the refinement they have brought into your nature—they are quite enough and more than enough for me. They are equal to anything ever required of the mistress of a quiet parsonage-house—the place in which I shall pass my days, wherever it may be situated. Oh, Fancy, I have watched you, criticized you even severely, brought my feelings to the light of judgment, and still have found them rational, and such as any man might have expected to be inspired with by a woman like you! So there is nothing hurried, secret, or untoward in my desire to make you my wife! Fancy, will you marry me?"

No answer was returned.

"Don't refuse; don't!" he implored. "It would be foolish of you—I mean cruel! Of course we would not live here, Fancy. I have had for a long time the offer of an exchange of living with a friend in Yorkshire, but I have hitherto refused on account of my mother. There we would go. Your musical powers shall be still further developed; you shall have whatever piano you like; you shall have anything, Fancy! anything to make you happy—pony-carriages, flowers, birds pleasant society, yes, you have enough in you for any society, after a few months' travel with me. Will you, Fancy, marry me?"

"Gosh! How my back aches!"

After Grip, "flu" or colds, the kidneys and bladder are often affected—called nephritis, or inflammation of kidneys.

This is the red flag of danger—better be wise and check the further inroads of kidney disease by obtaining that wonderful discovery of Dr. Pierce's, known as Anuric (anti-uric-acid), because it expels the uric acid poison from the body and removes those pains, such as backache, rheumatism in muscles and joints.

Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.

Send 10c. for trial pkg. of Anuric to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont.

PRESTON, ONT.—"I was troubled with rheumatism in the right limb and hand for several years, and lately in the left shoulder. The only way I could lie was on my back. I had great difficulty to sit down and more to get up. Recently I had a very severe pain in my back. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery several times with the most satisfactory results, so I concluded to give his Anuric Tablets a trial. The pain in limb and shoulder has stopped entirely and in right hand it is very slight and getting less all the time. I can now sit or lie in any position I wish without discomfort or pain. I certainly will recommend Anuric; there is nothing nearly so good; I have tried them all."—GEORGE BOOS, cor. Duke and Waterloo.

JUST BONES

The spinal column is the central axis of the skeleton. It supports the head superiorly, ribs laterally, and through them the weight of the upper extremities. The head rests upon the lateral masses of the atlas; then transferred to the superior articular processes by way of the strong arch of the axis. From this the weight is transmitted downward, most through the bodies of the vertebrae, and partly through the articular processes to the sacrum; thence to the hipbones and to the lower limbs. If all of the vertebrae are normal in shape, then the weight is conveyed in the medial axial line, and the owner walks erect. These conditions are not always to be found. Innate occasionally builds deformed vertebrae, oftener of the first three cervicals or last lumbar; the former causes the head to lean toward the lower or thinner side. The last lumbar is frequently found ankylosed to the sacrum by one or both alae; in such malformations there is more or less tilting of the hips, which correspond to the abnormally deformed sacrum. Displaced vertebrae whether accompanied by fracture or not, cause a deviation from the axial line. Chiropractic is the science of correcting spinal deviations. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. PLURAL WIVES NOW A LUXURY

Polygamy is dying out in Persia—another result of greatly advanced living costs, together with jealousy, which is becoming more marked a characteristic of Persian wives with the premeation of western ideas and standards in the East.

With this change has came another—the custom of having family names. A year ago the Persian government made it compulsory for people to adopt a surname. Before that only peasants had any common name in the family, the upper classes possessing only one. A man, for instance, might be called Ghaffar simply, and his son Hassan with nothing to show their relationship.

COUGARS TAKEN ALIVE

UNIQUE FEATURE OF HUNTER IN KOOTENAY.

People of British Columbia Astonished by Daring Performance of Charles Ordist — Fur Company Paid Him Sum of $100 Each For the Live Animals.

FOR years past many hunters in British Columbia have hunted cougars for sport, finding it a fascinating and at times rather an exciting pastime. In addition it has its monetary benefits, there being a good bounty on the cougar's head and the skin fetches a fair price. But no hunter ever started after the big animals unless he was equipped with a reliable rifle so as to be able to bag them once they had taken to the trees. The only way a British Columbia hunter brings a cougar into camp is stone dead.

However, the other day Charles Ordist, a famous American hunter, crossed the line and took up quarters in the East Kootenays. He at once startled the inhabitants by announcing that he was going to take cougars alive, having been offered $100 by a Kansas City fur house for every beast he took in this manner. Shooting cougars was too prosaic for Ordist.

Some people looked upon Ordist's announcement as a little Yankee gusto, while others were afraid the man was suffering from a hallucination. It appeared like speculative venture with serious injury or even death, as the cougar measures between five and six feet from nose to tip of tail, and a female with cubs is rather a bad animal to pick trouble with. But Ordist talked about the cougar as though it were as small and harmless as a kitten.

The day arrived for Ordist to set out on his first expedition into the St. Mary's district and as he disappeared into the woods the watchers exhibited a certain uneasiness. He was accompanied by a pack of six dogs, highly trained and with a strain of bloodhound. A .32 long revolver was in a holster on his right hip. On his shoulder he carried a sack containing 120 feet of rope and provisions for himself and his hounds.

When well into the wilds Ordist unleashed his hounds and they sniffed about for a scent. On picking up a cougar's trail the dogs bounded off in pursuit, and on catching sight of their prey barked viciously. Not wishing to fight the pack the cougar took to the trees, and from a safe height snapped and snarled at the hounds. On coming up with his pack Ordist made ready to execute the job of capturing the treed beast. The ordinary hunter would consider his work practically done once the cougar took to the trees. A well-directed bullet would soon bring the brute down. But with Ordist the real work only begins with the treeing.

Boldly the hunter climbed the tree. As he ascended the cougar in alarm climbed to the topmost branches, where it clung with all fours, and spit and snapped in fear of falling among the hounds. In this precarious position the attention of the animal was diverted from Ordist to the baying hounds. Cautiously the hunter climbed to a level with the cougar, and with the assistance of a long stick passed a noose over the animal's head and immediately drew it taut. Quickly Ordist slipped to the ground and attached the rope to a simple device which permitted of a straight down-haul.

From then on there was a chance of a little excitement, even the intrepid Ordist was willing to admit. If the rope broke the hunter would have had to rely upon the accuracy of his revolver to save him from injury. More than once on his expeditions Ordist has faced such a contingency, but his gun has never failed him. However, as long as the noose remained taut the hunter had a stranglehold on the cougar. By strenuous heaving the beast was forced to relinquish its hold on the branches and slowly was lowered to the ground. The frantic pawing finally ceased through the strangling effect of the noose. Immediately the animal touched the ground Ordist roped it securely and when its strength revived it was helpless to battle on.

In this manner Ordist has captured 85 cougars. Altogether he had 400 cuts in his belt, having shot 315 when the situation became too acute to permit roping.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Take Care of Your Shoes.

By the exercise of a little care the life of leather shoes may be considerably prolonged, says the Thrift Magazine. It is a well-known fact that if a wet shoe is placed too close to a fire the interior of the sole is sometimes utterly ruined before the surface of the leather shows appreciable signs of injury. Wet shoes should be dried slowly and shoe trees inserted to prevent their losing shape and becoming uncomfortable. It is economy to keep at least two pairs of shoes, wearing them in rotation. Some shoe manufacturers claim that two pairs of shoes worn alternately will outwear three pairs of shoes worn consecutively.

BUILDING BETTER BOYS

Military training will help—but it takes something besides "setting-up" exercises to make healthy, sturdy men. The body is built out of the food you digest. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains the vitamines that are necessary to normal nutrition in addition to the tissue-building elements which are absent from many expensive foods. The crisp and tasty goodness of the baked whole wheat is a joy to the palate—most real food for the least money.

His friends in Marmora and district will wish him every success in his new position and feel confident he will make good. The family had moved to the Maple Leaf factory, but they returned to their home in the village last week.—Marmora Herald.

REMOVED BARRIER

A motorist about midnight last night removed a barrier and light which had been placed at the corner of Dundas and William Sts., placed there by the Standard Paving Company who are paving William street. After removing the barrier the motorist drove on without replacing same. The number of the car was obtained and the party will, no doubt, have to explain his action to the Police Magistrate.

NEW CHIEF OF POLICE.

At a meeting of Deseronto Town Council, Mr. W. J. Bowen was appointed Chief of Police of that town to succeed Chief Portland, who resigned. Mr. Bowen, prior to removing to his home in town, was well-known as a farmer and breeder of high class stock on Deseronto road for years. He is a capable, energetic man who has made a success of his calling and who has the head to make good in any capacity. What he may lack in police experience Chief Bowen will more than make up in a common sense way of dealing with those who stray from the straight and narrow path.—Deseronto Post.

BOY SCOUTS DO GOOD WORK

The Boy Scouts of Madoc had their first and only real practical test of the usefulness of the Society last Sunday when the boys undertook to discover the whereabouts of Mr. Garret who disappeared on Saturday last. The boys had no clue to guide them in their search, yet within a few hours after setting out in their search or discovery they found evidences which led to the final discovery of the missing man. Needless to report, the young Scouts with their officers are greatly elated over their success and Madoc is proud of an organization which has given such proofs of its efficiency. Where ripened intellects carried in motor cars failed, the little scout boy on foot succeeded.—Madoc Review.

ENTERTAINED COUNCIL

The Directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday entertained the members of the City Council to luncheon in their premises in the Corby Building. Considerable discussion took place with a view to having the two bodies work together in the best interests of the city and district. A number of subjects of local interest were taken up including the Bay Bridge, Bus Service for the outer districts of the city, Housing Conditions, etc., and it was felt that an occasional meeting of these two public bodies would accomplish much good. The Mayor and Aldermen were loud in their praise of the beautiful premises occupied by the Chamber which are second to none in Canada.

BRIDGE ST. EAST PAVEMENT

Messrs J. D. Clarke, J. A. Compion and Dr. J. Caldwell last evening appeared before the members of the civic committees and entered a protest against the proposal of an asphaltic concrete pavement being laid on Bridge street east, owing to the expense, it is alleged. The engineer who was present showed that a macadam road to last for five years would cost $1.80 per square foot whereas an asphaltic pavement lasting 25 years would cost $3.60 per square foot. The probability is that the latter pavement will be laid.

NAVIGATOR DEAD.

The death occurred at Kingston after a long illness of Capt. Coleman Hinckley, aged 79, one of the oldest navigators on the St Lawrence River. He had been sailing since he was ten years old and was widely known. He was born at Wolfe Island, near Kingston, and during his long career on the water Capt. Hinckley never lost a vessel or had a member of his crew drowned or injured. He saw many years of service with the old Folger Company on the river, also with the Richelieu and Ontario Company. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

CANADIAN MARINE.

An important phase of the transportation question, the building up of a Canadian merchant marine, formed the subject of an interesting lecture by Mr. A. R. Willmott, a representative of the Navy League, at Wallbridge Wednesday night. Over one hundred slides were shown illustrating the transport of Canadian farm products by rail and by water to the waiting markets of the world. The training in practical seamanship which is given the lads of the Boys' Naval Brigade and the coast to coast organization of the Seamen's Institute, which aims to lend a helping hand to the Great Lakes sailors, was also well illustrated. A pleasing feature of the entertainment, which was held under the auspices of the Women's Institute, was a series of photographs of the Grand Fleet in war time and of the tireless efforts of the trawlers and mine-sweepers to safeguard the merchant shipping of the empire.

TO-NIGHTS MEETING

The Citizens' Meeting to be held at the City Hall this evening, called by the Rotary Club, has been merged into the Chamber of Commerce Meeting. Citizens of Belleville will have an opportunity of hearing some excellent addresses by members of these two local organizations as well as the speakers provided. The Salvation Army Band will supply music, and an entertaining program will be provided. The success of this most worthy cause depends upon the interest shown by the citizens generally, and to-night at the City Hall the attendance at the meeting will denote the interest taken by Bellevillians in the coming campaign. The meeting will be called at tion army's Re-Construction Campaign. The meeing will be called at o'clock, and immediately after the Salvation Army Campaign organization is completed, Chamber of Commerce will present their discussion of the housing problem and other matters of local interest.

MRS. NELLIE PECK, of Kansas City, who says her little boy never had a well day until he began taking Tanlac. Declares she will never be able to pay the debt of gratitude she owes the medicine.

"I will never be able to pay the debt of gratitude I owe to Tanlac for what it has done for my little boy and me," said Mrs. Nellie Peck, No. 1421 Charlotte Street, Kansas City, recently.

"My little boy Curtis is fourteen years old and never in his life had he seen a well day until he began taking Tanlac. I worried and worried over his condition, but in spite of everything I could do he didn't seem to gain any strength and was weak and delicate practically all his life. He seemed to have a very weak stomach. It just looked like he couldn't eat anything and digest it like other children.

"He had no appetite at all and what little he did eat seemed to sour on his stomach. Sometimes his heart would palpitate terribly and he would get so dizzy he could hardly walk and as I stood and looked at him I thought he would surely fall over. He would have bad headaches and was nervous and could never sleep well at night. At school he was never able to keep up his work and he had to stay out a great deal on account of poor health.

"I had heard so much about Tanlac I decided to try it and see if it wouldn't help him. Well, you just can't imagine how overjoyed I was when he began to improve! I kept right on giving him the medicine until now it is hard for me to believe he is the same child. His health is better than ever before in his life and he is bright and playful all the time and he enjoys going out and playing with other boys. He has a splendid appetite and I let him eat anything he wants. He is not the least bit nervous any more and is asleep as soon as he goes to bed. In fact, he is perfectly well in every way.

"After seeing what Tanlac did for him I began taking it myself as I have been suffering from stomach trouble, headaches and dizziness for five years. Since taking this grand medicine I am now happy to say that I never suffer any more with these troubles.

"Tanlac has been one of the greatest blessings that ever came into our home and I expect to praise it as long as I live."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

People Of Ulster In Angry Mood

Threaten to Organize Reprisals Now Province is Invaded

LONDON, May 14—The second great wave of destruction which swept over Ireland during the past 24 hours coincided with the presence in London of Lord French, the Irish Viceroy and Sir Nevil Macready, commander of the British forces in Ireland, both of whom are here mapping out a plan for sending further troops to the island to wrest back the control of isolated districts now in the hands of the Sinn Fein.

Andrew Bonar Law, Government spokesman in the House of Commons, promised that body late today to furnish Parliament a report showing "the district where His Majesty's de facto Government had ceased to be effective."

Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson and other important members of the Army Council attended today's Cabinet meeting at which ways and means were discussed to devise more effective measures for putting down the disorders which in scope and spirit seem more violent and more threatening than at any time since the great Easter revolt in 1916.

Assassin's Fire To Be Answered

LONDON, May 14.—Accepting at its face value the claim the Sinn Fein has been trying to prove by speech and acts, that an actual Irish Republic is at war with the British Empire, the Government will abandon its present plan for handling crime on the island. To this end all arms of the British Army in Ireland are being tremendously strengthened. This applies especially to cavalry and motor machine-gun outfits.

As soon as the force there is adequate, it will, under the command of Sir Nevil Macready, take over all police functions. In fact, it was said that Southern Ireland may then be placed under martial law. This would be nothing more or less than notice to the Irish volunteers that their challenge had been accepted and that the Government troops would meet rifle and revolver fire with machine guns and possibly shrapnel.

The plan submitted by Sir Nevil Macready, for putting an end to lawlessness in Ireland, includes, according to the Daily Herald, the establishment throughout the country of hundreds of blockhouses like those put up in South Africa during the Boer War to be manned by from 30 to 50 soldiers with machine guns and bombs, provided with adequate automobile transport and equipped with wireless sets.

City Business Manager Favored By Citizens

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT PUBLIC MEETING — SALVATION ARMY DRIVE, HOUSING PROBLEM SITUATION AND COMMISSION GOVERNMENT DISCUSSED.

The public meeting held in the City Hall last evening to discuss matters appertaining to the city's welfare and the coming Salvation Army Drive to raise $2,500 in this city, was not largely attended.

A number of those present were ladies. Previous to the speaking the Salvation Army Band rendered a number of appropriate selections which were much appreciated.

Amongst those on the platform were Ald. Bone, Ald. Doyle, Messrs. W. B. Deacon, J. O. Herity, J. Q. Moffat, S. R. Burrows, H. W. Ackerman, W. L. Doyle, Rev. Dr. Scott and Mayor Riggs.

Ald. Bone was Chairman and briefly outlined the programme of the evening's meeting, namely, the Salvation Army Drive, the Housing Proposition and Government of the city by a commission.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Adjutant Cavender of the Salvation Army, being called upon, stated as the representative of the Salvation Army, he was pleased to be present. The army in the city were grateful for the support given by the citizens of Belleville in the proposed self-denial campaign. For the past thirty-two years, the Salvation Army has, every year, set apart one week, known as the Self Denial Week, to secure funds for the work of the army. In previous years, these campaigns have been carried on by members of the army, but this year greater needs were present. These needs mean more money for its missionary work. This year, the Army is celebrating its 50th anniversary and is working in sixty-six countries of the world. It has advanced in this time. This year the friends of the Army have undertaken to put on the Jubilee Campaign of the Salvation Army. The money needed is to help the Salvation Army in its work. In conjunction with the community work, there are the childrens' home and the rest homes, which have accomplished much good. During the past year twelve from the city of Belleville passed into the rescue homes. Some went to Montreal and some to Toronto. This has saved the city a considerable sum of money. The Adjutant outlined generally the work of the Army at police courts, visitation at homes, gaols, penitentiaries and securing employment, training colleges for candidates for the work of the Army. The objective for Belleville was $2,500, and we were going over the top.

REV. DR. SCOTT

Rev. Dr. Scott said he was present to support the Salvation Army in the approaching campaign. There is no two sides to this question. The Salvation Army has accomplished great work, in many ways. General Booth's name shines out in a brilliant manner for his work. The Army started a new line of benevolence, when it visited prisons and other places and helped those who were down, as it were in the world. This was a great reform movement. The Army have proven that the fallen may be redeemed. It is a true humanitarian work and has reclaimed many a fallen man and made him a man. This city owes much to the Army for what it has done even in this city. It has been a great agency in creating a moral retoning in the city. It has done much for true democracy. We will no doubt recognize the work of the Army. He had no hesitancy in recommending the work of the Army and the proposed campaign to raise $2,500 should be a success.

EX-MAYOR ACKERMAN

Mr. W. H. Ackerman said that he desired all to take part in the proposed drive. As chairman of the drive, he wanted all to meet him on Monday evening next to complete the organization for the campaign.

CIVIC COMMISSION

Mr. W. B. Deacon spoke in support of a commission form of Government for the city. A business manager for the city was a big subject to discuss. A mayor of the city is at the head of the corporation and he receives a salary of $200 per annum. During his tenure of office as an alderman, he had favored the proposed scheme. This year we will be expending in the neighborhood of three quarters of a million of dollars. If the city had a manager with a back bone, we would not be in the position we are in today. No one alderman or a group of aldermen can do the job properly by spending two or three hours a week. It needs a man on the job all the time, the same as a manager of any industrial concern. This manager would need to be a man who is in touch with municipal matters. This would not take away the power of the Mayor or Aldermen. In speaking of the Housing Proposition, Mr. Deacon referred to the fact that the Government was prepared to guarantee the city bonds to the extent of $200,000 or $250,000. Belleville is a fine city, but we have no defined plans for its development. If we had a continuous head, a change would take place for the betterment of the city. We want a head to our Municipal Government.

Ald. Bone—If a City Commissioner can be secured to do what is expected, one should be secured.

MAYOR RIGGS

Mayor Riggs said the city management by a commission had been on his mind for some time and he was in hearty accord with it. The Mayor and Aldermen usually go out just about the time they are learning something about the city. Large business concerns have a manager, and he (the speaker) would like to see a trained manager appointed in this city. It might possibly be feasible to get a manager who might manage two or three counties and these counties could help pay his salary. The Councillors do their best for the city's interest.

RESOLUTION PROPOSED

Mr. J. O. Herity said this commission of Civic Government was not a new matter, but was instituted in the city of Galveston in 1900. Since then some six hundred cities in the United States have followed in the trail. It would be wise at the next municipal election to submit this matter to the electors of the city. He moved the following resolution:

"Resolved that this meeting of the citizens of Belleville request the City Council to prepare a Bylaw to be submitted at the time of the Municipal Elections next January to ascertain the electors' opinion in the matter of commission form of Government for the city."

Mr. H. W. Ackerman seconded the resolution.

Ex-Mayor Panter said that whilst he was not opposed to the resolution, the meeting was not so representative as it might be.

The motion was adopted.

HOUSING PROPOSITION

Ald. Doyle spoke of the Housing Proposition, and the benefit to be derived from same. The city could get the Government to guarantee our bonds to the extent of $250,000. If we are going to use this money this year, we must get busy in the matter. He hoped the citizens would take an interest in the housing proposition as houses were needed in the city and a number could be erected under the housing scheme.

This concluded the speech-making and the meeting was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Cheaper But Not Simpler To Sever Tie

TORONTO, May 15—In discussing the new divorce bill likely to be brought down at Ottawa this session, Major H. M. Mowat, M. P., for Parkdale, told the members of St. Andrew's Society that the Senate granted divorces with the rapidity that Col. Denison or Magistrate Kingsford put cases through the Toronto Police Court.

Major Mowat expressed the opinion that it should be made possible for everyone, whether rich or poor, where the circumstances demanded it to get a divorce. Under the present arrangement it was impossible, he said, for a poor man to be divorced in Canada. The new bill would place the power of granting divorces in the hands of Supreme Court Judges, and while making it cheaper to get divorces it would also make it more difficult to be divorced on slight grounds. Cases would not be rushed through as they were in the Senate under such an arrangement, and probably more applications would be refused.

Major Mowat stated that he had no desire to encourage divorces or make it easy to be divorced as in some States to the South, but he said that he would like to see the divorce court handled in a more judicious manner.

More Compensation For Workmen Vigorously Urged

Minister of Labor Says Manufacturers Have no Cause for Complaint

TORONTO, May 14—An explanation was given in the Legislature by Hon. W. R. Rollo, Minister of Labor, of the government's bill providing increased compensation to injured workmen. The proposed increases, he said, seemed large at first glance, but it should be remembered that when the act was first brought into force the compensation fixed was $1.64 for every $100 of pay rate. There was no data available at the time, so that this was a rough guess as to what would be fair. In the second year of the act this was reduced to $1.27 and further reductions were made year by year, until 1917, when it was as low as 98c. In 1918 there was a slight increase over this and in 1919 $1.22 was the amount fixed.

Increases Not Large

The present proposed increase, therefore, was less than the amount originally fixed, when the act first came into force.

To the claim made that the increased compensation would cause malingering, Mr. Rollo took strong exception. No man, he argued, would malinger and only receive part of his wages, if he were able to work and receive full pay. In cases where malingering had been discovered, investigation showed that the malingerers were receiving the very lowest rate of wages, and the maximum amount of compensation allowed under the act. If a man found it necessary to work full time to support his family how could he possibly get along on 55 per cent .o fhis wages? This 55 per cent was not sufficient but it was better than nothing.

Mr. Rollo said the workingmen of their share in the industrial life of their hare in the industrial life of the province, as was shown by the fact that 429 had lost their lives while hundreds of others had been injured in various ways, so that the wheels of industry might be kept moving.

No Grounds for Complaint

Manufacturers should not object to paying the increased compensation and instead of accusing their employes of malingering they should take precautions to prevent accidents. Some manufacturers were doing this by establishing safety leagues in their plants. They realized the inconvenience and expense that followed accidents to their workmen, particularly the skilled ones and this greatly outweighed the comparatively small increased compensation they would be called upon to pay.

Hitherto said Mr. Rollo, the workingman has had the small end of it in the matter of compensation. It was not the intention to make the act retroactive but it was intended once it went into effect to make it apply fairly to everybody concerned.

Hon. Geo. S. Henry suggested that they had no time to fully consider the bill; it had not been expected that the minister would bring it up for a second reading for some days yet.

It was agreed that the measure would be debated later, after the Premier had effectively disposed of any idea that the Government were trying to sush the measure through.

News Print Will Be Made From Bamboo

LONDON, May 14—The use of newsprint made from bamboo is one of the measures contemplated by the British newspaper publishers to meet the world's white paper shortage.

W. Raitt, cellulose expert of the Government of India, who has had 25 years experience in experimental work with bamboo pulp, states there is sufficient bamboo in sight in Burmah, with the Savannah grasses of Assam, to produce 14,000,000 tons of dry pulp annually. The total cost of production will not exceed one-half of the present cost of wood pulp.

The Indian Government has granted concessions to ploneer companies on favorable terms, and plans are being developed for an annual production of 700,000 tons of bamboo pulp.

Truck Owners Object To Act

Ontario Association Seeks Amendments to "Load of Vehicles Act."

TORONTO, May 14.—A memorandum seeking amendments to the load of vehicles act has been handed to the honorable the minister of public works by a delegation from the Ontario Motor Owners' Association, composed of prominent truck owners:

"The interests of motor transportation are seriously affected by the proposed amendment to the load of vehicles act (bill No. 100), by which all trucks in excess of one ton capacity are permitted to carry only 50 per cent. of their rated capacity during the months of March and April.

"The members of this association as large taxpayers and users of the roads, are at least as fully concerned as any class of the community in protecting the roads, but while they are heartily in sympathy with the efforts of the government to prevent avoidable damage, they consider that the amendment, as drafted, is drastic and works an injustice upon commercial vehicles which operate upon pneumatic tires.

"The attached report is the result of a very careful study of the comparative effects of solid and pneumatic tires. It has been prepared by disinterested experts, who have had long experience in the field of motor transportation.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT

"In view of the facts, the Ontario Motor Truck Owners' Association suggest:

"(1) That the proposed amendment of the load of vehicles act (bill No. 100) be revised to read as follows:

"(4) During the months of March and April, vehicles, operated upon other than pneumatic tires, or objects moved over or upon them, upon any highway, not within a city or separated town, and having a carrying capacity exceeding one ton, shall not be loaded in excess of one-half the rated carrying capacity of such vehicle, or object without obtaining a permit, as provided by section 4.

"(2) That the motor vehicles act be amended as follows:

"Ss. 5. (1) No vehicle, equipped with solid tires, or tires other than pneumatic tires, carrying a weight in excess of four tons, including the vehicle, shall be operated upon any such highway, at a speed greater than 10 miles per hour, and no such vehicle equipped with solid tires or tires other than pneumatic tires, carrying a weight in excess of six tons including the vehicle, shall be operated upon any such highway at a speed greater than eight miles an hour, provided that the maximum speed of any commercial vehicle shall not exceed 16 miles per hour."

FARMERS CHIEF OWNERS

"In inviting your favorable consideration of these amendments, we would point out to you the following facts:

"(a) That 50 per cent. of the trucks which will be sold in Canada this year are being purchased by farmers.

"(b) That farmers buy trucks equipped with pneumatic tires because with these tires the truck does not sink into soft ground, as it does with solid tires.

"(c) That 80 per cent. of all trucks sold this year will be equipped with pneumatic tires.

"(d) That 60 per cent. of the trucks in use in Canada this year will be of approximately 1-ton capacity.

Make Ottawa Last Appeal For Dominion

TORONTO, May 15.—That Ontario may know that at some future session of the Legislature a bill to abolish appeals from this Province to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London will be pressed, Hon. W. E. Raney opened a discussion on the proposed bill and then withdrew the measure. Neither got into any great controversy over the matter, but stated their opinions and the opinions of others eminent in the Judiciary of Canada.

Hon. Mr. Raney, while in favor of the abolition of appeals to the Privy Council, quoted freely from eminent lawyers, who gave opinions and reasons for opposing such a measure. He delved into the status of Canada as a nation, its old and new relations with the Motherland and the other Dominions of the Empire. He quoted the remark of Sir Allen Aylesworth that the right of appeal was a tie to the Motherland and then gave it as his own opinion that it was an "irritant" to such a bond.

Hon. Mr. Raney expressed the opinion of others who said that they thought that there were more able Judges in Great Britain to express the last opinion on appeals.

"That is true," said Mr. Dewart.

"I am sorry my honorable friend says so. We do not have to take the present. Let us go back a generation." Mr. Raney named several of the eminent judicial men of the past to compare with British Justices. He was sorry there were so many "Little Canadians" who exalted the people of other nations. "Democracy consists in the liberty of making mistakes," he continued. "I would rathern govern myself with my mistakes than be governed by somebody else. That is the essence of democracy." He argued that Canada should have at Ottawa a court of finalty and independence. Ottawa should be the termination of appeals. "Why should this country appeal to another country in settling its lawsuits?" he asked.

Charges Canadian Paper Combine

WASHINGTON, May 15—A combination of Canadian manufacturers practically controls the print paper market through the Canadian Export Paper Company, Ltd., the Senate committee investigating the paper shortage was told by J. E. Gafaell, sales manager of the Inter-State Pulp and Paper Company.

He asserted that the combination controlled about 75 per cent of the Dominion output and that the prices it set were followed by other manufacturers.

Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Chicago News, said his experience had been that the Canadian company prevented competition. The News, Mr. Lawson added, was virtually compelled to accept the company's terms in purchasing paper.

Chairman Reed, of the committee, said a solution of the paper problem could be reached either through an agreement among publishers to curtail paper consumption, or through an excise tax on print paper, recommended by Assistant Attorney General Ames. The committee would prefer that the "great papers of the country solve the problem themselves, the chairman added.

M. A. Bodenhamer, representing the International Typographical Union, denied charges recently made before the committee that the union, through its shop chapels, exercised a censorship of labor news.

Neither the International Union, or any of its locals, have ever presumed to control or dictate the editorial policy of the newspapers or periodicals with whom we have business associations," he declared.

Blockhouses And Machine Guns To Preserve Order

SOLDIERS ARMED WITH MACHINE GUNS AND BOMBS WILL BE STATIONED IN BLOCKHOUSES THROUGHOUT IRELAND—MOTOR TRANSPORT SERVICE AND WIRELESS WILL CONNECT UP CHAIN OF BLOCKHOUSES.

LONDON, May 15.—Stern measures by the new British authorities to preserve order in Ireland are forecasted here.

The Herald's Dublin correspondent asserted that General Sir Neville Macready plans to erect blockhouses throughout Ireland, each manned by from thirty to fifty soldiers armed with machine guns and bombs.

Each blockhouse will be supported by adequate motor transport service and would be equipped with an efficient wireless plant, the newspaper said, adding that hundreds of machine gunners already were in Ireland. Demobilized officers would be recruited to aid the police.

Another indication of the policy of the new Irish officials was seen in the speech by Lord Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor. The Government has decided to reinforce the Irish constabulary in every possible way, Birkenhead said.

"Our troops will devote themselves to determining whether the forces of anarchy and assassination in Ireland shall be able to destroy the Empire."

The renewed destruction of police barracks, tax offices and public buildings and the murders of police were receiving close attention from high government officials here. The despatch of numerous additional troops to Ireland was forecast.

Squadrons of cavalry, another correspondent adds, already occupy wooden huts in different parts of Connaught.

HAT THIEVES.

London, May 15.—London has a new kind of thief, the hat snatcher. He mingles with the crowd, snatches off a hat and passes it to a confederate, who makes a quick get-away. Because of the prevailing high prices for hats second-hand chapeaux can be sold by the thieves at a substantial profit.

THE BACK YARD GARDENER.

By Robert Drysdale.

One of the American catalogues says: "The green globe artichoke is cultivated for its flower heads, which are cooked like asparagus. Plants set in any good soil with slight covering in winter will remain in bearing several years."

I can remember it years ago in England as a most delicious vegetable, and quite different from anything else. What the seed catalogue says is correct, of course, except as to "slight" covering. Here in Canada there is no doubt the plants will require a heavy covering of straw or leaves and then some earth on top of that. This should be put on late in the fall and taken off in the spring.

The artichoke seeds I planted some time ago in a box are up now, and the seedlings look like young sunflowers. The box is outside now, and the young plants will be set out as soon as they have their second leaves.

The culture of green globe artichokes is new to me. All I knew of them in England was how to eat them.

The Spencer peas are only just coming through the ground, although they were planted before Easter. Like everything else they have got to have a certain amount of warmth before they will begin to grow.

The few warm days we have had lately have done a lot towards bringing everything along. What we really need is a good warm rain, for the surface soil on the light land is getting very dusty and dry, due to the cold north winds which have blown so incessantly during the past few weeks.

I planted a little bed of garden herbs some weeks ago. Only a few seeds seem to have come up here and there, and I am going to sow seed over again.

Carrots will have to be sown this week. Carrots are very slow about germinating, even under the best conditions, and if they had been put in before I do not believe they would have come up at all.

I now have a little of everything planted, but my big plantings of corn and potatoes on the two acres which I rent will have to wait until I can get the land plowed.

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Labor To Have Share In Morden's Merger

Workers Will Also Have Representation on the Directorate of Consolidation

MONTREAL, May 15—That employes will be given an opportunity not only to participate in the British Empire Steel Corporation, but also for representation on the directorate, was the announcement of Grant Morden, before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association here. "It would be a short-sighted policy for any of us manufacturers not to give them, as well as the community generally a fair deal," he declared. During his address, Col. Morden, replied to the "vaporings" of certain members of Parliament against the proposed merger and declared that the profits of the Canada Steamship, Limited, has been due entirely to efficiency in busines smethods. He denied his ship building plans would work in competition to the Government's Marine, instead, "we are going to work hand in glove with them," he said.

Col. Morden was "much obliged" to Mr. L. R. Richardson, proposing that the Government investigate the merger, but believed he "used good judgment" when he withdrew his motion in the Commons.

Starts Without Water

"The British Empire Steel Corporation starts with no good-will in its balance sheet—commonly called water," he said. "When the public of Canada fully realize the ultra-conservative capitalization and the whole method of procedure in this consolidation and the advantages that are going to accrue not only to the shareholders of the individual companies, but to Canada as a whole, instead of one word of criticism, there will be nothing but praise."

A considerable portion of Mr. Morden's remarks dealt with the position of manufacturing interests in the United Kingdom and the formation of the Federation of British Industries which represents four thousand millions sterling invested in industry. With its many divergent political views represented, a portion of the members of the Federation were insistent upon turning it into a political force, but, said the speaker, he finally convinced the members that this would be a fatal mistake.

Col. Morden based his opposition to their plans because he was "opposed to class Government."

"I do not believe in the Farmers' party and a Farmers' Government would be disastrous; equally so a manufacturers' party and a manufacturers' Government," he said. "I proceeded to work out a plan by which we could get representation in Parliament without anyone being able to point out, that we as industrialists, were attempting to form a party or to bring influence on the Government to the detriment of the other classes of the community. This resulted in the formation of the British Commonwealth Union. The Federation accepted our views. The principles we laid down were that a member of Parliament could subscribe to our views in regard to the protection of industry while still remaining a members of his respective party. The result was that in the last general election 87 members of Parliament were elected pledged to the policy of the Commonwealth Union; others have since joined their ranks and today "we have at least 100 members of Parliament who are going to protect manufacturing interests in the United Kingdom.'

Mr. Morden then told of the proposal of the Canadian Association—an organization embracing leading Canadians residing in the Old Country—to change the organization into a Canadian Chamber of Commerce of London. "If your organization will support us we are prepared to take the bulk of the financial burden, give our time and devote our energy to the building up of Canadian Chamber of Commerce." He said that Sir George Foster, as Acting Premier, was in favor of this being done. The question will come before the executive of the Manufacturers' Association.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

MR. TYRONE POWER IN "THE LITTLE BROTHER"

When Mr. Tyrone Power, the eminent English actor, and his notable company of English artists were seen in "The Servant in the House" a few months ago at Griffin's, Belleville theatregoers were given a rare artistic treat, which will no doubt be remembered for a long time to come, and it is owing to the phenomenal success of Mr. Power and his excellent company has achieved on their appearance in this city in "The Servant in the House," that Trans Canada Theatres, Limited, will again present Mr. Power for a return engagement at the Griffin theatre this Monday night, May 17, and for this occasion Mr. Power will be seen in "The Little Brother," a powerful drama of love and sacrifice from the joint pen of Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James.

PACKED WITH LAUGHS

The motion picture coming to Griffin's next Tuesday and Wednesday is declared to be a laughing cure for the blues as well as an inside tip to young wives who are suspicious of their equally young husbands. It's called "What's Your Husband Doing?" and features Doris May and Douglas MacLean, the two lively and attractive young players whom Thomas H. Ince recently raised to stardom. The story concerns a newly-wed wife, played by Miss May, who suspicions the scented notes received by her husband and bearing the crest of the notoriously speedy roadhouse, "Honeysuckle Inn." The wife enlists a youthful lawyer, in her aid, whose "better half" is in turn jealous of him and well—there's amusing complications galore and it all ends in a big police raid when you know what usually happens—cops—terror—wagon—Great heavens, my reputation! "lock-up," "Morning Judge"—an' everything You remember "23½ Hours Leave, this pairs first co-starring vehicle, this is funnier. "Speak Easy," a funny two reel Mack Sennett comedy and the 2nd chapter of Selig's thrilling wild animal serial "The Lost City" is also being shown on the same program.

"MAN'S DESIRE"

Those lovers of the drama in Belleville who like action, excitement and suspense in their film food, will find a dash to their taste in "Man's Desire" starring Lewis Stone which is to be shown at the Palace this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily.

Tom Denton, the "straight shooter," literally and figuratively; "Slim" Dorgan, a primitive and useless member of society; "Bull" Larkin, an abysmal beast and evil genius of the woods; and gentle Mary Larkin, an exquisite flower in a primitive wilderness, are characters in the story who are woven into a drama that vibrates with suspense and thrilling situations. Jane Novak, who plays opposite Stone, as Mary Larkin, has a part that fits her admirably. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a new comedy, entitled "Soft Money" and other varied plays of interest will also be shown on the same program.

JUDGE ORDERS JURY TRIED FOR MURDER

Honorably discharging the girl culprit and declaring that the jury must be tried, Judge Mackenzie of Kentucky, adds a few pointers to the law books in "Heart O' The Hills. The trial naturally ends in hilarity and this is just one of the many humorous incidents in the latest production of America's sweetheart. "Through Canada with the Prince of Wales" a subject of unusual interest to all Canadians, Pictorial Life and an amusing comedy are also being shown on the same program.

VIVIAN MARTIN AT PALACE

In her newest picture, "Husband's and Wives," from the famous novel "Making Her His Wife," by Cora Harris, Vivian Martin as the wife begins wedded life by replying to her husband's state —"The first thing every wife should learn is to obey her husband"— that "the first thing every husband does learn is that she won't" It is being shown at the Palace tonight for the last time along with a funny Lyons-Moran comedy "Old Clothes and New," British Canadian Pathe News and a beautiful Outing Chester reel.

DAVID BLYTHE HANNA

Chairman of the Board, Canadian National Railways, President, Canadian National Railways

Mr. Hanna was born on December 20th, 1858 at Thornliebank, near Glasgow, Scotland and entered railway service with the Glasgow Barrhead and Kilmarnock Railway in 1847. In 1878 Mr. Hanna transferred to the Caledonian Railway and was cashier for that road in Stobcross Terminal, Glasgow, from its opening to the date he left to board ship for Canada in 1882. At this time the Grand Trunk Railway made it a practice to bring out to this country, young men of railway experience and Mr. Hanna was one of those who took advantage of this opportunity. On arriva lin Canada, therefore, Mr. Hanna entered the service of the G. T. R. being employed in the Auditing Department in Montreal. Two years later, he made his third change going to the similar department of the New York West Shore and Buffalo Railway, with headquarters at New York City, remaining there two years—1884-1886. The fourth move was from New York to Portage La Prairie where in 1886 he became Chief Accountant of the Manitoba and Northwestern Railway operating out of that Manitoba centre. In 1892 he became treasurer, and in the year following, Land Commissioner as well.

Put Nickels to Work

Three years later, Mackenzie and Mann commenced the construction, Gladstone to Dauphin, of the first hundred mile stretch of the Canadian Northern Railway System. It was not so known at that time, but bore the appellation of the Lake Manitoba and Canal Company. The two railer to operate the road, and the choice e rto operate the road, and the choice devolved upon D. B. Hanna. He entered the service of the Canadian Northern a few days before Christmas of 1896 as Superintendent. By practically living on the line, he stirred the territory into productivity and by making every nickel do all that even a Scotsman could expect a nickel to do, the road was made to pay its charges the first year and furnish a tidy surplus. And when the members of the Manitoba Legislature which had guaranteed the bonds of the enterprise journeyed to Dauphin in 1897 they expressed themselves as positively amazed at the evidence of prosperity in the territory the lines served. This success encouraged further expansion, which was most marked during the five years that followed, the lines of the C. N. spreading far afield from the original 100-mile stretch from Gladstone to Dauphin.

When the general offices of the Canadian Northern were established in Toronto in 1902 Mr. Hanna came east to take up enlarged responsibilities as Third Vice-President with supervision of all departments of the road. He held the reins of the great operating, financial and traffic departments and continued to give, by dint of long hours, the same kind of close scrutiny to the problems of the road as in its early days, only the perspective was for 10,000 miles, with termini at Atlantic and Pacific tide water, instead of the 100 miles "section" between Gladstone and Dauphin in central Manitoba.

Mr. Hanna became, in 1903, President of the Canadian Northern Quebec Railway, and in 1907 President of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway. He became President of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company, and also of the Duluth, Winnipeg and Pacific Company—system subsidiary which gives access from the main line at Fort Frances, Ont., to Duluth. When in 1918 it became desirable that the stock holdings of the owners of the Canadian Northern be bought on behalf of the Canadian people by the Government at Ottawa, and the 10,000 miles of line it involved were embraced in a National System, it was D. B. Hanna who was caleld as President to build up the organization needed to handle a People's Railway System 14,000 miles in extent.

Sense of Humor

Mr. Hanna has won through to success because he possesses the inherent ability to rise to the needs of trying situations, and because he has the driving force to carry him through most arduous work. His manner of speech is decidedly direct, but the fact to deal with questions diplomatically is forthcoming when required. The fundamental principle he works upon is to do the best he can, with the resources at his disposal. And of him it may be said—if it can be said of any man—that he personifies "ability constantly applied." Blessed with a sense of humor that is thoroughly reliable the serious problems that have confronted him day in and day out since he first entered the service of the C. N. R. have not been allowed to take the joy out o flife. A man of simple tastes and distinctly democratic in his views, he holds the respect, admiration and affection of officers and employees. He has always been easy to approach. Possessed of a wonderful memory he greets old employees by name in a way that makes for the very best of feeling. It preserves the human touch. The difficult task of combining the official staff of the Canadian Government and Canadian Northern Railways has been accomplished without friction of any kind and the two systems are now working smoothly together as one, which is a tribute to the tact and judgment of the Presiding Officers.

Mr. Hanna is a governor at St. Andrews College and is a staunch Presbyterian.

C S TUXIS BOYS AND TRAIL RANGERS E T
BY Firelighter

HAVE A GARDEN.

The time for fun, work, sweat, bugs, weeds, successes and disappointments in gardening is started.

During 1918, boys and girls, men and women of Canada and the United States grew five hundred million dollar bills in their back yards! That would be a real crop; it is the value of all the garden stuff grown in small gardens that year.

If you are going to have a garden this year, why not lay it out according to a plan? Draw it to scale on paper before you start. By this you will be able to buy the quantities of seeds intelligently and to plant in proper order. Put in one general group small plants like beets, onions, lettuce, carrots, radishes, and parsnips. In another general group put larger plants like corn, tomatoes and potatoes. Spreading ground vines like melons and cucumbers, which need wider spacing, should be put in another general group. The reason for this grouping is that the various plants in a group need similar general treatment as well as spacing.

In making a plan provide space in which to enter costs and yields of the various crops. This will give you a complete record, which will be useful another year. Another helpful use of the plan is that it will guide you in the rotation of next year's crops. For this purpose save your plan for next season.

In the location of a garden, it is not always possible to choose conditions as to sunlight. It is important, therefore, that in the arrangement of the various kinds of vegetables which are to be planted, due care should be given to providing the greatest exposure to the sun for those crops which need it most. Those plants which must ripen their fruits such as tomatoes and egg-plant, require the greatest amount of sunshine, while lettuce, spinach, kale, and other leaf crops require relatively less. Foliage crops must have at least three hours of sunlight a day and plants which ripen fruits at least five hours a day. This is important.

Every Tuxis Boy should go after his badge in horticulture (the requirements are given in his Manual, page 413) and every Trail Ranger should win the badge for gardening (outlined in his Manual, page 349).

HUSBAND TO BE GOOD.

New York, May 15.—A "too good" husband does not constitute a cause for legal separation, according to a ruling handed down by Justice Herschauser to Mrs. Richmond J. Reese, wife of a New York lawyer, at White Plains, recently. Mrs. Reese testified during the trial that her husband was "so good he was impossible." Mr. Reese swore his wife called him "woolly lamb" and "piggie pie" as evidence of her affection.

EXPENSIVE OPERATION.

New York, May 15.—Gladys Berman, an actress, recently paid $500 to Dr. Augustus W. Pratt, of New York, to have some surplus fat removed from her chin and to lose some facial wrinkles. She took legal action against the doctor because she alleges an abscess formed and she suffered injuries which have kept her from the footlights. She thinks $15,000 a fair compensation for the damage she claims was caused to her face.

MILITARY NEWS

Desertions from the R.C.H.A. are reported to be of frequent occurrence. During the past five or six months there have been a large number of desertions. On Tuesday evening an escort was sent to the home of Pte. Lloyd to apprehend him for desertion and when R.S.M. Lowry endeavored to secure Lloyd, his mother and sister interfered and beat the sergt.major. Lloyd was ultimately taken to the barracks and placed in the "clink" to await the hearing of charges of being absent without leave, resisting an escort and resisting the regimental sergeant-major. Charges have also been preferred against Mrs. Lloyd and Miss Lloyd for interfering with an officer in the discharge of duty and assault These charges have been lodged with the local police and they will be tried before the police magistrate. On Wednesday morning Lloyd appeared before Lieut.-Col. W.H.P. Elkins, D.S.O., M.C. officer commanding the R.C.H.A. for a hearing. Upon conviction he is liable to six months' imprisonment and possibly longer. Upon inquiry at the police station it was found that charges of assaulting Regimental Sergt.-Major Lowry had been laid against Mrs. and Miss Lloyd.—Kingston Whig.

Act Amending O.T.A Is Given Second Reading

Much Criticism Levelled at Clause Giving Control Over the Physicians

The Act Amending the Ontario Temperance Act was given its second reading in the Legislature. The debate lasted most of the afternoon, most of the criticism being levelled at the clause which gives the Board of License Commissioners power to refuse to honor the prescription of a doctor 'for any cause which the board may deem sufficient." The critics contended that the board had no right to take "control of doctors" in such a way. The Government members argued that the doctors themselves were in favor of such a restriction.

W. E. N. Sinclair (South Ontario) thought the Medical Council should be left the power to deal with doctors, as it was responsible for their behavior. Neither did he like the clause giving the Police Magistrate of Toronto power to issue summonses in any place in Ontario. He also thought the clause regarding standard hotel licenses which prevented restaurants in the same building would lead to trouble with municipalities. Another objection was the bringing of the act into force immediately. The changes were many, and he thought many might suffer quite innocently through not knowing the law. A chance, he said, should be given for them to get acquainted with the new regulations.

Hon. H .C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, read a letter from the Physicians and Surgeons' Council that its members did not want the responsibility of prohibition questions, and thought all the powers should be vested in the License Commission, leaving them no responsibility in such a moral question.

Karl Homuth, Labor member for South Waterloo, again attacked the severity of the Ontario Temperance Act, which mulcted from the pockets of the poor man a fine of $200 and costs for being caught with an ounce of liquor in his pockets. The Government system of vendors in large centres had the effect, he said, of tempting a man in need of liquor for medicinal purposes to go out and get it by surreptitious means, rather than through circuitous legal channels.

R. L. Brackin (Liberal, West Kent) vigorously attacked the clause in the proposed amendments which gave authority to the Ontario License Commissioners to cut off any doctor "for any cause which the board may think sufficient." He exclaimed: "It is not right that the control of the medical profession should be in the hands of the Chairman and his associates of this board."

Measure In Aid Of The Farmers

Loans to Organizations for Marketing of Seed and Potatoes

Hon. Manning Doherty's promised bill to assist co-operative organizations in the marketing of seed and potatoes was introduced in the Legislature. The bill empowers the Government to make a loan not exceeding $3,000 to any such organization incorporated for the purpose of cleaning, storing and marketing seed and potatoes. The money can be used for securing land, buildings and equipment. The loan, however, must not exceed 50 per cent. of the value of the plant on which it is made. For the first two years no interest is charged but after that 6 per cent. Repayment of the loan may be made at any time; but at least half of it must be repaid within five years and the balance within the next five years.

The break in the main boom across the river occurred while the river was swollen to a high level by Sunday night's rainstorm.

INDIANS NOW SEEDING
500 ACRES PER DAY

Regina, May 14.—Seeding on the greater production farms in Saskatchewan operated by the Department of Indian Affairs, is proceeding at the rate of 500 acres per day, according to reports to reach W. M. Graham, head of the department for the Prairie Provinces, with headquarters in Regina. One-half of the 10,000 acres in this Province is already sown in wheat, and approximately one-third is showing above the ground. The objective of 10,000 acres is to be reached by the end of next week.

The Indians on reserves in Southern Saskatchewan expect to have 20,000 acres in wheat. Their operations are entirely separate from the greater production farms. They are away to a fine start, and expect to finish next week.

Operations on the big farms have been handicapped to a certain extent owing to the amount of moisture in the land. Traction engines could not be used and all the work up to date has been accomplished by horse-power.

EUROPEAN CORN BORER

In certain sections of the eastern United States the notorious European Corn Borer has become established and in view of the grave danger of this serious foreign pest being brought into Canada, the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, have issued a special circular dealing with this insect and others which bore in corn, and which may be mistaken for it. This has been prepared by Mr. Arthur Gibson, Chief of the Division of Field Crop and Garden Insects. It comprises 14 pages and has seven illustrations. A limited edition only of this circular has been printed. Agricultural workers and others specially interested may obtain copies free of charge on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

SUGAR PROFITS FIXED

Washington, May 14 —Telegrams were sent by the Department of Justice to all United States attorneys reiterating the department's policy of holding the margin of profit on sugar sales to one cent for wholesalers and two cents for retailers. The Attorney General ordered that steps be taken immediately to prosecute persons taking advantage of larger profits.

The Attorney-General's order will not have the effect of standardizing prices either at wholesale or retail, according to Mr. Boynton. Dealers obtained their stocks at different prices and as a result sale prices will vary, but in no case can profits exceed the margin allowed.

CANADA IS A NATION.

The New York newspapers continue to comment favorably on the announcement that a Canadian diplomatic representative at Washington is to be named shortly.

The Evening Sun, in an editorial entitled "A Canadian Legation," says that the new step will "mark a striking change in the status of the Dominion. The move will further attenuate the political bond between the sea of Empire and the dependency, if those words can indeed still be applied. Little remains of this political connection.

"The Dominion makes its own life, so far as internal affairs are concerned. It maintains its own army and has the power to build its own navy. The projected appointment of a Canadian diplomatic envoy to the United States will make a further step. It will carry the open acknowledge of the privilege of the Dominion to negotiate directly with its sole contiguous neighbor. This must in practice become the power to control fully the most essential of Canada's external relations."

The Evening Telegram, commenting on "our minister from Canada," concludes in these words: "Canada as a nation was, in fact, an accepted idea on the other side of the line long before somebody had visions of a League of Nations."

A DOOR MADE OF WIND.

"Doorless doors" that make fly-screens unnecessary and keep out rain and snow without other agency than that of a properly directed air current are described by H. S. Knowlton in Electrical Merchandising. They are the invention, he says, of a Boston mechanical engineer, Henry H. Cummings, who is also the inventor of the ship log which was generally installed on vessels of the United States Navy during the war. We read:

The "doorless door" consists of a motor-driven fan installed below or behind a grill in the entrance of a store or other building and arranged to draw air downward from the upper portion of the doorway, whence it is carried by a duct to a hood at the top of the entrance and then discharged downward, completing the cycle. A quarter-horse-power motor driving a sixteen-inch fan and connected with a nine-to-twelve-inch diameter duct provides a current of air under about three-inch water pressure, which is unnoticed by persons standing in the doorway, but which is most effective in keeping out insects, rain, snow, and cold air. The use of the equipment enables close regulation to be made, with ease, of the interior temperature of the room, and the absence of a closed door, winter and summer, in a trial installation actually increased trade by one-third. The cost of operation is about two cents per hour."

PRESIDENT WILSON AND THE BRITISH NAVY.

The investigation of the operations of the United States navy during the war which has been under way for some time before a special committee of the U. S. Senate, has been featured with sensations, accusations and counter-accusations, and an attempt has been made to show that the effectiveness of the American navy was materially weakened by unpreparedness and interference from Washington officials. Recent despatches from Washington relating to the naval investigation shows that President Wilson was not only concerned as to the conduct of the U. S. Navy, but was not at all satisfied at the way the British navy was being conducted during the war. Suggestions emanating in Washington as to what the British Navy should do or should not do did not seem to be welcomed by the British Admiralty, to the astonishment of President Wilson, who evidently favored a slap-bang naval campaign regardless of submarines and mines. According to a despatch from Washington a confidential cablegram from President Wilson to Rear-Admiral Sims in London, sent during the war, was read to the United States Senate naval investigating committee by Secretary Daniels. It disclosed the fact that the American President was not at all sfatisfied with the way the British Admiralty was directing the work of the British navy, and also indicated that Mr. Wilson could not understand why the naval experts of Great Britain were reluctant to allow the American naval experts in Washington to tell them just how things should be done. Mr. Wilson intimated that he considered the British naval men too prudent, and expressed surprise that "the British Admiralty had failed to use Great Britain's great naval superiority effectively against the submarines." He called on Admiral Sims for comments and suggestions "based on independent thought," and without regard to "judgments of any one on that side of the water."

The Admiralty was "helpless to the point of panic," in the face of the submarine situation, was Mr. Wilson's opinion as expressed in the message.

"Every plan we suggest they reject for some reason of prudence," the American president added. "In my view this is not a time for prudence, but for boldness even at the cost of great losses."

In conclusion, President Wilson asked Admiral Sims to advise him as he would give advice, "if you were running a navy of your own."

Admiral Sims' reply, said Secretary Daniels, who presented the President's message in connection with his answer to Sims' charges against the United States Navy Department's conduct of the war, was "a long telegram of generalities of what the British Admiralty was doing."

My word! What a blooming error not to have placed "Too-Proud-to-Fight" Woodrow Wilson at the head of the British Navy. The would soon have placed the Allied dreadnoughts Unter den Linden or under the sea.

GAIETY OF THE CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN.

John Wesley didn't see why the devil should have all the best tunes. The Christian Guardian is in the true apostolic succession, because it refuses to leave to the news papers all the best jokes, says the Toronto World.

Some day, perhaps, we shall read the verbatim report of a sermon by a president of the conference on "The Humor of Saint Paul," in which the magnificent old writer's remarks about wives will be attributed to his whimsical foreknowledge of the new woman. The preacher may also find similarity between Paul and Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher, who, criticized for using humor in the pulpit, answered: "Yes, but you don't know how much I keep in."

The secularly minded editor reads with infinite regret that this week will see the discontinuance of the anecdote contest, which has been a feature of the index page and has been conducted by The Rambler.

This column of the Methodist official organ is a skittish thing. It would be described as profane by the good brother who to the remark of another, as they left prayer meeting: "We certainly cut two inches off the devil's tail tonight," rebuked him with "Sh-h-h-h. You must not be so irreverent."

If you would know how the fathers and brethren talk to and about one another, read part of a letter to The Rambler from Rev. A. W. Hone, who has blessed Cobalt with his spiritual joy:

> "I give you the following chorus which our gang used to warble on its evening tramp home along the track from the old swimming hole. If there was any more to the chorus, I never heard it:
> "Oh, he rambled, he rambled,
> He rambled all around, in and out of town;
> Oh, he rambled, he rambled,
> He rambled till the butcher cut him down."
> The ending seems to indicate that the "he" refers to a calf, though the sentiment is quite applicable to some preachers' conduct in the pulpit."

And the Rambler's reply:

> Yes, Bro. Hone, the Rambler has also been known to endanger his laryngeal tract by means of this soul-stirring stanza. "Them wuz the days"; but oh, naughty, naughty! How could you say such things about your fellow ecclesi-obstacles?

Every effort should be made to acquire a steamship service with Canada to the necessary proportions. One of the best methods of encouraging such trade relations would be the grant of preferential tariff rates on Canadian imports, and the exemption of any export duties on goods shipped to Canada. The adoption of preferential tariffs with Canada and the rest of the empire is on lines with the policy strongly advocated by the Imperial Government, and which will go far to consolidate those ties of sentiment and nationality which were so strongly knit by the war. Fortunately, we have the funds which will enable us to embark on such a policy; and we sincerely hope that the Legislature will recognize the benefit which will accrue to the colony from its adoption and will provide the funds for sending a Bahamian delegate to the coming conference at Ottawa, and will authorize him to say, on behalf of the colony, that reciprocal tariff advantages between Canada and ourselves are only a matter of adjustment and enactment.

THE POET'S CORNER

THE PASSING STRANGE

Since moons decay and suns decline
How else should end this life of mine?
Water and saltness are not wine.

But in the darkest hour of night,
When even the foxes peer for sight,
The byre-cock crows; he feels the light.

So, in this water mixed with dust,
The byre-cock spirit crows from trust,
That death will change because it must.

For all things change; the darkness changes,
The wandering spirits change their ranges,
The corn is gathered to the granges.

The corn is sown again, it grows;
The stars burn out, the darkness goes,
The rhythms change, they do not close.

They change, and we, who pass like foam,
Like dust blown through the streets of Rome,
Change ever, too; we have no home.

Only a beauty, only a power,
Sad in the fruit, bright in the flower,
Endlessly erring for its hour

But gathering, as we stray, a sense
Of life, so lovely and intense,
It lingers when we wander hence.

That those who follow feel behind
Their backs, when all before is blind,
Our joy, a rampart to the mind.

—John Masefield in the Yale Review.

"There goes Jimkins!"

"You seem very fond of him," he exclaimed.

"I am," replied Plimson. "He showed confidence in me when the clouds were dark and threatening."

"In what way?"

"He lent me an umbrella."

Quite Unintentional

A tramcar collided with a milk cart and sent can after can of milk splashing into the street. Soon a large crowd gathered. A very short man coming up had to stand on tiptoe to see past a stout woman in front of him.

"Goodness!" he exclaimed. "What an awful waste!"

The stout woman turned round and glared at the little man and said, sternly:

"Mind your own business!"

APPLE BLOSSOM TIME IN EVANGELINE LAND

Cape Blomidon, Scene of Embarkation of the Acadians

Gaspereau River, Nova Scotia

Apple-Orchard, Blossom Time, Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia

June is apple blossom time in Normandie. In Nova Scotia, land of Evangeline and the Acadians, it, too, is apple blossom time. Then there is a hundred mile belt of apple blossoms around quaint Annapolis Valley—just as superb in their fragrance and peaceful beauty as they were in the time of which Longfellow wrote his famous poem.

The land fits the poem, or, perhaps, is a poem in itself—it seems like a delicate, fragrant dream, far, far away from the struggle and hurry of life—where rest and peace and simple beauty reign. There is a kind of sadness mixed with all this quiet beauty—a memory of other times, and one feels a haunting mystery while standing gazing at Cape Blomidon, which in turn still looks compassionately down on the sands where the Acadians were embarked on their sad journey. Tall, wraith-like ships glide by the mouth of the Gaspereau River—dream ships, riding on a river of dreams. The Great Magician has laid his wondrous spell upon the land.

Perhaps it is this very peacefulness, this semblence to another world that is bringing Canadians and Americans to Evangeline Land. This famous place lies along the Dominion Atlantic Railway which runs through the heart of the Acadian Country where a statue is being erected to the memory of Evangeline.

Many people go there in the late summer, too, to take part in the Cherry Carnival at Bear River, with its rustic sports and hospitality like that of old England in the days gone by.

Another pause ensued, varied only by the surging of the rain against the window-panes, and then Fancy spoke in a faint and broken voice.

"Yes, I will," she said.

"God bless you, my own!" He advanced quickly, and put his arm out to embrace her. She drew back hastily. "No, no; not now!" she said in an agitated whisper. "There are things—but the temptation is, oh, too strong and I can't resist it; I can't tell you now, but I must tell you! Don't, please, don't come near me now! I want to think. I can scarcely get myself used to the idea of what I have promised yet." The next minute she turned to a desk, buried her face in her hands, and burst into a hysterical fit of weeping. "Oh, leave me!" she sobbed, "leave me! Oh leave me!"

"Don't be distressed; don't dearest!" It was with visible difficulty that he restrained himself from approaching her. "You shall tell me at your leisure what it is that grieves you so; I am happy—beyond all measure happy—at having your simple promise."

"And do leave me now!"

"But I must not, in justice to you, leave you for a minute until you are yourself again."

"There, then," she said, controlling her emotion and standing up; "I am not disturbed now."

He reluctantly moved toward the door. "Good-bye!" he murmured, tenderly. "I'll come to-morrow about this time."

PART IV—CHAPTER VII

The next morning the vicar rose early. The first thing he did was to write a long and careful letter to his friend in Yorkshire. Then partaking of a little breakfast, he crossed the dale and heath in the direction of Casterbridge, bearing his letter in his packet, that he might post it at the town office, and obviate the loss of one day in its transmission that would have resulted had he left it for the foot-post through the village.

It was a foggy morning, and the trees shed in noisy water-drops the moisture they had collected from the thick air, an acorn occasionally falling frim its cup to the ground, in company with the drippings. In the heath sheets of spiders' web, almost opaque with dew, hung in folds over the furze bushes, and the ferns appeared in every variety of brown, green and yellow hues.

A low and merry whistling was heard on the other side of the hedge, then the light footsteps of a man going in the same direction as himself. On reaching the gate which divided the two inclosures, the vicar beheld Dick Dewy's open and cheerful face. Dick lifted his hat, and came through the gate into the path the vicar was pursuing.

"Good-morning, Dewy. How well you are looking!" said Mr. Maybold.

"Yes, sir, I am well—quite well. I am going to Casterbridge now, to get Smart's collar; we left it there Saturday to be repaired."

"I am going to Casterbridge, so we will walk together," the vicar said. Dick gave a hop with one foot to put himself in step with Mr. Maybold who proceeded: "I fancy I didn't see you at church yesterday, Dewy. Or were you behind the pier?"

"No, I went to Stonneley. Poor John Dunford chose me to be one of his bearers a long time before he died and yesterday was the funeral. Of course I couldn't refuse, though I should have liked particularly to have been home on this occasion."

"Yes, you should have been. The musical portion of the service was successful—very successful indeed; and what is more to the purpose, no ill-feeling whatever was evinced by any of the members of the old choir; they joined in the singing with the greatest good-will."

"Twas natural enough that I should want to be there, I suppose," said Dick, smiling a private smile; "considering who the organist was."

At this the vicar reddened a little, and said: "Yes, yes," though not at all comprehending Dick's true meaning who, as he received no further reply, continued, hesitatingly, and with another smile denoting his pride as a lover:

"I suppose you know what I mean, sir? You've heard about me and—Miss Day?"

The red in Maybold's countenance went away; he turned and looked Dick in the face.

"No," he said constrainedly, "I've haerd nothing whatever about you and Miss Day."

"Why, she's my sweetheart, and we are going to be married next midsummer. We are keeping it rather close just at present, because it is a good many months to wait; but it is her father's wish that we don't marry before, and of course we must submit. But the time will soon slip along."

"Yes the time will soon slip along. Time glides away every day—yes."

Maybold said these words, but he had no idea of what they were. He was conscious of a cold, sickly thrill throughout him; and all he reasoned was this, that the young creature whose graces had intoxicated him into making the most imprudent resolution of his life was less an angel than a woman.

"You see, sir," continued the ingenuous Dick, "'twill be better in one sense. I shall by that time be the regular manager of a branch of my father's business which has very much increased lately, and we expect next year to keep an extra couple of horses. We've already our eye on one—brown as a berry, neck like a rainbow, fifteen hands, and not a gray hair in her—offered us at twenty-five want a crown. And to keep pace with the times, I have had some cards printed and I beg leave to hand you one, sir."

"Certainly," said the vicar, mechanically taking the card that Dick offered him.

"I turn in here by the river," said Dick. "I suppose you go straight up the town?"

"Yes."

"Good-morning, sir."

"Good-morning, Dewy."

Childhood Contipation

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of childhood and the child suffering from it cannot thrive. To keep the children well the bowels must be kept regular and the stomach sweet. To do this nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative; are absolutely safe and never fail to relieve constipation and indigestion; colds and simple fever. Concerning them Mrs. Jules Fauquereau, Nominigue, Que., writes: "My baby was terribly constipated and suffered day and night. I was advised to give him Baby's Own Tablets and from the first they helped him, and now at the age of thirteen months he is a big, healthy happy boy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"AMERICA BECOMING A NATION OF LIARS"

New Brunswick, N.J. May 15—"We are becoming a nation of liars," said the Rev. Newell Diwght Hillis, pastor of Old Plymouth Church in Brooklyn in a lecture here on Americanism.

In explaining his statement, he said: "Capital steals wages and labor steals time. We do not abide by solemn industrial compacts. A republic of people who do business in that spirit is like a house built on sand."

"There are twenty million persons in this country who are hostile to its institutions and ideals," he asserted "and the republic is not safe until they have been Americanized."

CALL J. J. MORRISON CANADIAN 'RASPUTIN'

R. R. Hall (Liberal, Parry Sound) took occasion in the Legislature to roundly condemn J. J. Morrison, secretary of the U.F.O. for writing members of the Legislature asking them to vote against the bill superannuating civil servants. He described Mr. Morrison as the Canadian 'Rasputin.'

"For the last several days," said Mr. Hall, "I have been receiving letters asking that I should vote against the hon, the premier's bill and against the government. It seems to me a very high-handed proceeding. It seems to me there is something wrong somewhere, and after making inquiries I find that this thing emanates from one man. The key to the whole thing will be found in The Farmers' Sun in the last issue, where we find a letter over the signature of one J. J. Morrison."

"I have no desire to defeat that bill," he continued, "I have spoken in favor of it, and I am not going to retract. But there is something behind it that is important to the government It is a matter of government in or government out. Here are men who say the present government is their government, that they elected the gentlemen to the positions which they now fill and here we have a man behind the throne, the 'Rasputin' of the Farmers' Union, a man who assumes the role of dictator, a man who is not satisfied to dictate to his own class, but who undertakes to dictate to those who are not of his class and also to dictate to those who are farmers and who are not in the pay of somebody else to obtain a livelihood. I farm for my living and I am not going to permit J. J. Morrison to think for me."

The Ontario Hospitals Association waited on the provincial secretary yesterday with the request for an increased grant from 50c to 75c a day and that municipalities be compelled to pay $1.75 a day, instead of $1.50. The request was refused, although the hope was held out that perhaps next year something might be done.

To Relieve Catarrh Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength.) Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

TRYING TO SALVAGE CARGO OF MILLIONS

LONDON, May 15—A maritime romance of absorbing interest is attached to the voyage of the Government salvage steamer Racer, which has sailed from Southampton She was bound for the north coast of Ireland, where twenty fathoms deep, lies the wreck of the White Star liner Laurentic, with specie to the value of 2,000,000 pounds sterling buried in the debris that was once her hulk. The object of the Racer's quest is to recover this valuable cargo.

The Laurentic was sunk—whether by accidental contact with a mine or by a German submarine never has been definitely established—while on a voyage to America in the early part of 1917. She carried about £5,000,000 in gold and silver money intended for the payment of munitions supplied by United States firms.

LIBRARY FOR MARMORA.

As a result of action taken by the Women's Institute at their meeting on Thursday, it is quite probable that Marmora village will have a public library in the near future. A public library should prove a great boon to the village and be very largely patronized, especially during seasons when the weather is unfavorable for outdoor recreation. There are very few places in Ontario the size of Marmora without a public library.—Marmora Herald.

WORLD-WIDE COMMENT ON JUBILEE APPEAL

The Salvation Army's appeal for a fund to celebrate its Jubilee is one that deserves, and will assuredly elicit, a generous response. There was a time not many years ago when its methods came in for a good deal of criticism. . . . Today, one never hears these criticisms. They are echoes from the past, and even those who may not altogether agree with the methods of the Army are forced to recognize that it is doing most valuable work for the cause of religion and the social amelioration of the masses. It has always worked for the bottom dogs. Its greatest achievements have been amongst the submerged tenth, the poorest of the poor, and here it has invaded a field of labor which far too many other religious movements rarely reach. In the Church militant The Army has a foremost place. In fact, it often seems the only militant Christianity at present in evidence. In the sacrifices which it demands from its leaders, and the energy with which it pursues its aims, it approaches the fiery zeal and self-surrender of the early martyrs. The King, in his greeting to The Army on this occasion, speaks of its "work of love and mercy both in peace and war," and dwells on the degree to which it "has become honored and endeared to the hearts of the nations of the world," and his words express admirably the sentiments of the whole nation. We all recognize now that The Army has won a distinctive place in the British Empire, and that its work should be maintained and encouraged. For what it did before the war, for what it has done since, and what it is now capable of doing, not only for Britain but for humanity as a whole, it deserves the most generous support of all classes and denominations.—From South Wales Daily News.

LIQUOR AND STILLS IN SALOON RAIDS

Detroit, Mich., May 14—Raids upon eleven east side near-bear saloons by posses of Federal prohibition officers, Deartment of Justice agents and police resulted in the confiscation of more than 1,000 quarts of high-grade liquors, 1,000 gallons of raisin mash and two stills, worth approximately $12,600.

In eight of the places raided liquor was found, and the proprietors were arrested. The proprietor of one establishment after declaring that he had no liquor, skipped out of the door and made his escape. Another owner ran a block before he was overtaken and handcuffed.

The raids were the second of a series which will be made in the city at frequent intervals in an effort to rid Detroit of its wholesale illicit liquor traffic.

Collector of Internal Revenue Grogan, who directed the operations, declared that living costs can be reduced two per cent if the illegal liquor traffic is abolished.

A Pair in Reserve

It is a good thing to have an extra pair of glasses. Then, if you break a lens you undergo no inconvenience while it is being repaired. The reserve pair can be a different style, giving you a welcome change. A dressier type, perhaps. You don't wear the clothes you work in to social events. Why wear your working glasses when you are "dressed up"?

Come in and let us show you the latest styles in glasses.

British Consul Held By Carranza

VERA CRUZ, May 14—In connection with the fighting now taking place in Mexico, an international incident may be foreshadowed by the fact that W. A. Body, British Consul for Vera Cruz, is in the camp of President Carranza. Advices give no details as to the reason for his presence there, but it seems probable he accompanied the President in his flight from Mexico City.

Special Train to Battlefield

British authorities here have arranged for a Mexican naval lieutenant to go by special train to the battlefield and make an attempt to rescue the Englishman. British and French war ships have made their appearance in the harbor, and four United States fighting vessels are at anchor here. Negotiations for the surrender of Matamoras, across the frontier from Brownsville, Texas, are under way and it is expected that Carranza forces there will surrender without fighting today.

BODY FOUND ON TRACK MURDER IS SUSPECTED

Milton, May 15.—About 4.30 a.m. yesterday the body of a man was picked up by the crew of a C. P. R. freight train a few miles west of Milton and taken to Campbellville. The victim of the fatal accident was seen by the fireman when the train was a short distance from him. He was lying in the centre of the tracks, but whether he was dead or alive at this particular time is not known. Before the train could be stopped practically its whole length passed over the body, severing one foot, part of his face and arms. The man was about thirty years old, and the only article in his pockets was a Toronto Street Railway transfer. The body has not yet been identified. Coroner McCall and Chief Chapman, of Milton, went to Campbellville and held an inquiry, but nobody could throw any new light on the case. It is said, however, that the switch lights near where the body was found were tampered with, and it is now believed that the man was knocked down, robbed, and his body placed on the track to hide the crime.

WHY PALE RUN-DOWN THIN WOMEN NEED VINOL

It Enriches the Blood and Creates Strength

Recommended By Physicians and Guaranteed By Druggists

If you are not feeling up to the mark, are run-down, overworked, feel listless and as though you could hardly drag around, do not hesitate to go to your druggist and get a bottle of VINOL, the non-secret cod liver and iron tonic without oil, combined with beef peptones and hypophosphites.

In a natural manner it creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood, and strengthens and energizes the entire system.

There are thousands of women in Canada, once pale, thin, run-down and sickly, who are now strong, well and healthy owing to VINOL.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, for thin, puny children, feeble old people, overworked men and women, we guarantee VINOL will build up health, strength and energy more quickly than anything else.

It is sold on a Guarantee by all Druggists.

Liberals And Labor Take Rap At Administration Of O.T.A.

COUNTY MAGISTRATES IN MANY INSTANCES NOT CAPABLE OF LAW'S ENFORCEMENT—PLACING ONUS OF PROOF ON DEFENDANT DESCRIBED AS UN-BRITISH.

TORONTO, May 14—The Sandy bill, to prevent "short circuiting," passed the committee stage of the Legislature and, as is always the case when the liquor question comes up, was provocative of some strong complaints regarding the administration of the O.T.A. The principal objection leveled against the measure was the provision placing the onus of proof on the defendent. This was described as a most un-British proceeding. The county magistrates responsible for the enforcement of the act also came in for some hard raps because of their inexperience in law enforcement and their frequently manifested inclination to allow their personal views on the temperance question to warp their judgment. The costly and roundabout method of appeal from their judgment to Toronto was also condemned.

A section of the bill, placing the onus of proof on the defendant, was described by K. K. Homuth (South Waterloo) as un-British. It practically convicted a man before trial. The same clause was in the O.T.A., and should be eliminated there, too. Mr. Homuth's observations started the ball a-rolling.

Endorses Mr. Homuth.

Mr. Dewart expressed sympathy with the suggestion of Mr. Homuth. The present act in this respect was a distinct violation of British justice. No man should have to prove himself innocent.

M. M. MacBride (Brantford) spoke in a similar strain, and moved that the section be thrown out.

The attorney-general said this section was absolutely necessary to the proper administration of the law, and the House, by eliminating it, would be running contrary to the basic principal underlying the enforcement of the temperance laws of the province for a generation. Then, too, no objection had been heard from honest men.

M. M. MacBride—I have heard honest men object, and, thank God, honest men are in the majority in Ontario. I am sorry the attorney-general has not met as many of them as I have.

EDUCATE THE FARMERS.

Alberta Minister Says That Boys Should be Trained.

A strong plea for improved educational facilities along agricultural lines for the boys and girls all over the country was made by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture in Alberta, at an Empire Club luncheon in Toronto.

"The future of agriculture in our country today depends more upon the men who are employed in it than upon anything else," he declared. "And the men who will make the best success of agriculture are those who were born on farms. It is true that occasionally we rescue some boys from the miserable cities (laughter), but as a rule the best results can only come from giving the proper agricultural education to those boys who were born into farm life.

"The whole problem comes to this: What are we to do in order not only to make it possible for boys to stay on farms, but to make it almost impossible for them to leave the farms?" Hon. Mr. Marshall thought that the only solution to the problem was the training of the boys to such a point that they would appreciate the opportunities which agriculture offers them.

The only way in which the Government could assist the agricultural industry, he said, was to establish within the reach of all boys and girls throughout the country schools where they could be taught such things that would make them enthusiastic about farming life, and not the kind of education that would impel them to the cities.

BABIES DIED FOR LACK OF CARE

Every year in the United States 25,000 mothers and 125,000 babies die because of the lack of proper care. Tomorrow's citizens are being sacrificed because the United States is the only nation among 18 important powers that has no infancy and maternity legislation. Anne Martin in April Good Housekeeping says that "Of the 2,500,000 babies born yearly in this country at least a quarter of a million—one out of every ten babies born—dies within the first twelve months after birth. Foreign countries long ago adopted governmental measures to save the lives of babies and have thereby lowered the death rate. France loses only one out of thirteen born; Australia and Sweden, one out of fourteen; Norway, one out of seventeen; New Zealand, which through its most effective provisions for rest and medical and nursing care for the mother before and after childbirth, has achieved the lowest baby death rate of any country in the world, and loses only one out of twenty."

How America can help—how everyone in this community can help is explained fully by Anne Martin in her splendid article "We Couldn't Afford a Doctor."

SIX MONTHS IN JAIL FOR DRUNKEN DRIVER

Hamilton, Ont., May 14—Wesley Hamilton, of Toronto, found drunk in charge of an automobile, was sentenced to six months in jail today without the option of a fine. It was his third conviction for similar offences. Pleas on behalf of his sick wife and two children availed nothing.

BOOKS AND BLUE DEVILS.

Dissatisfaction with life has powerful causes. And very likely it has powerful cures. For instance, Clara Savage in April Good Housekeeping, suggests Books as a possible cure. To quote:

"The trouble is that most of us fail to realize to what practical use the modern library may be put. More and more they are ceasing to be dusty, sepulchral places, haunts for the "highbrow," where books are kept as far away from the public as possible, and are coming to be live and up to date institutions. If you doubt it, ask yourself what the public libraries can do for you and then go and ask them to do it. The public library stands ready to help you to a more efficient, a more successful life. If you have got into the wrong line of work, if you feel that some other occupation would make better use of your capabilities, go to the public library and ask for information on occupations, trades, professions for women. Just a look at the shelves filled with books on various vocations will suggest new and interesting possibilities to you. You will find between the covers of a book exact information on the training necessary for any profession, and the opportunities in salary and advancement that it offers. You will find books on the private secretary, her duties, opportunities, salary; on scientific selling and advertising; on proof reading and printing; books on basketry, book-binding, books on kindergarten work, on how to plan a home, costuming, millinery—books on any subject you please. Any one of these books may serve simply to convince you of a line of work you would like to undertake and lead you to begin a course of training for it."

KISSES ARE STILL WORTH ARGUMENT

"Kisses are but a man's whim," asserts the girl students of Carnegie Technical.

"Kissing is not a whim at all; it is a part of our daily life," replied Mrs. Edward F. Buchner, wife of Dr. Buchner of Johns Hopkins University.

"If you would be sanitary, kiss your girl in the evening or afternoon. Disease germs lurk in the morning kisses, because the sun and fresh air have not had a chance to sterilize her sweet lips." So said Dr. Brown of Saranac Lake, N. Y., at a tuberculosis convention.

"Afternoon and evening kissing is as dangerous as morning kissing," declares Dr. John G. Frey, Ohio tubercolosis expert.

But Olive Thomas Says—

Is kissing dangerous to health? I have read the statement by a well-known physician recently, who has asserted that kissing is most dangerous to health when performed—or, shall I say, enjoyed—in the morning, but not so dangerous in the evening. It is fortunate, concludes this savant, that most courting is done at night, otherwise the health of the nation might suffer.

With all due respect to the doctors, I don't believe kissing is unhealthy at all. I suppose I have been kissed as often as any woman alive. I have played so many parts that required one and sometimes many kisses during the course of action, that I cannot begin to count them. And my experience has been that kissing, whether by moonlight or flashlight, is equally innocent of danger to health.

Men and women have been kissing for all the ages that the world has contained the human race. The propagation of the germ theory will have no more effect upon kissing than the discovery of the laws of gravitation had upon the growing of apples. Men will want to kiss and women to receive kisses so long as love lasts. And when love ends the race dies. Kissing is an expression of the emotion that attracts man to woman and woman to man. It is part of the fundamental make-up of the race. Doctors might as well try to banish love itself as to place a ban on kissing.

KILL BIG WEEDS BY DOSING WITH SALT

Strong growing weeds with elaborate roots are often difficult to kill. Sometimes they cannot be lifted without doing damage to adjoining plants; yet to cut off the surface foliage and leave the roots in the ground is no good at all. After this the weed frequently grows more vigorous than ever.

Any weed may be killed in this way. Cut off the top growth down to the ground. Then scoop out the central stalk as much as possible and fill the cavity with salt. If possible, do this in dry weather. When rain occurs and the salt dissolves quickly place a fresh amount on the root. At the end of three days (if the salt has not been washed away) it will have penetrated to every part of the foot and the weed will never give any more trouble.

Great Nations Scrambling for Oil

Baron "Jackie" Fisher, one of the wisest men who ever sat in the British Admiralty, urges that coal be discarded altogether in favor of oil on British warships, and declares that the future of the British Navy and merchant marine "absolutely rests on the internal combustion engine." A ton of oil used for fuel is equal to two tons of coal; if used in an internal combustion engine, it is equal to six tons of coal.

"We floated to victory on a sea of oil," declared a British Admiral. Canadian aviators flew to victory on wings of oil. Oil drove the great tanks that spread consternation, ruin and death among the Germans. It is the age of oil.

World supremacy will rest in the future with the nation that controls this great, new, economical fuel. The great nations in the world are now in a mad scramble to explore, develop and control their oil resources. It is a fight for their very existence—whole empires are at stake.

None realizes this better than Great Britain. With practically all her latest warships and ocean greyhounds equipped as oil-burners, it is absolutely imperative that she should have an inexhaustible supply of oil, if she is to maintain her maritime supremacy.

The British Government is seeking control of the Shell Transport Company, one of the greatest oil companies in the world. It is understood that even if the British Government should gain what they seek, the Canadian Government will still refuse to give the Shell Transport Company the exclusive right to drill on a large section of the Peace River oil fields. Everyone is to have an equal chance in our Canadian North-West.

In a situation such as this THE FIRST CALL ON CANADIAN MONEY IS FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF OUR OWN EMPIRE'S OIL RESOURCES. Our naval supremacy, our very existence as an Empire, depend on our developing huge reservoirs of this new fuel.

Canada Has the Oil

AND WE IN CANADA HAVE THE OIL—have it for the seeking—have it in quantities that it is believed will surpass anything in the wide world.

As far back as 1888, Doctor G. [illegible]. Dawson, eminent Dominion Government Geologist, declared that the oil in Canada's North-West was practically inexhaustible.

Prof. McLearn, of Saskatchewan University, says that the sands of Alberta hold enough oil to last the entire world for three hundred years.

Dr. Bosworth, chief geologist of the Imperial Oil Company, estimates there are three hundred billion barrels of oil in Canada's North-West.

If geology is a science, then speculation has here been reduced to a minimum.

With the reports of geologists before them, the British Government and the great oil companies of the Empire are now turning to Canada's Peace River country. This last great West—a miracle land of vast lakes, rivers, forests and plains—is destined, we believe, TO PROVE THE GREAT RESERVOIR THAT WILL GUARANTEE OIL FOR THE EMPIRE'S SHIPS AND INDUSTRIES FOR HUNDREDS OF YEARS.

Thousands of acres have been fyled upon by some of the greatest oil companies in the world, and men and equipment are being rushed into the field, and vast sums of money will be spent in exploration work during the next few months. It seems almost certain that THE BIG OIL POOLS WILL BE TAPPED THIS SUMMER and an oil field brought in that will place Canada and the Empire far in the lead.

The D'Arcy Exploration Company, a subsidiary of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, in which the British Government owns a controlling interest, is seeking a concession of 90 square miles. They offer to spend $25,000,000 in exploration work and laying pipe lines, and agree to pay the Government a royalty of one-eighth on the oil at the casing head.

The Union Oil & Gas Co., Ltd., of California, is reported to be sending in six complete drilling outfits this Summer. It is reported that this giant rival of the Standard Oil Company has fyled upon over 50,000 acres.

Six geologists from Great Britain are now on the field representing the Anglo-Dominion Oil Co. This big British company has announced that it will spend $2,500,000 in exploration work this year.

The Pioneer Company

But of all the companies now in the Peace River district, we believe that Tar Island Oil & Gas Company, Limited, has the best chance to be the first to tap the big oil pools.

This pioneer company, which takes its name from Tar Island—famous all over the North-West for its oil seepages and gas jets—secured 3,000 acres of the choicest locations of the Peace River district—and commenced drilling in 1918 on the Western bank of the Peace River, thirteen miles from Peace River Town.

They struck gas at 230 feet. This was increased 40 feet down. At 325 feet they ran into their first oil.

At 857 feet they struck a gas strata of 1,500,000 cubic feet capacity daily, that blew sand pumpings and water high over the drilling rig.

At 960 feet the Tar Island driller struck the same oil sands that had shown a yield of from 22 to 30 barrels of oil daily when tested in the McArthur wells across the river.

Even a production of this size is valuable. For, while one hears much of big gushers in Texas, it must be remembered that the average production of the Texas wells is but eighteen barrels per day.

A large number of wells could be sunk very quickly to this depth. And as all could be pumped as cheaply as one, it will be seen that the seventy feet of oil sand already struck would yield a very gratifying return to the shareholders.

But it is those big pools farther down that the Company wants to reach. The upper sands have been disregarded temporarily and drilling pushed on.

Winter came on and drilling was suspended.

When the Tar Island officials revisited their well in the Spring they found 75 to 100 barrels of oil had been blown out by the gas. Another large quantity of petroleum had to be baled out of the casing.

Drilling was resumed under the direction of W. J. Cole, a driller of years of experience in the Persian, Mexican and Pennsylvanian fields.

At 1,060 feet they struck a strata of sulphur water—declared to be one of the best indications of oil being not far below.

At 1,068 feet it was decided to stop. Thirty-nine feet beyond lay the big strata of wet gas that had brought disaster to the McArthur wells. And it was decided to put down a thirty-two pound California Diamond B X casing, a very heavy casing that would prevent any possible chance of disaster.

An Expert Driller's Opinion

Mr. Cole, the driller, was enthusiastic over the formations passed through. The strata of sulphur water, he declared, was a particularly good sign. And the formations enclosing this sulphur water were found to be a hard lime and shale that was impervious to gas. This proved that the big strata of wet gas at 1,125 feet—4,500,000 cubic feet to 5,000,000 cubic feet capacity daily—could only be an evaporation of a pool of oil below.

Mr. Cole declared that the formations were practically identical with those he had passed through in the Persian field which had invariably led to big oil. In fact, all his experience led him to expect a gusher of big proportions rather than one of medium size. He predicted big oil at around 1,500-2,000 feet.

With the drilling records of the Tar Island well and other wells in that vicinity before them experts now showed that the Tar Island well was just about at the apex of a considerable anti-cline. This location assured them the cream of the oil production of the district.

The heavier casing ordered is now about to be delivered and drilling resumed under the direction of E. B. Mott, an expert driller from Petrolia. And as the average monthly drilling in that district is around 300 feet per month, the Tar Island officials feel reasonably confident that they will strike the big oil pools of the Peace River district this Summer.

Just how large those oil pools will prove to be, no man knows. But when a driller of the experience and standing of W. J. Cole predicts big oil as a practical certainty; when a geologist such as Prof. R. D. McLearn of Saskatchewan University estimates that "there is sufficient oil in the sands of Alberta to supply the world's demands for 300 years"; when Dr. Bosworth, chief geologist of the Imperial Oil Company, estimates that there are three hundred billion barrels of oil in Alberta: then, one cannot but feel that here are possibilities of tremendous magnitude, possibilities that justify thorough investigation.

With oil of the grade already obtained netting $2.50 a barrel, a big flow of oil will mean an annual return far in excess of the Tar Island Company's total capitalization.

Transportation

There will be no difficulty in getting oil to the refineries. A pipe line will be laid from the well to Peace River Town—only thirteen miles—whence the oil will be shipped in tank cars over the Edmonton, Dunvegan & British Columbia Railroad.

Summing Up

The directors have shown outstanding energy, courage and faith to make the Company a success. Filled with an abiding faith and confidence that Peace River is going to prove the greatest oil field in the world, they and a small group of their friends have borne the entire expenses up to the present.

Additional funds are now needed to clinch the success that they feel is practically within their grasp.

Figure out how many of these shares you can take and send in your order at once. That great country in Canada's North-West is going to mean tremendous things for Canadian investors, for Canada and for the Empire.

Application will later be made to list the shares on the Standard Stock Exchange. The prospectus has been filed at the office of the Provincial Secretary of Ontario.

Rifled Letters Of Lumber Prince

Robbery of Offices of Senator Gordon Has Bearing on Timber Inquiry

SUDBURY, Ont., May 14—The Provincial police are to conduct an investigation into the robbery of the offices of Hon. Senator George Gordon at North Bay some time ago. This action was directed by Justice Riddell at yesterday's session of the timber probe, when it was brought to the attention of the commissioners by Crown Counsel Harding, and an investigation ordered after the testimony of Miss Ethel Brown, secretary to Senator Gordon, has been heard. Senator Gordon is a big lumberman and is interested in eight companies.

Miss Brown stated that on the morning of May 1st she discovered that the offices of Senator Gordon had been broken into and that letter files, returned bank cheques and other papers in the office had been tampered with but that nothing had been stolen. None of the books of the various lumber companies in which Senator Gordon is interested, were kept in the office, but other papers and documents had been littered all over the room.

The lumbering interests of Senator Gordon include: Geo. Gordon & Co., Limited; Searchmont Lumber Co. Ltd.; Strachan Lumber Co. Ltd.; A. B. Gordon & Co.; Expanse Lumber Co. and Barclay Lumber Co. Asst. Crown Counsel McEvoy told Justice Latchford that the Gordon interests were equally important in the timber probe to those of the Spanish River Lumber Company.

SALAD FOR DESSERT?

The idea of solving you dessert problem by serving instead of any dessert a rather dainty, sweet salad is not a new one, but it is a very good one. So long as you can get salad greens it is a good idea to plan some sort of sweet salad for one or two dinners a week at least, for salad is wholesome and it isn't the easiest thing in the world to plan seven sugarless desserts every week. Wafers may accompany the salad, with coffee then or following it. Here are some suggestions.

Cut up just before needed some celery sticks, one dill pickle and one or two sweet pickles, two tart apples, an orange and one banana. Spread this over the lettuce leaves, sprinkling each portion with a few broken walnut meats if you have them. Pass mayonnaise or French dressing.

Chop a cup of walnut meats and mix a cup of chopped celery and two cups of shredded lettuce leaves. Mix and arrange on a lettuce leaf and dress with whipped cream.

Arrange a slice of pineapple on lettuce leaves and place a ball of cream cheese in centre of each piece of pineapple, with slices of pimentos in star shape on top of cheese. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing.

Here is a good gelatin salad:

Two cups tomatoes, one tablespoon granulated gelatin, one bay leaf, one peppercorn, one-half teaspoon sugar, one-half sliced onion. Soak gelatin in cold water until soft. Cook tomatoes and seasoning (except salt) twenty minutes. Strain, add salt, pour over softened gelatin, stil until dissolved. Pour into moulds, which have been wet with cold water and chill. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Peeled quarters of Bartlett pears are delicious when served with cream cheese or Rocquefort cheese and dressed with French dressing.

There are hundreds of ways to combine fruit in a fruit salad. Such fruits as apples, oranges, bananas, grapes, and pears and pineapples, combine well with nuts and cheese or pimento and may be served in any combination either with French or mayonnaise dressing. The resourceful housewife is usually guided by what fruits she has on hand in making her combination. Pitted date and seeded raisins or candied cherries can be combined with the fruit. The dates are very good when served alone on fairly crisp lettuce leaves. Better to have but one crisp leaf a portion than many that are tough and soggy.

This is an apple and celery salad; Cut into bits enough celery to make one cup. Soak it in ice water. Also cut into small dice four medium-sized apples which have been previously peeled. Lay the apples in ice water for a while. Then drain both apples and celery, mix them, adding half a cup of English walnuts. Cover with mayonnaise dressing and serve on crisp lettuce leaves..

PRAY FOR GOOD WEATHER

Early Symptoms Of Bloodlessness

Shown by Pallor of the Face and Lips —How to Obtain New Blood.

Anaemia, or lack of blood is so gradual in its approach that is is often well developed before the patient is sufficiently alarmed to consult a doctor or take proper treatment to restore the blood to a healthy condition.

The earliest symptom of anaemia is loss of color, especially in the lips, gums and membranes lining the eyelids. Then comes shortness of breath on slight exertion, such as going up stairs, palpitation of the heart, increased pallor of the face and lips. If this thinning of the blood is not corrected it will proceed rapidly until a complete breakdown in health follows, when there may be disorders of the stomach, headaches and backaches, dizziness and fainting spells. The most effective and prompt way to increase and enrich the blood at a time like this is through the fair use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These pills have restored to good health thousands of weak, anaemic people, among them Miss Mae Johnston, of Port Arthur, Ont., who says: "Between the ages of sixteen and eighteen I worked in a telephone office, and it was very trying to the nerves and health. I became bloodless, and so pale that friends often said I looked consumptive. One night I had to be taken home from the office, and a doctor was called in who told me I must not go back for a time. Sometimes I would faint, and to walk upstairs would leave me utterly breathless. As I did not appear to be getting any better one of my girl friends, whose mother had used Dr. Williams Pink Pills with great benefit, advised me to try these. I took the pills very faithfully for some time, with the result that they restored me to good health, and now when anyone tells me they feel weak or rundown I always recommend Dr. Williams Pink Pills, as I feel so thankful for the help they gave me."

If you have any of the symptoms described by Miss Johnson try building up the blood with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Eat nourishing food, exercise a little in the open air daily and watch the color return to cheeks and lips. You can run no risk in giving Dr. Williams Pink Pills a trial as they can not injure the most delicate system. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AURORA CITIZEN KILLED BY TRAIN

Toronto, May 14.—Thomas Hall, aged 71, 61 Annette Street, was instantly killed when struck by the G. T. R. London "flyer" at Royce Avenue crossing about 1.45 yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hall's identification was made possible by papers found in his pocket. At the time of the accident, the police say, the crossing gates were down, and the old man must have trespassed to get in the way of the train. The engine was driven by Engineer Alex. Hay, of London, Ont. The body of the unfortunate man was removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be held. Mr. Hall came to Toronto from Aurora ten days ago, and was about to take up employment with a local coal company.

FIFTEEN YEARS FOR SHOOTING POLICEMAN

Toronto, May 14.—Sentence of fifteen years in Kingston Penitentiary was imposed by Justice Logie on Joseph Kelly, found guilty by a jury, of shooting at P. C. Dawson, who was arresting him while prisoner was burglarizing a safe in the premises of the Laidlaw Lumber Co. in February last. Five of the fifteen years are to run concurrently with the term of three years which the prisoner is serving for the burglary.

In giving evidence, P. C. Dawson told the jury that when he went to arrest Kelly he told the prisoner to throw up his hands. Instead, a bullet whizzed past his head. The prisoner was crouching down by a table in front of the counter beside Laidlaw's safe. Sergeant Finch said that Kelly had admitted firing the shot.

NITTI CABINET RESIGNS

Rome, May 13—The Ministry, of which Premier Nitti was the head has resigned.

The decision to resign came when the chamber adopted by a vote of 193 to 112 a motion by the Socialists ergarding posts and telegraphs. Signor Nitti called for a rejection of the action and demanded that the balloting be considered a vote of confidence in the ministry. The popular party voted with the Socialists.

AGED NINETY-TWO ATTENDS CONVOCATION

Kingston, May 14.—The oldest man to attend convocation exercises at Queen's University this afternoon was James M. Fair, aged ninety-two years, who resides at Glenburnie. Mr. Fair was present for the purpose of seeing his granddaughter, Miss Marjorie W. Fair, daughter of Robert H. Fair, receive her B.A. degree.

Begin Dinner With An Appetizer

The custom of beginning dinner with grapefruit or some other fruit appetizer instead of with soup was one that has spread rapidly in this country. Ten years or more ago it was somewhat of a novelty in the way of service; now it is known to almost everyone.

The idea, of course, is not a new one. It is the idea of the French cook who has long realized the value of the appetizer as the first course of luncheon or dinner, whether or not a soup was to follow. To be sure he used other appetizers—he called the course an hors d'oeuvre—but the idea was the same.

Now those of us who have known no other first course appetizer but grapefruit or possibly orange pulp served in little glass dishes may feel that we can no longer have our dinner appetizer because of the high price of these fruits. We forget that there are lots of inexpensive substitutes.

The plain, ordinary apple is a good one. Of course, it would be a mistake to serve whole apples as a first course for dinner. But if you serve a few freshly cut, thin slices of a juicy crisp apple, possibly mixed with a few small crisp slices of celery and dressed with a suspicion of peanut oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper, you will have a delicious appetizer.

Grapes also make a good appetizer. If you can get the hard grapes, cut them in half, remove the seeds and serve them in little glass dishes.

Small slices of toast spread with a very little melted cheese and then sprinkled with a dash of paprika make good cold weather appetizers, But remember that the individual portions should be no more than two inches wide by three inches long. If you have them large they cease to serve the purpose of appetizers and assume the proportions of a substantial part of the meal.

Delicious appetizers can be made from all sorts of fish. Sardines and other timed fish served possibly two on the plate with a slice of lemon have long been a choice hors d'oeuvre. Oyster cocktail is in reality an hors d'oeuvre, for it contains only three oysters and is so seasoned as to serve merely as an appetizer. But if there are only a few in your family you may not feel that it is worth while getting oysters merely for this purpose. Besides they are rather expensive this year. Not every one knows that good cocktails can be made from any cold cooked fish. It should be freed from all bone and skin, flaked fine and placed in the little appetizer dish with the same sort of dressing would use on the oysters—a little catsup, horse radish, vinegar or lemon juice, salt, cayenne and Worcester and tabasco is desired.

THIS WONDER-CHILD IS FAMOUS AT TWELVE

Six years ago, at the age of six, Lady Diana Bridgeman, eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Bradford, began drawing and scribbling verse "on odd scraps of paper at odd times to amuse herself." Today at the age of twelve, she finds herself famous—the writer and illustrator of a $2.75 book, "Poems and Paintings" which is creating quite a sensation.

Fairies and fairyland are her favorite themes, and the daintiness of these lines on "Babies" will, it is certain appeal to all mothers—and fathers, too:—

I think that the stars we see in the skies
Are babies eyes;
I think that the sparkling drops from the weirs
Are babies' tears;
I think that the sunbeams we see at whiles
Are babies' smiles;
I think that the yellow leaves which the wind whirls
Are babies' "curls"
But the wild dog-rose in its soft sweetness
Is a baby's kiss.

More will be heard of the genius of this wonder child.

BE 11½c. A POUND

Washington, May 14.—Sugar should sell for 11½ cents a pound and present prices ranging from 20 to 25 cents are due to profiteering. W. Jett Lauck, consulting economist of the railroad brotherhood, told the Railroad Labor Board. Sugar "gougers" will exact a total of $600,000,000 from the American people this year or $30 from each family in the country, according to Lauck, who is urging the board to grant railroad men increased wages.

Income tax returns for 1919 showed that beet sugar producers had earned 52.28 per cent. on their capital stock; 59.92 on capital invested, and 45.53 on their capital actually invested after all taxes were deducted, he said. Cane producers earned 27.28 per cent. on capital stock, 238.34 on capital actually invested, and 191.04 on capital after deduction of taxes, according to Lauck, who said sugar was selling for 7.7 cents a pound then. "If the producers showed such amazing earnings then," said Lauck, "what must be their earnings today with sugar hovering about 25 cents a pound?"

"Haunted" Gems in British Museum

HAUNTED gems that, like the famous Kohinoor diamond, are claim to be accompanied by an evil spirit which works a sinister influence over the lives of those into whose hands they fall and wherever they go, have just been reported as discovered in a British museum. One day an art student, who claims occult powers, saw the jewels and startled their custodian pretty considerably by stating that he saw an apparition standing by the jewels dressed in Elizabethan costume and evidently very angry.

Investigating this new mystery, a London Sun representative interviewed Ralph Shirley, the well-known occultist and editor of the Occult Review. Far from ridiculing the story of the haunted gem, Mr. Shirley professed every belief in the possibility of the accuracy of the art student's statement.

The stones in question comprise a fine collection of Elizabethan jewels, which are on exhibition in the Gold Room of the London Museum. About eight years ago they were discovered by workmen during excavations for the building of a warehouse in the vicinity of St. Paul's Cathedral. The gems were inclosed in a decayed wooden box and consisted of about 150 gold and enameled articles, including neck chains, pendants, rings, unset stones and various ornaments.

They were taken by the workmen to the house of an official of the London Museum, who kept them in his study for a fortnight, in the meantime informing the British Treasury of the discovery.

The jewels arrived about 6 o'clock one evening. About 10 o'clock, although it was a warm June night, the official and his wife and daughter experienced a sensation of cold and shivering in the room where the jewels had been placed.

Presently the art student arrived. Standing by the jewels, he claimed that he could see a person whom he described as a tall, thin man in Elizabethan costume, who looked very angry. He further declared that he heard or "sensed" the apparition say: "Those are my jewels; what right have you to them?"

Two or three years later, long after the jewels had been placed in the London Museum, there was a curious sequel. A professional medium, who knew nothing of what had happened, while visiting the official at his house, declared that he saw a man standing by the side of his daughter, who, he said, "does not like you (the girl) and might do you an injury." His description of the man tallied exactly with that seen by the art student. The daughter, it should be said, used to clean the jewelry when it was in the house.

Another surprise incident occurred shortly before the war. A woman spiritualist, when shown the jewels at the London Museum, fainted. On recovering she accounted for her illness by explaining that she had seen blood on a gold neck chain among the jewels, and that she had "sensed" that the woman who originally wore it had been murdered by somebody who wished to obtain possession of it.

Since then there have been no further strange manifestations. From a psychical point of view, it is considered that the original owner of the jewels does not object to them remaining where they are, as they are national property and not in the possession of any private individual.

"There are a great many stories of treasure guarded by spirits," said Mr. Shirley when told this story. "From an occultist's point of view the theory is that there are earthbound spirits who were so attached to certain possessions in their life that they still cling to them in the after life. There are stories of ghosts preventing people going to live in houses they tenanted in life. One may suppose that such apparitions do not realize that they are dead and that they look upon the new tenants as trespassers. In one such case I read of they called in a medium, through whom the ghost spoke, and they then cajoled the visitant to leave the house, passing out of the front door.

"Such spirits it may be supposed, are living a dream life, and in cases where ghosts have been exorcised it may be that they have been set free from the illusion that has tied them by some magnetic attraction to some particular spot."

"The theosophists' view," added Mr. Shirley, "is that these hauntings are by the lower selves of the people and do not represent the true individuals; that they are some fragment of the lower consciousness of actual representation.

The most wonderful story of all, however, is told by a British officer, a correspondent of Mr. Shirley's. It is a personal narrative of an uncanny experience that happened to this officer in one of the wildest spots in the Indian jungle. There came into his possession accidentally a dirty scrap of paper from which the officer learned that treasure of enormous value lay buried beneath a certain rock. About a week after the paper had been handed to him by the native Col. X—— came upon the site of the buried treasure, which he found well guarded by spirits.

"Colossal grey elephants massed in a ghostly way between me and the mass," he states, "and all the while there was never a sound but that thud, thud, thud, as of some heavy body falling upon soft earth. I suppose panic must have grown and that I attempted to bolt from the neighborhood. Anyway, the next thing I remember finding myself sitting upon the ground, my gun gone, and at a loss to know where I was."

Ploughing, harvesting and road work are common employment for Greek peasant women.

WILSON WAS A VICTIM

COULD NOT COPE WITH DIPLOMATS OF EUROPE.

John Maynard Keynes Gives Pen Picture of President of United States and Tells Why He Failed to Impress His Views Upon the World During the Meetings of the Peace Conference.

IN the "Economic Consequences of Peace," a book recently issued by John Maynard Keynes, there is a bold pen picture of President Wilson, and an explanation of his supposed failure to influence Clemenceau and Lloyd George. Mr. Keynes attended the conference for some time as a representative of the British Treasury, so his opportunity for informing himself was excellent. How unbiased he is will have to be judged by individual readers. It is undoubtedly true that when President Wilson left Washington for Paris he enjoyed a prestige and a moral influence without parallel.

Those who believe that as a molder of international affairs President Wilson has been a failure will probably agree with the reasons set forth by Mr. Keynes, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. The chief fault, he says, was in the President's own character. He says that the original idea of the President as a student or scholar is an erroneous one. He lacks the temperament. He lacked, too, that culture of the world that makes Mr. Balfour and M. Clemenceau exquisitely cultivated gentlemen of their class and generation. Mr. Keynes continues "What chance could such a man have against Lloyd George's unerring, almost medium-like sensibility to everyone immediately around him? To see the British Prime Minister watching the company with six or seven senses not available to ordinary men, judging character, motive and subconscious impulse, perceiving what each was thinking and even what each was going to say next, and compounding with telepathic instinct the argument or appeal best suited to the vanity, weakness or self interest of his immediate auditor was to realize that the poor President would be playing blind man's buff in that party. This deaf and blind Don Quixote was entering a cavern where the swift and glittering blade was in the hands of the adversary.

The President was by no means a business man or an ordinary party politician, and though he proved not to be the philosopher king, he certainly was a man of force, personality and importance. What then was the matter? The writer believes it is to be found in the fact that the President's temperament is theological rather than intellectual. His program for the world was so admirable in spirit that the least desire of his sympathizers was to criticize details, but it was assumed that the President, with the assistance of a large body of expert advisers, had thought out details. His colleagues were amazed to discover that he had though out nothing, that when it came to practice his ideas were extremely nebulous. Moreover, in many respects he was ill informed or wrongly informed as to European conditions. The same criticism is made with regard to Lloyd George, but whereas the British Prime Minister has a wonderfully quick and adaptable mind, the President proved very slow.

He was quite capable, to use Mr. Keynes' phrase, of digging in his toes and refusing to budge, as he did over the Fiume settlement. The trouble was that he could be manoeuvred by his opponents into such a position that there was nothing to dig his toes into until it was too late. He might have made a better figure if he had taken counsel with his numerous advisers who among them supplied the deficiencies of the President's character, but the writer says that he took little counsel. His fellow plenipotentiaries were dummies. Even Col. House, who might have been expected to know more about European affairs and about human nature than any of the others, fell into the background as time went on. Thus the President was left virtually alone to fight his battle for idealism. Had he been fighting with avowed enemies he would have made a better showing, but it is impossible to be meeting in friendly intercourse every day with men like Clemenceau and Lloyd George and keep on reminding himself that these men were the enemies of his ideas. On the contrary they were his friends. He found, however, that his specific or "open diplomacy" would not cover certain British, French and Italian relations. He was confronted with certain facts accomplished, and had to bow to the inevitable. In the case of Fiume he was driven to make an appeal to the nations over the heads of their representatives, and this proved to be a blunder.

Eventually he had to face the alternative of openly breaking off the conferences, in which case he knew he would be misrepresented as a friend of Germany, or of acquiescing in certain arrangements that surely were never dreamed of in the well known "fourteen points." He chose the latter course in the hope of saving at least the League of Nations from the wreckage of his ideals, and he had to make his choice when insulated from the great currents of public opinion which had so long been his support. Eventually he had to admit that compromises were necessary. The task then for his colleagues was to persuade him that every thing they wanted done was consistent with the principle of righteousness, and here it was that Mr. Wilson's ignorance of Europe made him an easy victim. He was able to leave Paris with the full approval of his own conscience, and must have been amazed and must continue to be amazed that his sincerity was so generally challenged after he reached home.

Difficulties In The Way Of The Counterfeiter

The way of the counterfeiter like that of the transgressor, is an unusually "hard" one. If he doesn't get caught red-handed and sent to the penitentiary, his business slumps. The "demand" for his goods, he finds has suddenly faded away, and a squirmy feeling comes to him that inquiries are circling his way. And usually it all comes of the quick, trained eye of a bank teller spotting a spurious note.

Most counterfeits of bills, as of coins, are rather clumsy affairs not so much clumsy as an average piece of printing, but as compared with the high art specimens the bank note companies turn out. It's a combination of paper, of engraving, and of printing and bank note companies are reputed to pay some engravers as high as $15,000 a year for being specialists on the eyes or other personal features that adorn the front of a bank bill. Look at a Bank of Montreal note. The eyes of the president or general manager stand out as brilliantly as ever a movie picture showed its stars.

LESS ON NOTE, THE HARDER

Old-time tellers say that, as a usual case, the less there is on the face of a bank note the more difficult it is to counterfeit it successfully. Symptoms of crude engraving or printing stand out more clearly than on what may be termed a bill with an all-over pattern. So, too, with black and green, or more, of colors, imitation is more difficult than if it were printed in the one color. Indeed, a number of counterfeits printed in one instead of two colors have rendered detection much more simple.

The color printing is done very deliberately. The bank note makers have not adopted any of those two or three color presses that do the work all in one run. There is no "rush" work; no putting on the second color before the first has dried. And very often there are several impressions even of the black color printing.

NO RUBBER STAMP

The numbering of the bills comes after the regular printing, and it is interesting to note that the law compels the bank to take over the bills from the bank note company, sign a receipt for them, and then "lend" them back to have the numbers printed on. This is done very carefully also every letter being printed in full, so that a common device of the counterfeiter in this direction, a rubber stamp, is easily detected.

The signature, bank men say, is no protection against the counterfeiter. It's the easiest part of all to duplicate in its plain, solid surface, without the delicate etching that characterizes the portraits or scroll work decorations of the main part of the bill. Especially as on so many bills a bank clerk frequently attaches her name on the left-hand side, or a stenographer in the Department at Ottawa.

A head office man who long ago graduated from the tellership, said in several bogus bills he had detected it was mainly a sort of "streak" across it that drew his attention, "as if you dipped your finger in acid and drew it across, leaving a faint mark in place of the uniformity in depth of coloring that is a characteristic of genuine bills."

To many handlers of money the paper itself is a guide. It is generally understood that one firm in the United States manufactures practically all the bank note paper used in that country or in Canada. It is a real linen paper, much after the type of the parchment of scrip; tough, and of remarkable "wear." Of late years, particularly, banks report that their bills do not wear out; they get dirty, and for that reason are destroyed. The paper is an "unbleached" linen, or rather, it goes through one bleaching that does not destroy the fibre. It is virtually illegal to sell real bank note paper, and in any case the counterfeiter is forced to content himself with the kind that "wears," tears, gets very soft, and to the trained teller's touch.

Many banks in the United States use a paper with a silk thread through it, which the counterfeiter imitates by a thin line printed across. A pin point punctures the illusion. This, however, would naturally be more or less of a secondary test.

A Bank of Montreal note was counterfeited some time ago—on poor paper. "What a bum job!" was the slighting remark of a teller who spotted it, as he turned it over for the inspection of others. Possibly the penalty that attaches to accepting a counterfeit note—making up the loss out of his own funds—constrains the average receiving teller to be careful; but generally he takes a pride in passing through the "cage" period without being taken in by a spurious note.

COUNTERFEITS REACH BANK

Not all counterfeit bills are easy to detect. Indeed the majority are easily passed on the average person. The fortunate point is that usually counterfeit money finds its way to a bank in a few hours after it has been circulated—in the ordinary course of business—and it is detected. At once a warning is sent out to the other banks and the police get busy. It is not long before its circulation is traced to a few centres, perhaps to one city, and then the net draws in closer. At the least, the public is warned and the counterfeiter finds his chance to distribute gone.

STUNG

The Englishmen who love not government control of industry in the Isle of Wight have been stung into protest by the governmental bee policy. The island has for years suffered from a disease known as the Isle of Wight bee diseases, which has been fought by the utmost cleanliness, by destroying the comb, thoroughly disinfecting the hives and giving the insects a chance to recover tone.

But along comes the Board of Agriculture with imported Italian queen bees, with the object of breeding healthy stocks. The government, according to the Beekeepers' Association, is al wrong. To cross Italian queens with Dutch proletarians is sheer humbug, and is likely to develop miserable half-breeds in which the fault of the Dutch will be in giving too little and asking too much.

The apiarists want no Italian bees at all. The English queen is said to be like the English gentleman—nothing like her in the world. To fill the country with a Dutch-Italian stock, the honeymakers say, would produce a really vicious race among the hives. Italian bees may be all right in Canada; but in the Isle of Wight?—never, oh, never.

There must be something wrong about bi-racial honey, though probably only a skilled apiarist could tell the difference between the sweetness of honey descended from sunny Italy and that which comes from the flowers that bloom on the Isle of Wight.

Grant Exemption On Improvements

Premier Drury's Bill to Relieve Burden of Taxation Passes Committee

TORONTO, May 14—Premier Drury's bill to exempt from taxation improvement, income and business, was passed by the municipal law committee of the legislature by a vote of 18 to 9.

The measure gives to municipalities the power to pass a by-law exempting from taxation for all purposes, for the first year following the passing of the bylaw from 10 to 25 per cent. of the assessed value of improvements, income and business assessment. From year to year afterward a further additiona 10 to 25 per cent, may be exempted until the whole assessed value is exempt. Thereafter, while the bylaw remains in force all taxes shall be imposed on the value of land exclusive of improvements.

The council of a municipality may levy a rate sufficient to produce the same amount of money as would be raised by the full rate allowed if the bylaw had not been passed.

At Electors' Request

A petition signed by 10 per cent of the electors of the municipality will bring the submission of a bylaw on the question. If the same number sign a petition for the repeal of the bylaw, the repeal shall be submitted to the electors. In event of a repeal carrying the exemptions will be decreased year by year in the same proportion they were granted.

Spoke for the North

A. W. Roebuck, speaking for northern Ontario interests, said the west had not gone back on taxation of land values. He mentioned New Liskeard, where a tract of land stood unused for years while the people of the town were penalized with taxation to improve its value. He declared that the progressive person who improves his property should not be penalized while the other man leaves useful ground unused.

Get After Assessors

If Toronto's assesament commissioner was doing his duty he would find $200,000,000 worth of land values unassessed." declared A. C. Thompson The assessed value of Toronto's private houses today, continued Mr. Thompson, was two and one-half times the assessed land value. A reversal of those conditions, he contended, would solve the city's housing problem. From a business standpoint he pointed out that assessed land values of Toronto's skyscrapers was $7,500,000 and of the buildings themselves $6,000,000. The assessment of the Royal Bank building land was $675,000 but that same land had been sold by the Janes estate for $1,500,000.

E. G. Long, barrister, opposed the bill, as did also Hon. Thomas Crawford and Hon. George Henry.

ONCE A WEEK

There are some things that ought to be done at least once a week in every household. The housewife should appoint herself visiting inspector to see whether these things have been attended to at least that often, whether she herself attends to them or whether she entrusts them to some other member of the family or to an employee.

First and foremost perhaps is a thorough cleaning of the refrigerator or the cupboard or shelf where fresh food is kept in winter. Don't just look at it, and if it looks all right and smells all right, let it go. Everything should be removed from the place and it should be thoroughly cleaned, aired and dried at least once a week.

Laundry baskets and bags should be completely emptied and ventilated at least once a week.

Even in cold weather your cellar should be ventilated by permitting a direct draft to sweep through it for a few minutes at least once a week. Select some dry, sunshiny day.

For the comfort of your bodies and the long life of your bedding all mattresses should be turned over and changed from end to end once a week.

At least once a week you should make a list of the main dishes that you have served at your meals during the week so that you can see whether you have been having too one-sided diet. If you find that you have had pork, for instance, for three or four dinners you should correct this error by having it not at all next week. By means of this checking up you can also see whether you are having more fried food than is good for you. Let the list show the various ways you have cooked potatoes during the week. If you will find that you are narrowing down to one or two ways, take the hint and start in with some other ways the next week.

Letters full of Praise—A Wonderful Record of Healing

Gin Pills, the greatest help in overcoming Kidney Troubles, have relieved so many thousands of people throughout Canada, that the verbal praise, from mouth to mouth, is not enough to satisfy those who have suffered and been made well by Gin Pills. They write continually to us, and here are some extracts from the letters which have reached us recently:—

Sid Castleman, a prospector in the Larder Lake District, wrote thus:—"I am writing to thank you and to tell you the good your Gin Pills did for me. I had been suffering for some time with my kidneys and urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, some days as many as thirty times, and each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night. I began to feel quite worn out. I sent my chum out to get Gin Pills (about 60 miles) for me, and in less than six hours I felt relief. In two days the pain had left me altogether. I took about half a box, and to-day feel as well as ever I did, and my kidneys are acting quite naturally."

Mrs. E. Dean, Whiting, Ind., had this to say: "When I sent for the last box of Gin Pills, I was all crippled up with rheumatism and my face was so badly swollen that I could hardly see out of my eyes. After taking six of the pills, I felt better. After a few days I had no more pain."

"I beg you to publish my letter," writes Isidore Thomas, of Tilley's Road, N.B., "so that people may know what Gin Pills did for me. Everybody expected my death. I tried Gin Pills and in a short time was well again, and soon had gained 20 pounds."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Mrs. B. Walters, Savona, B.C., says: "I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys. One box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as an absolute and reliable cure."

"I suffered untold misery," writes Lewis MacPherson, from Halifax, N.S. "My trouble was inflammation of kidneys and bladder. I finally determined to go to the hospital for treatment.

Two days before my intended departure, a neighbour called and happened to have some Gin Pills with him and insisted on my taking them. Six hours after the first dose the effects were simply miraculous. Instead of going to the hospital I sent for a box of Gin Pills, with the result that I am a well man. I recommend Gin Pills to everyone suffering from Kidney trouble."

If you have pains in the back or sides, constant headaches, stiff and swollen joints, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, dizziness, constipation or stone in the bladder, take no chances. Get Gin Pills at once. They may save you from a critical operation.

Your Druggist or Dealer sells them, 50c. a box, under money-back guarantee.

GRAY-DORT

The new Gray-Dort is a veritable treat to the eye—dignified, pleasing, modern.

The new hood with its many long, narrow louvres gives a European touch. So, too, does the smaller, smarter cowl. The gasoline tank is now in the rear. And the Rayntite top, hand-tailored in our own shops, is easily the smartest top on any light car.

Crowning all is the lasting elegance of the coach-builder's art and finish which Gray-Dort craftsmen have spent 60 years in perfecting.

But this beauty of line and finish cloaks even more desirable features.

The smooth, quiet Gray-Dort motor with its 5" stroke and 3½" bore: the heavy 40 lb. crankshaft: the channel steel frame: the heavier steering gear: the Thermoid brake lining: the improved ignition and carburetor: the Westinghouse starting and lighting systems: the heavier rear axle and cantilever springs, both Chatham-built:—the more you know about cars the more superiorities will you find in the Gray-Dort, hidden under its robe of smart beauty.

At $1465 there is nothing in the light car class to match the refined and improved Gray-Dort.

It is the dominant VALUE. See it first.

Frankfort Is Evacuated "The French Keep Their Word"

FRENCH TROOPS WITHDRAW FROM EAST BANK OF THE RHINE—GEN. DE GOUTTE POSTS SIGNIFICANT PROCLAMATION: "THE FRENCH KEEP THEIR WORD.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MAYENCE, May 17.—French troops who have been occupying Frankfort, Darmstadt and other cities on the east bank of the Rhine, evacuated those cities this morning, it is announced here. The Germans were informed of the departure through a laconic proclamation issued by General De Goutte, which read: "The French keep their word." The evacuation proceeded in an orderly way and quiet.

For Special Levy On War Wealth

British Parliamentary Committee Approves Move for Revenue Purposes

LONDON, May 17.—That a special levy for revenue purposes on wealth accumulated in Great Britain as a result of or during the war is administratively practicable is the decision of the parliamentary to consider this question.

While deciding that the levy is practicable, the committee declines to express an opinion whether it would be advisable to impose it, thus throwing the onus of the decision on the Government and Parliament.

Several plans devised by experts for effecting the levy were submitted by the committee which considers one by the Board of Inland Revenue the best. This plan estimated a yield of 500,000,000 pounds sterling.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer often has declared in favor of a levy, though he is opposed to the general desire. Public opinion is much divided on the whole question.

BEAVERBROOK'S VICTORY

The report of the select committee declaring the taxation of war fortunes practicable is a striking victory for Lord Beaverbrook, who originated the proposal over a year ago and has fought strenuously since to secure its adoption, denouncing the idea as monstrous that stay-at-homes should profit from the war, while the soldier paid with his own patriotism and danger. The scheme drawn up by the Inland Revenue would impose a duty varying from forty per cent. on war fortunes up to £25,000 rising to eighty per cent on fortunes over £500,000. The Government and Parliament will now decide whether the committee's recommendations are to be adopted or not.

FAILED TO INDUCE SPIRIT OF LOVE

Topeka, Kansas, May 15—Dr. Chas. M. Sheldon, widely known pastor and author, in an address before the Kansas Congregational Conference here today told how he had failed to induce Alexander Howat, president of the Kansas miners, to love Governor Allen.

"I asked him what he thought would be the first thing Jesus would do if he were here today," said Dr. Sheldon. He replied: "Well, I expect he first would clean up Governor Allen and the State House.'

"I asked him if he believed in Christ's teachings—all of them. He assured me he did. "Then," I said, "if that is the case, you should love Governor Allen.

Howat leaned up against the door and thought for a moment and then said like a flash: "Well, you go back to Topeka and tell Governor Allen to love me."

New Serum May Cure Tuberculosis

PARIS, May 16—The discovery by Dr. Charles Cepede, the famous French biologist, of what is claimed to be a cure for tuberculosis of the lungs, even in advanced stages, is just announced. The treatment consists of the injection of a new serum. Medical authorities have gone so far as to say: "We are not afraid to say that the white plague is conquered." The French Academy of Medicine offered aid in the research work.

Ask 80c. A Dozen For Potatoes

HAMILTON, May 16—An evidence of the scarcity of potatoes was given in a very striking manner on the market yesterday. One farmer had brought in a few six-quart baskets of spuds, but would not sell them by the basket. Instead he offered them by the dozen, and for the modest sum of 80 cents per dozen. And the strangest part of the story is that people bought them at six and two-third cents each. Other farmers who offered potatoes demanded $7.50 per bag.

MORRISON DENIES THAT HE IS DICTATOR

Toronto, May 15.—J. J. Morrison, secretary of the U.F.O., is back in the city from Chicago, and was asked what he had to say about the intimation of Reece Hall, the Liberal member for Parry Sound, that in opposing the civil servants' superannuation bill, and other measures he was setting himself up as a dictator.

"Nothing of the kind," said Mr. Morrison. "My office is the headquarters for the agricultural organizations of the province and we have as much right to use our influence for or against legislative measures as Labor or any other organization. We are supposed to have representative government and in the past we have elected men for four years and left them to do as they pleased with the result that they did not represent the people. The people are much more likely to rule, when they do as our organization is doing. The issue in this matter is not whether I am wrong or right in my views but as to whether the public has a right to a say in their own affairs. I have done nothing without the knowledge and approval of the U.F.O. executive.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

VERA CRUZ, May 17.—Mexican revolutionary troops commanded by General Sanchez and Aguilarare, are pursuing President Carranza and the troops which fled with him from the battlefield of San Marcos on Friday. Government forces numbering 3500 were captured by revolutionists following the escape of Carranza. General Liberato Torres, who was wounded in the fighting on May 13 and was brought to this city, is dead.

Ex-Soldier Killed In Irish Riot

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDONDERRY, May 17—Rioting last night between Nationalists and Unionists mobs was even fiercer than the Saturday fighting. Bottles bricks and pistols were again freely employed by combatants. Groups of men and women in the unionist quarter of Fountain street and similar groups in Sinn Fein quarter of Bridge Street, followed an exchange of party cries with stone and battle throwing. In a ditondippFW$1.mRF.Li fldClDee in addition to the killing of an ex-soldier named Doherty, three others were wounded. When hostilities broke out the police in disturbed area were withdrawn and for a few hours mob law was supreme.

BELFAST, May 17.—Londonderry experienced a night of terror on Saturday, part of the city being for hours at the mercy of riotous mobs. During the disturbances' Sergeant Dennis Moroney, Chief of the Special Criminal Department of the city, was shot through the right lung and died within half a hour. Londonderry thus gains the unenviable reputation of being the scene of the first police murder in Ulster since the opening of the assassin campaign on January 1, 1919.

The other casualties included Jas. McCafferty, aged eighteen, shot in the chest; District Inspector McDonagh, wounded in the head with a stone while leading a police charge, and John McCallion, a former soldier, wounded in the head with a bayonet.

Loyalists Retired.

After minor disturbances early in the night, the ill-feeling between the Sinn Feiners and Loyalists flamed up. About 10 o'clock the air was thick with bottles, stones and other missiles while revolvers were freely discharged. When hostilities were in full swing, 48 policemen, armed with carbines, arrived, in command of Inspector McDonagh, who persuaded the Loyalists to retire to their quarters, which was accomplished amid singing, cheering, and other manifestations on the part of the rival factions.

Fight in Railway Yard.

The Sinn Feiners continued their disorderly demonstrations, and the police charged and scattered them into the side streets. Many of them made for the quay near the Great Union Station. It was here that Moroney met his end. Rioters concealing themselves behind the railway cars directed volleys of revolver shots point-blank at the police. This led to a hot exchange of fire. Moroney was struck, walked a few yards and collapsed, exclaiming: "Boys, I'm done."

A few yards from this scene McCafferty was found lying on a tramway line. He said he was on his way from the theatre when shot.

Riots Again Today.

LONDONDERRY, May 17.—(3 p.m.) —Londonderry, after two nights of rioting, was again the scene of serious demonstrations today. The city was in a state of high tension and hundreds of men remained away from work, walking about the streets, where many individual encounters occurred between Sinn Feiners and Unionists. There was considerable stone-throwing, and at one point Sinn Feiners are reported to have fired at two Ex-Unionist soldiers, but missed them. Hundreds of soldiers with machine guns and police with rifles were ordered to patrol Bridge and Fountain streets.

SOCIETY BUDS ARE FEVER'S VICTIMS

Winnipeg, May 17—An epidemic of scarlet fever, which has broken out in the highest strata of Winnipeg society, has been traced to the Rowing Club ball, the most fashionable event of the season, held recently at the Fort Garry Hotel.

A curious feature is that practically all of the patients are debutantes.

A rumor is given credence that a young woman who had had the fever and was at the convalescent 'peeling' stage, slipped away from home and attended the affair, spreading the infection.

Strong Bolsheviki Forces Strike Back At Poles

RUSSIAN REDS STRONGLY REINFORCED ARE RETURNING TO ATTACK KEIV, TAKEN BY POLES AND UKRAINIANS—BATTLE RAGING TEN MILES FROM THE CITY.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 17.—Russian Bolshevik forces are striking back at Polish and Ukrainian troops which captured Kiev about ten days ago, according to an official statement issued in Moscow yesterday and received here by wireless. The statement said that the Soviet troops had started an advance and were engaged about ten miles northeast of Kiev.

Dr. Cleaver Given Leave Of Absence

Compelled by Illness to Quit Pulpit Three Months Earlier

Rev. Dr. Solomon Cleaver, pastor of Howard Park Methodist Church, Toronto, has been relieved, because of illness, by the official board of the Church of any further duties for three months. As three months from now Dr. Cleaver takes up his duties at Belleville, this means that his services to Howard Park Church have come to an end.

Yesterday morning Rev. T. Albert Moore, who conducted the service, read words of farewell from Dr. Cleaver, which were, in part:

'It is my very great regret that my pastorate with you has been so suddenly terminated by illness which my physicians describe as "inflammation of the spinal nerves,' caused by long-continued over-strain and state that recovery must be sought in an extended period of complete rest.

"In reveiwing our Church work for the past four years I find that some 1,250 new members have been added to our roll, of whom more than half have come to us on profession of faith in Christ. But death and removals have made such inroads upon us that we can only report a net increase of about 500. Our church register now contains slightly over 1700 names.

"That our new members are not one whit behind the older ones in zeal and loyalty to the Church is evidenced by the fact that the average annual contribution per member has decidedly increased, both for current and connexional funds. Our missionary offerings have doubled during the term, and last year's receipts through loose collections and envelopes show an increase of more than $4,000 over those of three years ago."

Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott assumes the pastorate in July. Until he does so services will be conducted by Rev. S. W. Fallis, Book Steward and Rev. Dr. A. C. Crews, Editor of Sunday school papers.

Famous French Nun Canonized

Ceremonies at Basilica, Rome, Most Gorgeous Affair in Years.

ROME, May 15.—Solemn ceremonies for the canonization of Gabriele Possenti and Marie Alacque were held in St. Peter's yesterday. Pope Benedict was carried in the chair of state to the cathedral, being surrounded by a gorgeous retinue of ecclesiastics, officials of the civil and military courts of the Vatican, members of the sacred college, archbishops, bishops, Roman nobility and general officers of religious orders. Swiss guards preceded the procession as it went from the Vatican to the scene of the ceremonies.

When the procession entered the cathedral the choir sang "Ave Maria Stella."

The Basilica was crowded with about 50,000 guests. Throngs of French pilgrims greeted the Pontiff with loud cheers, waving handkerchiefs and holding up religious objects for the apostolic blessing which the Pope benevolently imparted with his upraised hand.

Pope Benedict was seated in a throne erected in the Apse behind the high altar and preceded the canonization ceremonies by intoning a hymn. After he had pronounced the formula for canonization and inscribed the names of the new saints in the sacred roll, the Pontiff intoned a Te Deum while the bells announced the happy event.

Later Pope Benedict celebrated mass and then, with the same gorgeous procession, returned to his apartments in the Vatican.

Montreal Broker Commits Suicide

MONTREAL, May 17.—William Graham Browne, head of the firm of W. Graham Browne & Company, bond dealers, 224 St. James street, Montreal, manager of the Sovereign Bank at the time of its collapse some years ago, shot and killed himself in the wash room of the Bank of Ottawa Building. He was under arrest on a charge of theft of $50,000 from the Royal Bank of Canada and was in the charge of Detective George La Pierre, of the Thiel Service Company of Canada, Limited.

He had been arrested late in the afternoon at Coteau station and was being taken to Montreal Detective Bureau when he asked the detective to be allowed to stop at his office to see his lawyer. While waiting there he asked to be allowed to go to the wash room. The lawyer arrived and he talked for some time. The former then began to notice that Browne had been away for a long time. He went to the wash room and found his prisoner dead.

The bullet had entered through the head and had pierced the brain.

W. Graham Browne was a well-known figure in the downtown district of this city. He was a hard worker and was prominent in the succession of Victory Loan campaigns.

He was a graduate of Toronto University, and was one of the founders of the University Club of Montreal and had been since its foundation about 15 years ago its honorary secretary. He was nearly 46 years of age, having been born at Galt, Ont., May 28, 1874. In November, 1901, he married Edna Beulah Carlyle daughter of Dr. James Carlyle of Toronto and she with two sons, at present attending school, survive him.

Personal friends of Browne said that he had appeared exceedingly worried for over a week. He left for Ottawa on Thursday and stayed at the Chateau Laurier. Friday word was received at his home 357 Melville avenue Westmount, that he would be home for dinner Friday evening. Mrs. Browne and her two sons waited for him in vain.

The theft charge on which Browne was arrested is said to be in connection with bond transactions, but no definite information in this connection could be secured. The document reads:—

That between October 1, 1919, and May 1, 1920, one William Graham Browne did steal the sum of $50,000 from the Royal Bank of Canada.

In the various war loan campaigns Graham Browne worked indefatigably and earned large commissions. A search of the suicide's pockets showed that he had in his possession a small sum of money and a railway ticket from Ottawa to New York, a Pullman ticket for a lower berth.

MONTREAL'S RECORD WORST IN AMERICA

Montreal, May 15.—On Sunday, May 16, will commence Baby Welfare Week in Montreal. In the past this has been found to be one of the most successful methods of calling the public's attention to the conditions against which babies have to contend. The Baby Welfare Committee state that out of every hundred babies born in this city nineteen die during the first year of existence compared with eight in Toronto and New York. This makes the infant mortality in Montreal greater than in any other city on the continent. The causes for this high death rate are lack of care and advice for the majority of expectant Montreal mothers; inadequate treatment by careless physicians; neglect of the mother or disease of the parents, acting on the child before its birth.

Thirty Billion Dollars Bill For Reparation

GERMAN ARMY'S ORGY OF DESTRUCTION ASSESSED BY ALLIES AS WORTH THIRTY BILLION DOLLARS, WHICH SUM GERMANY WILL BE CALLED UPON TO PAY AS REPARATION FOR DAMAGE DONE IN OCCUPIED DISTRICTS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, May 17.—It is understood in official circles here that the Anglo-French conference at Hythe, which closed yesterday, decided that the sum total which Germany should pay as reparation would be fixed at approximately thirty billion dollars.

It is also understood that it was decided Germany would be permitted to issue bonds covering her indebtedness to the Allies, payable in annual instalments. Such action, it is pointed out, would enable France to discount part of her claim on Germany and permit her to settle her debts to the United States and Allies.

Expiates Crime Of Slaying Canadian

Richard Harrison Protests His Innocence to the Last Moment.

New York, May 15.—Richard Harrison and Chester Cantine were electrocuted in Sing Sing prison shortly before midnight. Harrison went to the chair for the murder of George Griffiths, a Canadian soldier, in the Knickerbocker Waiters' Club on Sept. 7, 1918. Cantine was convicted of murdering Carl Danziger, an aged Poughkeepsie grocer.

Harrison contended he was innocent to the end. Shortly before he was executed his wife and child were admitted to his cell.

Cantine was the first to go to the chair. He entered the death chamber at 11.35, and Harrison followed at 11.57. Both men had hoped for a commutation of sentence until the last minute.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to me," said Harrison just before going to the chair.

"I am innocent of this crime, gentlemen," he said. "I never killed a man. You see what they are doing to me. I hope they never do this to anybody again."

BUSINESS TAX IS AROUSING PROTEST

Ottawa, May 17— Manufacturers throughout the Dominion are telegraphing members of the government in protest against renewals of the business profits tax. The tax expired at the end of last year, but the probability has been suggested of a likely renactment of the tax, possibly in a modified form, in the coming budget.

The intention of the government in the matter, will not, of course be made known until the Minister of Finance presents his proposals to the house.

Tried To Buy 4 Ships With $10 In Bank

Gave Cheques to C. W. Morse for $340,000—Transfer to Canadian Registry

New York, May 17—With a bank account of $10 and unlimited confidence in his ability to get hundreds of thousands more, E. A. Moulton of New Rochelle, a $50 a week employee of a steamship firm, startled the congressional committee investigations of the Morse interests with the United States Shipping Board with a recital of how he negotiated with Charles W. Morse in an attempted purchase of four steamships valued at $750,000 each. The plan was to transfer the ships to Canadian registry.

Moulton said he intended to purchase the Huron, St. Paul, Binghamton and Minneapolis from the United States Steamship Company and that he gave Charles W. Morse, head of this company, personal cheques for $340,000 towards the purchase. The cheques were dated in advance. Reminded that he had previously admitted having only $10 in a New Rochelle bank, Moulton said he intended to put the money up to cover the cheques.

Moulton said the deal collapsed when the United States Government refused to transfer the ships to Canadian registry and that Mr. Morse released him from his obligations and he in turn gave Mr. Morse a release.

Moulton admitted he had attended conferences in Washington with Emergency Fleet Corporation officials, in company with other men.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

The Canadian Reconstruction Association urges observance of the following "Ten Commandments for Canadian Trade" as a means towards a safer trade situation and the development of Canadian resources:

1. Buy Canadian products. In doing so, you develop the home market, encourage factory expansion, provide employment for new populations, and create bigger and better markets for all kinds of farm produce.
2. Import only necessities, and then only if similar Canadian articles or substitutes are not available.
3. Produce to the limit in field and factory. Increased production means new wealth, and is essential to the success of any effort to reduce imports and promote export trade.
4. Co-operate, conserve, specialize, standardize. These are the means to maximum production of high quality goods at minimum cost.
5. Develop export markets. Foreign business gives stability to trade. It reduces unit costs, benefits domestic consumers, affords employment to factories and workers in times of depression, and corrects adverse exchange by improving the trade balance.
6. Utilize Canadian services. Ship by Canadian carriers through Canadian ports. Patronize Canadian railways, Canadian steamships and Canadian banks. Place insurance in Canadian companies. Employ Canadian architects, engineers, scientists, and other experts. Spend vacations in Canada.
7. Manufacture raw materials to final stages in Canada. Hundreds of millions of dollars are lost annually to the Dominion, and especially to Canadian wage earners, by the exportation of raw materials and semi-manufactured products.
8. Use science for the determination and development of natural resources. Industrial research will reveal new wealth, improve industrial processes, and help to relieve our economic dependence upon outside sources for fuel, iron and other essentials.
9. Make quality the hall-mark of Canadian products. In return for public support of the home market, Canadian manufacturers should provide products that compare favorably with imported goods, and Canadian workers should recognize good workmanship and maximum production as their standards.
10. Be fair to capital. Canadian money should be encouraged to invest at home, and foreign capital attracted to promote Canadian industrial expansion.

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. MUSIC AND DRAMA

MR. TYRONE POWER IN "THE LITTLE BROTHER"

With great anticipation Belleville theatregoers awaited the return of Mr. Tyrone Power, the eminent English actor, and his capable English company, who achieved such a tremendous success a few weeks ago, when he was seen as The Drainman, in "The Servant in the House."

There are very few such striking personalities on the English-speaking stage today as Mr. Tyrone Power who will appear at Griffin's Theatre this evening for a return visit when he will be seen as the Russian priest in Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James' great drama of love and sacrifice, "The Little Brother." Mr. Power, whose present pre-eminent position has been attained after thirty-two years of unremitting labor, and courageous fight for the high ideals, he has ever associated with the stage, is today a man in the prime of life, at the height of his powers and possessed of an experience no living actor can match. He has played well nigh a hundred differentiated parts and he has gone from success to success, but has never played a role he deemed unworthy or taken part in a performance which he believed to be unfit for the theatre-going public to see. His high ideals often meant the loss of thousands of dollars to him, but he has stuck to them and today enjoys the respect and esteem of a wider public than any contemporary actor of heroic roles.

In "The Little Brother," the influence of the conflicting forces behind the Greek Church and the Jewish is shown against a tragic background of Russian oppression of the Jews and the triumph of love between two young people of different religious beliefs. This subject also is a burning one at the present time, and finds enlightening treatment in the course of the drama.

Mr. Power will be supported by the same capable company which was seen here a few weeks ago in "The Servant in the House." "The Little Brother" will be the second-initial production which Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited will present to the Canadian people.

WHAT'S YOUR HUSBAND DOING?

Doris May and Douglas MacLean will be the attraction at Griffin's tomorrow night and Wednesday night in a screen version of the stage play, "What's Your Husband Doing?" The picture is described as a rollicking comedy about young husbands and wives and a grand mix-up at a lively road house. Miss May, has the role of Beatrice Ridley, newly married and suspicious of the notes which her husband gets every morning from "Honey suckle Inn." She consults Douglas MacLean, in the role of John Widgast a lawyer and they resolve to investigate. In the meantime the wives of Widgast and Pidgeon, his partner, have become jealous of the divorce business which their spouses find necessary to talk over with pretty co-respondents and other designing creatures. The real reason for young Ridley's letters are that he owns a share in the Inn and is trying to sell it out. On the same evening that he goes to close the deal, taking Pidgeon with him to draw up the papers, Widgast and the lawyers' wives and Beatrice also appear at the roahouse. And to cap the climax the place is raided by the police. Matters are cleared up the next morning in a police court in a most amusing fashion. "Speak Easy," a funny 2-reel Mack Sennett comedy, and the 2nd chapter of the thrilling animal serial, "The Lost City." are also being screened in addition to the above feature offering.

BORDER JUSTICE IN LEWIS STONE STORY

"The deceased showed poor judgment in pulling his gun and lost on the draw." This verdict of a backwoods country sheriff in "Man's Desire," starring Lewis S. Stone which is being shown at the Palace to-night to Wednesday, matinee daily, is a sample of "Border Justice" meted out by red-blooded men in primitive civilization. Tom Denton beat "Bull" Larkin on the draw and these rough lumbermen knew "Bull" had it coming to him. Harold Lloyd is appearing on the same program in a new comedy, "Watch Your Money," other worth while varied plays are also being shown on the same program.

Called by Death

WM. H. GORDANIER

On Saturday afternoon Mr. William H. Gordanier, passed away at the residence of his son, Mr. Arthur Gordanier, 82 Moira street west. Deceased was a victim of pneumonia. He was 84 years of age and for many years was engaged in the farming business, Thurlow Township. For the past seven years he had resided in Belleville. Mr. Gordanier was a member of Holloway Street Methodist church, and was a gentleman who was much respected by all who knew him. Five years ago his wife predeceased him. One son, Arthur, and two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Bailey and Mrs. J. G. Shaw all of this city survive.

He had been in failing health for the past two months and a few days ago was taken ill with pneumonia. Although he was far beyond the three score years and ten mark, he did not appear aged. He was very active, always busily engaged; did not carry a cane and could read the finest print without glasses. In his young days he was united in marriage to Miss Lucrela Brintnell and they start-Miss Lucretia Brintnell and they start in Thurlow when the sickle, cradle and hand rake were popular implements to work with. Real Biting Poverty In Parsonage Homes

Rev. R. J. D. Simpson Asks Methodists to be Fair to Pastors

"Does the church know, and knowing, does she care, that scores of the families at present occupying our parsonages in spite of most rigidly practised economy, are driven almost to desperation because of failure "to make ends meet?"

That is the challenge that Rev. R. J. D. Simpson, secretary of the Superannuation Department of the Methodist Church, gives to the church as a whole on the issue of ministerial salaries just a month before the various conferences are due to meet.

He puts it up to the Canadian Methodists in vigorous language to deal generously this year with their clergy.

"The church does not know, because these men are too proud and too heroic to voice any complaint; but is it not high time that someone should lift up the voice of protest against conditions which are little short of tragic, and which today are wholly unnecessary? These are the men, the ministers in the active work, who actually "put over" the recent campaign in the various churches throughout our entire connexion. Does this great communion, which in one week subscribed nearly $5,000,000 and which could easily have doubled that amount know of real, biting, cruel poverty in my home and in scores of other parsonage homes at the present time? No, if I may answer for the whole church, she does not know, for thank God there has been no complaining."

But it may be that someone will say—let us have concrete facts rather than vague generalities. Well, here they are. Let us take Toronto Conference as a field for our investigations.

In the three Toronto districts—

Three churches decreased their pastors' salaries during the past five years.

Twelve churches have neither increased nor decreased their pastors salaries during that period.

Six churches reported increases ranging from 1 per cent. to 10 per cent.

Thirteen churches reported increases ranging from 10 per cent to 20 per cent.

Five churches reported increases ranging from 20 per cent. to 30 per cent.

Three churches reported increases ranging from 30 per cent. to 40 per cent.

Four churches reported increases ranging from 40 per cent. to 50 per cent.

Two churches reported increases ranging from 50 per cent. to 60 per cent.

Chicago Women Training Down

Fat persons all over the United States are watching with great interest the sixty-day experiment in reducing weight which is being conducted at Chicago under the supervision of Dr. John Hill Robertson, City Health Commissioner. Inquiries already received here suggest the probability that if the Chicago experiment is successful it may be tried in other communities.

Success reported in the first week when the average weight of the 21 women composing the first class was reduced by 3.9 pounds has prompted the organization of other classes in this city and altogether more than 200 persons here are trying to see how rapidly they can regain their youthful figures.

The leaders of the fat elimination contest here aver that the experiment can be tried by anyone suffering from a surplus of averdupois. Reasonable exercise and a strictly controlled diet constitute two of the chief features of the Chicago experiment.

Anti-Fat Diet.

The daily menus of the reducing class are prepared by Miss Ruth Wilbar, of the Health Commissioner's training school for nurses, who believes this supervision of diet to be essential to success. Those ambitious to become slim are permitted to have lean meat but once a day and potatoes are forbidden. If one is hungry between meals Miss Wilbar suggests that a glass of water will satisfy that "empty feeling."

Here is a typical menu prepared by Miss Wilbar for one day:

BREAKFAST—One medium apple, one egg, one slice of toast, one cup of coffee with one and a half tablespoons of skimmed milk instead of cream.

10.30 a.m.—One-half cup of bouillon with one cracker.

LUNCHEON—Medium serving of lean cold roast beef; two thin slices of rye bread; lettuce and cottage cheese salad; two and one-half tablespoonsful of French dressing; tea with lemon; one cracker.

DINNER—Large serving of boiled cod with lemon; large serving of plain cauliflower; one scant teaspoon of butter; lettuce salad or celery; one-half an orange; black coffee.

10.30 p.m.—One-half cup hot skim milk.

Each of the women is expected to work an hour a day in her garden—if she has a garden—otherwise to take long walks and setting up exercises.

Daily the women report by telephone and receive instructions, including a diet for the following day. On Thursday of each week they report at the city hall and are weighed, and the week's loss—or gain—recorded on their charts.

200-Pound Class.

The 21 women in the first class averaged in weight at the start of the experiment, 201.66 pounds, 65.83 lbs. more than their average normal weight, and Dr. Robertson says he expects to take approximately 40 of those pounds from each woman.

The leader of the class is Mrs. Nellie Leonard, age 32, a typist, who tipped the scales at 223 pounds, but lost eight pounds in the first seven days. Dr. Robertson figured her normal weight at 141 pounds.

Miss Catherine Scott, aged 28, also a typist, is the "baby of the class." She weighed in at 166¼ and her normal weight was calculated at 121. Miss Scott stands just a half-inch above five feet.

The anti-fat crusade is a serious venture, Dr. Robertson says, aimed to point the dangers and discomforts of excess weight and show the ease with which it can be eliminated.

SAYS U. S. TROOPS WENT FASTER THAN BRITISH

Washington, May 15—Secretary Daniels declared that Admiral Sims' charge that the Navy Department prolonged the war four months and was responsible for the loss of 500,000 lives 'sounded like Baron Munchausen' and is in 'reckless disregard' of the facts.

Continuing his statement before the Senate Naval Investigating Committee, Daniels said troops transportation up to the summer of 1918 depended on allocation of tonnage from the allies, and was limited by port and transportation facilities in France. He declared further that America exceeded Great Britain in rapidity of troops movement, although American troops had to cross 3,000 miles of water.

Mr. Daniels said Admiral Sims' "fallacious and baseless" charges had been fully refutted by the Admiral's own testimony. There never was a time, he said, when tonnage was not available to carry troops and supplies to France as fast as they could be landed and transported to the front.

President Wilson was consulted by Secretary Daniels before the latter made public the President's secret cablegrams and confidential speeches, delivered during the war, in which he sharply criticized the British naval policy it was announced today at the White House.

KENTUCKY WOMEN WILL HAVE THE VOTE

Women of Kentucky have been assured of the right to vote for presidential electors in the coming presidential election, independent of the ratification of the federal suffrage amendment of the requisite number of States.

This opinion was given George C. Speer, State Banking Commissioner, by Attorney General Charles I. Dawson, who holds that an act of the Kentucky legislature passed this year, to provide for woman suffrage in the presidential elections is valid and that under its provisions women may participate in the presidential election.

The attorney general said he could find nothing in the bill which would conflict with the constitution of the State of Kentucky or of the United States.

MASS PRODUCTION OF MOTOR CARS

LONDON, May 15—A big experiment in mass production of motor cars will shortly be attempted in England by the General Motors Corporation. Negotiations now being conducted by them with a view of securing, in this country, a site for extensive new works from which it is proposed to turn out an enormous number of cars on the same system as in the corporation's factories in America. Two well-known men in British commercial circles are interested in the project. Sir Harry McGowan, chairman of Explosives Trades, Ltd., and managing director of Nobels Company, who just completed the purchase of £5,000,000 worth of the corporation's stock, and Arthur Chamberlain, chairman of Kynochs, Ltd., and nephew of the Chancellor of the Exchequer who have both been made directors of the General Motors Corporation. It is understood the price paid by McGowan for the stock of General Motors Corporation works out at about £46 per share.

ANOTHER WIN FOR QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

On Friday evening, Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra Schools clashed on the latter's grounds in a battle, fast and furious for the top-rung in the Public school Baseball League. When the dust and smoke had lifted, Queen Alexandra emerged smiling and victorious with the long end of 12 to 10 score. After the second innings the issue was never in doubt, Ann Street easily leading to the finish and not having to bat their hair of the ninth. Dennis, for Queen Victoria, did excellent work with the willow, being responsible for half of his team's score. The outstanding feature of the game was the 'star' pitching of "Chuck" Jeffrey. He had Queen Victoria eating out of his hand striking out 13 and only issuing three passes.

The teams now stand:

	Won.	Lost
Queen Alexandra	3	1
Queen Victoria	2	2
Queen Mary	2	2
St. Michaels	1	3

Y. M. C. A. LEAGUE

At the Pine Street school grounds tonight the curtain will be lifted on the Y. M. C. A. Junior City League when the Red Sox, last year's champions will clash with the Y. M. C.A. team Last year's champions, the Sox are in fine fettle and expect to pull off a win. The Y. team, though, expect to do the same thing, so a battle is promised the fans who attend. These junior teams play very fast ball and it is a treat to watch them. Marakas and Fred Myles will be the battery for the Sox while Yeomans and Kerr will do the battery work for the Y. team. Marakas is a fair pitcher, his weakness being lack of control, which he bids fair to overcome this year, while Yeomans is an untried quality, this being his first year in junior baseball. Fred Myles who will do the backstopping for Marakas has no peer as a catcher and is in the bargain a good hitter. Kerr, the Y. team's catcher was with the Leaf's last year and is second only to Myles as a catcher. The Red Sox will probably line up as follows:

Catcher, Fred Myles; Pitcher, Marakas; 1st. Base, Dennis; 2nd Base, Cretney; 3rd Base, Bob Myles; S. S., B. Joss; C. Field, H. Moxam; R. Field, A. Wardhaugh; L. Field, Latchford; Spares, Rushlow and Watts.

The Y. Team:

Kerr, catcher; Yeomans, pitcher; Harnes, 1st base; Fowlie, 2nd base; Allen, S. S.; Deacon, 3rd base; Bongard, Lee and Anderson, fields; Jeffries, spare.

G. T. R. 21—ELLIOTT 9

Elliott Woodworking Company were defeated in the opening game of the Industrial League Saturday by the G.T.R. Shops. The weather was too cold for good baseball, a football game would have been more appropriate. It seems that the Pitchers could not get warmed up for their job, with the result that the ball was hit to all corners of the lot, the G.T.R. rolling up the score of 21 runs and the Woodworking Company securing nine.

OPENING FOR TEAM

The Belleville Hardware Company who were going to enter a team in the Industrial League have decided to drop the idea altogether so this leaves an opening for some other industry to enter a team. Point Ann may enter a team but they are still to be heard from. We need four teams in this League to make it interesting and surely there is another industry within the city limits who can enter a ball team in this League. Let us hear from you in the near future as we have to get a team to play the Marsh Engineering Plant on Saturday. Any one desiring information regarding Industrial Baseball kindly communicate with the League Secretary, A. Buchanan at the Y.M.C.A.

SINN FEINERS ARE "ON THE RUN"

Scores of men in Dublin, Ireland, are "on the run" which in the parlance of the land, means that the police or military hold warrants for their arrest, yet they go about the streets unmolested by policemen.

Sinn Feiners, and incidentally few men will admit they are members of that organization, say that the police are afraid to arrest one of their members on the streets because a crowd collects, often shots are fired and usually the prisoner is rescued. It is at night and at home that they are in danger of arrest. The police do not admit they are afraid to make an arrest in public but say they dislike to create a scene where many people may gather quickly.

One of the "runners" confided some of his troubles to Dublin newspaper man. He is 38 years of age, has a wife and children and has served several terms as a political prisoner. He said: "My wife and the kiddies are getting rather tired of the suspense of not knowing whether I am coming home or going to jail. I have four places where I sleep. It is only at frequent and irregular intervals that I go home and then never to sleep in a bed. I roll up in a blanket on a couch or floor partly dressed. If they come for me, which they have several times, I get out of the house and they find no evidences that I have been there. I do not have to lay out along a hedge or hide behind a tree as long as I might if they knew I had been there and instigated a thorough search.

"This is only an outline of the sort of life many of us are leading these days. We all follow about the same system in which much is left to chances but it really has kept many of us out of jail for intervals at least."

This informant said nothing would suit him but an Irish Republic and he would fight for it as long as he lived.

BROTHER AND SISTER WED IN IGNORANCE

Milwaukee, Wis., May 17.—The strange marriage of Edna Coiper to her own brother Richard, and the birth of two children to them was revealed here when Judge Halsey ordered an annulment.

Edna and her brother had been separated since infants. They were both wards of the State. They became acquainted when Richard, under the name of Arthur Lehman, came from Omaha to Milwaukee and boarded at the house where Edna stayed. They were married August 17, 1917, at Waukegan, Ill., not knowing they were related.

Discovery that they were brother and sister was made recently when State authorities completed an investigation of the marriage made because Edna was under State care as an orphan. Richard was sentenced to serve seven years in the State penitentiary under a State law. Edna was released on probation.

Edna later attempted to gain the freedom of her brother-husband by filing affidavit claiming she was the only child of an aged couple. She was sentenced to the county jail for violation of her probation.

The children are now at the home for dependent children. They are well and normal, officials say.

WOMEN DECIDED NOT TO STORM PARLIAMENT

The British Parliament was spared a demonstration by delegates to the World's Convention of Temperance Workers recently held in London only because one of the London members warned the women that such action would be illegal. The proposal was made by Mrs. Lee Cowie, of New Zealand, who aroused the enthusiasm of the delegates by telling them that New Zealand women had been successful in a temperance demonstration. She said that when the New Zealand government was too busy with the war to attend to temperance legislation, the temperance workers there organized the "silent march" in Wellington which so impressed legislators that the temperance bill was passed by the House of Parliament by a small majority. She said, however, that the bill would have to be adopted by three-fifths of the House before it became a law in New Zealand.

"Why don't you women march on Parliament from this convention" she urged. "You don't want hatchets and hammers. If you don't get into Parliament; the very fact that you march to the House to pray may show that you are in earnest and at any rate thy might give Wales her bill."

This suggestion was received with much enthusiasm, until Lady Carlisle pointed out that it would be illegal, and that the convention would have to arrange a delegation and not a demonstration to go before the House. It was decided to send the delegation.

Miss Agnes Slack, summarizing the progress of the temperance movement said that Finland and Iceland have obtained prohibition and that in Denmark the work was nearing completion. Nothing had been heard of the temperance movement in Russia and Bulgaria for three years.

"In China," she said, "the work is overwhelming because the liquor traders from the United States and Canada are trying to make a centre for the sale of their liquor there."

ROMANCE COMES TO BLIND JOURNALIST

DETROIT, May 15—Annesley Burrowes, a well known blind author and former newspaperman, who made his home in Windsor for many years, was married in Detroit yesterday to Mrs. Grace Root, a young Highland Park widow, who for months has been coming to St. Luke's hospital to read to the blind journalist.

The wedding took place at the home of Mr. Borrowes' sister, Miss Katherine Burrowes, 246 Highland avenue, Rev. Dr. McDonald, pastor of Highland Park Presbyterian Church, officiating. The honeymoon will be spent in a tent near Birmingham ten miles beyond the city limits.

Mr. Burrowes formerly resided in Kingston, and has many friends here who will extend their warmest congratulations.

Western Tree Planting.

Winnipeg, May 15—It is hoped to get tree planting actually under way in the prairie provinces by organizing each small community this summer, and there will be close co-operation with the Dominion Government's tree planting nursery at Indian Head, Robson Black, executive secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association, stated on a recent visit to this city. With the idea of demonstrating to the farmers the advantage derived from planting shelter belts of trees, so named because they shelter the early grain from the hurricane winds which blow across the prairies, the Canadian Forestry Association will send a "tree planting demonstration car" through Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Instructive talks and motion picture displays of tree planting will be given.

Grasshopper Danger

Regina, Sask., May 15. Encouraging news concerning the grasshopper pests has been received, which indicates that with careful watching the danger may be overcome. Egg-tests conducted at Carnduff show that after being kept in a warm temperature for over two weeks no vitality was apparent and the belief is expressed that the cold and wet weather following the first warm spell in March has killed the eggs.

Astonished Indians.

Winnipeg, May 15.—The Indians, who were brought to Winnipeg from the far north to participate in the Hudson Bay anniversary pageant, some of whom had never been in a large city before, when asked what they thought was the most wonderful thing witnessed here declared it to be the bicycle. The reason for this, it is said, is because he can see, the working of the bicycle, whereas he fails to understand in the slightest the wonderful mechanism of the locomotive engine, the airplane, the automobile or the immense structures of the city. The bicycle with its simple mechanism appeals to the Indian's mind and interests him much more than the more complicated machinery of modern civilization.

CHEAPER MOTOR FUEL.

With the steady rise in price and growing scarcity of gasolene hopes are centred upon industrial alcohol as a motor engine fuel, and Canada will become a great manufacturing centre of industrial alcohol, and the many articles of which it is a base, if the Dominion Government passes the act which will be presented at this session to remove the restrictions which at present limit the output and increase the price of this commodity. Canadian distilleries practically put out of business by prohibition can be turned into thriving industries by governmental encouragement of industrial alcohol manufacture, and many auxiliary factories will be made possible by a plentiful supply of industrial alcohol at a reasonable price.

Many New Factories.

It is estimated that over one hundred and fifty different articles of manufacture depend upon industrial alcohol as a base, a fact which reveals great possibilities for the expansion of industry in Canada with the establishment of many new factories when the business has been placed upon an equal footing with England, the United States and Germany, where restrictions have long since been removed. As a fuel for motor engines alone the manufacture of industrial alcohol has immense possibilities, with the demand for gasolene increasing all the time, the supply decreasing and the price advancing.

Great Benefit to Farmer.

There is no limit to the supply of raw material for industrial alcohol and the farming communities will benefit by having a market close at hand for farm produce of various kinds, and the assurance that surplus produce which might otherwise be a loss can be disposed of profitably to manufacturers of industrial alcohol.

WHEN DO WE WEAR OUR SUNDAY BEST?

In one resect—if in no other—city folk are showing a wiser tendency than country folk—and that is in the matter of Sunday clothes. The custom still prevails throughout most rural sections, and, to a certain extent, among city folk, too, of making a very elaborate Sunday toilet, and donning raiment for morning service that would be considered too elaborate for ordinary street wear. But there is a growing tendency among well-bred persons to do away with elaborate church attire and to feel that the most appropriate church clothes are precisely those that one would use for street wear on other days. An elaborately plumed hat, kept in the band box six days in the week has no place in a crowded church—it actually distracts the attention of your neighbors in the congregation and blocks their vision. Similarly, elaborate silk frocks, topped with velvet coats are less suitable than simple street suits with immaculate accessories. It is not considered in the best of taste to wear showy bunches of flowers in church even when going thither with the young admirer who presented them to you.

One very good reason why well-bred persons should give up the habit of wearing their finery in church is because it is often this very finery that keeps less prosperous persons away from church—Sometimes fond mothers deck their children out as if they were going to dancing school when going to church—with creaking patent leather shoes, gay hair ribbons, overtrimmed hats, dresses in which they feel completely uncomfortable and usually vastly superior to other children in the congregation. In far better taste are the children whose only mark of clothes distinction on Sunday is that they are immaculately clean and neat.

In certain localities men feel constrained to wear frock coats and top hats to church although they would not think of wearing such a get-up on any other day of the week. In fact, some persons look upon a black frock coat as really suitable for nothing except Sunday service, weddings and possibly funerals, whereas it is nothing but the conventional afternoon suit for men—very much less worn, even in England, now that formerly.

To be sure men who are to act as ushers at an 11 o'clock service usually do wear the frock-coat get up, but there is not the slightest reason in the world why an ordinary business suit should not be worn to service.

May we say—with due apologies to country folk, who are for the most part even better bred in many of the things that count than their neighbors in the city—that the habit of regarding Sunday service as a sort of social gathering, a place to display your own fine clothes and to observe your neighbors, is nowadays a bit countrified or provincial. In a certain very celebrated church in this country—where, it is said, more prominent weddings have taken place within the last ten years than in any other church in the country and where the pew holders are all persons of position, and conspicuous rank if not wealth—you would be very much struck by the absence of costly and elaborate dressing at the large morning service on Sunday. As you, a stranger, are shown a seat in the church, you may be sitting behind an ambassador's wife, but you see a woman dressed as inconspicuously as yourself, perhaps more so. Of plumed and feathered hats you see but few and in that church any ostentation of jewelry or orchids and [illegible] would be regarded as in strikingly bad taste.—Buffalo Express.

The first community service of the Belleville Rotary Club will be devoted to assisting the Salvation Army Self-Denial fund, a very worthy object. The Army is doing a splendid work in Belleville as it is all over the world, and is a strong influence for good in the community, and the modest objective should be largely oversubscribed.

Is it possible that the local housing project is as far up in the air as the Bay Bridge purchase scheme—still in the conversational stage? It was generally supposed that the City Council had decided to issue bonds for $250,000 to build workingmen's houses and that the Government had been asked to guarantee these bonds. What's the answer?

Late comers at theatres are unnecessary nuisances, but the early risers are even worse. The latter class get a species of St. Vitus' dance when the last scene is being produced and proceed to do a shimmy dance into their wraps, and regardless of the feelings of those sitting behind stand up and obscure the view of the stage and make enough noise to drown out the dialogue of the actors. The worst trials of life are the unnecessary ones caused by thoughtlessness and ignorance.

Must Practice Thrift

St. John Telegraph

Canadians are warned that millions of dollars' worth of luxuries were imported into Canada last year contrary to the advice given many times after the end of the war. It is this importation which must be curtailed if serious results are not to follow. As Sir Edmund Walker says, the people of Canada should practice thrift in its highest sense during the reconstruction period.

SO DO WE ALL

Cleveland Plain Dealer

I'm weary of the well-worn way
Between my office and my home;
I have to tread it twice a day—
At gleaming morn, at glimmering gloam;
I'm resolutely fond of work,
And of my home I'm even fonder;
It's just these narrow tracks that irk,
I want to wander!

This morning, I would step aside
And follow footpaths faint and far
That lead along a track untried
To nowhere in particular;
There's somewhere else, and over there
And down the pike and 'way out yonder—
All very pleasant places, where
I want to wander.

Perhaps it is the spring that calls,
Perhaps it's only laziness;
Through all the land a chill rain falls,
And makes the roads an awful mess.
I dare not leave the beaten track,
Yet, though I'm certain when I ponder
That if I went I'd hurry back,
I want to wander!

Big Gusher Predicted

For Tar Island Oil and Gas Co., Limited in Peace River Oil Fields

Old Experienced Driller Enthusiastic Over Tar Island Well

The Tar Island Company were especially fortunate last year in obtaining the services of W. J. Cole, an old experienced driller who had spent years in the world famous Persian, Mexican and Pennsylvanian oil fields.

Mr. Cole made the significant discovery that the formations met with in the Tar Island Company's well were practically identical with those that had always led up to gushers of 1,000 to 10,000 barrels a day in the Persian field.

All his experience, he said, led him to expect a gusher of large proportions rather than one of medium size. And he predicted that this big strike will be made between the 1500-2000 feet levels.

The Tar Island Company's well is now down 1085 feet. Drilling will be resumed just as soon as the Company can get delivery of the heavier casing needed for the penetration of a huge gas strata thirty-nine feet below. Once this gas has been passed through, it will be but a few weeks before the big gusher should be unloosed that Mr. Cole so confidently predicted will be found at the 1500-2000 feet levels.

Billions of Barrels of Oil

Doctor G. M. Dawson, eminent Dominion Government geologist, declared that the oil in Canada's Northwest was practically inexhaustible.

Prof. McLearn of Saskatchewan University says that the sands of Alberta hold enough oil to last the entire world three hundred years.

....Dr. Bosworth, chief geologist of the Imperial Oil Company, estimates there are three hundred billion barrels of oil in Canada's northwest.

All over this wonderful country in Northern Alberta are oil seepages and tar sands that show a tremendous upwelling of petroleum to the surface.

With the opening of Spring some of the biggest companies in the world are sending men and equipment into the field. The Anglo-Persian Company, the Shell Transport Company, the Union Oil & Gas Co. of California, the Anglo-Dominion Company are preparing to spend vast sums in exploration work.

A Great Opportunity

Here, then, is a field that drillers, geologists and great corporations believe will become one of the greatest oil fields in the world.

Tens of thousands of people in the United States have made fortunes out of the oil fields of Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana; Pennsylvania. They made it because they had faith in their country.

Canadians now have that same opportunity.

We have in Northern Alberta a land of tremendous promise—a land that geologists declare will eclipse anything to the South. Those Canadians who have the faith and courage to buy now will reap the same reward that went to the pioneers in the United States fields. Will you be one of them?

Buy Tar Island Shares Now

WE NOW OFFER THE UNSOLD BALANCE OF 500,000 SHARES OF TREASURY STOCK AT 50 CENTS A SHARE.

....Every Canadian should have a stake—however small—in that great land of promise in Northern Alberta. Grasp your opportunity now, for everything points to the big strike of oil being made within a very few weeks. When the gusher is tapped, the shares will be many times their present value.

The Directors have backed up their faith with over $50,000 up to the present; the Shell Transport Company, Anglo-Dominion Company, Anglo-Persian Company have publicly announced that they are prepared to back up their faith in the Peace River country for millions of dollars. Do you not feel, then, that here is a speculation worth going into? A speculation—yes—but what tremendous possibilities!

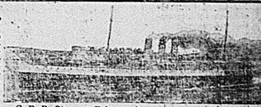
A STEAMER TRIP TO VICTORIA, B.C.

The Empress Hotel, Victoria, B.C.

Half way from Vancouver, on the seventy-mile trip to Victoria, a warning whistle sounds just before the steamer enters Plumber's Pass, a narrow gap between two islands which like a chain, fringe our Pacific seaboard. It is from here onwards that one sees the real beauties of the Coastal Belt of British Columbia, scenery of which one never tires. Here and there, on the chain of islands, the vivid green of alders or a pretty and prosperous farm peeps out from the sombre forest of firs. The giant Mount Baker, whose snow-clad cone stands a landmark for 50 miles or more, now on our port beam shines in the glittering sunlight above the rest of the cascades, and we see it all the way as it recedes far distant in the steamer's wake. To our south and east where the land and sea seem to meet is the faint outline of the entrance of Puget Sound on whose shores stand Seattle and half a dozen American towns. To our south and west, some twenty miles away, are the foothills of the mighty Olympics, whose glistening white peaks tower high above the skyline.

The Straits, which still bear the name of Juan de Fuca, are full of traffic. Side by side we pass, and dip our flag too, in passing, another of the Canadian Pacific Railway's palatial steamers—a tiny tug, towing a big boom of whole trees, swings into a little cove to shelter for the night. Another tug flying the Stars and Stripes, with half a dozen scows behind on its way from Tacoma to Sewards Bay, tells of big things up North where the building of a railway to the Behring Straits is in progress. We have left the mosquito fishing fleet at the Fraser's mouth, but every here and there are groups of gasoline launches trolling for salmon. On our starboard side, back from the hundred and one little islands, shows up the shore line of the Saanich peninsula and the small town of Sidney. On and on past rocks and islets and the same wonderful scenery.



C. P. R. Steamer Princess Charlotte.

As the steamer rounds the fruit farms of Gordon Head, and clears the point that separates Cordova and Cadboro' Bays, a natural park of irregular but perfectly spaced oaks, forms the feature of the Island landscape. Oak Bay, Shoal, Foul Bay, Ross Bay, the last resting place of the "old timers," are passed in turn. Each with its own charm, delightful homes in white and red, in light and tan, and a variety of other hues, stand out from the remnant of the forest gardens, many a blaze of brilliance, green lawns grit with flowering shrubs, and, in the background, stately mansions, seemingly fairy palaces, steeped in a maze of marvellous loveliness, recall the memory of a picture sprung from the brain of some old master. Such is one's first impression of the "City of Homes," the "City of Clear Skies," the city that knows no winter and whose summers are cooler than our own.

The point that forms the entrance of the outer harbours is passed, and the charm gains, and grows. The stately Parliament Buildings in grey stone, their broken lines to give them grandeur, their twenty turquoise tinted copper cupolas, their great dome crowned by Vancouver's statue, and the bold Norman entrance-arch above the façade of steps, have a fitting setting in a front of grass and flowers, and in the glorious background of the snows of the distant Olympics.

Victoria, the Queen City, and such part of Vancouver Island where the mountains shelter the land from the Pacific gales has the ideal climate of the temperate zone, the winters of New Orleans, the summers of Labrador. The rain fall is 25 inches, the summer with the exception of a little rain in June are invariably dry, there are no high winds and no thunderstorms. It is the nearest approach to paradise on earth.

Every Canadian owes it to himself, some time or other, to make himself acquainted with Victoria, the capital of the Province of British Columbia, as well as the ideal surroundings of the East Coast of Vancouver Island.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

PART IV—CHAPTER VII

Maybold stood still upon the bridge holding the card as it had been put into his hand, and Dick's footsteps died away. The vicar's first voluntary action was to read the card:

DEWY AND SON
Tranters and Haulers,
Mellstock.

N.B.—Furniture, Coals, Potatoes, Live and Dead Stock removed to any distance on the Shortest Notice.

Mr. Maybold leaned over the parapet of the bridge and looked into the river. He saw—without heeding—how the water came rapidly from beneath the arches, glided down a little steep, then spread itself over a pool in which dace, trout, and minnows sported at ease among the long green locks of weed that lay heaving and sinking with their roots toward the current. At the end of ten minutes spent leaning thus, he stood erect drew the letter from his pocket, tore it deliberately into such minute fragments that scarcely two syllables remained in juxtaposition and sent the whole handful of shreds fluttering into the water. Here he watched them eddy, dart, and turn, as they were carried downward toward the ocean and gradually disappeared from his view. Finally he moved off, and pursued his way at a rapid pace toward Mellstock Vicarage.

Nerving himself by a long and intense effort, he sat down in his study and wrote as follows:

"Dear Miss Day—The meaning of your words, 'the temptation is too strong,' of your sadness and your tears has been brought home to me by an accident. I know today what I did not know yesterday—that you are not a free woman.

"Why did you not tell me—why didn't you? Did you suppose I knew? No. Had I known, my conduct in coming to you as I did would have been reprehensible.

"But I don't chide! perhaps no blame attaches to you—I can't tell. Fancy, though my opinion of you is assailed and disturbed in a way which can not be expressed, I love you still, and my word to you holds good yet. But will you, in justice to an honest man who relies upon your word to him consider whether, under the circumstances you can honorably forsake him? 'Yours sincerely

"Arthur Maybold."

He rang the bell. "Tell Charles to take these copy-books and this note to the school at once."

The maid took the parcel and the letter and in a few minutes a boy was seen to leave the vicarage gate with the one under his arm and the other in his hand. The vicar sat with his hand to his brow watching the lad as he climbed the hill and the little field that intervened between that spot and the school.

Here he was met by another boy and after a salutation and pugilistic frisk had passed between the two the second boy came on his way to the vicarage and the other vanished out of sight.

The boy came to the door and a note for Mr. Maybold was brought in.

He knew the writing. Opening the envelope with an unsteady hand, he read the subjoined words:

"Dear Mr. Maybold—I have been thinking seriously and sadly through the whole of the night of the question you put to me last evening and of my answer. That answer, as an honest woman, I had no right to give..

"It is my nature—perhaps all women's—to love refinement of mind and manners; but even more than this, to be ever fascinated with the idea of surroundings more elegant and luxurious than those which have been customary. And you praised me, and praise is life to me. It was alone my sensations at these things which prompted my reply. Ambition and vanity they would be called; perhaps they are so.

"After this explanation, I hope you will generously allow me to withdraw the answer I too hastily gave.

"And one more request. To keep the meeting of last night and all that passed between us there, forever a secret. Were it to become known, it would forever blight the happiness of a trusting and generous man, whom I love still, and shall love always.

Yours sincerely,

"Fancy Day."

The last written communication that ever passed from the vicar to Fancy was a note containing these words only:

"Tell him everything; it is best. He will forgive you."

PART V—CHAPTER I

The last day of the story is dated just subsequent to that point in the development of the seasons when country people go to bed among nearly naked trees, and awake next morning among green ones when the landscape appears embarassed with the sudden weight and brilliancy of its leaves; when the night-jar comes and commences for the summer his tune of one note; when the apple-trees have bloomed and the roads and orchards become spotted with fallen petals; when the faces of the delicate flowers are darkened, and their heads weighed down by the throng of honey-bees which increase their humming is too mild a term for all the all-pervading sound; and when cuckoos, blackbirds and sparrows, that have hitherto been merry and respectable neighbors, become noisy and persistent inmates.

The exterior of Geoffrey Day's house in Yalbury Wood appeared exactly as was usual at that season but a frantic barking of dogs at the back told of unwonted movements somewhere within. Inside the door the eyes beheld a gathering which was a rarity indeed for the dwelling of the solitary keeper.

COBOURG NURSE DIES FROM ACCIDENT

Cobourg, May 15.—While engaged in cleaning a window Miss Annie Russell, a highly esteemed resident of Cobourg, fell from the stepladder on which she was standing to the pavement below, suffering a fracture of the skull, which caused her death. Miss Russell had been nursing Mrs. Reid, of Bagot street, and was cleaning one of the ground floor windows in the latter's home at the time of the accident. Dr. W. E. Wilkins was summoned immediately, and, deciding that the skull had been fractured, had the unfortunate nurse rushed to the hospital. She died, however, without regaining consciousness. Miss Russell was a devout member of St. Peter's Anglican Church, and an energetic church and Sunday School worker. One brother, Alexander, of Cobourg, survives.

GERMANY TO DEMAND FRENCH WITHDRAWAL

London, May 15.—The German Cabinet, after a full discussion with the Ministers of the Federal States, decided unanimously that Germany should not send representatives either to the Spa or Brussels conferences unless the French troops are entirely withdrawn from the Main district by May 16, according to a Central News despatch from Berlin today. It was urged that every pretext for the continued occupation of the Main region by French forces had been removed.

London, May 15.—The British Government has decided to create a special judicial body to examine the cases of Irishmen who are under arrest, it was announced in the House of Commons today by Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader.

GERMAN PRE-WAR DEBTS.

New Office Will Handle Sum of $10,000,000.

An Order-in-Council just issued at Ottawa constitutes Canada's clearing house, by means of which, in conjunction with a central clearing house at London, England, and another at Berlin, all pre-war debts between Canada and Germany will be settled.

One of the outstanding features of the Order-in-Council is the rate at which Canadian debts owing to Germans will be paid. The set rate is 49.01 marks to $1, which places the value of the mark at little more than two cents. Of course, a Canadian importer who owed his German creditors $1,000 at midnight on August 4, 1914, will only have to pay them $100 with interest at five per cent. from that date. On the other hand, the German importer who owed his Canadian creditors 1,000 marks when the war began will have to pay them 10,000 marks.

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, Canadian imports from Germany were $14,000,000 and Canadian exports to Germany were $4,044,019. Assuming that both countries were equally prompt in payment, Canadian pre-war debts to Germany would be three times as great as German pre-war debts to Canada. The rate of exchange will, of course, offset that.

What debts Canadians must collect from Germany may be indicated by the fact that during the year ending March 31, 1914, Canada exported to Germany $281,414 in raw furs, $1,242,011 in agricultural implements, mostly reaping machines, and $320,000 worth of flax seed.

Concerning the Canadian Clearing House, one authority says: "It is expected that some $10,000,000 in claims will be handled through the Canadian clearing office. Cash assets and trade debts and balances owing by Canadians to German nationals will reach about $1,700,000, according to figures at present available, while Germany owes to Canadians some $775,000, excluding three items, one of which it is said may prove fictitious, and another which is owned by a subsidiary company and may not be included among the debts owed by Germans. With dividens on stocks, etc., it is expected that the total sum will reach $10,000,000."

Another authority places the debts owed by Canadians to Germans at $1,660,000, but says that take into consideration German property in the Dominion, Canadian claims are secured to the extent of 125 per cent.

Among the larger German holdings in Canada are 140,000 shares of Canadian Pacific Railway stock valued at $22,500,000, and Canadian Northern Railway debentures of a par value of $200,000 held by German and Austrian citizens. Another matter which may come under consideration is the timber and mineral holdings in Alberta and British Columbia said to have been acquired by von Alvensleben on behalf of the ex-emperor and valued at $9,000,000.

How to Know Birds.

The only way really to know the birds is to study them in the field in their natural environment. Bird-study furnishes one of the most attractive hobbies. The pleasure that birds furnish in this way makes their æsthetic value quite as important as their economic value. Bird activities pass through so many changes in the course of a year that there is no opportunity for bird-study to become monotonous. Then, too, bird-study takes one out into the fields, in the open, so that the setting in which bird-study is carried on is in itself attractive.

While special trips to the woods and water to look for birds offer many pleasant hours, yet, perhaps, the greatest pleasure from bird-study comes through the observation of the birds found around one's home, as one sits on the porch and watches the wrens and bluebirds rear their young in the houses provided for them or sees the robins and flickers that dot the lawn; or hears the bird chorus that swells through the open window as one awakens in the early spring morn. The pleasure thus derived is the lasting, unconscious enjoyment that becomes an intimate part of one's life.

There are all stages of attainment possible to suit every condition, from the identifying of a few birds in the field up to the most careful study of bird habits, which may occupy one's entire time. One of the most satisfactory methods of studying bird life is to observe close at hand in one's yard the birds that may be attracted there by nesting-houses, fountains, and food.

The first step in bird-study is the identification of birds. Learning a bird's name is much like an introduction to a person; it is a means by which a new friendship may be formed. But there is a great deal of pleasure in merely learning to name the birds. Many people will never care to go beyond this point in bird-study. The ability to name the birds from year to year as they return in the spring is one of the chief pleasures in bird-study, and gives a sort of feeling of friendship for the birds. But in the process of learning the names of birds, one of necessity learns many interesting things about them. There is a sort of fascination to see if one can learn to name all the birds of a locality. It serves as an incentive from year to year, as one recognizes the old friends, to try each year to make a few new friends, as well as to get better acquainted with the old.—Gilbert Trafton in "Bird Friends."

NO PICTURES FOR PRISONERS

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction among the prisoners at the Kingston penitentiary over an order recently issued. For years the prisoners have been allowed to have certain photographs hanging on the walls of their cells. The old rule was that they could have small pictures of mother, father, wife, or other members of the family. Now all pictures are prohibited. Many who are interested in the men confined to that institution feel that in many cases it is hardship to enforce the rule as the pictures were the only things that many men had to remind them of the dear ones at home.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Belleville should loosen up $2,500 in three days. The final meeting previous to the start of the Salvation Army Drive for funds in Belleville will take place this evening in the City Hall at 8 o'clock. The Belleville Rotary Club has undertaken to direct the campaign for funds, however it will be impossibe to have any degree of success without the co-operation of all the citizens of Belleville. It will therefore be expected all persons who endorse the splendid work done by the Salvation Army during the period of war and reconstruction, will join with the Rotarians in putting over this worthy effort. The Committees have been closely organized but more workers are required. It is, therefore hoped that there will be sufficient volunteers on hand to-night to allow a completion of the organization. The objects and intentions of the drive will be explained in an advertisement appearing in this paper. All persons should give this particular attention. The City of Belleville has always been foremost in any worthy cause it is therefore to be hoped that in this last important drive we will not be found wanting. Canvassers will call for funds, or voluntary subscriptions can be handed in to the Treasurer, J. G. Moffatt, Manager Union Bank. As there may not be sufficient workers to cover the town in the short time allowed, all persons making their subscriptions voluntary will assist the Committees very much. Be on hand to-night and help the good work.

Toronto Woman Gained 30 Pounds

Tried for Ten Years to Find Health Without Success—Troubles Overcome by Taking Tanlac

"I have changed so much for the better that when my friends meet me in the street they don't know me, and no wonder for I have gained thirty-five pounds in weight," was the remarkable statement made by Mrs. Davies, of 55 Beatty Avenue, Toronto, recently.

"I was a sick woman for ten years," she continued, "my ill health was caused by overwork and then a severe shock which shattered my nervous system and I had a complete breakdown. I was in the hospital for a year and when I came out I wasn't very much better. I had headaches that nearly drove me out of my mind, and all the sleep I ever got was after I was completely exhausted. I was as weak as a baby and went down from one hundred and thirty-eight pounds to a hundred and six. I was so pitiably pale and thin that you wouldn't have recognized me for the strong healthy woman I used to be.

"It was my husband who persuaded me to give Tanlac a trial. He read of a case in the papers which almost described my own and he was convinced that it would help me. That was just before Christmas and that bottle of Tanlac was the best Christmas present I ever had, for it was the turning point of my illness. The first thing it did was to make me sleep better, and soon my appetite improved and I began to eat as I had done for years. My whole condition steadily improved and I gained in strength and weight rapidly. I now weigh one hundred and thirty six pounds so that I have gained thirty pounds and really I feel fine. For ten years I have been trying to find something to restore my health, so you can imagine how thankful I am for what Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

TO SEIZE SUGAR STOCKS

Washington, May 17—Continuing his demands for action by the Government to improve the sugar situation, Senator Capper issued a statement declaring this years importation of sugar will exceed last year's by two billion pounds. Therefore, he doubted that an actual shortage existed. He reiterated his suggestion that sugar stocks should be seized by the Government and rationed through the postoffice, if no better way can be found.

Capper declared that at least 60,000 children in this country are under nourished.

Sugar dealers would be required to sell their holdings according to uniform prices filed with the Federal Trade Commission or pay a tax of two cents a pound on all sugar sold under a bill introduced in the House today by Rep. Steenerson, Minnesota.

CATCHES MUSKRATS IN CELLAR AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, May 17.—Mr. A. Turcotte, 13 Third Avenue, caught thirteen muskrats in his cellar. The back of his lot is near an inlet from the Rideau canal. He first set the trap, thinking there was some house rats in the basement of his residence, and was surprised to find a muskrat next morning. He consulted the Game Warden and took out a trapper's license. He continued to trap one furbearer each night until he had thirteen.

SELL LIMITS BY AUCTION

Sudbury, May 15.—Called to give suggestion before the Timber Limit Commission, B. W. Arnold, president of the Spanish River Company, Limited, declared he never had any knowledge of irregularities in making affidavits, such as had been revealed at the investigation. He concurred with Justice Latchford that illiterate Indians should not be called upon to make affidavits.

For the purpose of securing the largest revenue for the Province he suggested that all sales be made by public auction. He did not recommend outright sale for the Doyle rule of measurement, but suggested that payment be made to the Province on an agreed amount per thousand feet on all lumber merchantable or otherwise actually produced, with the alternative that this payment be increased or decreased in ten or twenty year periods of certain standard lumber grades, similar to British Columbia methods.

Discussing fire prevention, Mr. Arnold believed the first cause of fires was cigarettes and secondly sparks from spiked boots on rock trails. He would keep cigarettes out of every lumber camp.

BARGE BRINGS 72,000 BUSHELS OF BARLEY FROM COBOURG

Montreal, May 15.—The steamer Windsor pulled up alongside Elevator No. 1 and disgorged 72,000 bushels of barley, from Cobourg, Ontario. The work of transferring the barley to the elevator took under five hours, through the efficiency of the steel arms, which are approximately two feet six inches wide, and eighty feet long, hollowed sufficiently to permit of a wide rubber belt, to which are attached buckets twelve inches apart. Into these buckets the grain is scooped, and a seemingly endless chain of buckets run through the shaft on the rubber belt, disposing of 72,000 bushels of any kind of grain in less than five hours.

BIG STEEL FIRM GIVEN TAX EXEMPTION

Toronto, May 15—By the narrow vote 11 to 9, the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature granted Baldwin's Limited, tax exemption for the years 1920 and 1921 the other proposal being for the year 1920 only.

Mayor Church and G. R. Geary, on behalf of the city made a strong plea for the two years' exemption, and they were reinforced by Mr. J. Lash, of Blake, Lash and Cassels, and ex-Controller McBride. It was stated that Baldwin's had already spent in the neighborhood of $2,500,000.

Good Glasses

Good glasses are not possible without good service of a highly technical nature.

You must have good service in examining the eyes and testing vision. You must have good service in grinding the lenses, and placing them in the frames. It is professional work to fit the glasses and select the right type for good sight, comfort and good looks.

Because we are so proficient in service is why Blackburn's glasses are so good.

JUNIOR BASEBALL

The first victory in the Junior Baseball League goes to the Y.M.C.A. They defeated the Red Sox last night to the tune of 17 to 12. The game was called in the sixth innings on account of darkness. The "Y" team started the ball rolling in the first innings by hitting Marakas for several runs. The Red Sox in their half of the first were retired in order. Jose hit to Yeomans, Ashley and Dennis hit to Harns who accepted both chances. The second innings the "Y" were unable to reach the initial sack going out in the one, two, three order. The Red Sox ran across four runs in their half of the second and had two men on bases when the side was retired. In their half of the third the "Y" were again retired in the one, two, three order, and the Red Sox came back strong in the third and ran across five more runs, making the score nine to seven in their favor. Two home runs, and four walks contributed by Marakas, in the fourth innings gave the "Y" eight more runs which put the game on ice. The Red Sox secured two more runs in their half in the fifth. The game should have been called at the end of the fifth innings but the Umpire decided that there was time for another inning. The "Y" ran in four more runs and there was only one man out when the Umpire called the game on account of darkness. The battling honors went to Jack Leigh of the "Y" team who had two home runs and a two bagger to his credit out of three times up. The Red Sox have a good team and with a little more practice they will make a big showing before the season is very far advanced. The line up:

Red Sox—F. Miles, c; Marakas, p; Dennis, f.b.; Ashley, s.b.; B. Miles, t. b.; Jose, s.s.; Wardough, l.f.; Hunter c.f.; Watts, r.f.; Spares, Latchford and Moxam.

TO TAKE THE LAND WHEN NOT "REASONABLY OCCUPIED"

Roscommon, Ireland, May 17—A special Sinn Fein conference at which 70 persons were present Saturday afternoon, decided that where land was not reasonably occupied, it should be taken from the owner by force, if necessary. Reasonable compensation, however, will be offered.

So Human

SOME of your friends must have been in the huge audience which heard Claire Lillian Peteler and Sibyl Sanderson Fagan in their Tone-Test recital at City Hall. Ask these people about it. This is the astonishing discovery they made:

> The keenest musical ear can not distinguish any difference between the voice of the living artist and the RE-CREATION of that voice by the New Edison.

And does it not amaze you, too, that Mr. Edison has succeeded in producing an instrument that captures every subtle sweetness of the human voice—that gives you all the ear can give you of the art of the world's great artists. No other phonograph dares to make this direct comparison.

BIGGER, BETTER AND SMELLIER.

Pigs is Pigs, according to Ellis Parker Butler, and Pigs will be Pigs in hot weather, only more so; according to smell, in the Bigger, Better, but not Sweeter City of Belleville this summer, by virtue of the decision of the City Council to allow citizens who wish to keep pigs on their premises inside the city limits. A couple of weeks ago a request to lift the ban from pigs was emphatically refused by the City Council. Monday night the Council swallowed its stand upon the pig question and legislated the pigs into the city back yards with all their abomination of dirt and smell more penetrating and powerful in range and pungency than the mustard gas of the Hun. The excuse given for the sudden friendliness to the pig was a petition said to be signed by four hundred citizens asking that His Majesty the Pig be given the freedom of the city.

It is said that it is easier to sign the pledge than to refuse to sign a petition—any petition—and that citizens would cheerfully, one and all, sign a petition to hang the City Council, individually or collectively—or any council. Be that as it may, it is absolutely certain that a petition could be procured signed by thousands of citizens against the menace and annoyance of pigs being kept within the city limits, and every signer would mean it, too.

What is the matter with this year's Council?

Thus far no request for money or legislation has been refused, and delegations and petitions seem to be regarded as compulsory demands.

It is time to show some signs of well-defined policy on economical lines and refuse to be swayed by every vagrant wind that blows, whether it is tinted with talc or tainted with pigpen aroma.

CARELESS PEDESTRIAN A MENACE.

"Every now and then someone asks about the attitude of the Safety League towards traffic accidents," says R. B. Morley, general manager of the Ontario Safety League. "Our attitude was clearly defined when we began our educational campaign in 1914. There are five classes of people using our streets who have to be considered in the question of traffic. These classes are: Street car operators, automobile drivers, teamsters, cyclists and pedestrians. Each of these classes has certain rights on the highways. Each has certain liabilities. Each must respect the rights of others, as the use of our own streets is not confined to any one class. We need all classes of traffic for the complex life of our communities.

"The careless pedestrian, known as the 'jay-walker,' is a menace to any city. The cyclist who does not know the rules of the road is a menace. The teamster who hogs the road and takes unnecessary chances is a menace. The automobile driver who uses the streets regardless of the safety of others is a menace. The street car operator who drives his car without adequate care for all who may be on the streets is a menace. Let us get together on this matter. Let us alll use the streets in a proper and sane fashion. Let us each respect the rights of others, and, above all, let us have more safety on the public highways by the exercise of ordinary care."

By all means—and in the interest of public safety, let us go a step further, suggests the Toronto World. Penalize reckless walking as we do reckless driving. . Roughly, one man in three of Toronto's population owns a car today. Not one of them will be surprised to learn that statistics show that over ninety per cent. of so-called motor accidents, in which pedestrians are injured, are the victims of fault. In something less than ten per cent. of these "motor accidents", then, the fault is fairly imputible to the driver.

There are reckless drivers; Toronto is fortunate in having so few. But any are too many. Neither driving tests nor low-speed limits would reduce the number of these drivers, who hold in contempt our laws and public safety, observing them only in the breach when they think they have a chance of getting away with it."

The reckless driver should be dealt with more drastically. The driver who inadvertently is guilty of some innocuous, technical infraction of the law should be dealt with more leniently. The arc described by the judicial scales in its oscillation should be extended both ways. The blindfolded Goddess of Justice finds too many human analogies, in so far as perspective and perception are concerned, both off and on the bench."

Calling a public meeting to discuss the Housing question seemed rather strange. This question has been before the City Council now for two years and it was supposed to have been dealt with long ago when the Council decided to ask the Government to guarantee bonds for the erection of a number of workingmen's houses in Belleville.

That methods of administering civic business can be vastly improved is no longer in dispute. The most promising improvement tried out thus far is the City Business Manager idea, and that Belleville ratepayers are considering this innovation is a hopeful sign of progress. Mayor Riggs, some time ago, took considerable trouble to secure first hand information upon the working of the Business Manager administration for cities in the United States where it has been tried, and the replies were all of a favorable nature.

One of the People

——"I am the State!' I am one of the people."

A world of difference lies between the above sentences uttered as they were, the first by a seventeenth century and the second by a twentieth century prince of the blood.

The favorite assumption of Louis XIV., most autocratic of French kings, "I am the State," comes to one with unusual emphasis today when it is set over against the declaration of the Prince of Wales in Aukland, New Zealand, where he was moved to refuse that striking railroad men should make exception in his case and run the royal train, when they would not, or perhaps could not, carry out the rest of the schedule.

'Will they run trains for the people?"

"No."

"Then they cannot run trains for me. I am one of the people."

One of the people. No king ever took to himself a prouder title. No Prince of Wales was ever so worthy as this prince of that princedom whose motto is: "I serve."

Let him that would be great among you be as a servant. There is no other road to greatness.

"A fine report! Correct lubrication and quality gasoline are mighty important. These costs sheets prove that we've fewer delays for repairs since we standardized on Imperial Polarine and Imperial Premier Gasoline—our delivery service now runs on schedule."

Reduces Upkeep and Depreciation Expense

EVERY drop of Imperial Polarine gives superior lubrication and maintains exactly the right body to seal in power and kill friction under all engine temperatures. It reduces wear and carbonization to a minimum.

Imperial Polarine won't become thin, break up, or gum. It cushions the friction surfaces of a motor with a protective, unbreakable oil film.

One of three grades described below is specially suited for your car. Consult the Imperial Polarine Chart of Recommendations—on display wherever Imperial Polarine is sold—for the proper grade to use.

Imperial Polarine is sold in sealed gallon and four-gallon cans and steel kegs, half-barrels and barrels, by dealers everywhere throughout Canada. Buy by the half-barrel or barrel and save money.

MOTOR CAR NEWS

HINTS TO NEW OWNERS

There are many owners who frequently are heard to say that they never bother with their cars at all, that the cars keep running and therefore they don't intend to do any work on them. Owners of this sort often find themselves, after two or three years, with a car so badly worn that it is hardly worth while going to the expense of replacing parts. Even the owner who actually does no work but who has the garage do it, should at least know the important things that need periodic doing.

Most important of these is lubrication. Every owner should know when to lubricate various moving parts and the kind of lubricant to use. A time may come when it is necessary for the owner to do some lubricating himself, and it is easier to learn how as you go along than it is to attempt to learn it all at once. It means that the lubricating chart in the instruction book should be practically memorized—that is, the various parts should be located and a mental note made of the kind of lubricant it is best to get and how often it should receive it.

While lubrication is perhaps the most important matter for the new owner to know, it is not by any means the only one. Take for example the simple process of adjusting the fan belt. How many owners are familiar with the fan adjustment, and how many realize the utter helplessness of an owner who finds himself on the road with a steaming hot engine due to a loose belt. The adjustment in nearly every instance is so simple that a boy can do the work. Usually it means simply loosening a nut and the shifting of the upper fan pulley. But if you don't know how to do that you will probably call a garage man if the engine is a persistent overheater.

Does the owner realize that the interrupter points of the magneto, or the battery distributer can be adjusted in a few minutes and that improper adjustment of these parts, dirt on the point, uneven points, may cause engine stoppage? Some owners do not bother to know where the interrupter points are.

Learn Before Trouble

Adjustment usually means loosening a small nut which controls one of the points. That is, only one of the interrupter points is movable and it is held tightly in place by that nut. It requires a small wrench to make this adjustment and the wise owner always will have such a wrench in his possession.

Spark plug gaps may need to be adjusted and cleaned. An owner who never had seen the end of a spark plug or does not know the first thing about the function of the plug will not be able to do this. Plug gaps if too narrow will cause a weak spark to be produced. If the gap is too wide, no spark at all will jump across the electrodes. Misfiring on the road may be due to just such a cause. In the ordinary plug the adjustment is made by bending the ground electrode.

The very important matter of brake adjustment should be one of the first things an owner should learn about. How would you like to get no response from the brake pedal or lever just as you see a long steep grade ahead of you? Brakes may be adjusted at several places, at the band, sometimes on the operating rod, or at the pedal. The adjustment calls for a shortening of a lever or a rod, that is, its effective length is reduced. Turning of a wing nut or an ordinary nut at the brake band may be all that is necessary to get responsive brake action. Some owners have cars with one brake on the propeller shaft which means the floor boards must be lifted to make the adjustment. The turning of a forked member after it is loosened, or the simple nut adjustment may be all that is needed to make that brake hold.

Gasoline leaks, the gasoline feed system, the electrical system, are other points that the owner should know something about. Suppose a battery connection were loose or broken, thus stopping the engine. Under such circumstances you would have no lights nor the use of the starter and if it happened on a dark night on a country road and you did not know how to correct it, you would be helpless. Yet making a battery connection or tightening the cable is as easy as tying two pieces of string together. But the owner must know also that cable ends must be clean.

Such matters as these are not to be learned when trouble occurs, but before that trouble comes up.

WHIRL OF EXCITEMENT WON'T PASS EXAMINATIONS

St. Catharines, May 14—In a public manifesto which declares that the past winter has been one of a continuous whirl of excitement for young people, Principal Coombs of the Collegiate Institute prepares the parents of pupils for many expected failures at the forthcoming examinations, and declares that the blame must be borne by the pupils or parents. He claims that, as a result of a surfeit of late parties, dances, entertainments and picture shows, many pupils have gone to school fagged day after day, and only yesterday more than sixty were absent because of a matinee.

OUIJA WAS JOKING.

Pittsburgh, May 15.—A ouija board was responsible for Miss Bertha Henry landing in jail recently, and police authorities demand that she take steps to prevent it from getting out of control on murder tips. The ouija board, Miss Henry said, informed her that three persons had just been shot in the room overhead, and to make sure, she had the message "repeated" three times. The police arrived at No. 557 Anery St. in response to her alarm that a murder had been committed, but no trace was found. Coroner Dempsey asked her, "Where do you get that stuff?" She referred him to the ouija board.

VENIZELOS ACCLAIMED

London, May 18—The Greek Chamber of Deputies received the announcement of the terms of the Turkish Peace Treaty with great enthusiasm when they were presented by Premier Venizelos, says a despatch to the London Times from Athens dated May 11. After the session of the Chamber all the Deputies, headed by the President of the Chamber, escorted the Premier to his home. Along the route the populace acclaimed Premier Venizelos.

BADLY GORED BY A COW.

TILLSONBURG, May 17.—A rather peculiar and nearly fatal accident happened John Yallop, a Wabash engineer, who has lived in this town practically a lifetime. This morning he took a cow over to a neighbor's barn, and while he was leading it to a stall the cow suddenly swerved and plunged a horn through his chin, the horn coming out of his cheek near the ear, terribly tearing the cheek and upper jaw.

MOTHER SUPERIOR OF ROSARY HILL HOME

Tells How Vinol Restores Strength and Vitality to Weak, Run-Down, Nervous People

She says: "For eighteen years I have been at work among the sick and poor and have used VINOL for weak, run-down, emaciated people with excellent results. One young woman when she came to me was so weak she could hardly creep to my door, and so changed in a month by taking VINOL I hardly recognized her, she had improved so much. I cannot recommend VINOL too highly for such conditions. These words are uttered from my heart in order that more people may know about VINOL."—Mother M. Alphonsa Lathrop, O.S.O., Hawthorne, N.Y.

Such testimony as this should convince every one of the value of VINOL. The reason it is so successful in such cases is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cods' livers, without oil, aided by the blood making, tissue building and strength creating properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites.

It creates hearty appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood, with thousands of red blood corpuscles and in this natural manner imparts health, strength and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body. Why not try VINOL on your druggist's guarantee?

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

PART V—CHAPTER I

About the room were sitting and standing, in various gnarled attitudes our old acquaintances. Grandfathers James and William, the tranter, Mr. Penny, two or three children, including Jimmy and Charley, besides three or four country ladies and gentlemen who do not require any distinction by name. Geoffrey was seen and heard stamping about the out-house and among the bushes of the garden, attending to details of daily routine before the proper time arrived for their performance, in order that they might be off his hands for the day. He appeared with his shirt-sleeves rolled up: his best new nether garments in which he had arrayed himself that morning, being temporarily disguised under a week-day apron while these proceedings were in operation. He occasionally glanced at the hives in passing, to see if the bees were swarming, ultimately rolling down his shirt-sleeves and going indoors, talking to tranter Dewy while buttoning the wrist-bands to save time; next going upstairs for his best waistcoat, and coming down again to make another remark while buttoning that, during the time looking fixedly in the tranter's face, as if he were a looking-glass.

The furniture had undergone attenuation to an alarming extent, every duplicate piece having been removed, including the clock by Thomas Wood. Ezekiel Sparrowgrass being at last left sole referee in matters of time.

Fancy was stationary upstairs, receiving her layers of clothes and adornments, and answering by short fragments of laughter, which had more fidgetiness than mirth in them, remarks that were made from time to time by Mrs. Dewy and Mrs. Penny who were assisting her at the toilet, Mrs. Day having pleaded a queerness in her head as a reason for shutting herself up in an inner bedroom for the whole morning. Mrs. Penny appeared with nine corkscrew curls on each side of her temples and a back-comb stuck upon her crown like a castle on a steep.

The conversation just now going on was concerning the bans, the last publication of which had been on the Sunday previous.

"And how did they sound?" Fancy subtly inquired.

"Very beautiful indeed," said Mrs. Penny. "I never heard any sound better."

"But how?"

"Oh, so natural and elegant, didn't they, Reuben?" she cried, through the chinks of the unceiled floor to the tranter down-stairs.

"What's that?" said the tranter, looking up inquiringly at the floor above him for an answer.

"Didn't Dick and Fancy sound well when they were called home in church last Sunday?" came downwards again in Mrs. Penny's voice.

"Ay, that they did, my sonnies!—especially the first time. There was a terrible whispering piece of work in the congregation, wasn't there, naibor Penny?" said the tranter, taking up the thread of conversation on his own account, and, in order to be heard in the room above, speaking very loudly to Mr. Penny, who sat at the distance of two feet from him, or rather less.

"I never remember seeing such a whispering as there was," said Mr. Penny, also loudly, to the room above. "And such sorrowful envy on the maidens' faces; really, I never see such envy as there was!"

Fancy's lineaments varied in innumerable little flushes, and her heart palpitated innumerable little tremors of pleasure. "But perhaps," she said with assumed indifference, "it was only because no religion was going on just then."

"Oh, no; nothing to do with that. 'Twas because of your high standing. It was just as if they had one and all caught Dick kissing and coling ye to death, wasn't it, Mrs. Dewy "

"Ay, that 'twas."

"How people will talk about people" Fancy exclaimed.

"Well, if you make songs about yourself, my dear, you can't blame other people for singing 'em."

"Mercy me! how shall I go through it?" said the young lady again, but merely to those in the bedroom with a breathing of a kind between a sigh and a pant, round shining eyes, and warm face.

"Oh, you'll get through it well enough, child," said Mrs. Dewy, placidly. "The edge of the performance is taken off at the calling home; and when once you get up to the chancel end o' the church, you feel as saucy as you please. I'm sure I felt as brave as a sodger all through the deed—though, of course, I dropped my face and looked modest, as was becoming to a maid. Mind you do that, Fancy."

"And I walked into the church as quiet as a lamb, I'm sure," subjoined Mrs. Penny. "There, you see Penny is such a little small man. But certainly I was flurried in the inside o' me. Well, thinks I, 'tis to be, and here goes! And do you do the same: say, "Tis to be, and here goes!'"

"Is there such a wonderful virtue in your "Tis to be, and here goes'" inquired Fancy.

"Wonderful! 'Twill carry a body through it all from wedding to churching, if you only let it out with spirit enough."

"Very well, then" said Fancy blushing. "'Tis to be, and here goes!"

"That's a girl for a husband!" said Mrs. Day.'

American Woman Now a Princess

It is rather tough luck that at a time when blood royal is in a slump as a result of the war an American woman should be the first of her sisterhood to become a real princess. There have been American and even Canadian princesses before, but usually of an Austrian or Hungarian strain, and in those countries a prince may turn out to be a grade lower than a baron. This time there is no question about the rank, and Miss Nonnie May Stewart becomes a member of the royal family of Greece, her husband being Prince Christopher, brother of the deposed Constantine and uncle of the reigning monarch, Alexander. One determined to marry into a royal family might have made a better selection than that of Greece. Of course, the Windsors would be the great catch, but so far as we are aware, and to say it in all kindness, the former Cleveland girl would be more suitable as a mother than as a wife for any available British prince. In fact, this is her third matrimonial experiment; and it may be that it was the second that made the third possible.

The laws of Greece concerning royalty are more democratic than those of most countries. Morganatic marriages are not recognized. The American girl, who was, is no third rate princess. Her rank is that of royalty. She becomes thus a cousin of King George, and of Queen Victoria of Spain, and even a sister-in-law of the former Kaiser, and through her husband's mother a relation of the Romanoffs. Before her marriage, the bride, then Mrs. Leeds, entered the Greek church and was welcomed as Princess Anastasia. But it is as Mrs. Leeds that she will likely be remembered, for she is a woman of strong character and has made much newspaper copy in the past. Before her marriage to William Bateman Leeds, called the "Tin Plate King" of the United States, she had been married to George H. Worthington, of Cleveland. When Mr. Leeds died his widow was left a very rich woman, and her fortune to-day is estimated at $14,000,000. She has seen much of European society, and from time to time her name has been coupled with the name of many a titled fortune hunter, none of them, of course, having the rank of her new husband. To recall them now would be ungenerous.

In 1911 Mrs. Leeds burst into front page newspaper celebrity when from her apartments in a New York hotel she announced that she was about to follow the example of William Waldorf Astor and shake the dust of her native land from her feet. She had one son, William Leeds, and she said that she was about to take up her residence in England so that the boy could be properly educated. "William will grow up rich," she said. "I don't think wealthy young American men are precisely a credit to society. Their idleness makes them dissipated. Young Englishmen are different. They have a lot of healthy amusement and grow up clean, healthy and strong. Then, too, at an English school, no one will toady to William because he is wealthy. It will make no difference to them. They will respect him for what he is, not for what his father earned for him. He will learn that over-drinking is not tolerated in good society, as I fear it sometimes is here." Mrs. Leeds' other reason for going abroad was not more flattering to American pride. She said that conversation in the United States was just one scandal after another. In England people talked of things that could better stand talking about—art, music, literature.

So Mrs. Leeds departed to England and her son William was sent to an English public school with what results it is too early to say. She visited Paris each year and there her gowns and jewels created a sensation. It is none too early to remark that Mrs. Leeds was famous for her beauty, and that, according to the French painter, Helleu, she had 98 points out of the hundred constituting feminine perfection. What two points she was shy on were not mentioned. In 1912 she gave a ball that caused a tremendous sensation. There were 150 guests. The cotillon favors were, for the women, hats by the leading Paris milliners, and for the men specially prepared cameras and gold match boxes. Even Paris gasped, for at no private ball had such costly souvenirs previously been distributed. At the ball itself there was an even greater sensation when Mrs. Leeds entered, her gown covered by a million dollars' worth of emeralds. It seems probable that she is the only woman who ever wore a million dollars' worth of emeralds at one time.

Once before her jewels had brought her into prominence. The occasion was in 190 when a Paris jeweler arrived in New York with a bag of pearls for Mrs. Leeds, invoiced at $220,000. He was about to pay the ten per cent. duty when some official said that Mrs. Leeds had agreed to purchase the pearls for $340,000, and that a duty of $110,000 should therefore be paid. The jeweler paid under protest, but entered action to recover, and after several years of litigation, the excess was refunded. In 1910 Mrs. Leeds, then living in the United States, had a quarrel with her stepmother and her stepsister, which resulted in Mrs. Stewart being forcibly ejected by a constable from the Leeds home in Montclair. Mrs. Leeds said that the extravagance of her stepmother had reduced her father to penury. Mrs. Stewart retorted that Mrs. Leeds' father had treated her cruelly. The incident proved that Mrs. Leeds was a woman of strong personality when she had a duty to perform, as was proved later on when she wore a million dollars' worth of emeralds.

$50—NO BENEFIT

This money might have been saved by Mr. Z. D'Muro of 722 Papineau Ave., Montreal, had he only known of Zam-Buk sooner. Writing to the proprietors of Zam-Buk, a short time ago, he said:

"For over a year I suffered with eczema which nothing seemed able to cure. I had treatment from three doctors, which cost me $50, but none of them were able to cure me. I suffered intensely from the irritation and pain, and I thought I should never get relief, until one day a friend told me about Zam-Buk and I started using it right away. From the very first application I felt better. Zam-Buk relieved the irritation and seemed to cool and soothe the sores. Gradually the sores began to heal and, with perseverance, Zam-Buk completely rid me of the disease.

"I would like to be able to tell all sufferers from eczema to stop experimenting with useless remedies and use Zam-Buk. By using this balm in the first place they would save themselves needless suffering and expense."

Zam-Buk should be in every home, not only for skin troubles, boils, rashes, pimples, abscesses and ulcers, but also for cuts, burns, and scalds, for which it is indispensable. Get a box to-day. It will keep indefinitely and still retain its strength and purity. All dealers, 50c. box.

CALIFORNIA "BLUEBEARD" MARRIED TORONTO WOMAN

Toronto, May 18—Mrs. Norah Wallace, a war widow, residing on Yorkville avenue, is now convinced that she was a bride of "Bluebeard" Watson, the wife killer, now serving a life sentence in California, for the murder of nine women. Mrs. Wallace says she was married at Niagara Falls N. Y., in August 11th last year, to a William Anderson, who posed as a California millionaire. He deserted her in Toronto eight days after the marriage ceremony. From the description of Watson, Mrs. Wallace is quite sure that the man who courted her under the name of Anderson is none other than the famous "Bluebeard."

ALKALI IN SHAMPOOS BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

COST OF LIVING TO BE HIGH FOR 2 YEARS, SAYS EXPERT

Ottawa, May 18—That it is useless to look for an immediate remedy for the present high cost of living, simply because the world's production of foodstuffs is not nearly equal to the demand, was the gist of an interview here with Dr. J. W. Robertson, C.M.G., who was sent overseas by the Canadian Government to look into after-war food problems and who has just completed a tour of the Dominion in an effort to get the people to understand the real nature of the country's most pressing duty and opportunity at the present time.

Y'S ANNUAL

On Saturday evening, May 15th, the annual meeting of the Y.W.C.T.U. was held at the home of Mrs. Hill, Church street. Miss Gostrell, who presided, called upon Miss N. Deacon to conduct the Devotional Exercises. A letter of greeting and encouragement was read from the President, Mrs. Williams, which inspired the girls to do greater things during the coming year. Encouraging reports were given by the various officers. All reports showed that the work was progressing and that much has been accomplished this year. The officers were elected for the coming year, and delegates were appointed. Light refreshments were served at the close of the business meeting and many plans for the coming year were discussed.

A TEST CASE.

A difference of opinion as to the interpretation of certain ancient documents relating to the disposal of income from lands belonging to the Church of England in this diocese is to be decided in a test case which began on Tuesday at Napanee before the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose. The principal parties to the dispute are the congregations of St. Thomas and Christ Churches in Belleville, and it is the contention of Christ Church officials that when the income from certain church lands enjoyed by St. Thomas' Church exceeds $2,000 per annum, the surplus should go to Christ Church. Legal action has been invoked to have the agreements interpreted according to law. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P., of Belleville and Mr. Ruttan, of Toronto, are solicitors for Christ Church in the action. W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee, represents St. Thomas' Church.

NEW TERRITORIAL SECRETARY

At the annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A. which will be held to-night, Mr. Harry Ballantyne will be present and speak. Mr. Ballantyne has recently been appointed to Territorial Secretary for Ontario and Quebec, and this will be his first official visit to the Belleville Association. Mr. Ballantyne has had a wide experience in Association work and has held a number of important positions, starting at the West End Association in Toronto and serving at Montreal, also Toronto Central for some years. From there he moved to Calgary, Alberta, as General Secretary, and later became Provincial Secretary for the Canadian West. In the past three years he has had charge of Alberta and British Columbia and comes now from Vancouver to Toronto to take up his new duties. It was while Mr. Ballantyne was at the Toronto Central Association that Mr. Brockel, our local Secretary, became interested in Association work and became a member of the Toronto Central Staff about the time Mr. Ballantyne went to Calgary. Those who have the opportunity of hearing Mr. Ballantyne speak to-night regarding Association work will have a real pleasure as he is one of the strongest men in the Canadian work.

Then I began to use "Fruit-a-tives", and in 15 days the pain was easier and the Rheumatism much better. Gradually, "Fruit-a-tives" overcame my Rheumatism; and now, for five years, I have had no return of the trouble. I cordially recommend this fruit medicine to all sufferers."

Tyrone Power In "The Little Brother"

Return Engagement of Popular Actor Attracted a Large Audience—A Theatrical Treat.

The large audience which greeted that sterling actor, Mr. Tyrone Power and his excellent company at Griffin's Theatre last evening upon the return engagement was ample evidence that local theatrical taste does not run altogether to light or trashy entertainment. Mr. Power's presentation of "The Servant in the House" earlier in the season, was appreciated for its dramatic excellence and his promise to return later in "The Little Brother" was anticipated with pleasure by theatre patrons, wearied with a plethora of bedroom plays.

"The Little Brother," while not as strong in dramatic situations as "The Servant in the House," gives Mr. Power an opportunity to show his versatility and outstanding dramatic talents. The story is intensely interesting and timely, as revealing the persecutions of the Jews in Russia and the strong hold retained by Jews transplanted in the new world upon their religious beliefs and centuries of tradition. It is a powerful story of the conflict in religious faith between a priest of the Russian Church and a Rabbi of the Jewish faith which has its inception in Russia and which ends in a truce of souls in New York city, illumined and transfigured by the charity enkindled amid the suffering and sacrifice of the battlefield where the barriers of creed melted before the compelling spiritual need of the suffering and dying soldier, where the Protestant Padre ministered to the dying Catholic or the Catholic Padre spoke kindly words of hope and trust to the dying hero of different faith, where different forms of religion became one in the knowledge of the One God and His great goodness at the gates of eternity.

Mr. Power's portrayal of the Russian priest, strong in his beliefs and determined in his life of service and the performance of his duty as he conceived it, was a masterpiece of the art of acting, and the Rabbi Elkan, of Mr. Harvey Hayes, a character almost of equal importance in the story to that of the lead, was an outstanding personation true to the life and very natural.

An interesting feature of the play was the appearance of Miss Enid Holland in the part of Aunt Marie. Miss Holland is the daughter of the late E. M. Holland, who was one of the most illustrious figures upon the English speaking stage. Miss Holland is a talented actress and her personation of Aunt Marie in "The Little Brother" was clever and pleasing.

The balance of the cast was very capable, Miss Alma Chester as Bridget, being very amusing, while the Judith of Miss Chela Knight was restrained and natural as it should be. Shinovitch, the marriage broker, and his prize exhibit Rube Samuels, who carried considerable weight but was inclined to hesitate in his conversation, furnished considerable fun as presented by Mr. Robert Taber and Mr. J. Irving White. Mr. Harold De Becker as George Lubin, who preferred love to riches, and Mr. Walter Edwin as Wm. Vanderlinde, the unostentatious philanthropist, presented their parts in capable manner.

"The Little Brother" was well staged with appropriate scenery and the entire production was of the high standard which features all of Mr. Power's plays.

It is worthy of note that Mr. Tyrone Power is an English actor, being born in London, where he spent his early years. His grandfather, the elder Tyrone Power (1795—1841) was a strong favorite with English theatregoers and was on his way to make an American tour when the steamer President on which he was a passenger, was lost with all on board. The father of the present Tyrone Power, also had a successful stage career, but tried in vain to discourage his son from following the profession of an actor.

As leading man with Madame Janauscheck, and later with Augustine Daly he thoroughly established himself. He went with Mrs. Fiske and his "Marquis de Steyne" in "Becky Sharpe" made a deep impression. This was the beginning of the century. Then he went back to London, and played with Irving and Terry. Since his return to America he has played a large variety of parts. Throughout all the years that he has been on the American stage he has maintained the closest of British connections. His permanent home where he spends his summers is a beautiful place at Isle-aux-Noix, Quebec.

"Reconquest Of Ireland" Is To Begin In Earnest

GEN. MACREADY, MILITARY COMMANDER, ADDRESSES A PARADE OF THE CONSTABULARY — GREAT PREPARATIONS FOR ENFORCING THE LAW IN PROGRESS.

LONDON, May 19.—The Government's policy in Ireland is steadily developing. The non-unionist counties are to be divided into zones with military posts in blockhouses at strategic points and soldiers armed with machine guns.

Huge quantities of barbed wire, brought home from the war, are to be used in closing off large areas with the idea of compelling everyone to pass only through the opening. Armored cars in large numbers are being sent to work in connection with the blockhouse system, while airplanes are also to be employed more extensively than heretofore.

Immense military forces are being sent over and the little town of Skibbereen was occupied yesterday by 2,000 men in full trench kit, who commandeered the public buildings, setting up defences around them. There is no need to proclaim martial law, because it has been in full operation throughout the greater part of south and west Ireland for weeks without any proclamation. Meanwhile military engineers are said to be prospecting for the establishment of concentration camps.

The papers announce that "the reconquest of Ireland" is about to begin in earnest. Cork is now under complete military occupation, with military posts at the street corners, armored cars patrolling distributed around.

General Cecil F. N. Macready, military commander of Ireland, addressed a parade of the Royal Irish Constabulary and the City of Dublin Monday, eulogized their services and courage and added, according to a despatch to the London Times from Dublin, "everything that it is possible for the military to do to assist the police shall and will be done."

That the burning of police barracks are really acts of war and that, therefore, the taxpayers ought not to be held responsible but any compensation awarded for damages should be provided for by Parliament, was the kernel of a resolution passed Monday by the County Clare Executive Committee of the Farmers' Union, a non-political organization. The resolution pleaded as a precedent in preliminary grants for the repair for damages in 1916. The despatch to the Times says it probably will be supported by public bodies of all shades of opinion throughout Ireland.

The claims for compensation have reached a huge total, but says the despatch, there is little likelihood that the local authorities will be able to pay them.

England To Be Dry Within Ten Years

Forecast of British Action By "Pussyfoot" Johnson at New York Y. M. C. A.

New York, May 18—Declaring that he has been able to see more clearly into men's minds since 'rough housing" students in England had destroyed one of his optics forcing him to wear a glass eye, William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson reiterated before a large audience in the West Side Y. M. C. A. Auditorium that within ten years England will be dry.

He made but one qualification in his forecast of British action: America must stand firm.

"World prohibition will be fought out in the United States," said Mr. Johnson, "but if America flops, it will be delayed 100 years.

"The whole matter of prohibition rests upon the United States. If we make good they will make good. You have heard of troubled times in Ireland, especially in the South. But do not worry about Ireland. I know that the majority of the Sinn Feiners of the South of Ireland are total abstainers. When those Irishmen get control of their own affairs—as they will form a bill soon to pass Parliament—these loyal Irish will drive liquor out of Ireland the same as St. Patrick drove out the snakes."

NEW JUMP IN SUGAR BY THE U. S. REFINERIES

New York, May 19.—The American Sugar Refining Co. advanced the price of sugar one cent a pound, to a 20½c. basis for bulk granulated. The boost was the first development following the announcement by Attorney-General Palmer that the Department of Justice would allow wholesalers not more than two cents profit on a pound of sugar.

Higher Duties On Silks And Velvets

Twenty Per Cent. on Musical Instruments and Special Tax on Cards

OTTAWA, May 19.—Silks, velvets, lace and silk embroideries which under the French treaty enjoyed preferential treatment, will have rates of duty in future of 30 to 35 per cent. instead of 20 to 25½ as at present. In addition they will be subject to an excise duty of ten per cent. on the whole of their purchase price.

An excise tax of ten per cent. will be payable at the time of sale by Canadian manufacturers, or when imported, on boots, yachts, canoes and motor boats when not used for commercial purposes. On cameras, candy and confectionery, firearms and ammunition, pianos, organs, musical instruments and plated ware, adapted for house use, there will be a similar tax.

A like tax of 20 per cent. will be imposed on player pianos, gramophones and mechanical musical instruments and records used therewith. Articles of gold adapted for household or office use will be taxed similarly to 50 per cent. of the selling price.

A specific tax on playing cards is also provided for. On all cards selling at wholesale rates, not over $25 per gross packs, the tax will be fifty cents per pack.

200 BORDER RESIDENTS INTEND TO SEEK DIVORCE

Windsor, May 19.—More than 200 border residents, three-fourths of whom are men, have filed applications with Windsor barristers to commence divorce proceedings as soon as the Divorce Bill now before the Dominion Parliament becomes law. One Windsor barrister has no fewer than 20 applications for divorce filed during the last two weeks. As there are 41 lawyers in the border municipalities, this barrister estimated the total number of divorce applications at 400.

Constituent Assembly In Ireland Suggested By Lord Hugh Cecil

ELECTED BY THE WHOLE COUNTRY, IT WOULD BE DUTY OF ASSEMBLY TO DEVISE AND FORMULATE PLAN FOR BETTER GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND.

LONDON, May 18—Lord Hugh Cecil, in a letter to the London Times, suggests that the Government should set up a constituent Asesmbly in Ireland for the purpose of devising a set up a constituent Assembly in Ireland. This Assembly would be elected by the whole of Ireland on the principles of proportional representation. The Assembly should be allowed to present any plan it pleased, including one for making Ireland an independent Republic.

In the meantime, the writer suggests, the Irish Government should not waste its time "in measures against sedition or treasonable language, whether written or spoken, or against any demonstration which fell short of violence."

Lord Hugh does not anticipate that the Assembly would present a bill which Parliament would be able to accept, but suggests that the Assembly be kept in being until some acceptable plan to Great Britain was evolved.

Creator Of First Submarine Driving Street Car In Paris

WITH OTHER FRENCH ARISTOCRATS, HE IS ASSISTING TO PROVIDE TRANSPORTATION DURING THE STRIKE—COUNT DE LESSEPS A TICKET-PUNCHER ON A BUS.

PARIS, May 18—The reason for the conspicuous absence of the usual brilliant assemblage at the Longchamps races was discovered today when it became known that dozens of blue-blooded Frenchmen and women are engaged in driving motor buses and street cars, punching tickets or serving as brakemen in a city-wide volunteer effort to break up the transportation strike.

Georges Laubeuf, the celebrated engineer, creator of the first submarine, is driving a street car.

Count De Lesseps is a ticket puncher on a bus.

Countess de Bearn, Lieut.-Col. De Witt-Guizot, Count Martin Do Nord and Baroness De Pichon all members of the elite of French aristocracy are serving as conductors on motor buses and street cars.

Mlle. Bomphard, daughter of the former Ambassador to Russia, is driving a bus.

Hundreds of leaders of the aristocratic set are eager to act as postmen if the threatened postal strike becomes a reality. Gen. Filinau and Mlle Bigourdan, daughter of the famous astronomer, and Admiral Benson have already applied for 'routes' as voluntary letter carriers.

$2,500 Per Annum As Minimum For Railroad Labor

Fifty Millions For Every Cent Per Hour Advance in Wages to Employes

CHICAGO, May 19.—The increase demanded by railroad workers of the country now exceeds $1,349,400,000, according to estimates submitted to the Federal Railroad Labor Board, which met here. The board met here to hear the employers' side of the wage question. The employes were given a hearing in Washington.

E. T. White, chairman of the Railroad Managers' Association, told the board that since the original wage demand aggregating $1,079,477,677 was made, fresh demands totaling more than $270,000,000 have been presented. Mr. White, in presentation of the railroad managers' statement, said the total demands of the railroad employes would, if granted by the board not only absorb the revenue expected from the proposed increase of 25 per cent. in freight rates, but would force the roads to ask for further increases. Each 100,000,000 increase in rail expenses represents a three per cent. increase in freight rates, according to Mr. White. He said for every cent per hour increase in wages to rail employes, the railroad payrolls were boosted approximately $50,000,000.

Farmer Kills Sister Attempts Suicide

Rushes at Her, Apparently Without Provocation; Uses Piece of Gas Pipe

CAYUGA, May 19—Without any apparent provocation, and without warning, George Badley, a farmer living near Selkirk, seized a piece of gas piping, rushed at his sister, who was with him in the house, and struck her a terrific blow on the head, killing her instantly. Immediately afterward he attempted to cut his throat with a razor, but succeeded in inflicting a superficial gash only. On a charge of murder, Badley was arrested by Constable Lamb of Selkirk and brought to Cayuga jail.

It is stated by persons who have known the family for many years that neither the sister, Lizzie Badley, nor her brother, was mentally sound. With their father, Thomas Badley, they operated a farm about eleven miles from here. The mother died about a month ago.

Heavy Increase Of Amusement Tax

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, May 19—Heavy increases in taxes on theatres and moving picture houses are announced in Hon. Peter Smith's changes to the theatre and cinematograph act. Altogether the increased taxation will be about 25 per cent. of the whole. Amusements generally come under the change and exemptions from taxation which patriotic and charitable affairs have enjoyed will cease to exist on June 1st.

Sterling exchange in New York was lower at $3.81½ for demand.

Clothing Costs Smashed In U.S.

Wave of Price-Cutting Reaches From Mississippi to Pacific Coast

CHICAGO, May 19—A wave of price-cutting in retail clothing costs reaching from the Mississippi Valley to the Pacific coast was reported today. Despatches from 24 circles in that territory told of promised reductions in these necessaries ranging from 15 per cent. to minus profit.

Financial authorities here said that the indications were that the price decline would be limited to ready-to-wear clothing, principally women's garments and silks. Shoes were in the list affected.

Tight money and inadequate transportation facilities were cited among the prime reasons for the mercantile movement.

An officer of one of the leading department stores of Chicago declared that the price reduction now being reported meant also that merchants were trying to satisfy what he called a "hysterical demand from the public for lower prices."

A financial authority here said that if reports of pricecutting were dependable they indicated a tendency toward a reduction in inventories.

Downward Trend in Middle West

Kansas City, Mo., May 19—With one exception, commodity prices in the Middle West show a downward trend, with production normal, except for uncertain transportation.

The one exception is flour and grain products. These prices are higher than a year ago and will go higher or lower in direct ratio to transportation.

Eighty Million From New Taxes?

Special Despatch to the Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 19—Instructions for levying of the new taxes in force today have been sent to tax collectors throughout the Dominion. What the revenue will be, Finance Department experts make no attempt to estimate in anything like exact figures although it is thought the additional revenue will be about seventy-five or eighty million dollars.

Estimated loss of revenue from repeal of taxes is thirty million dollars.

The purpose of luxury tax is twofold, more revenue and prevention of extravagance. In any event one of these two objects will be secured. If extravagance continues the Government will benefit by additional revenue. If prices are lowered to within the limit of exemption from taxation, the consumer will benefit. It is thought, however, that this tax would give an impetus to reduction in prices. Any article now just coming within the score of the luxury tax will probably be sold a few cents under the tax limit.

RAILROAD WORKERS WILL GET INCREASES

Chicago, May 19.—The demands of railroad men for increased wages will be granted wholly or in part and the public will pay the bill, it became apparent as the United States Railroad Labor Board resumed its sessions here.

When the increase is granted, the next move will be before the Interstate Commerce Commission when the railroads will ask higher rates to meet the boost in prices, it was indicated.

Labor Leaders Defend Bolsheviki

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 19.—Definition of the Polish attack on Bolshevik Russia and what is claimed to be Great Britain's complicity in that offensive, is contained in a manifesto issued here by a number of labor leaders. It states that the attack means a prolongation of war and chaos, the victory of secret diplomacy, and defeat of the League of Nations. The British Government is accused of violating its pledges by sending munitions to Poland, the manifesto declaring that a ferociously cruel blockade of Russia is actually maintained although legally non-existent, while a stream of goods is flowing into Poland. The temper of the whole labor movement is rising rapidly and labor should see that the attack upon Russia is ended, says the manifesto.

Tchitcherin, Commissary for Foreign Affairs of the Soviet Russian Government for the safety of remnants of General Denikine's forces in the Crimea. Consequently it was stated peace negotiations will be opened immediately between representatives of General Wrangle's army in South Russia and the Bolshevik. It is not expected, it was added that negotiations will be of long duration.

OTTAWA, Ont May 18—In announcing the taxation proposals Sir Henry Dayton declared they had two purposes, namely, to increase revenue and to check extravagant living. Upon certain articles of wearing apparel such as boots and shoes in excess of $9 a pair, men's and boy's suits in excess of $45 each, fur coats and robes in excess of $100 each, women's dresses in excess of $45 each, men's and women's overcoats in excess of $50 each, hat, hose, neckwear, shirts, purses and gloves bought above specific prices and on fans and opera cloaks, it is proposed to levy a tax of 10 per cent. of the purchase price.

The same rate of tax is to apply trunks in excess of $40 each, valises, suit-cases, etc., in excess of $25 each, ivory handled cutlery and cut glassware, velvet and suit fabrics, lace ribbons, silk, embroideries and sporting goods. Such luxuries as humidors and smoking equipment, hunting and riding garments, expensive carpets, etc., will be taxed twenty per cent. of the total purchase price.

An increase of ten to fifteen per cent. in the excise on both Canadian and imported motor cars will be charged.

Tax Upon Wet Goods

The proposals also call for increased duties on beer, of 30 cents a gallon, on non-sparkling wines of 30 cents a gallon, on spirits $2 a gallon and on sparkling wines $3 a gallon.

A tax of one per cent. on the sales of all manufacturers, wholesale dealers, jobbers and importers is also proposed.

The tax will not apply to foods and other necessities of life.

The existing tax will be continued on cheques, but the rate is increased on bills of exchange and promissory notes and a tax of two cents on stock exchange transfers is provided.

No Tax on Movie Films

The tax on movie picture films is removed.

It is proposed to increase the taxes on incomes of five thousand dollars and upwards by five per cent. effective this year. As a result the tax on a personal income of $6,000 will be $126, as against $100 last year and on an income of $50,000 it will be $9,648, as against $5,782 last year.

A bill will be introduced making each taxpayer in the first instance his own assessor, and the taxpayer will pay in four quarterly instalments. Penalties for evasion are provided.

Business Profits Tax

A resolution will be introduced to provide for the continuation of a business profits tax but on a reduced scale, on the profits derived during 1920, the tax being payable in 1921. The present exemption will be extended from seven to ten per cent. the schedule of taxation to be as follows:

On profits over ten per cent. but not over 15 per cent. a twenty per cent tax.

On profits over fifteen but not exceeding twenty per cent., a thirty per cent tax.

On profits over twenty but not over thirty per cent. a fifty per cent tax

On profits over thirty, a sixty per cent tax

The present act provides a different scale of taxation for the profits of business with capital of not less than $25,000 and under $50,000 being one quarter of all profits exceeding ten per cent on the capital employed. It is proposed to reduce this tax from 25 to 20 per cent.

It is further proposed to abolish entirely the 7½ per cent Customs war duty.

Tariff Revision Waits

Sir Henry stated that a thorough investigation will be made into the tariff, having regard for the maintenance, stability, and prosperity of Canadian enterprise and the development of all our natural resources, and no revision of the tariff will be undertaken before such inquiry.

GRUESOME DISCOVERY MADE BY NEW TENANTS

Ottawa, May 19.—The skeleton of a baby wrapped in a copy of the Ottawa Free Press, December, 1910, was found in the attic of a house on the outskirts of Hull. New tenants had moved into the house, and in the course of a general clean-up the gruesome discovery was made.

DRAYTON BUDGET IN BRIEF

OTTAWA, May 18.—Definitely renouncing national borrowing, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, expects to make up the difference between present revenue and expected expenditure by the following taxes:

1. One per cent. tax on all sales of manufacturers, wholesalers or importers, except on coal and foods for man and beast.
2. Excise taxes running from 10 to 50 per cent. of the selling price of goods, particularly textiles, ranging above certain specified prices, and upon luxury articles made of gold or silver, or for adornment or recreation, whether imported or manufactured in Canada.
3. Heavy excise taxes on all spirituous liquors, from 30 cents a gallon on ale, beer, porter, stout, to $2 a gallon on rum, whiskey, brandy, gin, etc., and $3 a gallon on champagne and sparkling wines.
4. Increase of 5 per cent. in all taxation on incomes of $5,000 and upwards, taxes to be paid in part or in whole when making returns, and heavy penalties provided for errors or failure in making returns.
5. Stamp taxes of two cents on promissory notes and bills of exchange for every $100 for which drawn.
6. Stamp tax of two cents on every share of stock transferred.
7. Twenty-five to fifty cents on every pack of playing-cards sold.
8. A license fee of $2 on every business man dealing in various luxury articles mentioned.

The only reductions in taxation are: First, the removal of the extra customs war tax of 7½ per cent., which brought $30,000,000 last year, mainly drawn from articles on which the still higher excise taxes are now levied. Second, the repeal of the duty on moving picture films. Third, the retention of the business profits tax, but increasing the exemption on profits from 7 to 10 per cent., and decreasing from 25 to 20 per cent. the tax on profits above 10 and less than 15 per cent. on all businesses having a capitalization of not less than $25,000 and not more than $50,000, except where more than 20 per cent. of the profits was gained in 1917 or 1918 from munitions industries. Fourth, some minor tariff reductions, letting typewriters, books and other articles for the blind in free.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.
IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE!

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

NEW TOM MIX PICTURE

The famous cowboy star, Tom Mix, will make his debut in Belleville as an author and producer at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, where William Fox will present his latest and greatest Western thriller, "The Daredevil."

This photoplay promises to be something new, for Mix is giving the public his idea of what a fast-moving, rapid-fire, sure-hit story of the West is, and how he believes real Westerners would interpret it. As in all Tom Mix productions, many thrilling and hazardous deeds of daring are performed by the author-director-actor and his supporting company.

Mix rides through water falls into the cave of the bandits, jumps from his horse to a train moving at the rate of thirty miles an hour, rescues his sweetheart by swinging her from the train to the back of his faithful horse, and introduces some novel rope-throwing features. As usual the star is superbly supported by a capable cast, which includes Eva Novak, Charles K. French, L. C. Shumway, Sid Jordan, Lucille Young and George Hernandez. A funny 2-reel big V comedy, and other worth-while varied plays are also being shown in addition to the above feature offering.

"THE PRODIGAL WIFE"

"It's a movie," doesn't apply to "The Prodigal Wife," the first of a series of distinction produced by screen craft pictures, which is to be presented at the Palace to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily.

Just as the expression, "Ragtime" or "Jazz" do not fit real melodies of sweetness and harmony, so the term, "movie" seems out of place in describing pictures of the appeal of, "The Prodigal Wife." The term, photoplay is too stilted for a film which has so much warmth, sentiment and tenderness as this production is reputed to possess; nor does the English name of "cinema" suit. "Life pictures" more adequately describe such films but the phrase lacks conciseness. There's a nice little fortune awaiting the "fan" who hits on just the right word. "The Prodigal Wife," from the advance notices regarding it should supply plenty of inspiration for an idea. It features Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton, and is said to be a drama of unusual heart interest.

PLAN TO FINANCE C. N. R. EQUIPMENT

New York, May 19.—The plan of the Canadian Government for financing the purchase of railroad equipment for the national railway lines, was announced in detail here by William A. Read and Company, which firm is financing the loan.

It consists of $15,000,000 fifteen year 7 per cent. sinking fund equipment trust gold certificates of the Canadian National Railways. The interesting feature of the new offering is that it gives investors an opportunity to purchase a long time security at better than a seven per cent. basis, thus giving them the advantage of rates which have only been available on short term securities with the seven per cent. coupon. The announcement continues:

"It retains the advantages of the serial equipment trust plan by providing semi-annual payments sufficient to retire the entire issue by maturity date, May 1, 1935.

These payments, instead of being used by the trustee to purchase certificates in the open market at or below par if obtainable.

"The fixed rentals may be increased from time to time to buy certificates at a premium if the railway elects. Each payment is held by the trustee until the next one is due; unless absorbed in the meantime by the purchases of the certificates from holders.

"If the semi-annual payment is not used up by the compulsory purchase of the certificates up to par or by the optional purchases at a premium, the payment must be invested in obligations of the Dominion of Canada, maturing at or before the maturity date of the certificates. Certificates can only be retired by purchase in the market, and are not callable."

Commons Debates Minister To U.S.

Premier Speaks on Amendment by Feilding Raising Question

OTTAWA, May 18 — Opposition members of the House of Commons thirteen months ago heard with evident unconcern and without hostile comment Government's announcement that Canada that Canada was to have direct diplomatic representation at Washington. Now, when arrangements between the British, Canadian and United States Governments for appointment of a Canadian Minister plenipotentiary are practically concluded and on the eve of consumation those same members are troubled by vague apprehensions of the result of the move and by an ardent desire for further information and discussion.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, when the motion that the House go into Committee of Supply was presented, offered an amendment, calling for information with respect to the negotiations before any arrangement for appointment of a Canadian Minister was finally made.

The amendment evoked a reply from Hon. N. W. Rowell, who made the initial announcement a year ago that negotiations were in progress and also elicited from Sir Robert Borden the first speech he has made in the Commons since his return to the Capital after his four month's rest.

Information Given Last Year

Mr. Rowell pointed out that he had intimated when a vote of $50,000 for a Canadian representative at Washington was before the House more than a year ago, that negotiations were in progress looking to the appointment of an official with larger functions than those of a mere trade commissioner. Situations had arisen daily and weekly in the past, which a Canadian at Washington, could deal with more satisfactorily than an official, who did not know Canadian conditions. The President of the Privy Council recalled that although the intimation was reported and commented upon by the newspapers, it had evoked from Mr. Fielding no comment.

The words of other members of the Opposition, generally speaking, were words of approval. That being so, said Mr. Rowell, why should the Government be attacked for proceeding with negotiations? The Government could not well bring forward legislation, while confidential negotiations were in progress, and had passed no orders-in-Council. Its legislative authority for action would be the voting of appropriations for the maintenance of the new Canadian Minister Plenipotentiary.

Future Constitutional Relations

Sir Robert Borden, who spoke with his customary force, said that the subject of future constitutional relations within the Empire would be discussed at a great assembly to be held, probably not this year, but next year. At that gathering, he hoped that both sides in Parliament would be represented, because he felt that, as questions of foreign relations were lifted in Great Britain above petty controversy of party politics. He would be a bold man, who would attempt to predict the lines upon which constitutional relations in the Empire would be based, but, on the other hand, he would be a timid man, who would not believe that those relations could be worked out.

The Prime Minister saw nothing revolutionary or startling in the proposal that Canada should have a representative at Washington. The three Canadian members of the International Joint Commission were in fact ambassadors, and Mr. Fielding himself, when he went to Washington to negotiate the reciprocity agreement, had acted as an ambassador. Neither could the Prime Minister discern any cause for alarm in the agreement whereby the Canadian representative would act as ambassador for the whole Empire in the absence of the British Minister from the United States. As to the request for production of correspondence, Sir Robert Borden said it did not tell the whole story of the negotiations, that it was highly confidential and could not be brought down to Parliament with advantage to the public interest or, indeed, without detriment to the public interest. He outlined his own part in the negotiations which covered a period of more than three years. He pointed out that, according to Lord Bryce, three-quarters of the work of the British Embassy in Washington related to Canada and that the staff of the embassy had not included an official familiar with Canadian conditions.

The Premier said that he had long felt that it would be well for Canada to have a representative at the United States' capital, and he had reason to believe Sir Wilfrid Laurier held a similar view in the closing years of his tenure of office.

A Prerogative of the Crown

Sir Robert argued that under constitutional usage, the appointment of Ambassadors to foreign countries was a prerogative of the Crown, exercised upon the advice of the Cabinet; that the Government was called upon to take the initiative and then secure Parliament's approval of its plan of action. The Government had conducted the necessary negotiations and had come to Parliament for its approval, and, by the method the Government had adopted it had given the House of Commons greater control than by simply introducing legislation.

"Instead of cavilling at the idea that the Canadian Ambassador is to represent the whole Empire when the British Ambassador is absent from the United States," said Sir Robert Borden, "I am inclined to think that the people of Canada will be proud and glad. I venture to think that this proposal to have a Canadian Minister at Washington will tend not only to the good of this country but to a more perfect understanding and better relations between the Empire of which we form a part and the Republic of our kinsmen to the south."

Mr. Hobart is a Canadian, and like many another author, broke into the writing game through the newspaper business. While on a Baltimore paper he originated the well known "Dinkelspiel" stories and also a series of humorous tales which he signed by the pseudonym of "John Henry." Branching out into drama, Mr. Hobart wrote such well-known productions as "The Ham Tree," "Alma, Where Do You Live?" "The Candy Shop," and the Ziegfold Follies for six different years. He was co-author of "Wildfire," and of "Our Mrs. McChesney," the latter a comedy for Ethel Barrymore.

"What's Your Husband Doing?" is perhaps the best known of his farces and was produced with fine success on the stage. The 2nd Chapter of "The Lost City," serial, and "The Lady's Tailor," a funny 2-reel Mack Stnnett comedy featuring Ford Sterling is also being shown on the same program.

PORTRAYS PRIMITIVE LIFE

If you hope to realize "Man's Desire," be a 'straight shooter.' This was Tom Denton's maxim, and that went two ways with him. He lived in a rough-and-tumble big timber district and was a "Straight Shooter," in everything, and a might fast one, too, in a personal mix-up. A great big story with the bark on, in a locale where hairy-chested men settled things in a primitive way, starring Lewis S. Stone as the man who attained "Man's Desire," by fighting for it. "Man's Desire," is being shown at the Palace to-night for the last time along with a funny Harold Lloyd comedy, "Soft Money," and "The Second Chance," revealing a tale of unusual interest.

UNIONISTS WERE CAUGHT NAPPING

Ottawa, May 19—The report of last nights division in Hansard today is not an inspiring thing for a new Minister of Finance about to deliver his first budget this afternoon to peruse. On the very vital motion to go into supply the Government escaped annihilation by the narrow and precarious majority of five and that after the Prime Minister and three of his foremost colleagues had spoken against the Fielding amendment, and given reasons why it should and must be voted down. For a time it appeared as if the fate of the Government hung on a very slender thread indeed.

176 MILLIONS BET IN ARGENTINA IN 1919.

Buenos Aires, May 19.—The people of Argentina like to take a chance on a betting proposition. This is shown by the fact that last year they bet altogether $176,000,000 on horse races, lottery tickets, roulette resorts and other means of gambling, says La Razon.

Argentina's population is about 8,000,000, so that the average gambling by each person was $22 a year. La Razon gives these figures in urging that all gambling should be under government supervision and that the proceeds should be used for public benefit.

JOURNAL CREDITORS TO MEET.

St. Catharines, May 19.—A meeting of the creditors of The Evening Journal is to be held on Thursday, when arrangements will be made for the disposition of the assets. It is not yet certain whether the paper will resume publication or not, though efforts are being made to form a new company to take it over, as the Liberals of Lincoln do not wish to be without any organ.

ROAD TO THE OIL FIELDS.

Ottawa, May 19.—Permission for the construction of a railway north of the Great Slave Lake to take care of reported oil finds, was agreed to by the Railway Committee of the Commons. Col. H. S. Mackie (Renfrew) classed the affair as a joke railway and as a bicycle road.

The capital stock is fixed at one million dollars. Headquarters of the company, which is known as The Northwest Route, Ltd., are at London. Construction of the road must be begun within two years. The bill was reported, which means that it will probably again go to the Senate.

Answering the chairman, Mr. J. F. Smellie, counsel for the promoters, said the promoters were all Englishmen of good standing and reputation.

Col. Mackie, speaking against the bill, wanted to know who was really behind the scheme. Some American or Canadian had gone to England and put up a "nice story" to them, hence the application.

CHAMPS COMING STRONG

Any one who drops around by the Exhibition Park any night except Saturday will find that there is earnestness in the ball tossers heart this year On Monday, Wednesday and Friday the G.T.R. champions have been working hard and last year's players and the new comers are coming along under the eagle eye of Tommy Fegg. He is taking the rough edges away, and the team which will face the Petes on the 24th will be a handpicked aggregation. On Monday Fegg had Goyer and Mills with one side and Parker and F. Goyer for the other Several lively innings of ball were put in, and all together a real good work-out was the result. Parker and Frank Goyer are new ones to the Belleville fans but will bear watching.

St. Michael's are also lining up strong and Ed. Thomas, has the many aspirants for positions going at top speed each Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Although a new team their supporters are already looking for a successful season and a good team. It can look no other way from the material which has been out for practice.

Belleville baseball team went to Kingston today in a rather crippled condition to play an exhibition game with the Triple Link team of that city. Owing to the death of their father, Fred Goyer, pitcher and his brother Frank were unable to go. Gerow is out of the game owing to his injured shoulder and other members of the team were unable to go.

Belleville Y.M.C.A. Annual Meeting

Encouraging Reports Presented Showing Increased Membership and Healthy Finances—Future Outlook Promising.

Y. M. C. A. work in Belleville during the past year has been marked by energy and great progress has been made along lines of service and expansion. The membership has increased, every department is running at high tension with enthusiasm and useful service the watchwords, and there is every prospect for continued healthy expansion all along the line of Y. M. C. A. work. This was amply demonstrated by the reports presented at the annual meeting of Belleville Y.M.C.A. held Tuesday evening. There was a good attendance of directors and members and the chair was occupied by the retiring president, Mr. H. W. Ackerman, who in opening the meeting thanked the directors, Ladies' Auxiliary, press and all who had helped to make the work of the association a success.

The principal speaker was Mr. H. Ballantyne, Territorial Secretary, who gave an inspirational talk pointing out the opportunities for service which existed today more than ever before. The churches and the Y. M. C. A. must realize that a new day has arrived with new conditions and new opportunities which must be met in a broader way if these agencies for good are to live. The old ruts must be abandoned and new trails blazed if efficient service is to be rendered. Mr. Ballantyne touched on some of the disturbing elements in life today and pointed to the tendency to extravagance among young people in dress and amusements. The mad rush for pleasure at any cost is leading to dangerous ground, and the association has exceptional opportunities to combat this tendency, offering instead healthful amusements and the blessing of useful service. The association must branch out and serve a larger constituency confining itself not alone to the cities but serving the smaller communities and even the country districts.

New directors elected were Messrs. W. H. Merry and C. B. Smith, while Messrs. H. W. Ackerman, Chas. S. Clapp and Ed. F. Dickens were re-elected.

Officers elected by the new Board of Directors were:

President—Dr. H. A. Yeomans.
Vice-President—E. R. McBride.
Rec.-Sec.—B. F. Jennings.
Treasurer—C. S. Clapp.

CENTENARY OF BELLEVILLE
RETURN OF OLD BOYS AND GIRLS

GREATEST RE-UNION EVER
JULY 24, 25, 26, 27, 1920.

A meeting of the various committees of the Old Boys' Reunion, to be held here from July 24th to the 28th was held last evening in the city building and was well attended. In the absence of Judge Wills, Chairman, Col. Lazier presided, and during the session a number of matters appertaining to the event were referred to.

It was decided to not only term it the Old Boys' Reunion but Belleville's Centennial Celebration to commemorate the changing of the name of Meyer's Creek to Belleville in 1816. A centennial celebration would have been held in 1916 had not the war been in progress.

As. Mr. W. C. Mikel, K. C., stated Governor Gore, who visited here in 1816, named the village Belleville in honor of his wife.

Civic Holiday

At the meeting it was suggested that Tuesday, July 27th be named the Civic Holiday and arrangements are being made to procure two boats for the day when a grand picnic will be held at Massassaga Park or 12 O'clock Point. This part of the programme is being carried out by the Grand Trunk Railway employees.

Big Day July 26

Monday, the 26th day of July, is planned for a big day's celebration with events taking place in various parts of the city, also acquatic sports. In the morning it is proposed to have a grand parade in which the old boys will participate. The day's program will be brought to a close by a display of fireworks at Fireman's Park and a community dance on Front street.

Big Programme

The detailed program of events has not yet been determined upon, but the entertainment committee with Ald. Hanna at the head are outlining one, that will, no doubt, prove interesting to our many visitors.

Chip In Everybody

The Finance Committee was instructed to proceed as soon as possible in a canvas for funds to assist in making the celebration the success that is desired. It will mean an outlay of a considerable amount and subscriptions will be asked for to supplement any grant which the city council may make. The council has already placed $500 to the credit of the committee, but a considerable portion of this has already been expended.

Some time ago a request was made to citizens to supply Mr. A. Johnson, the genial and obliging secretary, with the addresses of old Belleville boys who are now away from here and up to the present time only 1200 have been handed in. This is a small number in comparison to the number there are. All citizens are requested to hand in names and addresses to Mr Johnson in order that special invitations may be sent out.

It is proposed to have erected on the lawn in connection with the armories a large marquee to be used for registration purposes and a general office.

THE OLD HOME CALLS

L. M. Montgomery

Come back to me, little dancing feet that roam the wide world o'er,
I long for the lilt of your flying steps in my silent rooms once more;
Come back to me, little voices gay with laughter and with song,
Come back, to little hearts beating high with hopes, I have missed and mourned you long.

My roses bloom in my garden walks
all sweet and wet with the dew,
My lights shine down on the long hill road the waning twilight through,
The swallows flutter about my eaves
as in the years of old,
And close about me their steadfast arms and lisping pine trees fold.

But I weary for you at morn and eve,
O children of my love,
Come over the meadows and up the ways, from the seas and plains
ye rove;
Come over he meadows and up the lane to my door set open wide
And sit ye down where the red light shines from my welcoming fireside.

I keep for you all childhood dreams, dreams, your gladness and delights,
The joy of days in the sun and rain,
the sleep faiths you have lost and
All the sweet faiths you have lost and sought again shall be your own,
Darlings, come to my empty heart—
I am old and still and alone.

HISTORIC PLACES

Up to 1816 only a very few people had taken up their abode at the place where the mouth of the River joins the Bay of Quinte and which was called Meyers Creek, and sometimes Thurlow Village. Dundas street was then the northern limit of the settlement. Beyond that were farms and woods. There was a bridge running across the river connecting Dundas Street west upon which the stage from Montreal to Toronto made the crossing as well as other traffic. Shortly after this about fifty U. E. Loyalists settled in the little place and a Post Office was established with Samuel McNabb the first Postmaster. The place where the first Post Office was opened is not now known but the site of the first hotel is known to have been at the corner of Front and Dundas Streets and a part of the building is still standing. Some effort should be made to mark historic spots throughout the city for the coming Centennial and Old Boys' Reunion this summer.

REVELATIONS NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY

LONDON, May 18—"The main thing is the Admiralty's work succeeded," Admiral Sir Cyprian Arthur George Bridge, retired, leading British naval expert, declared when asked his opinion on President Wilson's charge that the British Navy was over-cautious during the war.

"I believe the public in all countries will reply to Mr. Wilson: 'Look at the result,'" the Admiral said.

Archibald Hurd, naval expert for the Telegraph, protested publication of documents not intended for the world at large.

"We should have been spared these revelations which please nobody except the German and Irish elements in the United States," he said.

Hurd praised the American fleet, especially the destroyers.

"We need not take overseriously the statements of a landsman like Mr. Wilson, that the Admiralty in 1917 was helpless to the point of panic," the critic believed. "His appreciation of the situation was formed 3,000 miles away and was based on incomplete knowledge."

Lord Birkenhead, the Lord High Chancellor, speaking at a dinner last night, disparaged the Daniels-Sims controversy.

"During a considerable period of the war," Birkenhead said, "The British navy defended the ramparts of civilization. The world's confidence in Great Britain was justified. Evidently no Englishman thinks it either necessary or proper to apologize for any part our navy has played in the events during the past six years. The world knows.

A COSTLY SPREE.

Germany is the prize staller—ever since the Armistice, November, 1918, she has been pulling a poor mouth and getting extensions to the inevitable day of settlement, besides asking for cash discounts on long term credits. Her reparation bill for actual and wilful damage to property has now been fixed at thirty billion dollars, a sum sufficient to stagger even the haughty "invincible" Hun officers who swaggered through Belgium and northern France not very long ago, gleefully destroying coal mines, factories, machinery, churches and everything they couldn't steal and take back to Germany—the headquarters-to-be of the great new Empire of the Iron Heel and Mailed Fist, which was to dominate the world and compel tributes of treasure and obeisance of professed respect from the proud Briton, the once gay Frenchman, the sturdy Canadian, the temperamental Italian, and better men from all the ends of the earth. Great sport was this destruction game for the Hun military chiefs, and it varied the monotony of baby killing, crucifying Canadians and stealing the honor and virtue of helpless womankind.

Of course Germany could not lose—such a thought never penetrated the ivory domes of the "Der Tag" rejoicers. Now as an object lesson which will not soon be forgotten—THIRTY BILLION DOLLARS has been fixed as the price of the spreee enjoyed by the German military chiefs, including the price of the oceans of champagne which they stole and were so prodigal with.

"HORSE SENSE."

Mr. George A. S. Gillespie, of Hull has translated into French Elbert Hubbard's "Horse Sense" and had it printed in both languages in convenient form on cards. In English it reads:

"If you work for a man, in heaven's name, work for him. If he pays wages that supply you your bread and butter, work for him, speak well of him, and stand by him, and stand by the institution he represents. I think if I worked for a man, I would work for him. I would not work for him a part of his time, but all of his time. I would give an undivided service or none. If put to the pinch, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness. If you must villify, condemn, and eternally disparage, why, resign your position, and when you are outside, damn to your heart's content. But I pray you, so long as you are part of an institution, do not condemn it. Not that you will injure the institution—not that—but when you disparage the concern of which you are a part, you disparage yourself. And don't forget, "I forgot," won't do in business."

JUBILEE OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

The Salvation Army has now fifty years' service to look back upon. Few there are who are not in a position to bear witness to the abounding fruitfulness of that service. The record is one that all who run may read, for it is written in the lives of that part of every urban population that is described by the founder of the Army as the "submerged tenth." Not only has the Army snatched many a brand from the burning, not only has it relieved countless people of human misery and mended the conditions of many a slum quarter: not only has it been the means of removing many thousands of people from environments that are in every sense of the word unwholesome, and placing them in redeeming occupations and surroundings but it has undoubtedly given the greatest impulse of the time to legislation on the [illegible] of social justice and humanity. As writers of history nowadays give something like their due to movements that have to do with industrial, social and spiritual interests, their pages will render high testimony to the part the Salvation Army has played in the work of bettering the human lot. This week will be given up by the Army to the celebration of its jubilee.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

An exemption bill is now before the Legislature to permit municipalities to grant from ten to twenty per cent exemption on improvements, and gradually year by year to so reduce the assessment that finally the tax will remain on the land alone. Belleville City Council refuses to wait for Drury's gradual assessment cure of a spoonful of exemption at a time, but with one fell swoop cancels the assesement for 1921-22 on all dwelling houses erected in 1920. Fast workers, very! But is it legal?

OTHER VIEWS

As to Publicity
Regina Post

"The Senate Divorce Bill," says the Toronto Globe, "very properly provides for the minimum of publicity in Divorce Court proceedings. The reports of divorce cases published by many newspapers in Great Britain and the United States are a moral menace.' Lord Haldane, Lord Halsbury and other eminent judges of the House of Lords do not agree with The Globe on this point. On the contrary, they take the ground that publicity in divorce cases, and in suits of other sorts, preserves confidence in the fair administration of the law and is an essential feature of British law.

Safety on the Highways
Toronto Star

Two motor cars were meeting at the foot of a hill near Collingwood after dark one night recently, and in the glare of the headlight from one machine the other turned out to pass it, and struck a buggy which was standing there to let the two motors go by. One person was killed and others injured.

The coroner's jury, after hearing all the evidence, exonerated the drivers of both cars, but made recommendations which deserve the attention of the government. One is that all motor headlights should be dimmed. The other is that all vehicles on public highways at night should be compelled to carry lights. The safety of travel on the highways at night calls for both these regulations—calls for both equally—and no consideration but that of the public safety should weigh in this matter.

Wise (?) After the War
Hamilton Herald

Mr. Wilson was commander-in-chief of the U. S. Navy. Why didn't he go ahead and sacrifice half of his navy in the bold attempt to destroy the German submarine bases? But maybe it wasn't half of the U. S. Navy that he was willing to sacrifice.

Germany, like the United States, will have a Persidential election this year. Teutons in the United States who cannot vote in the Fatherland will have an agreeable alternative if Hiram Johnson is a candidate in the United States. He did his best for Germany by trying to keep his country out of the war.

THE POET'S CORNER

"Masonry is the activity of closely united men who, employing symbolical forms borrowed principally from the mason's trade and from architecture, work for the welfare of mankind, striving morally to ennoble themselves and others; and thereby to bring about a universal league of mankind which they aspire to exhibit even now on a small scale."

MASONS—THE BUILDERS

—G. R. Fearebay, M.D.—

Today is Masonry's grand day!
Today the Craft must God obey,
And, on foundation broad and deep,
But build the Temple's wall, a keep
For Justice, Truth and Knowledge, where
The members of each lodge may fare,
And in true brotherhood attain
The heights of honor they would gain.

The corner-stone for ages laid,
By brethren of the Craft so staid,
Now underlies, in government,
All things of fragrant truth's intent—
All things for good of human kind,
That one grand brotherhood may bind
The universal race of man,
And ev'ry evil foe but ban.

The structure near completion now,
A wondrous building all allow,
Where human kind may pottery find
To beautify the heart and mind
In true nobility of life,
Devoid of envy, lust and strife;
While faith and charity all hail,
In hope and love that never fail.

Love's Book of Wisdom is repleto
With promises to brothers meet,
Who strive, in zeal of manhood's love,
To know the truths of life above,
Rejoicing in the cheer so bright
Of coming day of perfect light,
When members of the Craft will stand
Within time's visioned Promised Land

Freemasons of the world today,
Anew the voice of God obey,
And build ye well the Temple grand
That ev'ry land of earth will band
When Freedom's flag illumes earth's sky,
And man attains the heights so nigh
Of universal league of all,
Who of love's Craft themselves do call!

owners of Victory Loan Bonds? If you are, you know how easy it is to collect your interest, and are satisfied that your principal is safe.

But do you know that Provincial Government and Municipal Bonds, which like Victory Bonds, possess ironclad safeguards, also afford this feature of prompt interest payment? The interest coupons, which are attached to each bond, can be removed and cashed on the due date, while the bonds themselves are readily accepted by Banks as collateral for loans.

Write us, and we shall be glad to mail you a list of these bonds, paying an interest return of from 5.80% to 7%.

MARIE DORAN, AUTHOR, EVICTED FROM HOME

New York, May 18.—Miss Marie Doran, author and playwright, was dispossessed of her home at No. 60 Caril street, Jamaica. The house was sold by her landlord, and although given a month to find another, she was unable to do so. Her mother, Mrs. Frances Doran, seventy, has been taken care of by neighbors, but Miss Doran said she would be forced to spend the night in the street guarding her belongings.

While the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering had told her she need not fear being evicted, the eviction notice served on her yesterday had been approved by the committee, Miss Doran said. She was writing a motion picture scenario when City Marshal Thomas McGuire and two auto loads of assistants arrived and carried out her furniture. The Jamaica police said they could not assign a patrolman to guard her belongings.

STANLEY PARK, VANCOUVER, B.C.

English Bay Road, Stanley Park.

Vancouver would be famous if it had only the attraction of "Stanley Park" was the opinion of an English tourist who had circled the globe. That peerless playground of 1,000 acres of virgin forest, with many acres of priceless waterfront and over six miles of marine panorama of park foreshore, is the greatest municipal park on the continent. It is fringed by English Bay which abounds with mirrored reflections of forest trees and birds of every shade and plumage bank on the surface. No bulwarks or ocean wall mars the beauty, no roaring billows disturb tranquillity, but there is all the beauty and majesty and novelty of its placid surface with a soft calling of the waves.

The park is picturesque with its magnificent firs and cedars, and is largely in its natural state, yet with touches of the conventional in that it is encircled by a perfect motor road which affords the pleasure of enjoying the innumerable points of interest in this wonderland. The unique brilliancy of the exquisite scenery in the distance where mountains of grace and stateliness form a group of peaks, grey and green and rose-colored, call one again and again by their enchantment. Down their pine-clad slopes, sylvan streamlets wind their way. A variety of enormous trees, spreading their branches on the green lawns, greet the eye, creeping ivy decorates the base of these giants of the forest. Walks through the park reveal picturesque retreats where the aroma of nature in all her bewilderment of luxuriant growth, sweetens the out-of-doors.

The "Lions", the "Sleeping Beauty", "Siwash Rock", the grave of the Indian Princess, Poetess, Pauline Johnson, who cast over the lovely surroundings, a gracious mantle of romance, are some of the points of interest. —C. G.

ACROSS THE ANDES BY 'PLANE EXPRESS

Establishment of an aerial route from the Pacific to the Amazon as a means of surmounting difficulties of road travel among the Andes, is advanced by G. M. Dyott, until recently a squadron commander of the British Royal Naval Air Service.

"There is no serious difficulty in the way, so far as the scheme's practicability is concerned." Mr. Dyott told the Royal Geographical Society. "We have heard of the great height of the Andes, but there are low altitudes at which they may be crossed. One of the Andes' ridges can be negotiated at 7,000 feet, but there is another rising to 15,000 feet.

"Peru," he continued, "is peculiarly suitable for aerial traffic. Aerial highways will undoubtedly play a large part in the future development of that country. It is of importance that rapid communication should be established between the interior and the coast, and in order to do this the airplane must come to the rescue."

Discussing the difficulty of travelling by road, Mr. Dyott said that it took him five days to travel from one part in the Andes to another, whereas the airplane would cover the distance in fifteen minutes, and in another stage of the journey it took him exactly a week to travel a distance which would be negotiated by the airplane in 30 minutes.

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN LEAGUE OF FRIENDSHIP

Music and art lovers of New York are evincing much interest in the exhibition of unique paintings given in the ballroom of the Hotel Commodore by Miss Florence Parbury of London, Eng.

Miss Parbury has undertaken a mission to the United States with a view to promoting an Anglo-American League of friendship.

She is one of the most noted of the younger generation of British artists, as well as an aviatrix, writer, musician and lecturer. Her paintings are in pastel and water colors, and included among her art patrons are Queen Mary, Dowager Queen Alexandra and the Queen of Italy. A painter of the "great outdoors," Miss Parbury's pictures of the beautiful Vale of Kashmirin Asi ,CX of Kashmir, in Asia, and other noted spots, have won high praise from some of the best art critics of London. She has painted a number of scenes of the Canadian Rockies, several of which were purchased by the late Lord Stratchcona.

Miss Parbury's original operetta "Kashmir, the Garden of Paradise," includes several classic dancers of exceptional merit.

A reception was given to the members of various clubs which have British-American friendship at heart. When Sir Auckland Geddes, newly appointed British Ambassador to Washington, arrived in New York, Miss Parbury flew down the bay in an Avro airplane and dropped flowers around the vessel to welcome Lady Geddes.

PHILLIPINOES FLOG THEMSELVES FOR PENANCE

The practice of self whipping in public to appease divine wrath which flourished in certain countries of Europe centuries ago, still exists in the Philippine Islands, although in a diminishing degree each year.

Advices from the provinces where educational advantages are not enjoyed, show that the practice was indulged in during the Easter holidays this year though not by as great numbers as in former years.

Hundreds of Americans and other foreigners gathered at an open field a few miles from the centre of the city to witness the weird performance, but only six appeared to do penance.

These beat themselves over the backs with heavy flexible bamboo flogging rods. Later they walked to seven places in the field, denoting the seven points of the cross, where they were beaten by the master of ceremonies. When the lashing is completed they throw themselves into a pool of mud and as they come from the stagnant water, their wounds are washed with pure water and healing medicines applied.

JEWS WANT PALESTINE FOR NATIONAL HOME

British Zionists are demanding now that Great Britain has received a mandate in Palestine, that the British Government fulfil its promises to restore that country as a national home for Jews. Some of them betray some apprehension that the claims of the Arabs to Palestine may prevent a full realization of the Zionist hope.

"We want to begin our great work," says the Rev. J. E. Goller of Leeds, England. "We are ready to provide money—£50,000 or £100,000 is nothing once we are sure of our position—and to arrange for the emigration of Jews not only from England, but from Poland and elsewhere to Palestine.

"We must know definitely if the British government is going to stand by its promise, or betray the soul of the Jewish people? The promise was distinctly that of a national home, which means, ultimately, a Jewish state in Palestine.

"There has always been drawn across the course of Jewish nationalism the red herring of Pan-Arabic ambitions. We declare that we are prepared in Palestine to deal justly, fairly and generously with the Arab problem; but for the Arabs to want Arabia, Mezopotamia and Palestine as a triple Arab kingdom, ere they have proved their capability of governing a single autonomous unit, is tragically absurd.

If our fears prove to be well grounded that what shall be flung to us will be but the shadow of a bone, then there is a great section of us, of which I am the least earnest, that will raise the cry: 'To your tents, O. Israel' and we shall leave the Jewish problem to be solved by a future and better age, one which shall recognize, if this age does not, that the problem of the Jew in the world is the acid test of civilization."

NO PETTY GRAFT.

British Law Regarding Bribery In Business.

Any employe who receives a gift from another person as an inducement or reward for showing some special favor in connection with his master's business is liable to a heavy fine and imprisonment, says London Tit-Bits.

Equally severe punishment is meted out to any person who tries to influence an employe with gifts.

The number of convictions under the Prevention of Corruption Act is growing. Often when an employe has been prosecuted the plea has been that he did not see any harm in accepting a gift from a customer of his firm. Ignorance of the law, however, is no excuse.

Furthermore, it should be distinctly understood that a small bribe does not necessarily mean small punishment. In one instance a man offered £1, and was fined £100.

The maximum penalty on conviction is seven years' penal servitude and a fine of £500, where Government or other public contracts are concerned. In other cases, two years' imprisonment with hard labor and a fine of £500. In the police courts a magistrate may order four months' hard labor and a fine of £50.

The present Lord Chief Justice warns employes against their acceptance, and other people against giving presents. If a customer of a firm wishes to give a present to an employe, the safest thing to do is to tell the employer what he proposes to do. And the employe should ask if he may accept the gift.

In his interesting booklet on this subject, Mr. R. M. Leonard points out that there are many forms of business bribery.

"An offer of employment has been the bait in some cases," he says, "and more often a share of profits or a commission on business, including in one instance the offer of 10 per cent. to the honorary secretary of a miniature rifle club on all appliances of a certain kind bought by the members.

"Or the bribe has taken the form of a brace of pheasants offered to an official employed by a local authority; a box of cigars and a case of cutlery to military representatives; blouse flannel to a Government inspector's wife; a joint of meat to a cook. On several occasions a commission has been promised on a looked-for salary, and very frequently a share of any profits to be made on the strength of a betrayal of trade secrets. The acceptance of a suit of clothes from a tailor brought about the downfall of a War Office clerk."

There is no doubt that many tradesmen, although well aware that if discovered they will be ruined, continue the practice of bribery because of the well-founded fear that if they do not do so less scrupulous traders will steal their orders. Bribes are given unwillingly, too, by persons who know that those who demand illegal gifts can bring about a boycott.

The butcher or the manager of a motor works, for instance, knows that an offended cook or a disappointed chauffeur has opportunities of telling other cooks or chauffeurs that so-and-so is stingy, and the tradesman finds his accounts mysteriously closed.

"A skilful cook," continues Mr. Leonard, "can easily lead his master to think that the meat is poor and tough, or by being wasteful he can run up such a heavy bill that another butcher is tried for economy's sake.

"Similarly, the gardener who is not bribed can see to it that bulbs and seeds turn out badly. Or clean linen can easily be soiled in its passage from the laundry to the chest of drawers."

Strikes During 1919.

That there were more strikes, labor disputes and general industrial turmoil, with consequent time lost in Canada during 1919 than in any other year in the country's history, is revealed in a report compiled by the Labor Department at Ottawa. Including eight carried over from 1918, there was a total of 298 strikes and lockouts in Canada during 1919. The number of employes involved was 138,988, and the number of employers, 1,913. The total number of working days lost was 3,942,189. The previous record in working days lost was in 1911, when the record stood at 2,046,650 days lost. Classified by causes, 223 of the 298 strikes recorded involved wages. Twelve strikes involved union recognition. Altogether there were 16 sympathetic strikes. The record shows that 157 strikes terminated in favor of the employes and 88 in favor of the employers; 23 were compromise settlements and 30 indefinite.

NO LABOR TROUBLES EXIST IN FINLAND

Finland has no labor difficulties, declared its Foreign Minister, Dr. R. Holste, who is on a visit to England in explaining the steadiness and promise of his country's economic and industrial recovery. All the factories are working well, and they were able to export all sorts of timber products, wood pulp, paper, textile goods, and so on. They had as a matter of fact, huge stocks of paper but the difficulty was to obtain ships to export it.

"We are anxious," said Dr. Holste, "to have friendly relations with Russia. We are a little nation of three and a half millions of people and we dont' want to attack Russians. We are becoming more and more an industrial country; we cannot compete with Russia in growing grain, and friendly relations with her will mean cheap food."

His Death Expected

New Brunswick Man Saved

Mr. Isidore Thomas, of Tilley's Road, Gloucester County, N.B., while expecting death, availed himself of help that was offered at random. Here is part of a letter he wrote to us:—

"I beg you to publish my letter, so that people may know what Gin Pills did for me. My case was very serious. I was so sick everybody expected my death any day. Finally, on advice from friends, I tried Gin Pills, and in a short time was well again, and soon had gained 20 pounds."

Kidney and bladder troubles, very often, work in secret ways. A bad condition may exist, with only a backache to indicate it. That is why the slightest pains in back or sides should be investigated. These pains, along with sciatic neuralgia, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, lassitude, lumbago, highly-colored urine, headache, floating specks before the eyes, gravel, indicate kidney trouble. A course of Gin Pills, taken at once, will give relief, and prevent the progress of the disease, enabling the organs to right themselves and restore good health. Gin Pills are the sure, safe, quick remedy. Get a box from your druggist or dealer—50c. Money refunded if no relief found. Send for free sample.

PART V—CHAPTER I

"I do hope he'll come in time," continued the bride-elect, inventing a new cause of affright, now that the other was demolished.

"'Twould be a thousand pities if he didn't come, now you be so brave," said Mrs. Penny.

Grandfather James, having overheard some of these remarks, said, downstairs with mischievous loudness:

"I've heard that at some weddings the men don't come."

"They've been known not to, before now, certainly," said Mr. Penny, cleaning one of the glasses of his spectacles.

"Oh, do hear what they're saying downstairs," whispered Fancy. "Hush hush!"

She listened.

"They have haven't they, Geoffrey" continued Grandfather James as Geoffrey entered.

"Have what?"

"The men have been known not to come."

"That they have," said the keeper.

"Ay; I've known times when the wedding had to be put off through his not appearing, being tired of the woman. And another case I knowed when the man was catched in a mantrap crossing Mellstock Wood and the three months had run out before he got well, and the bans had to be published over again."

"How horrible!" said Fancy.

"They only say it on purpose to tease you, my dear," said Mrs. Dewy.

"'Tis sad to think what wretched shifts poor maids have been put to," came again from downstairs. "Ye should hear Clerk Williams, my brother-in-law, tell his experiences in marrying couples these last thirty years; sometimes one thing, sometimes another—'tis quite heart-rending—enough to make your hair stand on end."

"Those things don't happen very often, I know," said Fancy, with smoldering uneasiness.

"Well, really 'tis time Dick was here," said the tranter.

"Don't keep on at me so, Grandfather James and Mr. Dewy, and all you down there!" Fancy broke out, unable to endure any longer. "I am sure I shall die, or do something, if you do!"

"Never you hearken to these old chaps, Miss Day!" cried Nat Callcome the best man, who had just entered, and threw his voice upward through the chinks of the floor as the others had done. "'Tis all right; Dick's coming on like a wild feller; he'll be here in a minute. The hive o' bees his mother gie'd en for his new garden swarmed jist as he was starting and he said, 'I can't afford to lost a stock o' bees; no, that I can't, though I fain would; and Fancy wouldn't wish it on any account.' So he jist stopped to tind to 'em and shake 'em."

"A genuine wise man," said Geoffrey.

"To be sure, what a day's work we had yesterday!" Mr. Callcome continued, lowering his voice as if it were not necessary any longer to include those in the room above among his audience, and selecting a remote corner of his best clean handkerchief for wiping his face. "To be sure!"

"Things so heavy, I suppose," said Geoffrey, as if reading through the chimney-window from the far end of the paddock.

"Ay," said Nat, looking round the room at points from which the furniture had been removed. "And so awkward to carry, too. 'Twas ath'art and across Dick's stairs; round and round Dick's chammers till legs were worn to stumps—and Dick is so particular, too. And the stores of victuals and drink that lad has laid in—why 'tis enough for Noah's ark! I'm sure I never wish to see a choicer half dozen of hams than he's got there in his chimley; and the cider I tasted was a very pretty drop indeed—never could desire a prettier tasted cider."

"They be for the love and the stalled ox both. Ah, the greedy martels!" said Grandfather James.

"Well, maybe they be. 'Surely,' says I, 'that couple between 'em have heaped up so much furniture and victuals that anybody would think they were going to take hold the big end of married life first, and began wi' a grown-up family.' Ah, what a bath of heat we two chaps were in, to be sure, a-getting that furntiure in order!"

"I do wish the room below was ceiled," said Fancy, as the dressing went on; "they can hear all we say and do up here."

"Hark! Who's that?" exclaimed a small pupil teacher, who also assisted this morning, to her great delight. She ran down the stairs and peeped round the baluster. "Oh, you should, you should!" she exclaimed, scrambling up to the room again.

"What?" said Fancy.

"See the bide-maids! They've just come! 'Tis wonderful, really! 'tis wonderful how muslin can be brought to it. There, they don't look a bit like themselves, but like some very rich sisters o' theirs that nobody knew they had!"

"Make 'em come up to me, make 'em come up!" cried Fancy ecstatically; and the four damsels appointed surged upstairs and floated along the passage.

"I wish Dick would come!" was again the burden of Fancy.

The same instant a small twig and flower from the creeper outside the door flew in at the open window, and a masculine voice said: "Ready Fancy dearest?"

"There he is—he is!" cried Fancy, tittering spasmodically and breathing as it were for the first time that morning.

The bride-maids crowded to the window and turned their heads in the direction pointed out, at which motion eight ear-rings all swung as one—not looking at Dick because they particularly wanted to see him, but with an important sense of their duty as obedient ministers of the will of that apotheosized being—the Bride.

"Now I'll run down," said Fancy looking at herself over her shoulder in the glass, and flitting off.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

The cause of stomach trouble is not any more in the stomach than headache is in the head. The effect is in the stomach and the head, but the cause lies in the backbone where displaced (subluxated) vertebrae are pressing on the nerve cables, shutting off the flow of nerve energy which should be going to these parts. If your stomach is fed with 100 per cent. of nerve energy, your stomach will not trouble you. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. Drs. Redick & Redick, 283½ Front St., Belleville. Phone 900. HOW'S YOUR BLOOD?

Pimples and Eruptions Mean Bad Blood

People who have impure or impoverished blood should be careful to take only a temperance remedy made of wild roots and barks, such as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is and has been for nearly 50 years. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

The first day you start to take this reliable medicine, impure germs and accumulations begin to separate in the blood and are then expelled through the eliminative organs.

In place of the impurities, the arteries and veins gradually get fresh vitalized blood and the action of this good blood on the skin means that pimples, boils, carbuncles, eczema, rash, acne and many skin blemishes will disappear. Then you must remember that when the blood is right, the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys become healthy, active and vigorous and you will have no more trouble with indigestion, backache, headache.

Get Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day at any medicine dealers, in tablet or liquid form, or send 10c for trial package to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—"A few years ago I was in a nervous and run-down condition and felt greatly in need of a tonic. A friend who was being helped by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advised me to try it, too. It helped me from the very start and eventually restored me to perfect health. I feel in a position to praise the 'Golden Medical Discovery' very highly and take pleasure in recommending it to all those who are at all nervous, weak or run-down."—MRS. ESTHER PEARSON.

COUNTESS MARKIEVICZ MAKES REAPPEARANCE

Dublin, May 18—Countess Georgia Markievicz, Sinn Feiner member of Parliament for the St. Patrick's division of Dublin, whose whereabouts has long been a mystery, made a theatrical reappearance clad in a commandant's uniform yesterday at an open air meeting in Croker Park in memory of the members of the Irish republican parliament who were executed after or killed during the rebellion of 1916. The countess delivered an address in which she appealed for support for Irish industries.

It is recalled that the police on March 12 raided the residence of Mrs. Eammon de Valera, wife of the Sinn Fein leader, in search of the countess.

The police barracks in Gormanstown, a village of County Meath, near Balbriggan, were attacked and burned Sunday morning.

IN DANGER OF ANNIHILATION

Constantinople, May 17—A French column of 3,000 soldiers, which left Killis, Asia Minor, May 9, to relieve the garrison at Ainteb, about thirty miles north of Killis, was met by a strong Nationalist force when ten miles from its destination and was compelled to return. The Nationalists were equipped with 1,000 cannon outranging the French 65's and kept up a continual attack upon the French.

Advices received here describe the situation at Killis as critical and at Ainteb it is desperate.

MAY 29 LAST DAY TO ENTER AVIATORS

Ottawa, Ont., May 18—May 29 has been fixed as the final date on which applications for membership in Canada's new flying militia can be posted to the Air Board. The board is considering this and other matters connected with the new force at a meeting here today.

It is expected that when the lists close at the end of this month about a thousand officers of the Royal Air Force will have enrolled, the flying militia will number about five thousand men, most of whom will put in a month or so in training at Camp Borden this year.

PARTURIENT PARESIS

Disease More Commonly Known as Milk Fever.

Symptoms Described and Treatment Suggested — Nothing Should Be Administered by the Mouth—How to Treat the Udder and Teats.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

PARTURIENT PARESIS, commonly, but improperly, called "milk fever" is a disease peculiar to breeding cows, and, as the name implies, appears at or near the time of parturition. In rare cases the symptoms have been noticed shortly before the appearances of labor pains, in some cases during the act of parturition, but in most cases not for a few hours or days after the young has been born. The exact cause and nature of the trouble, and the manner in which treatment acts, are still in comparative obscurity.

We know that it appears only in milch cows and at or about the period of parturition, that it has never been noticed at or following the birth of the first calf, and very rarely the second; that cows that are heavy milkers or in gross condition, or both, are particularly susceptible, but it is occasionally met with in a poor milker or an animal in low condtion.

Symptoms.—Shortly before, at, or in a variable time (say a few hours to three days) after parturition, the cows becomes uneasy, neglects her calf, stamps her feet, whisks her tail, and the eyes have a glassy appearance. She sways, has not proper control of her limbs, lies or falls down, may or may not be able to rise, goes down again. This may occur a few times, until she becomes unable to rise. She usually assumes one of two positions: lies either on her side with limbs and head outstretched, or on her sternum, with the head thrown backwards and the muzzle resting on the flank. There are few cases in which either one or the other of these positions are not observed. The temperature is subnormal in all uncomplicated cases, hence the term "milk fever" is not correct. More or less well marked coma is noted. In many cases she is apparently dead, except that breathing can be noticed, in many cases a sonorous breathing. She is insensible to curroundings and insensitive to pain. In some cases the development of the symptoms is very quick, while in others slow, and in some cases the extreme symptoms are not noticed. She may retain a degree of power of action and sensation.

Treatment.—It has been demonstrated that a full udder tends to prevent the disease. Hence it is good practice to allow the calf to remain with the dam for at least three days, as it will nurse frequently and a little at a time, never leaving the udder without considerable milk. When, for any reason this cannot be done, the milker should simulate nature as near as possible, by milking frequently, but very little at a time for three days. It is also good practice to reduce the animal's milk producing food for a few days before parturition is expected.

Curative Treatment.—We wish to particularly emphasize the fact that on no account, and under no circumstances, should any attempt be made to administer anything whatever by the mouth. Even in the very early stages of the disease, the patient loses the power to swallow; hence, if fluids be introduced into the mouth some of it will almost surely pass down the windpipe and cause death by suffocation in a few minutes, or set up mechanical bronchitis, which will probably cause death in a few days.

We have stated that "a full udder tends to prevent," now we say that "a distended udder tends to cure." Inflation with oxygen gas or sterilized air is easier and less liable to cause complications than distension with fluids. The use of gas demands the possession of a tank of compressed pure oxygen gas, and special apparatus. Outfits for inflating with sterilized air can be purchased from dealers in veterinary instruments for from $2 to $3, and where neither can be obtained an ordinary bicycle pump with a teat syphon attached may be used, but complications from the introduction of septic material are more liable than when gas or sterilized air is used.

The udder and teats must be thoroughly washed with an antiseptic such as a 5 per cent. solution of one of the coal tar antiseptics, the hands of the operator and the instruments also sterilized. All milk is drawn off, as its presence interferes more or less with inflation. The syphon is introduced into a teat, and all the gas or air that the quarter will hold is forced in, and the teat then tied tightly with tape to prevent escape of it. Each quarter is inflated and the teat tied. The udder is then well massaged every hour until the cow rises to her feet, which is usually in from one half to two hours. The tapes should be removed in at most two hours. If not on her feet in at most six hours the udder should be re-inflated. She should be given some easily digested food, or a reasonable amount of her usual food, and all the water she will take. If the weather be cold, the chill should be removed from the water and the cow kept as comfortable as possible. She should not be milked at all for 24 hours after inflation, and for the second twenty-four hours she should be milked frequently, but very little drawn at a time. Forty-eight hours after inflation she should be milked and attended to in the ordinary manner.—Dr. J. H. Reed, O. H. A. College, Guelph.

Shade is important for all classes of stock.

BISHOP DOANE'S LINES TO THE DOG.

(Published by request of the Belleville Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals).

I am quite sure he thinks that I am God—
Since he is God on whom each one depends
For life, and all things that His bounty sends.
My dear old dog, most constant of all friends,
Not quick to mind, but quicker far than I
To turn to God I know and own. His eye,
Deep brown and liquid, watches for my nod.
He is more patient underneath the rod
Than I, when God His wise correction sends.
He looks love at me, deep as words e'er spake,
And from me never crumbs nor sup will take
But he wags his thanks with his most vocal tail.
And when some crashing noise wakes all his fear
He is content and quiet if I am near;
Secure that my protection will prevail—
So faithful, mindful, thankful, trustful—he Tells me what I unto My God should be.

The closing exercises of the Sewing School will be held on Thursday evening at 7.20 o'clock at the City Mission, Dundas Street. There will be an exhibit of work and program by the pupils. All friends of the Mission are welcome.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

While out with a number of boys in the woods Saturday a lad by the name of Harold Skuce, whose home is in the North Ward, Lindsay, was shot in the knee. It appears the young fellows had a shot gun and were pegging at targets. The injuries are not serious.

PLEASANT RIDE.

Last Friday afternoon the children of the City Mission Sewing Class enjoyed a pleasant motor drive to Shannonville through the kindness of Mrs. Rose, Miss Wallbridge, Miss Ketcheson, Miss Jean McIntosh and Mr. Fred Deacon, Jr.

LOST THEIR EFFECTS.

In the fire which destroyed the Grand Trunk Railway station at Marysville on Sunday, Mr. Stack, station agent, who occupied a portion of the building as a dwelling, lost everything. At the time of the fire Mr. and Mrs. Stack were away and did not return until the building was nearly destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown.

LARGE TURTLE KILLED

Wm. Belfie, jr., and Merrill Cummings, of Gananoque, killed a large snapping turtle on Rockland Island, in the Admiralty Group, a few days ago. The turtle was the largest of which there is any record in that vicinity and would weigh about 60 lbs. It measured two and a half feet in length and eighteen inches in width. The young men's trophy will be mounted and placed in the Gananoque High School.

NVITATION TO YACHTSMEN

Kingston yachtsmen have received an invitation to participate in the race or motor cruisers from the Columbia acht Club, New York, to Bermuda, on June 26th, 1920, for trophies offered by that club and the Royal Bermuda Yacht Club. No one will go from Kingston as there is no boat fitted for the cruise, in the city. Considerable interest is shown in the proposed trip however, and many guesses as to the length of time the cruise will take have been made by old fresh water sailors. The last race was held in 1912 the average length of cruisers entering is 50 feet.

BLAZE AT DWELLING

At 9 o'clock this morning the fire brigade was called to 62 St. Charles street, where a frame dwelling, owned by Mrs. Gauthier and occupied by Mr. Jas. Doyle and family. The blaze was confined to the kitchen and roof. How it started is not known. The loss sustained to the building is covered by insurance, but Mr. Doyle had no insurance upon his contents which were damaged to some extent.

CAPT. WILMOTT INJURED.

Capt. Eardley Wilmott, son of Mrs. C. Wilmott, of Avondale, Belleville, is located at Buenos Ayres, South America, where he is following his profession of aviator, and was recently injured. He was getting ready for a flight and the mechanic was cranking the propeller when the machine short-circuited and the mechanic was hit by the propeller with such force as to break it. A flying piece of this hit a pipe leading from the gasoline tank and the gasoline took fire from the racing engine. All this time Captain Wilmott was strapped in and tried to cut off the engine, but the short circuit prevented him doing this. Although he got out as soon as possible he was burned on the legs, hands and feet. Captain Wilmott was taken to the hospital but hopes to be around again in a couple of weeks.

TRAIN FRIGHTENED MOOSE .....

An unusual sight was witnessed by the train crew on the Haliburton train Monday morning, and also by passengers. When a mile or so north of Kinmount Junction a big moose was noticed stalking through the open fields. When the passenger train pulled alongside the animal became frightened and started off at a lively clip. Coming to a wire fence, which the animal apperently did not see, the moose was thrown back forcibly on its haunches. Rising again, the big fellow attempted to jump over the fence and caught his feet. He tumbled to the ground in a heap but was up in an instant and dashed off in the brush. Moose are seldom seen in the north, so close to civilization.

BIG ARMY DRIVE

The Salvation Army Drive for $2,500 in Belleville started with a rush. Subscriptions for various amounts have been received by the Treasurer, J. G. Moffatt, Manager, Union Bank and canvassers have been calling at the homes of Belleville citizens. A ready response has been given to the appeal by all who have been called on. However, a larger number of volunteer canvassers would be very much appreciated by the Committees. Monday night at the City Hall an organization meeting was held, at which the various ward committees were appointed. Workers have been notified of their Districts and a further response to this appeal for volunteer workers is expected before the end of the week, if the entire town is to be covered. The last appeal to the generosity of the citizens of Belleville has been made. It is to be hoped that the citizens are generous and big minded enough to respond as is expected. If the canvassers have not reached your home, kindly call up Union Bank and make subscription. All good Bellevillians are expected to come to the aid of this Drive.

REV. DR. KILBORN DEAD.

Rev. Dr. Omar Leslie Kilborn, for 27 years a Methodist medical missionary in China, passed away Tuesday at the Toronto General Hospital following an attack of pneumonia. Dr. Kilborn was born near Frankville, Ont., in 1867, and was the son of the late Levi S. and Eliza F. Kilborn. He was educated at the High School at Athens and Queen's University, Kingston. He received his B.A. degree in 1888, and a year later received the M.A. degree. The same year he graduated as a Medical Doctor. For one session he was a tutor in chemistry at Queen's University. He then went to Europe for further education. He volunteered as a medical missionary to China and was one of the 18 missionaries who escaped with their lives during the anti-foreign riots in the Chentu during May and June, 1895. He also had several trying experiences during the Boxer troubles in 1902. He then returned to Canada on furlough, going back to China in 1910.

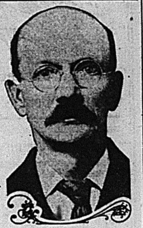
ALFRED H. EMERSON, owner of big stock farm, who says Tanlac built him right up after having a bad case of Flue, which left him in awful bad shape. Says Tanlac is only medicine that helped him.



"I have taken only one bottle of Tanlac, but it has done me more good than all the other medicines I have taken put together," said A. H. Emerson when he called at Guppy's Drug Store, Portland, Me., the other day. Mr. Emerson lives near West Scarboro, Me., where he owns and operates one of the largest stock farms in that section of the country.

"After I got up from the flu last winter I was in mighty bad shape," he continued. "I was not only in a weakened, debilitated condition, but I also suffered awfully with indigestion. My stomach was so weak I could hardly digest anything and could hardly bear the sight of food, much less eat anything. As I was not able to eat any nourishing food I kept getting worse and worse and I was badly discouraged over my condition as it looked like I would never get my strength back again. My nerves were all upset and my sleep was broken and irregular. I felt tired and worn out from morning until night and could hardly drag one foot after the other.

"I took many different kinds of medicine but nothing did me a particle of good until I began taking Tanlac. As I said before, I have taken only one bottle, but it has made such a remarkable change in my condition I feel like a different person altogether. My appetite is splendid now and I can eat anything I want and as much as I want without the slightest touch of indigestion. My strength and energy have returned. I sleep sound and get up in the mornings feeling ready for a big day's work. Tanlac has put me back on my feet and everybody certainly ought to know about this medicine."

DOG KILLED BY AUTO

Yesterday afternoon a good sized dog was struck by an auto on Front street and killed. The canine was one of the many that make Front street their home and seem to delight in running at cars.

BAT'S BIOGRAPHY

Mr. B. A. Trestrail, of Toronto, was in the city yesterday. Rotarian 'Bat' as he is familiarly known in the magic circle, was warmly welcomed by local Rotarian friends. "Bat's" specialty is biography and he promises some day to give the Belleville Rotarian Club a 'closeup' on "Bay of Quinte celebrities I have not known."

DESERTER SPENT TWO YEARS IN CAVE

Chillicothe, Ohio, May 19.—After nearly two years of hiding in the caves of Hocking Valley, near Adelphia, Ohio, in the fear that he would
Sir George Perley will also represent
Amerine, 24, a deserter from the 84th division, late Saturday gave himself up to military authorities at Camp Sherman, near here.

Amerine, who is 24, and who had been drafted in 1918, left the camp in August of that year to pay a visit to his wife, and infant baby near Adelphia, he said. He overstayed his leave. His wife, fearing he would be shot as a deserter, persuaded him to go into the hills, Amerine told the officers. There he lived in the caves until a friend of the family learned of his whereabouts and persuaded Amerine's wife to give her consent to his surrender.

During the time he was in hiding Amerine was furnished food by his wife, who sent it to him or took it to him in person daily. Amerine is awaiting trial at the camp.

HARD KNOCKS GIVEN TO ONE BIG UNION

Montreal, May 18—H. A. Mackie, M. P., for Edmonton, addressing the Progressive Club, pointed out that while there was not enough labor in Canada to meet the demands of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Government Railways, which required between them 16,000 men, yet the Canadian Pacific Railway was at the same time carrying through Canada back to China, thousands of laborers who had served in France. Labor here would not permit the men to do the work which it cannot do itself, and the nation is obliged to submit to labor's dictum. For the nation to insist would mean a state of civil war.

Mr. Mackie classified all extremists in Canada as coming under the One Big Union. He admitted the right of combination, but not when it became a menace to the nation, whether a combination of labor or of capital.

BUSINESS AGENT FOR TRAIN ROBBER

St. Joseph, Mo., May 19—In a signed confession Dick Smythe, chum of Horace Walton, who was killed after robbing an Illinois Central train near Chicago last Saturday, said he had been engaged by Walton as 'Business Agent and knew of Walton's plans for the robbery, Federal officials announced.

Walton told Smythe, according to the alleged confession, that he (Walton) committed the robbery of a Santa Fee train near Lexington Junction on April 6th last, when a considerable sum of money and Liberty Bonds were taken.

Smythe's duties, according to the alleged confession, were to assist Walton in the disposal of bonds and other loot garnered in his robberies.

He was summoned to Chicago some weeks ago, Smythe said.

No salary was stipulated, according to the alleged confession, but Smythe was told he would be paid liberally.

Walton had Smythe look up railroad time cards for him and attend to other preliminaries, but did not ask him to assist in the work of his enterprises, the officials say Smythe confessed. Smythe is ninteen years old. Walton was 22.

WILL ROUND UP 50,000 BOTTLES

Detroit, May 19—Information leading to knowledge of the whereabouts of 50,000 quarts of whiskey and other liquors hidden along the Detroit River between Detroit and Trenton is said to have been gained by Federal prohibition agents.

Such a quantity of liquor, at present prices, would be worth at least half a million dollars.

Conducting a secret investigation to-day agents of the Government questioned men believed to have knowledge of the whiskey-smuggling industry, forcing them to tell where the liquor was cached. Buried in the ground, planted in old barns and boat houses, and even hidden in the river bed, the stuff will be permitted to remain where it is while the Federal agents make a round up.

PUBLISHERS UNITE TO PURCHASE PAPER

Washington, May 18.—A group of publishers of smaller newspapers met here to consider ways of meeting the print paper shortage. This shortage has resulted in high prices which seriously threaten publishers who are without paper contracts and must buy on the "spot" market. The meeting will continue to-day and to-morrow and it is probable that a permanent organization of publishers will be formed to co-operate in paper buying.

GOVERNMENT TO WAGE WAR ON MOSQUITOES

Federal agents of the Department of Agriculture are planning to wage war on mosquitoes this summer, particularly in the Fraser Valley fruit district of British Columbia. Last year this pest seriously hampered the work of berrypickers during the harvest season. For its attack on the grasshopper plague the department has ordered 2,000 tons of bran, nearly 100,000 pounds of arsenic and 50,000 gallons of syrup. Between two and four grains of arsenic is sufficient to kill a human being, departmental experts say.

CHURCHES IN COBALT ARE ABOUT TO UNITE

Cobalt, May 19.—Efforts to effect a union between the Methodist and Presbyterian congregations will be advanced another stage at meetings to be held here. Rev. J. D. Byrnes, Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions for Northern Ontario, and Rev. F. L. Brown, who occupies a similar office in the Methodist Church are to be in town, and will meet the Union Committee in the afternoon and the congregations at night. The negotiations have been under way quietly for some time, and are expected to bear fruit. The intention is to use the Presbyterian Church if the proposal carries. It is probable that Rev. A. W. Hone, Methodist and Rev. V. V. McLean, Presbyterian, will both leave the camp, thus making an open field for a newcomer. The union, if approved will go into effect on the first Sunday in July.

Public Sitting To Be Held With View To Tariff Revision

INVESTIGATIONS TO BE CONDUCTED BY DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF EXPERT AND OTHER ADVISERS.

OTTAWA, May 20—After prorogation, public sittings with a view to tariff revision would be held throughout the Dominion, the Finance Minister announced in the course of his budget speech. The investigations would be conducted by the Department of Finance with the assistance of such experts and other advisers as would be necessary to conduct a thorough inquiry. The policy of the Government called for a thorough revision of the tariff with a view to the adoption of such reasonable measures as were necessary:

(a) To assist in providing adequate revenues; (b) to stabilize legitimate industries and to encourage the establishment of new industries essential to the proper economic development of the nation—to the end that a proper and ever-increasing field of useful and remunerative employment be available for the nations workers; (c) to develop to the fullest extent, Canada's natural resources; (d) specially to promote and increase trade with the Mother Country, the sister Dominions and Colonies and Crown dependencies; (e) to prevent the use of the tariff for the exploitation of the consumer, and, (f) to safeguard the interests of the Canadian people in the existing struggle for commercial and industrial supremacy.

"As a means of raising revenue," Sir Henry added, "the tariff should be so adjusted as to place the chief burden upon those best able to bear it." Articles of luxury should be heavily taxed through the imposition of Customs and excise rates. Necessaries of life, not produced nor manufactured in Canada, should if taxed at all, bear only such imposts as were necessary for revenue purposes.

Hawes, St. Louis, President of the American Bankers' Association told the annual convention of the Missouri Bankers' Association here yesterday. He urged the bankers to refrain from lending money for speculation in food and land.

Bread to Stay Up

Chicago, May 20—The cost of bread will not be reduced unless the price of flour decreases at least $4 a barrel, Eugene Lipp, president of the National Retail Bakers' Association, said yesterday at a meeting of the Illinois Association of the baking industry. Price-Cutting Wave Grows Across Border

New York, May 20—Pursuant to their pledge to the Federal Reserve Board, leading banking interests of this city today extended their campaign of deflation of credits and high commodity prices.

In the financial district this policy already has been effective in reducing speculative loans against securities to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars in the last fortnight. In one instance, that of a prominent trust company, it is said that credits of this character had been reduced by $100,000,000 in the last three weeks Banks in the wholesale dry goods and general merchandise districts have been proceeding along the same lines, and the pressure exerted by those institutions is said to be directly responsible for the wave of price cutting in many lines of retail trade, especially by the large department stores.

Reduce Loans to Merchants

Downtown banks, which in a large measure control operations of uptown banks, are reported to have advised drastic curtailment of loans to merchants who for any reason fail to comply with the Government's deflation program.

Importers and other dealers in the luxurious articles of apparel as well as manufacturers of jewelry, silverware and other so-called non-esentials are said to have received word from their banks that only the most moderate financial accommodations may be expected at this time.

The president of a bank in the whole sale shoe district is authority for the statement that loans to dealers in leather and rubber goods are smaller now than at any period in the last 15 months.

The price-slashing movement appeared to have struck New York today. Afternoon newspapers carry advertisements inserted by many of the leading department stores reading:

"Reductions of $23.50 to $70 in womens' high class capes, cape-wraps and wrap-coats." "Fifty per cent. off on our entire stock of children's and misses' hats." "Any suit, coat or dress at half price." "At less than cost—remaining stock of spring dresses."

Meanwhile the city hall became the scene of a public hearing on high prices. A number of prominent sugar brokers were examined.

Man Murdered In Niagara Falls

Italian Shot in Broad Daylight by a Gang of Thugs

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 20—Ralph Mandrolo, an Italian, 41 years old, was shot in broad daylight yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock on a city street. A shot-gun was pushed through a window and was followed by revolver shots by men on the verandah Practically every shot took effect and the man fell with his head almost blown off. He was walking along the street towards the house when fire was opened. When found he had his hand in his hip pocket, where he had an automatic Colt and was lying in a pool of blood. The police believe it to be a Black Hand case. Two children playing across the street were hit by the spraying shot from the shotgun but not seriously hurt. The murdered man has been living wtih another Italian's wife. He had been threatened and was fired at Monday night and hit in the fingers, but made no complaint.

The woman is being held at police headquarters and evidently knows all about the man who did the shooting, as she is said to have been on the sidewalk when the shooting occurred. The police were quickly on the scene, but the man has disappeared into the open country. The suspect for whom the police are looking is said to be a medium-sized man with a sandy moustache. The woman admits knowing all details but so far has not given any real information. A son of the woman is expected to give valuable evidence, having been close by at the time.

Crest Of Prices Has Been Reached

No Indication That Prices Will Be Higher Next Fall and Winter

NEW YORK, May 20.—Telegraphic reports to the Evening Sun from the leading industrial centres where the necessaries of life are produced are to the effect that the crest of the high prices has been reached in the United States, and in many instances passed. Nowhere is there found an indication that prices will be higher next fall and winter than they are now, and in most places it is indicated that a reduction is certain to come.

The main reason for the prediction is that people have finished their era of extravagance, and are not buying without regard in price as in the past. They are doing without non-essentials to a larger extent and are buying cheaper articles than the best and highest priced.

Can Shell City 100 Miles Distant

U. S. Navy Ordnance Department Has Just Completed Weapon

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The signing of the armistice robbed America of an opportunity to shell a German city at a distance of more than 100 miles.

This was revealed by Navy Department officials in letting it become known that the Navy Ordnance Bureau has completed a weapon capable of such a performance.

When reports first reached Washington that Paris was being shelled at a that the German gun was a myth and tha tthe German gun was a myth and that the shells were being dropped from camouflaged airplanes, The Navy Ordnance Bureau took it seriously, however, and immediately set to work on the piece which has just been completed.

Details of the gun were not made public. But tests, conducted by a method otherwise than firing it at its ultimate range, indicated it would carry almost 110 miles.

Colours Of 21st Battalion For Princess Of Wales Own

GLORIOUS WAR RECORD OF 21ST BATTALION, C.E.F., WILL BE PERPETUATED IN ACTIVE BATTALION OF PRINCESS OF WALES OWN REGIMENT OF KINGSTON — TRANSFER OF COLORS.

Five years ago the first of the present month, a goodly number of the citizens of Belleville travelled to Kingston to bid their lads in the 21st Battalion a farewell and God speed on their journey to the battlefields of France and Flanders. A year ago Monday next (Empire Day) the trip to Kingston was again made, this time to join with the Kingstonians and hundreds of others from the 3rd Military District in the loyal rousing welcome home the Battalion received.

GLORIOUS RECORDS

In those intervening four years, the original Battalion had received reinforcements of over four thousand all ranks; had lost through killed in action or died of wounds, one thousand all ranks; and had depletions owing to evacuations to England through wounded in action, two thousand five hundred all ranks. They had held the craters at St. Eloi '16, and been with the storm troops at Somme '16, Vimy, Hill 70, Passchendaele, Amiens, Arras, Cambrai and Mons '18 and with the Army of Occupation in the neutral zone. With all the promotions and welding in of reinforcements, this fighting unit of the Canadian forces was ever known as one of the happiest Battalions on active service. The spirit of Regimental loyalty is still strong amongst its ex-members and wherever 21st men meet, while the exploits of other units are admitted, even admired, yet the 21st Battalion ever figures in the conversation as the best battalion that ever went overseas.

21ST PERPETUATED

With the re-organization of the Canadian Militia this unit is perpetuated in the active battalion of the Princess' of Wales Own Regiment of Kingston formerly the 14th Regiment (Princess of Wales' Own Rifles).

The Colours of the 21st Battalion are amongst the rare few of those of the Canadian Regiments that have been paraded into German territory and across the Rhine. At 11 o'clock on the morning of June 3rd next, at the cricket field, Kingston, where the Battalion did its preliminary training in 1914, these Colours are to be transferred to the custody of the Princess of Wales' Own Regiment with fitting ceremony.

INVITATION TO CEREMONY

Lieut.-Col. H. E. Pense, D.S.O., now C.O. of the Kingston Battalion and who took over the 21st Battalion when its commander Lieut.-Col. Elmer Jones, D.S.O., was killed in the first day's action of the Battle of Amiens, and commanded it till its demobilization, has issued an invitation not only to all ex-members of the 21st Battalion to be present for the ceremony but to all citizens of the District.

ANNIVERSARY EVENT

To many in the city, this event will partake of the nature of an anniversary, five years since they journeyed to Kingston to see their boys away and a year ago when they travelled again, to welcome their men home.

Colonel Pense and those under his command are to be congratulated in having the Colours of the 21st Battalion, in their militia unit, and they will, as the years roll by, become more and more emblimatical of, not only sacrifices and hardships endured, but the glorious cause for which the war was fought and won.

Citizens Fight Detectives Twelve Killed In Riot

VIRGINIA VILLAGE SCENE OF SANGUINARY BATTLE ARISING OUT OF LABOR TROUBLES AND EVICTION OF MINERS FROM COMPANY HOUSES—CITIZENS CLASH WITH PRIVATE DETECTIVES.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MATEWAN, W. Va., May 20.—With 100 deputy sheriffs armed with rifles patrolling the streets, and detachments of State constabulary expected to arrive at any moment, the situation in this mining village, the scene of the killing of twelve persons last night in a battle between private detectives and citizens, was quiet early today. Last night's shooting in which detectives clashed with citizens and Matewan police resulted, according to the authorities, from the action of the detectives, who evicted a number of the miners from Stone Mountain Coal Company houses yesterday. Two Stone Company mines were closed recently when it became known that an effort was being made to unionize them. The miners claim that the detectives were sent to dispossess families of workers who have been dismissed.

How New Taxes Will Be Collected

OTTAWA, May 20—The question has been asked whether retailers ought to collect the new excise taxes on goods of all the classes mentioned in the luxury tax resolution and already included in their stock. The articles covered by the resolution are divided into two categories in so far as collections is concerned. Taxes on one set of articles are collected by the retailers; taxes on the other list are collected by manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers when they make sales or when they pay Customs duties, if the goods are imported. Thus retailers will collect the tax on boots and shoes, hats, caps, hose, men's neckwear, specified articles of men's and women's apparel, fans, purses, trunks and valises, sporting goods, velvet and silk fabrics, classes of tableware, ribbons and lace embroidery, smokers' accessories, fancy pocket knives and pencils and toilet articles, carpets, curtains, chandeliers, gold and silverware and jewelry, at present in their possession.

They are not called upon to collect the taxes upon pleasure boats, cameras, confectionery, firearms, musical instruments, playing cards, perfumes and liquors. Taxes on such goods are collected by manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers when they sell or import them. That is to say, a retail merchant is not required to collect from the purchaser the new tax of 20 per cent on a phonograph in his hands. The instrument in question has already been taxed 10 per cent, under the former law. The retailer himself will pay to the manufacturer or wholesale dealer the new 20 per cent. tax on phonographs bought by him today or hereafter for re-sale. He will then no doubt pass on the amount of the tax to the purchaser of the machines.

High Prices Strike Toboggan

Cuts from 25 to 75 Per Cent. in Everything Except Food

NEW YORK, May 20—Advertisements in newspapers today gave convincing proof of the comprehensiveness of price deflations in retail lines except food. Cuts ranged from 20 to 75 per cent. with the largest reductions occurring in commodities classified as luxuries. Food remained high. People must have it and must pay, the prices demanded.

The current deflation is attributed to the trend of economy that has taken possession of the public. Some specified effects follow:

Furs are selling in Fifth Avenue for $75 which were held for $100 several weeks ago. Shoes that were selling at $20 are now offered at $11.65. A woman's suit priced at $245 may be had for $100 less.

Men's clothing has dropped in proportion. Blue serges that were $50 are advertised at $28.50. Palm Beach suits have dropped from last year's price of $20 to $12. Collars that climbed to 30 cents are being offered as low as 21 cents.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

TOM MIX, COWBOY STAR

Tom Mix is the star of the newest dramatic film of the west, "The Daredevil," at Griffin's tonight to Saturday. "The Daredevil" is the cowboy star's own idea of what a western photoplay should be to depict truthfully the thrilling life of the plains. Mix wrote and directed the "Daredevil." He has conceived for this picture the most unusual and hazardous feats of daring that has ever been shown on the screen. Leaping from the back of a galloping horse to a train travelling at the rate of 30 miles an hour is one of the stunts that the former Texas ranger has accomplished before the camera. Needless to say, Mix has surrounded himself with children of the west, men and women who do not know the meaning of fear. Eva Novak, a young and attractive blonde, is an excellent foil for the dashing Mix. Charles K. French, L. C. Shumway, Sid Jordan, Lucille Younge, and George Hernandez are among the others that capably support this brilliant star.

The 2nd episode of the Prince of Wales' tour through Canada this week Ontario, a funny two-reel comedy and other plays are also being shown on the same program.

"THE PRODIGAL WIFE"

Mary Boland, who is featured with Lucy Cotton in the Screencraft production of "The Prodigal Wife" which is being shown at the Palace tonight to Saturday matinee daily, thinks only such moving pictures should be made as have a purpose. As opposed to those screen stars who demand that they shall appear exclusively in stories which will give fullest scope for their beauty, Miss Boland cares little for whether the story presents her in the most attractive light, or not, so long as it provides the opportunity for real acting and contains a message that will touch the hearts of audiences. In "The Prodigal Wife," Miss Boland is called upon to depict a woman who is utterly destitute and wretched. Underlying the dramatic force of the story is a beautiful object lesson of the value of ideals. The manner with which Miss Boland brings this purpose home to the onlookers, without their being conscious of it, is a signal tribute to her own ideals and to her remarkable talent as an actress. This talent for several years has been utilized on the stage, where Miss Boland appeared as leading lady for John Drew. At the present time she is playing on the stage opposite Leo Ditrichstesin in "The Matinee Hero."

Amusements Will Be Heavily Taxed

Approximately 25 Per Cent. Increase Becomes Effective on June 1.

The revenue derived by the Province from the Theatres and Cinematographs Act, will be increased approximately 25 per cent. by amended regulations which were announced today, and which take effect June 1.

Theatres in municipalities of 10,000 or more population, will be charged 35 cents a seat for their license fee. The previous rate was 25 cents. In municipalities of between 5,000 and 10,000 theatres will pay 25 cents a seat, an increase of 20 cents. In municipalities between 3,000 and 5000 they will pay 20 cents a seat in lieu of a flat rate of $75; in municipalities of between 1,500 and 3,000, 15 cents a seat, in lieu of a flat rate of $50, and in municipalities of less than 1,500, 10 cents a seat, in lieu of a fee which was previously fixed by the Provincial Treasurer to meet individual cases.

A license fee of $25 is imposed on all traveling theatrical companies. The license is for a year, but must be paid in full whether the company plays one week or 52 in Ontario. A similar fee of $1 is imposed on all vaudeville companies.

Public dance halls, baseball parks and skating rinks, in municipalities of 10,000 or over will pay a license fee of $10 a year, and in municipalities of less than 10,000, $3 a year. The previous rate was a flat rate of $1.

Motion picture operators will be required to pay $15 for their examination, an increase of $7, and to pay $5 for renewal of their license, an increase of $2.

Dewart Attacks License Board

Liberal Leader Had Open Rupture In House with J. W. Curry

TORONTO, May 19—The Ontario Temperance Act amendments were put through committee in the Legislature last night, and without any amendment, though the Liberals tried hard to get the Government to accept a change by which offenders against the Act would not be so much at the mercy of magistrates, many of whom, it was contended, had no qualifications for their work. An amendment was introduced by R. L. Brackin, Liberal member for West Kent, who proposed that a person charged should have the right of electing to be tried by a county judge or a magistrate. When it was pointed out that this question could be taken up by the special committee to be appointed to consider the whole administration of the Act, Mr. Brackin withdrew his amendment. Mr. Dewart, however, persisted in a demand that an appeal be allowed as to facts and fines to the county judge. He did not want the reviewing of fines to be entirely in the hands of the Ontario License Board.

The control of the board in respect to fines gave the Liberal leader another opportunity to engage in his favorite pastime of attacking the License Commissioners. Incidentally, it led him into direct conflict with one of his supporters—J. W. Curry, K. C.—who took strong exception to Mr. Dewart's references to the board and expressed his own confidence in its members.

The Liberal leader started his attack by declaring that the final word as to remission of fines should not be left in the hands of "a Board of License Commissioners in which the people have no confidence."

Attack on Mr. Flavelle

"Why should the whole question rest in hands of Mr. Flavelle, who sits here looking at me?" asked Mr. Dewart, glaring at the chairman who was sitting under the gallery. "I do not propose to have one man who has no interest in the business of this province, a man who dictates to the province as he has for many years, say what they will do with penalties. The proper course is to give that power to a judge of the land in whom the people have confidence, and not a License Board in which we have no confidence."

Mr. Dewart declared that the License Board was the most partizan one that ever existed, and that partizanship had been shown by the manner in which they had dealt with the 62 pr cnt. proof spirit vishnick during the feast of the Passover. The Liberal leader promised that upon consideration of the estimates he would move for the reduction in the membership of the board.

Mr. Drury, in replying to Mr. Dewart's suggestion that an appeal be allowed, referred to the fact that a committee was to be appointed. The law as it was had been on the statute books for many years, and no harm could be done by letting it stay there another year. Karl Homouth, Labor member for South Waterloo, was not content with this. He thought the legal committee could get to work on the matter and draft a suitable amendment. Mr. Drury reiterated that the matter could stand until the special committee had dealt with it and other questions affecting the administration of the Act. There was hardly time to deal with it thoroughly now.

LABOR MAINTAINS FIGHT

Winnipeg, May 18—A. J. Andrews, K. C., Crown Counsel in the recent State trials, may be retained by the Dominion Government to argue against the appeal of R. B. Russell before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Despite the refusal of Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, to waive objection to the appeal, W. H. Trueman, K. It is probable a hearing will be set for a day following the Whitsuntide holiday, as the committee sits until the end of July in London.

CENTENARY OF BELLEVILLE RETURN OF OLD BOYS AND GIRLS

GREATEST RE-UNION EVER JULY 24, 25, 26, 27, 1920,

MAKE THE MOST OF IT

It is not generally remembered that Belleville got its name over a hundred years ago; to be exact in 1816. It was intended in 1916 to celebrate the Centennial, but as we were then engaged in the Great War it was decided to postpone the Centennial Celebration till after the war. The Old Boys' Quinquennial Reunion which was to have been held in 1915 was postponed for the same reason. This summer the Centennial and Old Boys' Reunion will be held at the same time. No one now alive in the city will ever see another Centennial of Belleville and no doubt everyone will make the most of it.

FIRST BELLEVILLE SETTLERS

Away back in 1789 the first white settler in this section, Capt. John Singleton a U. E. Loyalist got a grant of 400 acres of land which now forms part of Belleville and erected a log house near the Bay. An old partly filled well, up to a few years ago, marked the spot but every trace of the home of the first settler has disappeared. The River was for a time called Singleton's River after the first settler. There is nothing now left, not even the name of a street, to bring to mind or mark the event of the first settlement of Belleville. At that time there was a thickly wooded swamp on both sides of the River nearly down to the Bay. Lot 4 consisting of 200 acres lying east of and adjoining the River was an Indian Burying Ground and the front part occupied by Indians. Capt. John Singleton might have felt rewarded for all his privations if he could have seen the beautiful City of Belleville rise up from the wilderness where he built the first house.

B. H. S 9 — ANN STREET 9.

On Wednesday afternoon the first forms of B.H.S. journeyed to Ann St. School to play a friendly game of baseball with a team from that school. The result was a tie—9 to 9. The game was called at the end of the seventh innings on account of rain.

The game started off with B.H.S. at the bat. Strahon was on the mound for Ann Street and the boys from the B.H.S. scored six runs before the rally could be stopped. It looked as if it would be a walk-away for the B.H.S. but next innings Jeffrey went in the box for Q.A.S. and not a man reached first base. The game was very exciting, as both teams were showing their best wares. Christie pitched a fine game for B.H.S. and was given excellent support by his team-mates. Harden was at the receiving end and did well. Owing to the absence of their star first baseman Symons, Curry played the initial sack for B. H. S. and put in a good game. Jeffrey twirled a good game but at times was given ragged support. Merriam caught a good game.

A return game will be played in the near future. Ann street plays Q.M.S. tonight, and if the former wins they have the championship of the Public School League. Mr. V. E. Bulloch umpired the game in a most impartial manner.

Protest G.T.R. Edict To Board

Railways Told to Settle Prepayment Question

OTTAWA, May 19.—A recent announcement by the G.T.R. that it would demand prepayment in United States funds for the Canadian haul from the Niagara border to Toronto and other Ontario points on all coal shipments resulted in the whole matter being brought to the attention of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada. Because of the international aspect to the situation no decision was given by the board, but it strongly advised the railroads to hold a conference and arrive at some settlement of the complicated question. The meeting will be held on Thursday. It was also intimated by the board that if no settlement is reached by the railways themselves the board would take action on Monday next.

Those protesting against the G.T.R. ruling were headed by H. A. Harrington of Toronto Ontario Fuel Controller who appeared for the general public. Other bodies represented were the Canadian Manufacturers' Association Boards of Trade of Montreal and Toronto, the Canadian Retail Coal Association and the Toronto Wholesale Coal Association. The railway companies represented were the G.T.R., C.P.R., the N.Y.C., and the M.C.R.

It was pointed out by Mr. Harrington that if the G.T.R. adhered to its present position, prepayment of the Canadian haul in United States funds would cost coal consumers in Ontario an additional $2,000,000 annually. The G.T.R. contends that Black Rock and Suspension Bridge are in United States territory and come under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that consequently it is entitled to prepayment in United States funds.

Mr. Harrington further contended that the G.T.R. being a Dominion Government road was not entitled to receive payment in United States funds for haul on its Canadian lines, but that it should accept payment in Canadian funds. Further, he said the G.T.R. was under the control of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada and was not entitled to claim that the Interstate Commerce Commission had jurisdiction over their Canadian business. His arguments were strongly supported by the other bodies represented.

RELEASE ARNSTEIN ON $100,000 BAIL

New York, May 20.—Jules W. ("Nicky") Arnstein, leading man in New York's $5,000,000 bond plot drama, spent last night at home.

After passing two days and nights in Ludlow Street Jail because of his failure to obtain $25,000 bail demanded by the Federal Court in bankruptcy proceedings against him, he finally succeeded in obtaining a surety bond, and left his cell for the open air at 6.40 o'clock last night. Arnstein, who surrendered himself at the District Attorney's office on Saturday, after a continent-wide search had been made for him for two months, previously had obtained bail of $75,000, required by the State Courts, to insure his release on charges of criminally receiving $12,000 worth of stolen securities.

Arnstein was accompanied from the jail by his wife, Fannie Brice, the actress, and his counsel, W. J. Fallon.

Arnstein will continue to refuse to answer questions such as those upon which he was silent Saturday, his counsel said. Mr. Fallon declared the charge of concealing assets has been made, and this is a Federal crime.

FRIENDLY RELATIONS ESSENTIAL.

Belleville's largest and most important industry is the Grand Trunk Railway, and this fact should be borne in mind in any negotiations between the city and the company. It is essential that the good feeling existing between the city and the company should be maintained and that no misunderstandings or resentment be engendered. The monthly payroll of the G. T. R. is a large factor in the business prosperity of Belleville, and with the changed conditions now existing under government ownership of the G. T. R. and C. N. R., both under one management, there will doubtless be consolidation and centralization of operation to a considerable extent in which Belleville may be benefitted or injured. Every effort should be made to maintain the most friendly of relations in the best interests of the present and future prosperity of Belleville.

POLITICAL DIRTY LINEN.

President Wilson was "too proud to fight" even when Germany committed the foul outrage of sinking the Lusitania, and only continuous acts of barbarity to American citizens on the high seas, and treachery at home, with murder and arson, bold and ruthless, finally broke that pride down, and the United States entered the war. Then the President desired more speed, and seems to have been disagreeably shocked when he found that the British navy could get along very well without his advice and paid no attention to his suggestions whatever. The President didn't see why the British navy could not sail right into Kiel and smash up the Hun fleet regardless. He figured out that Britain had plenty of warships to spare, and no doubt could march her jackies to victory over the wreckage of sunken ships destroyed by mines on the way in to the hiding places of the "Der Tag" navy, which achieved such glorious rear-guard victories at Jutland and elsewhere.

President Wilson's naval wisdom is about on a par with one of his admirals, who said that "the Germans stood the British on their heads at the Battle of Jutland." Quite so, but if the British warships had been able to catch up to Fritzie's fleeing warships there would have been few returns at Kiel that day of the brave floating fortresses which stole out under cover of fog, rain and general invisibility to battle with fishing smacks and perchance bravely bombard bathers at seaside resorts. The Huns were under no misconceptions of what they were up against when they sighted the British fleet, so they always headed for home immediately at full speed, and, disregarding all rules of warfare, filled their wake full of floating mines, through which the British fleet had to pick their way.

Of course, President Wilson's objections to the conduct of the British navy were embalmed in private correspondence to his admirals, now made public through the dirty political squabble kicked up over U. S. naval affairs and friction between deck sailors and desk sailors.

Whatever suggestions were made by President Wilson, or on his behalf, to the British Admiralty, were courteously received, treated with respect, and have never been given out for public dissection. It remained for the political hysteria at Washington to cheapen the President and the U. S. navy to that extent.

It also must be taken into consideration that when the President was so concerned about naval operations the war was at its height and the outcome looked uncertain, while everyone's nerves were strained to the breaking point. Whatever he said or did then may look small and childish now, but at the time, and from his limited viewpoint, they might have looked different. In any event, none of the documents should ever have been published, and it is a matter for pride that the violation of private documents did not come from British officialdom, but was the unfortunate result of private and public feuds in the United States navy and Washington Naval Department. The controversy has been unfortunate, and a calamity to the United States navy compared to which an honorable defeat upon the high seas would be a glorious victory.

ENGLAND COMES

It is not that the flow'rs sweet there
With comlier hue in quaint old gardens through,
Nor that the nightingale in notes more rare
Bestrews a lovlier April dusk with song.

It is not that the hedges and the bees,
The bourgeoning verdure of a softer spring,
Or gentler whispering winds in greener trees
By thrice-more magic brooks ablossoming—

It is not these that thrill me, nor grey walls,
With statelier-ivied grace as years unfold,
Nor battlemented castles, nor great halls,
Rich with old tapestries and armor old;
But this! That still the heart of England burns;
And still the torch of England's wrath flames bright,
And England's strength to England's stroke lend might.

When little peoples, with great ills beset,
Hold back the tyrant from their cherished homes,
The fire of England's anger kindles yet;
Still rings the age-old answer:
"England comes."

Not an Acorn

When James A. Garfield was President of Hiram College, a man brought up his son to be entered as a student. He wanted the boy to take a course shorter than the regular one.

"My son can never take all those studies," said the father. "He wants to get through more quickly. Can't you arrange it for him?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Garfield. "He can take a shorter course; it all depends on what you want to make of him. When God wants to make an oak he takes a hundred years, but He takes only two months to make a squash."—The Sample Case.

Par-ol

The Human Body Lubricant

The Oil of Human Kindness

No woman would think of running her sewing machine without oiling it regularly.

No man would think of running his motor car without oiling it regularly.

No stenographer would think of running her typewriter without oiling it regularly.

No man would think of running the machinery in his factory without oiling it regularly.

But how few of us oil the human body regularly!

Yet, for the very same reason that you oil machinery—you should oil the human digestive organs—the bowels.

The purest, most effective oil for this is Par-ol, the Human Body Lubricant.

Par-ol is a highly refined petroleum oil of unvarying purity. It has a specific gravity of .865 to .870 at 15° Centigrade.

One week's treatment should benefit you wonderfully. If you suffer from recurrent constipation it will banish it by removing the cause.

Most druggists sell it. Don't accept a substitute—you'll be disappointed—Par-ol—that's the name. $1.00 bottle is enough for a month's treatment.

PALE, ANAEMIC WOMEN NEED BETTER BLOOD

Vinol Will Enrich the Blood and Create Strength

Physicians Recommend It and Druggists Guarantee It

How many women do you know who are perfectly well, strong and healthy as a woman should be?

They may not be sick enough to lie in bed, but they are thin, nervous, run-down, tired and devitalized.

Women are so active nowadays, and so much is expected of them that they constantly overdo, and suffer from headaches, backache, nervousness and kindred ills.

Such women need VINOL, our non-secret cod liver, iron and hypophosphite tonic. It creates a healthy appetite, aids digestion, makes rich red blood and imparts strength and energy to every nerve, muscle and tissue of the body.

One woman recently wrote us saying: "I was all run-down, thin, pale, and oh, so nervous, but two bottles of VINOL put me on my feet again and made me strong and well. VINOL has done me more good than all other medicines I have ever taken put together."

VINOL is a wonderful strength creator—so why not try it on the guarantee of your druggist.

PART V—CHAPTER I

"Oh, Dick!" she exclaimed, "I am so glad yau are come! I knew you would, of course, but I thought, oh, if you shouldn't!"

"Not come, Fancy! Het or wet, blow or snow, here come I today! Why what's possessing your little soul? You never used to mind such things a bit."

"Ah, Mr. Dick. I hadn't hoisted my colors and committed myself then" said Fancy.

"'Tis a pity I can't marry the whole five of ye," said Dick, surveying them all round.

"Heh-heh-heh!" laughed the four bride-maids: and Fancy privately touched Dick and smoothed him down behind his shoulder, as if to assure herself that he was there in flesh and blood as her own property.

"Well, who ever would have thought such a thing?" said Dick, taking off his hat, sinking into a chair, and turning to the elder members of the company.

The elder members of the company arranged their eyes and lips to signify that, in their opinion, nobody could have thought such a thing, whatever it was.

"That my bees should have swarmed just then of all times and seasons," continued Dick, throwing a comprehensive glance like a net over the whole auditory. "And 'tis a fine swarm, too—I haven't seen such a fine swarm for these ten years."

"An excellent sign," said Mrs. Penny, from the depths of experience "An excellent sign."

"I am glad everything seems so right," said Fancy, with a breath of relief.

"And so am I," said the four bridemaids, with much sympathy.

"Well, bees can't be put off," observed Grandfather James. "Marrying a woman is a thing you can do at any moment, but a swarm of bees won't come for the asking."

Dick fanned himself with his hat. "I can't think," he said, thoughtfully, "whatever 'twas I did to offend Mr Maybold—a man I like so much, too. He rather took to me when he came first, and used to say he would like to see me married, and that he'd marry me, whether the young woman I chose lived in his parish or no. I slightly reminded him of it when I put in the banns, but he didn't seem to take kindly to the notion now, and so I said no more. I wonder how it was!"

"I wonder," said Fancy, looking into vacancy with those beautiful eyes of hers—too refined and beautiful for a tranter's wife, but, perhaps not too good.

"Altered his mind, as folk will, I suppose," said the tranter. "Well, my sonnies, there'll be a good strong party looking at us today as we go along."

"And the body of the church," said Geoffrey, "will be lined with feymells and a row of young fellers' heads, as far down as the eyes, will be noticed jist above the sills of the chancel-winders."

"Ay, you've been through it twice," said Reuben, "and well may know."

"I can put up with it for once," said Dick, "or twice either, or a dozen times."

"Oh, Dick!" said Fancy, reproachfully.

"Why, dear, that's nothing—only just a bit of a flourish. You are as nervous as a cat today."

"And then, of course, when 'tis all over," continued the tranter, "we shall march two-and-two round the parish."

"Yes, sure," said Mr. Penny; "two and-two—every man hitched up to his woman, 'a b'lieve."

"I never can make a show of myself in that way!" said Fancy, looking at Dick to ascertain if he could.

"I'm agreed to anything you and the company likes, my dear!" said Mr. Richard Dewy, heartily.

"Why, we did when we were married didn't we, Ann?" said the tranter; "and so do everybody, my sonnies."

"And so did we," said Fancy's father.

"And so did Penny and I," said Mrs. Penny. "I wore my best Bath clogs, I remember, and Penny was cross because it made me look so tall."

"And so did father and mother," said Miss Mercy Onmey.

"And I mane to, come next Christmas," said Nat, the groomsman, vigorously, and looking toward the person of Miss Vashti Sniff.

"Respectable people don't nowadays," said Fancy. "Still; since poor mother did, I will."

"Ay," resumed the tranter, "'twas on a White Tuesday when I committed it. Mellstock Club walked the same day, and we new-married folk went a-gaying round the parish behind 'em. Everybody used to wear summer white at Whitsuntide in them days. My sonnies, I've got they very white trousers that I wore at home in a box now. Ha'nt I, Ann?"

"You had till I cut 'em up for Jimmy," said Mrs. Dewy.

"And we ought, by right, to go round Galligar Lane, by Quenton's," said Mr. Penny, recovering scent of the matter in hand. "Dairyman Quenton is a very respectale man, and so is Farmer Crocker, and we ought to show ourselves to them."

"True," said the tranter; "we ought to go round Galligar Lane to do the thing well. We shall form a very striking object walking along—good-now, neighbors?"

"That we shall—a proper pretty sight for the nation," said Mrs. Penny.

"Halloo!" said the tranter, suddenly catching sight of a singular human figure standing in the door-way and wearing a long smock-frock of pillow-case cut and of snowy whiteness. "Why, Leaf! whatever dost thou do here?"

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

CORN VALUES BREAK ON CHICAGO MARKET

Chicago, May 19—Sensational breaks in the value of corn took place today. There was a general rush to sell, and a dearth of buyers. July delivery in which trading was heaviest underwent an extreme fall of 7¼ cents a bushel, compared with yesterday's close. Indications of financial strain, together with talk of drastic measures to end the widespread railway congestion were the chief reasons ascribed.

Belleville has the only lens grinding plant between Toronto and Kingston at Angus McFee's.

PACKERS CHARGED WITH PROFITEERING

New York, May 18—The Federal Grand Jury in Brooklyn today returned indictments against Morris and Company, and the Cudahy Packing Co. of Chicago, charging profiteering in foodstuffs.

Ten years without a corn

Countless people boast that record now.

Years ago they started using Blue-jay. Never since has a corn pained twice. And never has a corn stayed a week.

You can quickly prove that corns are needless. Millions have already done it.

Think what it means.

No more paring, no more pain, no more unsightly pads. Dainty shoes without unhappy hours.

Apply a touch of liquid Blue-jay or a Blue-jay plaster.

The corn pain will end. And soon the whole corn will loosen and come out.

The action is gentle but sure. Blue-jay is the scientific method, created by this world-famed laboratory.

It is not like the methods which are harsh and crude.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. Buy it tonight from your druggist. Live the rest of your life without corns.

Twenty years ago Orono built a jail. Not until last week had a prisoner spent a night in its cells. The "wets" will claim this as an evidence that prohibition does not empty all the jails. HIGHWAY PROGRESS

Great progress is being made by the contractors on the provincial highway east and west of Deseronto. At Shannonville, the Chisholm Wellage Co. is getting along well with their contract to cut through the rock. It is slow, hard work at Shannonville, means a lot of blasting. But the Chisholm Co. is getting there. So far but one accident is reported. Isaac Barnhart of Deseronto had a foot broken when caught by a falling rock. The cement piers for the new bridge across the Salmon River are well under way and the steel will be placed in the near future. At Sucker Creek Fred H. Armitage's gang is fast reducing the hill. East of Deseronto Edward Smith has completed two neat cement culverts and further down Foreman John MacKenzie of the Chisholm Wellage Co. has a big gang of men and dozens of horses making a cut through the cemetery hill. All the material from this cut, which is now opposite Dowlin's house, is being brought down to Bowen's Creek to fill in the flat which approaches one of the new culverts.—Deseronto Post.

War Trophies For Celebration

Mayor Riggs was today in receipt of the following communication re allotment of war trophies, from the Secretary of the Commission on War Records:

Ottawa, May 19th, 1920.

Dear Sir,—In answer to your letter of the 17th instant I beg to say that an allotment of trophies to over six hundred towns in the Dominion has been made. The guns are now being overhauled and made ready for shipment. Castings have had to be made for the wheels, and there is an enormous amount of work to do in getting these ready and shipping them to the various districts. We are trying as far as possible to send all the trophies to one county at the same time as it avoids considerable expense. However, I shall have an effort made in Toronto to pick out your guns and send them to you in time for the celebration. If the particular guns allotted to you are ready, they shall be sent.

Yours truly,
E. A. FITZPATRICK,
Brig.-General,
Director of War Trophies.

GRAY IN A NEW ROLE

Winnipeg, May 18—His Worship Mayor Gray, is all "het up" and all because he had his picture printed in the paper.

An enterprising clothier, resenting the Mayor's widely circulated interview of a few days ago in which he advised people to buy cheap clothes to "beat the profiteers" snapped a picture of His Worship in his $35 suit of clothes and printed another photograph of a suit his tailor had turned out, to show the contrast between $35 and $69 clothes. The comparison was anything but flattering to the Mayor.

Twenty Billion Idemnity Characterized As Bluff

FRANCE WILL HAVE TO YIELD TO THE BRITISH MINIMUM TOTAL OF $12,000,000,000—GERMANY'S OFFER OF ONE HUNDRED BILLION MARKS ON CONDITIONS TURNED DOWN.

PARIS, May 21—Ex-President Poincare's resignation from the chairmanship of the Reparations Commission, coupled with a statement by the German delegates here to the effect that the talk of a $20,000,000,000 indemnity total "was the merest bluff, designed to deceive the people," leads strongly to the belief that the French financial position as regards the immediate future is not as sound as optimistic politicians are trying to make it appear.

As a matter of fact, the real position is, roughly outlined, as follows:

Germany last year would have paid 100,000,000,000 marks in gold as reparation, provided she had been allowed to keep Upper Silesia, which is the most productive region of all Germany but the allies refused the German offer. Now the German delegates in Paris officially state that without Silesia Germany cannot possibly pay the amount, and add "that the allies will be lucky if they get half that sum."

Moreover, Germany's ability to pay, the report argues, depends largely upon her free admission to the markets of the world. But France is against letting down the bars and resuming trade with the Germans except under hampering restrictions. To these restrictions the German delegates to the economic conference, just arrived in Paris, say it is impossible to agree. The spokesman of the German delegation made this statement:

"Unless France allows us to resume commerce with her on the prewar footing, we shall refuse to supply her with goods which she needs, thus forcing her markets into a position where the exchange will badly react on her economic situation.

"France should realibe that she in her present financial condition has more need of Germany than Germany needs her."

A Bad Road Cost Townships $1,000

J.J. Johnston Wins Damage Action Against Township of Hinchinbrooke

KINGSTON, May 20.—Judgment for the plaintiff for $1,000 with costs was given by Justice Middleton in the action brought by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Johnston of Verona, against the township of Hinchinbrooke for damages for negligence in not keeping the highway in repair, which case was heard at the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon.

The plaintiff, Mr. Johnston, told how the horse and buggy in which he and his wife were returning from a wedding to their home at Verona after dark, fell into a hole alongside the road, pinning his wife underneath the buggy. Her shoulder was broken and medical treatment which she required as a result amounted to slightly over $100. The horse was cut in twenty places and nervous afterwards and the plaintiff sold the horse which he valued at $175 for $83.75. The horse was young and had been broken in the fall before, but was quite safe to drive.

The plaintiff's wife said her arm was still stiff from the accident and for that reason she would not be able to take up her profession as trained nurse did she so desire. She had considered the horse safe before the accident.

Wm. P. Snider also gave evidence for the plaintiff.

Six witnesses were called for the defence, Alfred M. Blanchard, engineer, Frank Chellis, John Walker, Barney Snider, Richard Hamilton, Reeve of Hinchinbrooke, and Dr. W. J. Geddes who was called to the accident. Their evidence went to show that the plaintiff's horse was fractious, that he was using a curb bit, which might have caused the accident and that the road where the accident happened was about as good as any in the township.

Mr. J. L. Whiting, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff, Mr. T. J. Rigney for the defendants.

Lost Over Half Youth In War

France's Balance Sheet Shows Country Almost Left Bare

PARIS, May 20—What is, perhaps, the first concise and comprehensive statement of France's war losses has just been made by Captain Andre Tardieu. In describing what he calls 'the balance sheet' of France, Capt. Tardieu states that during the five years of the war eight million men were mobilized of whom 1,400,000 were killed, 800,000 maimed and 800,000 wounded. France thus lost 57 per cent of her men under 32 years of age.

Land and Mines Ruined

Concerning material losses, Capt. Tardieu states that 600,000 houses were destroyed, 75,000,000 acres of arable land laid waste and 3,000 miles of railroad and 25,000 miles of highways destroyed. Mines which produced 55 per cent. of France's total coal output were damaged or destroyed; 11,500 factories, which before the war produced 95 per cent of the woollen goods, 90 per cent. of the linen material, 70 per cent of the sugar and 60 per cent of the cotton goods, were crippled.

Ships Sunk

One-third of Frances' ships were sunk by German submarines. To defray the cost of munitions of war and food supplies, France had to raise more than eight billion francs, of which sum she was forced to lend 1,320,000,000 to foreign countries.

Persia Demands Protection Against Bolshevik Menace

LANDING OF BOLSHEVIK FORCES ON PERSIAN SOIL LEADS TO APPEAL TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS FOR PROTECTION—EXPLANATION OF ATTITUDE TOWARD ANTI-BOLSHEVIK WARSHIPS IN PERSIAN WATERS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 21.—Persia has appealed to the League of Nations to protect her against Bolshevik aggression. The appeal, which follows the landing of Bolshevik forces on Persian soil from the Caspian Sea, was made through the Persian Foreign Minister who is in Paris. The appeal alludes to the presence in Enzeli harbor of warships belonging to anti-Bolshevik forces formerly operating under General Denikine, and maintains that Persia acted within her rights as a neutral with regard to these vessels. It points out that she declined to allow the ships to enter the harbor until he was assured she would not be hampered in disarming and interning them.

Y.M.C.A. Work Flourishing Another Year Of Service

INTERESTING FEATURES OF BELLEVILLE Y.M.C.A. WORK—BOYS, OLDER BOYS, AND OLD BOYS — SPIRITUAL, PHYSICAL AND MENTAL WELFARE MINISTERED TO—FREE INSTRUCTION IN SWIMMING TO SCHOOL BOYS.

Summarizing the annual report of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. the following facts are worthy of special attention:

The Membership Department of the Y.M.C.A. has had a very good year with a gain of 212. A total membership on April 30th, 1920, being 523, both Junior and Senior Departments contributing to this increase. Total receipts for the year amounting to $1552.90. A recommendation that fees be raised was passed at this meeting and further announcement will be made regarding the same.

The Social Committee report a great many activities during the year for boys and men. The Senior Canoe trip through the Kawartha Lakes was one of the most enjoyable events in the Senior Department. Ten young men enjoying a twelve day trip under the direction of the General Secretary.

The Bowling and Billiard returns for the year were excellent, twice as many men have been using these privileges. Two good leagues have been run off and these have contributed greatly in promoting sociability among the older members of the Association and the Business men of the city.

The regular program of Religious and Educational work has been carried out. A number of classes and conferences have been held and close co-operation with the Sunday Schools of the City has been the policy for the last year.

Large Gym Attendance

The Physical Department returns show that 15 teams have played basketball. An Industrial Baseball league was promoted during the past summer with four teams playing 16 games. Indoor baseball, volley ball and all the regular activities of the gymnasium have been carried on under the direction of Mr. W. H. Martin, who had charge of the winter work in this department. The total gym attendance for the year was 5959. Baths and swimming pool have been very popular and 8,185 have used them, and 35 were taught to swim.

The House Committee reported a great many repairs for the building, including painting, overhauling electrical equipment and permanent repairs to the general office.

Y.M.C.A. Boys Busy

The report of the boys division was especially gratifying. As a result of the kindness of a number of subscribers and other friends 81 boys have been helped with, or given outright a membership in the Association. These are worthy boys, who otherwise would not have this privilege. The Boys Rooms were overhauled, the game tables renewed, and they have been used a great deal during the year. 5,608 attendances are recorded. Boys Athletics and Gymnasium work shows that the following items have been carried out.

		Taking part
Athletic Meets	3	160
Basket Ball	20	280
Baseball	40	720
Hockey	12	84
Hikes	6	115
Tuxis Meetings	21	168
Total		1573

During May last 287 boys were given free instruction in swimming, these were boys from the Public Schools who had not learned to swim. On Saturday nights when theer were no moving pictures the gymnasium and swimming Pool were opened to all boys and 320 boys used these privileges, about 50 per cent. of whom were not members of the Association. During the year a motion picture machine had been borrowed from Mr. McIntosh and Mr. McVannel, the agricultural representatives of Hastings and Prince Edward County and the following program was carried out:

Pictures Shown	Attendance
O. S. D., 3 times	750
House of Refuge, twice	160
Childrens Shelter, twice	70
Bridge St. League, once	40
Boys' Division Y.M.C.A., eight	450
Total	1470

An Opportunity

The Association should have a motion picture machine of its own and anyone who would contribute the same would have the everlasting gratitude of the boys and many others. The cost would be about $250.

A number of social events and outings have been held during the year. On Christmas morning the Tuxis boys visited the homes of 26 boys, members of the Boys' division, whose fathers were dead and carried a word of cheer and a small gift to each one:

		Attendance
Tuxis Socials	8	80
Hallow'een Social	1	110
Given Xmas Cheer	46
Canoe Trips	7	106
Total		296

The Boy's Camp last summer was under the direction of Mr. Angus Buchanan and was a great success. 19 Y. M. C. A. boys and 26 Boy Scouts from Bridge Street church were in attendance. The camp was held at Oak Hills. It is now proposed that a Community Camp be established under the direction of the Advisory Committee for boys' work and that this be open to all the boys of Belleville. The present site at Oak Hills would not be large enough for such a camp and a special committee are working on a location for the camp elsewhere.

The Local Advisory Committee for Boys' Work has been promoted during the past year is a distinct advance in Boys' Work and will strengthen the program for all boys organizations in the city. The committee especially co-operate with the Sunday Schools and churches. During the past year they promoted the Boys' Conference which was the largest ever held in Eastern Ontario, 325 boys from 56 different towns and villages being in attendance. Many of these boys have returned to their local field and are carrying out C.S.E.T. work in their Sunday Schools.

Older Boys

A Vocational Conference for older boys was promoted, those in attendance being from Albert College, Ontario Business College and the High School. The aim of this conference was to assist the boys in a choice of life's work. The conference speakers were: Manson Doyle, of the Sunday School Association; Dr. Brown, of Victoria College; Taylor Statten, of the Y.M.C.A. National Council; Rev. Dr. Scott and Rev. D. C. Ramsay, of Belleville. 47 attended the afternoon session and 68 at the evening session. A great many of these boys have been helped in making a decision in their life's work.

Ladies Auxiliary

Mrs. Affleck, Secretary of the Ladies Auxiliary, read their report showing that the work of the auxiliary had prospered during the year. The total receipts being $1275 98; Expenses, $1200 00; Bank Balance, $75 80.

The Auxiliary had taken care of the Dormitories, expending during the year $195 34 for linen, curtains, etc. The Social Committee reported 9 luncheons and teas with a total attendance of 350. During the coming year a Life Membership will be established with a value of $25; Miss Holden being the first member on this list.

Poisoning Came From Slight Cut

TORONTO, May 21.—Dr. Morley Currie, of Picton, Ont., who has been dangerously ill with septic poisoning is progressing nicely, and is now well on the way to recovery, it was stated at Grace Hospital, where he is a patient, last night. Dr. Currie, who is widely known throughout the province, both as a surgeon and as a former member of the Federal Parliament and of the Ontario Legislature, inflicted a slight cut on the forefinger of his right hand while performing an operation for abcess last Monday morning. The cut became infected and the poisoning spread rapidly. He was removed to Picton Hospital, and the following evening Drs. Edgar R. Frankish and H. W. Harris of Toronto were summoned, and on Wednesday afternoon he was removed to Grace Hospital here. Injections of serum proved effective in arresting the spread of the infection and he is now getting better.

Dr. Currie, a few years ago, was prominent in political life as a member of the Liberal party and represented Prince Edward County in the Legislature from 1902 to 1904, afterwards being elected to the Dominion House.

Tax Dodging Will Not Be Profitable

OTTAWA, May 20—"We will catch the smart ones, all right," said a Government official connected with the administration of the new taxes, in reference to reports that already men's suits have been separated into coats, vests and trousers and sold separately by retailers who wanted to avoid having customers to pay the excise on suits valued at more than $45. "They must not think we are fools. We will have the machinery to deal with that."

Just how to treat the numerous dealers who, not understanding the exact incidence of all the taxes, made matters sure for themselves by charging the tax on practically everything they sold is not clear. There have been reports of retail men collecting the tax on cotton and other garments which are not subject to a 'luxury tax.'

As the retailer is supposed to put the amount charged for the tax as a separate item, the purchaser can always protect himself in the case of the 'luxury taxes' collected by the retailer by insisting that the tax shall be shown there, so that he can afterwards get a refund.

Man Drowned When Boat Hit By Steamer

CORNWALL, May 20—While on the river in a motor boat about 3 o'clock this morning, Joseph Leroux and Louis Brisson of the east end were overtaken by the steamer Britannic of the Cornwall & Montreal Navigation Co., and their craft was smashed into matchwood by the big boat. The engine of the motor boat had been balky and the men were paddling home.

Oscar Leblanc, mate of the Britannic, who was on watch at the time says the motor boat bore no lights and he could not see it until his boat was right up close and a collision could not be avoided. Leroux grabbed hold of the guard of the Britannic and saved himself but Brison jumped into the water. The Britannic was brought to a stop and search was instituted for Brisson, but no trace of him was found. The Britannic continued on its way to Cornwall, bringing Leroux home, and the matter was reported to the company's officials here.

Problems Of Luxury Taxes Amendments Are Probable

PROFITS WIPED OUT AND GOODS SOLD AT LOSS IN SOME CASES IF TAX IS PAID ON GOODS ORDERED BEFORE BUDGET ANNOUNCEMENT — MANUFACTURERS ASK FOR RULING.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, May 21.—New problems are daily arising in the administration of the new luxury taxes. An important point for decision has been raised by a Canadian manufacturer. Before the budget he contracted to fill a large order for goods now subject to an additional excise duty of ten per cent. The selling price of the goods is determined in the contract. The budget resolutions provide that in this case the excise duty is payable by the manufacturer. The manufacturer claims that if he pays the duty not only will his profit be wiped out, but he will have to fill the order at a loss.

It is probable that when the resolutions are in committee amendments will be made to correct any anomalies existing.

Canned Goods Hit By New Taxes

OTTAWA, May 20—No exemption from the one per cent. sales tax under the new Budget can be claimed on behalf of canned goods of any kind, dried fruit or vegetables or rice, on the ground that they are foods.

Wholesale grocers of Canada, represented here today by Mr. A. C. Pyke, Secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Association, Toronto; Mr. A. H. Piffard, Toronto, and Mr. Samuel Vila, Hamilton, were so informed by the Commissioner of Taxation, Mr. R. W. Breadner, and the Minister of Finance. They were asking for rulings on points which were still not clear to them from reading the resolutions brought before the House by the Ministers.

It was thought that canned meats and other canned goods would be exempt from the one per cent. turnover tax, in view of the clause which exempts a long list of foods, including "sales or importations of meats, fresh, salted or pickled." The wholesale men were informed that canned goods of all kinds would have to pay the tax.

Dried Stuff Pays

Dried fruits and dried vegetables of all kinds are not in the natural state, and so have to pay the tax. "Grains and seeds in their natural state," are exempt, but the wholesale grocers found they were mistaken in assuming that rice would fall under this category, because it is sold after being husked and polished. They were informed as well that they would have to accompany their returns every month with all invoices of sales made.

School Boards To Pay For Operations

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, May 21. — Premier Drury promised H. H. Dewart, Liberal Leader, at this morning's session of the Legislature that next year the Hydro estimates would be presented in detail. When consideration of these estimates was concluded, Mr. Dewart protested against the Government, asking the house to pass them in bulk.

A bill was passed which provides for minor operations on school children at the expense of school boards with a slight amendment that parents must be given two weeks' notice of intention of operating.

Doherty's Bill Under Suspicion

TORONTO, May 20—Hon. Manning Doherty's bill to provide for loans to local incorporated companies organized for co-operative handling, storing and cleaning of seed and potatoes seemed a harmless little measure before H. Hartley Dewart, K. C., took the floor in the Legislature last night. When the Liberal leader got through he had succeeded in making a nice political issue of the legislation.

The bill provides for a loan of $3,000 on easy terms, and this Mr. Dewart believed would open the way for the Government to supply the U.F.O. with a nice little campaign fund. Hon. Mr. Drury offered strenuous objections to this interpretation. He maintained that the United Farmers Co-Operative, an organization that was doing a business of $15,000,000 annually, would have little use for a $3,000 loan, and it was his opinion that only one loan could be granted, that under the bill, the local branches of the Co-Operative could not secure loans.

Mr. Dewart's criticism was also directed to the fact that the Government was not dealing energetically with the problem of supplying seed grain itself, and this Mr. Drury met by declaring that if the Government went into the business of handling, collecting and cleaning seed grain there was only one logical outcome and that was complete State socialism, in which he did not believe.

J. C. Brown, of North Middlesex, supported the bill. He was asked by Mr. Dewart if he was assured that the U.F.O. would not subsidize a local incorporated company in every county, and replied that he had no fear of the bill being put to political use.

Thebill received second reading.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.
IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

Auditor's Report

To the President and Directors of the Belleville Y. M. C. A.:

Gentlemen,—

I beg to report that I have made a continuous audit of the books of account and vouchers of the Young Men's Christian Association for the year ending April 30, 1920, and that I have found them correct.

Respectfully submitted.
(Signed) H. HALL,
Auditor

Board of Directors

The Nominating Committee report which was read by Mr. Sinclair recommended that Messrs H. W. Ackerman, E. F. Dickens, and C. S. Clapp be reelected and that Mr. W. H. Merry and G. B. Smith be elected as new directors. This report was received and adopted at the annual meeting.

General Secretary's Report

The General Secretary in reading a short report called attention to the fact that while the Treasurer's Statement appeared very high for the year's operations there were a number of balancing items such as Bowling and Billiards and Boys' Camp that were partly responsible. There was a very heavy repair item as a result of operations of painting and other general repairs. There has been a distinct increase in returns for Dormitories and membership during the year and the general interest has been very much better. An item that did not appear in any of the reports was that the building had been used for 436 different meetings during the year with an attendance of 5197, most of these meetings were held by outside organizations, making the building a community centre as it should be. The Secretary wished to thank the Directors, Committee Men, The Ladies' Auxiliary, The Local Press and many other friends for the very excellent support we have had in carrying on the work during the year, and trusted that the future might bring greater things to the Belleville Association and that we might improve our every opportunity for future service to the men and boys of the city.

A hearty vote of thanks to the Press for their very excellent and necessary support during the past year was moved by Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, seconded by Mr. F. S. Deacon and carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was moved to the Ladies Auxiliary by Mr. F. S. Deacon and seconded by Mr. C. S. Clapp for the great interest that they have taken during the past year and for their worthy help both in social and financial matters as they have contributed over $500 in cash to the association in addition to all their other work. This motion was very well received and unanimously carried.

Prizes Presented Night School Pupils

Interesting Evening at High School—Exhibit of Art Work—Story of Trip to South America

A goodly number of citizens last night gathered at the asembly room of the High School for the purpose of witnessing the presentation of prizes awarded to successful pupils who attended night school during the winter and also to listen to an address on South America by Mr. R. J. Graham, who, this week returned home from a trip to that country. Previous to, and after the evening's programme the art work executed by the day pupils of the school was viewed and many favorable comments were heard. Some of the designs are cleverly executed, reflecting credit both on the teacher and pupil.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair, chairman of the High School Committee of the Board of Education, occupied the chair, and in a few well-chosen remarks opened the proceedings. He also read the report of the High School Inspector, who recently visited the institution, showing that exceleint work was being done by the pupils, but the school premises were virtually condemned.

Night School Work

Principal McLaurin of the High School, being called upon presented a detailed report of the work of the night school during the past season. The enrollment was 352, and the money collected as fees was $352, as only $1 was charged for tuition fees. The total expense for the school term was $2951. of which the government pays the greater proportion. The actual expense of the city for eighteen teachers was $703.34 which was a small sum for the good acomplished. There was a great demand for night classes and that same were appreciated was borne out by the fact that one in every twenty of the population of the city attended. With the day and night pupils the enrollment at the High School was 625. That Belleville was an educational centre there was not the slightest doubt. It was gratifying to see so many present as it showed interest in the work being done.

Messrs A. McGie, Chairman of the Board of Education; F. S. Deacon, A. E. Bailey, W. R. McCreary, C. M. Reid J. Elliott and T. Marshall, members of the Board were called upon the platform to take part in the presentation of prizes.

South America

The chairman then formally introduced Mr. R. J. Graham, who gave an address on South America. In his opening remarks, the speaker said he was a thorough believer in night schools. In Germany it was compulsory to attend night school and much of the success of the development of that country was due to this. He did not see a night school in South America. On the west coast for miles not a blade of grass or a shrub is to be seen. Mr. Graham spoke of the tripto New York and through the Panama Canal. From the west coast the party went into the interior. During the trip which occupied four months, 25,000 miles was covered. The weather was ideal during the whole trip and the highest temperature experienced was 90 degrees. In some respects it was not a pleasure trip, especially on the western coast, as the accommodation was not all that could have been desired. All you get on the menu is meat. If there are six courses on the menu card it is all meat, no vegetables. The steam boat service is not good. In the interior the ruins of what was once the city Chan Chan was inspected. Near the ruins is a sugar plantation on a large scale. Crops can be grown on the west coast only through irrigation as no rain whatever falls there. Birds were to be seen by millions off the western coast diving for fish, which are in abundance. Sugar cane and cotton are grown in the river beds in the interior and the land is watered by the diverting of the water. The people are practically slaves. For a debt an inhabitant can be placed in jail. The rich are getting richer while the poor are getting poorer all the time.

On the west coast ninety per cent. of the population are Indians or half breeds.

Wonderful Structures

In some of the cities in the interior there are wonderful structures which were built hundreds of years ago. There are stones in walls that are cut and fitted in the walls and are of enormous size. The Llama Valley is a wonderful place and is rather densely populated.

The women of that country demonstrated that they were artists in the manufacture of woollen wear, especially shawls.

Tin mines are very productive and the tin is washed out of the ore by hand, as modern machinery is not allowed to be imported into that country.

In travelling on the railways changes have to be made quite frequently, owing to the fact that each railway has a different guage of track.

The Lordly Andes

The speaker referred to the Andes ranges of mountains and it was a wonderful sight, especially as stones of various colors are intermingled with each other. Between the two ranges of the Andes theer are sand hills which are separate and movable.

In Chili grapes and peaches are grown in abundance and are delicious to eat. In speaking of Argentine Mr. Graham stated that fruits grow abundantly. It is a wonderful country and especially for agricultural purposes, but unfortunately the productive land is on the hands of comparatively few people. Cattle, chiefly shorthorns, are to be seen quite abundantly.

In concluding his address Mr Graham ventured to remark that it was in some respects a nice trip but he would not care to repeat it right away. Rio de Janiero was a beautiful place and a million dollars had been spent in beautifying it. Buenos Ayres was a city of two million people and was a beautiful place.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Graham was heartily applauded.

The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Tom Mix in Thrilling Western Drama at Griffin's—"The Prodigal Wife" At Palace

Tom Mix, William Fox's famous cowboy star, made good with a vengeance last night at Griffin's, where he opened a three days' engagement in his latest dramatic story, "The Daredevil." Mix wrote and directed this fast moving and thrilling story of how a young man, son of a rich father made good and won the girl of his heart.

No man ever fought harder, took greater chances, accomplished more daring deeds than does Tim Atkinson, perfectly played by Tom Mix, to win the hand of Alice Spencer.

In the role of the heroine, Eva Novak is most efficient. She shares with her hero lover the thrills and the dangers, and when at last the bandits and desperadoes are vanquished, they have indeed literally "done the impossible."

Galloping along beside a freight train moving at the rate of 30 miles an hour. Mix shoots the lock from the door, grabs his sweetheart, swings her to the back of the horse, and jumps on the train while the girl dashes madly for the sheriff. This is but one of the thrilling stunts that this young author-actor-director does.

There are others, too, equally thrilling, and from the opening flash to the final fadeaway, there is not a moment that is not full of tense action or screaming comedy. "Knights and Knighties," a funny 2-reel comedy, a new and very interesting reel of the Prince of Wales' tour through Canada, an amusing Lyons-Moran refined comedy, and Pictorial Life, with its variety of topics of interest, in color completes a most entertaining program.

"THE PRODIGAL WIFE"

If Davie Belasco ever "goes in" for moving pictures, we shall expect to see him produce pictures such as 'The Prodigal Wife," which was presented at the Palace yesterday. The management of the Palace Theatre says the term "movie" doesn't fit photoplay productions of this type, and patrons are inclined to agree with them, for the picture is considerably above the clas of films which that term implies.

First of all, it has a story that is founded on real dramatic value and which is developed in a manner worthy of the best the spoken drama can offer. Secondly, it has a cast of players who have evidently been chosen because of their fitness for the parts and their ability as real actors, rather than for any other reason. In other words, the cast has been obviously selected to fit the story, instead of the story being fitted to the cast.

Featured in the production are Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton. The former has the most difficult role of the picture—that of the faithless wife, who returns home to save her daughter from following in her footsteps. Miss Boland gives a portrayal that runs easily among the six strongest interpretations given by any woman star of the screen. She plays on the heart strings as the real musician wields the bow of a violin. The screen has seen too little of this remarkable actress. There is need in great measure for such feeling as she brings to it.

Miss Cotton, adorably sweet and pretty, is none the less appealing. The efforts of the two stars are ably supported by Raymond Bloomer, an actor of unusual finish and power; Harris Gordon, and Mrs. Stuart Robson, widow of the famous stage star of the same name. "Good Gracious Gracie" an amusing Strand comedy, British Canadian News, with its gist of interesting events gathered from everywhere and a beautiful Outing Chester Travelogue are also being shown in addition to the feature offering.

HERE'S SWEET NEWS!
SUGAR MEN STRIKE

Montreal, May 20—One thousand local sugar workers have struck for wage increases amounting to approximately 70 per cent. over the existing rates of pay. This strike coming on top of a shortage of raw sugar, has led to the closing down of the plants of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries and the Canada Sugar Refinery. The employers have refused to consent to a Board of Conciliation, for which the men appealed to Ottawa, and the walk-out followed. They have offered the employees a minimum wage of 40 cents on a 56-hour week, with a promise of increases inside of two months if the cost of living gets higher.

MR. J. J. B. FLINT WRITES OF WONDERS OF CALIFORNIA—DELIGHTFUL PLACE TO LIVE—SOIL PRODUCTIVE AND IMMENSE CROPS ARE HARVESTED—THREE DRY YEARS FOLLOWED BY WET YEAR—IRRIGATION WORKS WONDERS.

After an absence of five months nothing can be more delightful than to grasp the hands of friends and see in their eyes that they are glad to welcome you home. "Midst pleasures and palaces oft you may roam; there is (after all) no place like home". You miss some faces familiar to you from childhood. Alas, it is not only the old who have finished life's checkered pilgrimage whom you miss, but beautiful young lives blossoming into youth and maturity who have been taken into the arms of the loving Saviour, Who loved little children, and Who told the Pharisees and Sadducees—proud of the forms and ceremonies of their religion and aspiring to the first place in heaven—"that of such is the Kingdom of heaven," referring to the little ones.

10,000 Mile Tour.

Since leaving home I have travelled over 10,000 miles, including excursions over California. Fifteen days and nights travelling constantly on one trip. I have been pretty well over a great deal of California, and having now about nine months experience of that beautiful country I ought to have learned something about it. There was a time when the whole valley of the state was a sandy, lifeless desert. The ingenuity of man in utilizing the water from the mountain ranges, draining it into the valleys, carrying with it the loose surface soil, and wells dug throughout the sand, changed the whole face of nature, and made the land a delightful place in which to live, and the most productive agricultural land in the world. Two crops each year, eternal summer, no snow!

Seven Crops a Year.

Why do people buy raw land at $300 an acre? The answer is, that they can crop the year round; remove the enormous grain crop and plant a vegetable crop—beans, potatoes, beets Alfalfa is hay. Seven crops each year can be grown, of course not all equally productive. This year is called a wet year, preceded by three dry years. Everything is luxuriant. It is strange to see the orange trees with matured fruit and blossoms on the same tree. All portions of the land are not adapted to fruit.

Frost Danger.

Frost is a danger to oranges, and some vegetable crops. This danger is generally overcome by smudges, which warm the air, sometimes by cotton covers over the trees. In large districts the nights are watched and a falling temperature is wired to the growers, who light their gasoline jars distributed over the orchard, for thirty minutes, when danger is over. Fruits on mountain slopes escape frost, and give a sure crop. Grapes are not so injured. I have seen many thousand acres of raisin grapes. The strange thing is that they do not thresh grain and have no large barns. Only shelter barns for stock are built. The grain being cut, lies on the ground a few days, placed in wired bundles, and marketed as it is. Alfalfa is treated in the same way. When you pay $300 per acre, you can obtain water rights by paying $80 additional per 100 acres Water drilled for is generally found at about 500 feet—$50 for the first 100 feet; $5 for every 25 feet as you go down.

There are tracts of land used for ranching cattle and horses. The crops which pay the best are nuts, coconuts and almonds; apricots, olives, oranges and lemons.

Across the bay are Oakland, Berkley Piedmont—three large and magnificent cities, where shipbuilding is a great industry.

The great eight miles long park is really the greatest attraction to visitors. Take a Market Street car, which runs along the park to the ocean. Then fill your lungs with the salt air as you look on the great ocean.

Think for a moment, that you can step on board one of the floating palaces and reach China, Japan, Hawaii, Africa and India. Also think of the terrible naval combats of which history is full.

A Great Volcano.

Hawaii is now owned by the States, and has become Americanized. A world-wide traveller from Chicago told me of the great volcano discharging immense quantities of smoke, fire and vapor, feeding on substances in the interior of the earth, and never satisfied. He told of the great lake which has been on fire for years, its billows of flame feeding upon the pitch which it contains, the great fiery waves dashing on the shores.

San Francisco Sights.

At 'Frisco you stand on the shore and watch forty or fifty seals sprawling on the rocks a few feet distant. You see the little wooden steamer which went through the NorthWest Passage under the captainship of Amusden. There she is on shore, her masts, hull, rigging, perfect. You think of the mountainous seas she climbed, of the terrible dangers encountered.

Five lakes are in this park, containing all kinds of aquatic plants, flowers, fish, ducks, swans, etc. I saw in another park 150 ducks which fed from your hand, perfectly tame. Another day they were all gone, and I was told they were wild ducks, which fly away when they mate and return with their young families. They are free to come and go, and are fed and cared for by attendants and visitors. There are splendid grizzly and black bears, a herd of buffaloes, many kinds of deer, among them the beautiful gazelle. Peaches, strawberries, olives, grapes produced immense crops.

Sold 13,000 Acres.

A land company, of which Mr. Jas. Nosworthy's grandson, Frank Peard, is the general manager, sold 13,000 acres of land near Sacramento in a few weeks at $300 per acre. They have 11,000 acres at Hamet. If they bought at $100 an acre you see their profit.

Property in one year has increased about twenty-five per cent. A large number of what we would call splendid buildings are being torn down and enormous garages built.

A mania for large churches exists. Methodists are going to have two millions cash on hand, proceeds of sale of church for Grouman's theatre. Millions are being expended for new theatres.

Belleville Lady's Investment.

A Belleville lady bought a bungalow and vacant lot for $4500, refused $15,000; holding it for $50,000, which her friends tell her she can and will get.

San Francisco is a cold place. Four times have I visited it and every time the wind chilled me greatly. Its streets and squares are the largest and best in the state. They have the London idea of islands in the street centres where you can be safe to get your car. The public buildings are grand. Visit the Supervisor's room and sit in the Mayor's chair. The room cost $36,000: Carved ceilings of beautiful white scherion wood, brought from Russia; seats of brilliant Russia leather, fountains, statuary in the great court in front of the building. Visit the "City of Paris" stores, finest in any city of the state. The great attractions of the city are the Golden Gate, a passage a mile wide through the highlands; then the Frisco Bay, large enough to hold the American navy.

I thought, in looking at the expressive eyes of the lovely fallow deer in the park, of that beautiful passage in Moore's poem of "Lallah Rook," where the heroine sings "I never had a deer gazelle to cheer me with its soft black eye, but when it comes to know and love me well, it was always sure to die." Many young girls on blood horses, riding astride, were on the path reserved for equestriennes. Flowers of every variety abound.

Sunday Games.

On Sunday the lawn bowling, tennis and golf clubs were all at play. I do not think the children attend the Sunday Schools in great numbers, iro Frisco is fond of the little ones, and on Sundays provides them with all day Schools in great numbers, for hear the ringing laughs and sweet voices of the children rejoicing in "God's great out-of-doors." The park contains vast spaces left as nature formed it. Every taste can be gratified. Some lakes contain gold and silver fish, black and white swans and aquatic birds. Great rivalry exists between the two cities of Frisco and Los Angeles, each claiming to have the largest population, each having advantages peculiar to itself.

Wonderful Soil.

The soil in the valleys is wonderful—no stones or stumps, no fences except on cattle ranches. In the city no division fences, no old shacks allowed. No matter how poor the man may be he strives to make his little plot attractive. The Japs are the great flower producers. I wish I could show you some of their flower shops—orchids, roses of all colors, pansies, violets blue as the sky.

In a subsequent letter I will refer to the other portion of my trip.

JOHN J. B. FLINT.

MUSKOKA THIS YEAR

Prospects are gratifying this year for a successful summer season in Muskoka and those who were disappointed last season in securing accommodation should apply early and make their reservation at one of the many hotels available. BABY AT OAKVILLE DROWNED IN TROUGH

Oakville, May 20—Though scarcely able to do more than toddle about, the little fourteen-months-old daughter of Wurtzey Biggar, a farmer living a few miles north of here, slipped into the barnyard without her mother noticing that she had disappeared from the house. In less than fifteen minutes she was missed and on a search being made her body was discovered in a water trough. Every effort was made to resuscitate her, but without success. There was comparatively little water in the trough. The Biggars are a young couple and this was their only child.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

PART V—CHAPTER 1

"I've come to know if so be I can come to the wedding—hee-hee!" said Leaf, in an uneasy voice of timidy.

"Now, Leaf,," said the tranter, reproachfully, "you know we don't want ye here today—we've got no room for ye, Leaf."

"Thomas Leaf, Thomas Leaf, fy upon ye for prying!" said old William.

"I know I've got no head, but I washed and put on a clane shirt and smock-frock, I might just call," said Leaf, turning away disappointed and trembling.

"Pore feller!" said the tranter, turning to Geoffrey, "Suppose we must let en come? His looks is rather against en, and 'a is terribly silly; but 'a have never been in jail, and 'a won't do no harm."

Leaf looked with gratitude at the tranter for these praises, and then anxiously at Geoffrey to see what effect they would have in helping his cause.

"Ay, let en come," said Geoffrey, decisively. "Leaf, th'rt welcome, 'st know," and Leaf accordingly remained.

They were now all ready for leaving the house, and began to form a procession in the following order: Fancy and her father, Dick and Susan Dewy Nat Callcome and Vasti Sniff, Ted Waywood and Mercy Onmey, and Jimmy and Bessy Dewy. These formed the executive, and all appeared in strict wedding attire. Then came the tranter and Mrs. Dewy, and last of all Mr. and Mrs. Penny—the tranter conspicuous by his enormous gloves, size eleven and three quarters which appeared at a distance like boxing-gloves bleached, and sat rather awkwardly upon his brown hands; this hall-mark of respectability having been set upon himself today (by Fancy's special request) for the first time in his life.

"The proper way is for the bridemaids to walk together," suggested Fancy.

"What? 'Twas always young man and young woman, arm in crook, in my time!" said Geoffrey, astonished.

"And in mine!" said the Tranter.

"And in ours!" said Mr. and Mrs. Penny.

"Never heard o' such a thing as woman and woman!" said old William; who, with Grandfather James and Mrs Day, was to stay at home.

"Whichever way you and the company likes, my dear!" said Dick, who, being on the point of securing his right to Fancy, seemed willing to renounce all other rights in the world with the greatest pleasure. The decision was left to Fancy.

"Well, I think I'd rather have it the way mother had it," she said and the couples moved along under the trees, every man to his maid.

"Ah," said Grandfather James to Grandfather William, as they retired, "I wonder which she thinks most about, Dick or her wedding raiment."

"Well, 'tis their nater," said Grandfather William. "Remember the words of the Prophet Jeremiah: 'Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire?"

Now among dark, perpendicular firs like the shafted colums of a cathedral now under broad beeches in bright, young leaves, they threaded their way then through a hazel copse, matted with primroses and wild hyacinths into the high-road, which dipped at that point directly into the village of Yalbury; and in the space of a quarter of an hour, Fancy found herself to be Mrs. Richard Dewy, though, much to her surprise, feeling no other than Fancy Day still.

On the circuitous return walk through the lanes and fields, amid much chattering and laughter, especially when they came to stiles, Dick discerned a brown spot far up a turnip field.

"Why its Enoch!" he said to Fancy. "I though I missed him at the house this morning. How is it he's left you?"

"He drank too much cider, and it got into his head and they put him in the stocks for it. Father was obliged to get somebody else for a day or two, and Enoch hasn't had anything to do with the woods since."

"We might ask him to call down tonight. Stocks are nothing for once, considering 'tis our wedding-day." The bridal party was ordered to halt.

"En-o-o-o-ch!" cried Dick at the top of his voice.

"Ya-a-a-a-a-as!" said Enoch from the distance.

"D'ye know who I be-e-e-e-e?"

"No-o-o-o-o-o!"

"Dick Dew-w-w-w-wy!" Oh-h-h-h-h!"

"Just a-ma-a-a-arried!"

"Oh-h-h-h-h!"

"This is my wife, Fa-a-a-a-ancy!" (holding her up to Enoch's view as if she had been a nosegay).

"Oh-h-h-h-h!"

"Will ye come down to the party toni-i-i-i-ight?"

"Ca-a-a-a-an't."

"Why no-o-o-o-ot?"

"Don't work for the family no-o-ow"

"Not nice of Master Enoch," said Dick, as they resumed their walk.

"You musn't blame en," said Geoffrey; "the man's not himself now; he's in his morning frame of mind. When he's had a gallon o' cider or ale, and a pint or two of mead, the man's well enough, and his manners be as good as anybody's in the kingdom.

CHAPTER II

The point in Yalbury Wood which abutted on the end of Geoffrey Day's premises was closed with an ancient beech-tree horizontally of enormous extent, though having no great pretensions to the height. Many hundreds of birds had been born amidst the boughs of this single tree; tribes of rabbits and hares had nibbled at its bark from year to year; quaint tufts of fungi had sprung from the cavities of its forks: and countless families of moles and earthworms had crept about its roots. Beneath its shade spread a carefully tended grass-plot, its purpose being to supply a healthy exercise-ground for young chickens and pheasants, the hens, their mothers, being inclosed in coops placed upon the same green flooring.

All these inclumbrances were now removed, and as the afternoon advanced, the guests gathered on the spot where music, dancing, and the singing of songs went forward with great spirit throughout the evening. The propriety of every one was intense, by reason of the influence of Fancy, who, as an additional precaution in this direction, had strictly charged her father and the tranter to carefully avoid saying 'thee' and 'thou' in their conversation, on the plea that those ancient words sounded so very humiliating to persons of decent taste; also that they were never to be seen drawing the back of the hand across the mouth after drinking—a local English custom of extraordinary antiquity, but stated by Fancy to be decidedly dying out among the upper classes of society.

RAILWAY TO SERVE ALBERTA OIL FIELDS

Ottawa, May 20—Permission for the construction of a railway north of the Great Slave Lake to take care of reported oil finds, was agreed to by the Railway Committee of the Commons.

At the outset a distinct division of opinion arose on the advisability of granting a charter, while Col. H. S. Mackie (Renfrew) classed the affair as a joke railway and as a bicycle road.

W. A. Boyes, (Simcoe) who is handling the bill, said the object was to open up oil fields and mining areas which the promoters believed existed there. The proposed line would be to the Nelson River and carriage would be made to the Hudson Bay. The line would be in operation four of five months of the year.

The capital stock is fixed at one million dollars. Headquarters of the company, which is known as the North-West Route, Ltd., are at London Construction of the road must be begun within two years.

The bill was reported.

Answering the chairman, Mr. Smellie, counsel for the promoters, said the promoters were all Englishmen of good standing and reputation.

SHAKES THE BRANCHES GETS MESS OF PERCH

William Slacker, famous from end to end of the Kittanany Mountains as the best guide in Sussex county, New Jersey, walked into the office of Lion's Head Inn on Dove Island and lowered to the floor a bushel basket filled to overflowing with the handsomest catch of perch ever seen in those parts.

"Didn't have no line; didn't have no bait; didn't have no nawthin'," said Mr. Slacker.

"I was just rowin' around Swartswood Lake before breakfast, when I comed up again' them willows on the P'int. The lake is higher than I ever knowed it, and them willows is bended right over into the water, and I'll be doggoned if every branch wasn't crowded with perch.

"I hurried back to camp for this basket, raced back to the P'int, held the basket, shook the branches, and here we be. I could have filled 20 baskets."

Mr. Slacker is an older in the Church.

TAX "JOKERS"

Sellers and buyers are busily looking for "jokers" in the new luxury tax provisions and so far these are a few they've found:

1 Retailer may drop price of $45 suit to $44.99 or a few cents less and avoid tax to purchasers.

2 Buyers may purchase various parts of machines, such as phonographs, and assemble them at home, if they are sufficiently good mechanics.

3 Two piece suits of underwear may be bought separately, each being under the price limit, and thus the tax on expensive "combinations" is avoided.

A SUCCESSFUL AT HOME

Under the auspices of the Griffin Amusement Staff, an At Home was held last evening at Johnstone's Academy, which proved to be a most enjoyable affair. A large number were present and were delighted with the programme of dances provided, also the music for same, which was furnished by the Griffin Orchestra. Prof. Johnstone and his estimable partner were present and did all in their power for the enjoyment of all present. The arrangement of the affair was in the hands of a capable committee who were ever on the alert to do what they could for their guests. The floor was in the best of condition for dancing and the decorations of the spacious hall never looked to better advantage. At the midnight hour a tempting lunch was partaken of, after which dancing was indulged in for some time. This was the first At Home given by the Griffin staff here, and their many patrons hope that it will not be the last. The committee was as follows: H. Blaind, secy., F. G. Adams, R. H. Blaind, K. Blaind, J. Blaind, C. Greatrix, H. Symons, P. Cornell, K. Cornell, F. Smith, P. Callaghan, Wm. Cummins.

Uncut diamonds, precious stones, watches or clocks are not subject to the tax.

Walked In Her Sleep Fell Down Stairs

Aged Lady Severely Injured as Result of a Dream

A distressing accident under peculiar circumstances happened this week to Mrs. Sinclair, of Madoc mother of Mr. D. V. Sinclair, of this city. The accident happened during the night when Mrs. Sinclair had a dream concerning her daughter, a missionary in the Far East who is en route home. In her dream it appeared that her daughter had arrived home and the house was so full of guests that some were compelled to sleep in the basement of the house. It occurred to Mrs. Sinclair that she should go down to ascertain if the occupants were comfortable and without waking she got out of bed and in attempting to go down stairs fell to the bottom with the result that an arm was broken and she was otherwise injured about the body. Considering the fact that the victim of the unfortunate affair is 80 years of age, she is doing as well as can be expected.

Posters Announce First Circus of Season

Sparks' Circus Annual Visit—Three Rings 'N' Everything

Three rings! Sure there are, if you doubt it, count 'em Wednesday, June 2nd. The No. 1 Advertising Car in charge of J. M. Randolph arrived in the city this morning and his crew of 22 men immediately started to work putting up the flaring posters and bills that set forth the wonders innumerable of the big performance.

The Sparks Circus bears the distinction of being one of the oldest, largest and best and this year's program includes lions, tigers, leopards, jaguers and even camels vying as acrobats with human stars. Its going to be just one doggone thrill after another, from the opening act—the two herds of monster elephants, each group being worked by lady trainers, to the great "Matoka" who causes many gasps of wonderment in his backward and forward slides for life from the loftiest point of the large tent to the ground—a distance of 150 feet.

Are there clowns? Well I should say yes! Forty of them and each and every one can produce more laughs in a minute than all the mother-in-law jokes can in a century. They are as full of funny capers as Russia is of Bolshevik and just to add good measure a score or more of high class arenic stars are interspersed through out the entire performance

"I Feel Stronger Than I Ever Did," Says Toronto Woman—Tanlac Proves Merit

Still another highly esteemed Toronto woman relates her remarkable experience with Tanlac. This time it is Mrs. A. G. Blissengen, residing at 215 Jarvis Street.

"My friends who used to sympathize with me on account of my ill health are now congratulating me on how healthy and well I look," said Mrs. Blissengen recently. "Tanlac surely must be the grandest medicine in the world. At the time I began taking it I only weighed one hundred and twenty-four pounds and now I weigh one hundred and sixty-six.

"About two years ago I began suffering from what is commonly called a general rundown condition. My appetite left me and my stomach was so weak and upset that I could not eat a thing without feeling nauseated afterwards. In spite of all I could do I kept losing weight. I felt tired out all the time and finally got so weak I simply had to stop trying to do my housework. I went to the country, but after spending some time there I came back home feeling as bad as ever, if not worse. Then I tried more medicines but it seemed that the harder I tried to get well the worse I got.

"Passing by a Drug Store one day I happened to notice the Tanlac display in the window, so I went in and bought a bottle and the first two or three doses helped me. Soon my appetite had a new start and my indigestion began to lose its grip. By the time my first bottle was gone I was sleeping better and felt more rested and refreshed on getting up in the mornings. Then I bought another, which made such a great difference in my condition that I bought another, and so on until now I am like an entirely different person. My appetite is so keen that I can hardly get enough to satisfy me and every sign of indigestion has left me. I am actually weighing thirty-one pounds more than I did and have never felt finer in my life. Tanlac has given me such excellent health, and I feel so grateful for it that I cant' help but think of others who need it like I did and I wish I could tell them personally about it."

Tanlac is sold in Bellevile by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

Why Physicians Recommend Magnesia for Dyspeptics

"Take a little magnesia after meals" is now a favorite dyspepsia prescription among thousands. The reason for this lies in the fact that practically ninety per cent. of all stomach trouble is due to acid which irritates and inflames the delicate mucous membrane lining of the stomach and makes natural digestion impossible. Medicines, drugs and diets all fail simply because they do not remove the acid, the cause of all the trouble. The value of magnesia, which is neither a medicine nor a drug in the ordinary meaning of these words, lies in the fact that it neutralizes the acid. Of the many forms of magnesia such as the oxides, carbonates, milks and fluids, the best is undoubtedly Bisurated Magnesia, a teaspoonful or four tablets of which in a little hot water, after meals, instantly neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation of the food and thus insures painless, natural digestion. Pure Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist and stomach sufferers should give it a trial.

Last Day Of S. A. Drive

Subscriptions Still Coming In—All Should Help the Good Work

As to-morrow is the final day of the Drive for Salvation Army Fund, it is to be hoped that the citizens of Belleville will not be found wanting. As yet the amount of $2,500 has not been reached. The fund closes to-morrow therefore, anyone not having made subscription should call at the Union Bank, and leave donations with the Manager, Mr. J. G. Moffat, Treasurer of the Fund.

The canvassers have reported a ready response to the appeal however as there are not sufficient canvassers to thoroughly cover the town, it is hoped that citizens will make voluntary subscriptions.

While all the world has resounded with praises of the noble work done by the Salvation Army during the war, it is not this praise that will make possible the continuation of this work. Material appreciation must be shown. For that reason, the citizens of Belleville, as a whole, have been requested by the Belleville Rotary Club to assist them in meeting this obligation. If the citizens of Belleville as a whole do not respond to this appeal, the praise that has been showered on the Salvation Army by Belleville will be empty. The total amount of subscriptions will be made public and it is to be hoped that each good citizen will do his share.

The work in Point Anne is under the direction of Mr. Bennett Manager of the Rock Company and he is assisted by Mr. Huck and Mr. Rather of the Canada Cement. Corbyville is in the hands of Mr. Wm. J. Hume, who will make good in that locality.

Adjutant Cavander was called suddenly to Napanee last night, where two of the lady officers of the Army, who were canvassing in the country, met with an accident. A horse, becoming frightened, ran away, throwing the canvassers out, and severely shaking them up. They are now reported as doing well.

Citizens of Belleville be prepared to give to your utmost to-morrow, this last day of the Salvation Army Drive.

Civil Service Act Advances In The House

Formal Resolution Passes Legislature —Only One Member Opposed

TORONTO, May 22.—The formal resolution necessary before the passing of the Civil Service Superannuation Act passed the Legislature. There were very few Farmer members in the House at the time, about four minutes after the evening session opened. Only one member opposed the act, Leslie W. Oke. Premier Drury, in reply to the Liberals, said the Government had no intention of increasing the compensation. He defended his bill warmly against outside criticism.

"To understand clearly the superannuation proposals now before the House, it is necessary to realize the situation in which we found the public service of this Province," said Premier Drury. "Prior to 1898 all employees in the service were entitled to one month's salary for each year of service. Since 1898 this retiring allowance has been no longer a matter of grace. In the early days of the Whitney Administration this gratuity was limited to the equivalent of one year's salary.

"Under the system I have outlined there was paid out in the last ten years of the Liberal regime $140,000 in gratuities, or about $14,000 a year. During the ten years of the Whitney regime the Province paid $190,000 in gratuities, or about $19,000 a year. Altogether therefore, in those twenty years our expenditure on this account was $330,000. For the present year, to meet the obligations of our predecessors, we have been compelled to place in the estimates an appropriation of $36,500.

A DOUBLE HANDICAP

"On assuming office, therefore, we found ourselves so far as the service was concerned, under a double handicap; first, because the Province has to pay these annual grants for gratuities without the service itself contributing towards them, and secondly, because we are compelled to maintain in office employes whose usefulness has been spent.

"It therefore became our duty to consider whether we could in fairness to the public allow this system to continue and to develop, as it ultimately would, more aggravated and oppressive conditions. We had to determine the question from the standpoint of efficiency as well as economy and to place the service on a basis that would solve this problem for all time to come.

"The proposal of the Government is that a fund shall be created by deducting from the salaries of the employes amounts ranging from 2½ per cent. where an employe enters at twenty-one years of age, up to 5 per cent. where the employe enters at forty-five years of age. Toward this fund the Government will contribute, if necessary, an amount equal to the amount contributed by the employe.

"Now a word as to the financial operations of this act in the future. The salaries now paid to the permanent and temporary staffs aggregate $1,100,000. An average assessment of 3¼ per cent. will yeild $38,500 per annum and a contribution by the Government of a like amount will yield altogether $77,000 per annum to the fund. While the Government makes this contribution, it does not pay out the money, but, on the other hand, it receives the money of the service, which it retains in the shape of a loan until required.

"Under the bill as presented to the House, $2,000 is the maximum any employe can draw, and the payment of that sum spread over the life expectancy of any person seventy years of age represents an investment of $12,926.

"In the higher paid ranks of the service the assessment will yield a much larger proportion of the amount to be paid in superannuation because, while the aggregate sum anyone can receive is limited to $2,000 per annum, the assessment is made on the whole salary any employe may receive."

A PREMATURE MEASURE

Leslie W. Oke (East Lambton) protested against the act as being premature. The farmers, he argued were not asking for superannuation. He had received dozens of protests from his constituents, and in face of them could not support the bill.

H. H. Dewart submitted that the scale of compensation should be more generous. Premier Drury, in reply, said that the Government had no intention of increasing the scale. He said the civil servants, speaking generally, approved of the bill, and he had heard "no serious objection, and the civil servants seemed reasonably satisfied." He disagreed absolutely with those who expressed the opinion that Ontario did not owe its civil servants anything.

Retailers Orders On New Tax

Must Make Returns of Collections to Finance Minister Twice a Month

TORONTO, May 22.—Toronto business men who had some doubt as to the need for their collecting the luxury tax at once have no further excuse for delay.

Definite orders came from Ottawa to the local Dominion Tax Office in the form of a wire which makes it clear that the tax is now in effect and that retailers will have to turn over twice a month the taxes they collect.

The wire, signed by George H. Taylor, of the Finance Department at Ottawa, is as follows:

"Subsection A of Section 1 of amendment to Special War Revenue Act relates to sales of goods by any vendor to any purchaser for consumption or personal use. Notify every vendor concerned at once that he is required to collect tax from purchasers accordingly. Pending further instructions vendors shall keep accurate record of collections. On the 1st and 15th of each month vendors shall forward to you or your sub-collectors sworn statement in detail, accompanied by remittance of all tax collected."

Subsection A of Section 1 is, of course, the part of the budget which provides for the "luxury tax" of ten per cent. on some goods and 20 per cent. on others.

It was only today that the official copy of the changes in the budget reached the Inland Revenue Office on Toronto st. Yesterday and today were two days of strain for the officials, besieged as they were by many anxious inquirers for information regarding the working of the tax.

Instructions came from Ottawa that in regard to patent medicines and perfumes, retailers are to continue to stamp each package until the end of the current year, after which all stock or goods offered for sale must be stamped. Manufacturers and importers of such goods are required by law to stamp such goods on and after August 1 of this year.

MUST KEEP DAY BOOK

Retail merchants are being advised to keep a day book showing the sale price of each taxable article in one column and the amount of the tax collected in another column. Stores using the duplicate system of bills are making these suffice for the present, while others are beginning at once to use the triplicate system, one for the customer, one for the store records and the third for the Government.

WOE TO SMOKERS! PRICES UP

Jobbers, who handle tobaccos, cigars and confectioneries of the standard, highly advertised brands, claim they do business on so narrow a margin the one per cent. tax on turnover will wipe out their entire net profit. "We have a tremendous turnover and a very small profit," declared the jobber of cigarettes and cigars. "That is the basis of our business. It is a certainty that we can't stand the tax and if we have to pay it the only thing we can do is to pass it on to the consumer." All of the standard brands retailers undertake to sell at fixed prices would soon be revised he believed.

PIANO MEN ALARMED

There is real alarm among the piano manufacturers. "The instalment plan is the life-blood of our business," said one manager "and unless this is changed it hits the instalment plan hard. The upright piano is our bread and butter, and there are many people who cannot pay more than $50 down on a piano. Under this tax the dealer must have $100 down because they have to put up the amount of the tax when the deal is made. This hits the poor man and his family. In getting $100 down on each piano now we are no better off than we were when he got $50."

GERMAN ARROGANCE AGAIN TO THE FORE

London, May 21.—A Berlin despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says it is reported in Parliamentary circles that the German Government will make a declaration touching the foreign political situation shortly. With respect to the Spa negotiations, it is said that the Government will lay its financial programme before the Entente, and demand guarantees that the Allies will not further impede the restoration of Germany by new ocupations of her territory.

Germany will also demand the withdrawal of all colored troops, punishment for all crimes committed by allied soldiers, the restoration of the old frontier customs and duties and simplification of connection between occupied and unoccupied territory.

Machine Gunners Getting Courses In Irish Depots

Number of Troops Still Considerably Below That of a Year Ago.

DUBLIN, May 22.—Contingents of British cavalry and infantry are arriving in Ireland but the total number of troops now in the island is still considerably below that of a year ago.

Troops hitherto have been used merely as additional police officers, and have not been numerous enough to cope with disturbances. In fights which have occurred at police barracks, the attackers have generally been ten times more numerous than the defenders, and as they have also been well armed, the contest has been unequal. Soldiers, therefore, have been called in to establish a balance In many places they are doing ordinary police patrol, which has heretofore involved great risks, many policemen having been shot from ambush. It will be more difficult in future for raiders to carry on this sort of warfare, as armored cars will be used.

To Maintain the Law.

Government operations are being directed to the maintenance of ordinary law. When cattle are driven from farms troops are not concerning themselves with the nature of the dispute between farmers and raiders, but are trying to punish the cattle drivers, and restore the cattle to their owners. The wholesale burning of police barracks, which appeared to be mere wantonness on the part of raiders since many of the buildings had been abandoned, now seems attributable to the foresight of Sinn Fein leaders. It was anticipated that these barracks would be used by detachments of soldiers.

Blockhouses as Billets.

Difficulty is apprehended in finding lodgings for soldiers in remote districts. Some private houses have been taken over for this purpose, but there are many places where such structures are not available and there is talk of the construction of huts which might be described as blockhouses. There have thus far been no attacks on soldiers, but an insufficiently protected military would undoubtedly be inviting to raiders. It is therefore anticipated that the huts will be fortified and protected with barbed wire, of which large quantities have arrived here. It is expected, too, that at least one machine gun will be installed. Various depots throughout Ireland have in the last few weeks been training machine gunners.

Not Interested in Policy.

General Sir Nevil Macready is the most important member of the Irish Administration, because it is felt enforcement of the law is more urgent than any other policy. The commander-in-chief says he has nothing to do with policy and is interested only in military affairs. He was sent to Dublin by the Cabinet to report on the situation, and now, having been given all the power he believes necessary, he is organizing the military forces and bringing them into co-ordination with the police.

Fire At Brighton Began In Garage

It is reported that a serious fire broke out at Brighton early this morning and several buildings have been estroyed. The local fire department was unable to cope with the conflagration and outside assistance was requested. Trenton and Colborne sent firemen and apparatus to assist in fighting the flames.

REPORTS EXAGGERATED.

A later report states that the fire originated in a large frame building situated near the Standard Bank, Brighton. This building was destroyed, but the fire was checked and controlled and the reports that the town was wiped out are without foundation.

President Carranza Killed Entire Escort Wiped Out

SURROUNDED IN PUEBLA MOUNTAINS BY FORCE LED BY GEN. HERRERA AND KILLED IN FIGHT AT ONE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING—SO SAYS OFFICIAL STATEMENT FROM MEXICO CITY.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MEXICO CITY, MAY 22.—Venustiano Carranza, who fled from this city on May 6th and who took flight in the Puebla mountains, was killed at one o'clock Thursday morning at Taxcalaltongo, according to an official announcement here. Carranza's companions, the names of whom are as yet unknown, are declared to have shared his fate. The attack, which resulted in the death of the President, was led by General Rodolo Herrera, it is said. A report from Laredo says that Adolfo de la Huerta, Governor of Sonora, has been elected provisional President, but confirmation of this report was unobtainable this morning.

Every Recruit Sworn To Secrecy

Constitution of the Irish Republican Brotherhood.

LONDON, May 22.—The text of the constitution of the Irish Republican Brotherhood, an organization supposed to be responsible for the political murders in Ireland and which boasts itself as the "sole government of the Irish Republic," is published in the Morning Post.

The organization has a supreme council, to which eleven members are elected and four others whose names are never divulged are chosen by the eleven.

This body abrogates to itself powers of life and death, of taxation and of war, peace and treaty making. Every recruit is sworn to secrecy on penalty of death.

The unit of the I. R. B. is the circle, each circle being divided into sections under a district chairman, who has a staff of helpers. District and county officers elect five of their number to a committee which elect a representative to the supreme council. All who attend the meetings are sworn to keep secret the business transacted and the names of those present.

Objects of the brotherhood are set forth in these two articles of the constitution: "One of the objects of the Irish Republican Brotherhood is to establish and maintain a free and independent Republican Government in Ireland; and (2) the Irish Republican Brotherhood shall do its utmost to train and equip its members as a military body, for the purpose of securing the independence of Ireland by force of arms. It shall secure the co-operation of all Irish military bodies in the accomplishment of its object and shall support every movement calculated to advance the cause of Irish national independence consistent with the preservation of its own integrity.

Bolsheviks Hang Admiral Sirgieft

Was Commander of the Caspian Fleet of General Denikine.

Thirteen Bolshevik warships appeared off Enzeli and began to bombard the town on the morning of May 19, says a Teheran despatch of that date to the London Times. A "parlementaire" who went in an open boat to inquire their object, was fired upon, his white flag possibly escaping notice.

A deputation in behalf of the Persian Government, including a British officer, then proceeded upon a larger launch to board the Bolshevik flagship. The deputation was informed that the Bolsheviki demanded the surrender of the port, owing to the presence there of Denikine's warships and troops. If it surrendered the Bolsheviki fleet had no further hostile intentions against the Persian Government or the British garrison at Enzeli, and was ready to give immunity to the interned Russian volunteers. The future of the port of Enzeli, it was stated, would be discussed between the Moscow Soviet and the British Government.

"I understand," says the Times' correspondent," that a reply is being sent to the effect that Persia, in interning and disarming Denikine's fleet and troops, carried out in the strictest manner her obligations of neutrality, and protests against a gratuitous attack. Nevertheless, if the Bolshevik commander still contemplates danger from the interned ships the Persian Government is prepared to discuss the matter amicably and to take such measures as are necessary to remove apprehensions, the armistice being respected pending the discussion.

"Private reports from Baku describe severe measures of repression there. It is said that an attempt to displace the Soviet Government will be punished by hanging or imprisonment of those implicated.

"Admiral Sergieff, lately commanding Denikine's Caspian fleet, and other leading Russians, have been hanged."

DELIVERY IS PART OF TAXABLE BARGAIN

Ottawa, May 22.—Mr. R. W. Breadner, Canadian Commissioner of Taxation, is probably the busiest man in Canada. From early morning till late at night hundreds of people visit his office inquiring how certain of the taxes worked out.

Mr. Breadner made several important rulings. For one thing he pointed out that delivery constituted the consummation of a bargain. That is, if a man ordered a fifty-dollar suit a couple of weeks ago, and if the suit was delivered only this morning, the buyer would be responsible for the entire tax on the same. This also, of course, applies to every other taxable article.

Moreover, Mr. Breadner stated that the one per cent. tax which wholesalers must add to their invoices must be paid by the retailer to whom the goods are sold and not be absorbed by the wholesaler. That is, every wholesaler must show on his invoice and also collect the full price of his goods and the one per cent. tax.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE!

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

High School Inspection

A eport was read from Mr. G. F. Rogers, Inspector of High Schools, relative to the Belleville High School. The report recommended that the Board spend no more money on the present building as it was inadequate for high school purposes. The report showed that the teaching staff was excellent and the work of the pupils as good. The accommodation of the school was bad. The organization was all that could be desired.

The report was adopted after Mr. O'Flynn had spoken as to the efficiency of the High School staff.

Mr. C. M. Reid stated that it was a fact that a number of scholars were poor readers and their spelling and writing was not what it should be.

Other members spoke in a similar strain to the remarks made by Mr. Reid.

P. S. Inspector's Report

Mr. H. J. Clarke, B. A., Public School Inspector, presented a half yearly report on the schools under his inspectorate in the city. As to accommodation the schools are filled and in Queen Mary School the assembly room may have to be used. The equipment is satisfactory and registers are well kept. All teachers are legally qualified; some of the teachers are superior, several are good and some fairly good. The pupils work has been good. This year there are 118 applications for High School Entrance from the city schools and 130 from the County, which is more than last year. It would be well for the Board to make arrangements for next year's teaching staff early as there is likely to be a considerable shortage. The report complimented the work being done by Nurse Inspector, Miss Sinclair.

Report filed and referred to the various committees.

Visited Schools

Col. Ponton referred to the fact that recently he visited schools in New York State also at Hartford, Conn. Every Friday afternoon is devoted to music and teachers do the teaching. The note is that there is one language being taught and that language is English. The flag flies all the time on the schools.

Mr. W. R. McCreary spoke in support of free text books being supplied to the pupils of the school. This was an important matter and he would like to see some action taken.

Mr. O'Flynn—This is an important matte rand a report should be prepared for presentment to the Board.

A motion prevailed that this matter be referred to the Supplies Commatter and a report should be pre-

A letter was read from Principal MacLaurin of High School, requesting that the High School classes close on June 11th—Request granted.

A detailed report was presented by Principal MacLaurin relative to the night school classes. The cost to the city was $734.

The report was adopted.

On motion the committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Motions

Moved by Mr. O'Flynn, seconded by Mr. MacFadgen that the School Management Committee be empowered to deal with vacancies of teachers if any should occur.—Carried.

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. McGinnis that the Board tender votes of thanks to dental surgeons, physicians and oculists, who have given free their services in reference to dental inspection of children in the schools.—Carried.

On motion of Messrs Mallory and O'Flynn a special committee consisting of Messrs Ackerman, Reid and Dr. Marshall was appointed to co-operate with the inspecting nurse in regard to her work.—Carried.

Board adjourned.

Prices Of Food Also Due To Fall

Present High Level Caused By Interruption of Transportation

NEW YORK, May 21—The bankers' war on high prices, declared at the behest of the Federal Reserve Board brought another wave of liquidation in the securities market.

Primarily induced by the general stringent credit conditions this wave caused many stocks and bonds to fall to still lower quotations for the current movement.

Support of a substantial character was forthcoming, however, and bargain hunters also were active in the more popular issues. As a result, prices rallied vigorously before the close, Liberty Bonds and Victory Notes sharing largely in the recovery.

Prominent bankers and brokers, although inclined to refer to the price cutting movement as "a form of hysteria," nevertheless declared values of many standard railroads and industrials have in no degree been impaired by the higher rates for money. They asserted that, on the contrary, representative securities have been placed on a sounder foundation by the action of the Federal Reserve Board and banks acting in conjunction with that body.

Credits Contracting

Reports from leading industrial and commercial centres were again to the effect that credits were contracting, but as far as could be learned, this condition was due in great measure to the railroad blockade, which has tied up vast amounts of money.

From every responsible authority came assurances that basic financial conditions all over the country offer no occasion for apprehension. In the words of a leading financier, the present movement is largely in the nature of a "necessary readjustment of values, including commercial and industrial inventories."

And while Wall Street was seeking to adjust itself to the new credit conditions the price slashing movement seemed to be gaining ground among New York retailers, who continued to advertise their wares at reductions.

An official of the Merchants' Association said he believed there was a decided tendency to reduce prices here in the retail market, although this was hampered by the freight tie-up which is causing a shortage of supplies to the distributors. He said this reduction in price was noticeable over and above the reductions made by clothing and department stores incident to cleaning out their spring stocks.

Food to Come Down

William Fellows Morgan, president of the Merchants' Association, in discussing the same subjects, said:

"The reduction of the prices of merchandise, which now seems to be prevalent throughout the country has been anticipated, it was inevitable as one of the steps of deflation which we must go through in order to regain normal conditions. The necessary preparation for the shrinkage of values, which really means an increase in the value of the dollar were long ago made by the banks. I do not anticipate that we shall have any trouble as a result of it, although certain lines of industry may be more or less disturbed.

"This re-adjustment has been retarded by the interruption of the transportation lines, especially in this city. The tendency of this interference with the free movement of merchandist has been to keep prices at high levels and even to increase them by cutting off supplies. The fact that food prices have not declined, I believe to be attributable mainly, if not entirely, to this cause. Our progress toward normal conditions will be accelerated and the danger of distance will be lessened by putting a stop to transportation hold ups, which constitute a menace to the entire community."

TOM MIX ENDS RUN

To-day marks the end of the run of William Fox's most successful Tom Mix production, "The Daredevil," which has introduced the cowboy actor to the patrons of the silent drama as author and actor as well. No picture that has been shown at Griffin's where this dramatic story of the West has given the many who have seen "the thrills that this splendid photoplay has given he many who have seen "the man who never fakes" outdo his best previous efforts. A funny 2-reel big V comedy, Pictorial Life with its varied living events of interest, the 2nd chapter of The Prince of Wales Tour Through Canada, this weeks tour embracing his trip through Ontario and an amusing Lyons-Moran comedy are also being shown on the same program.

STUART ROBSON'S WIDOW

The "Big Boss" of the boarding house in "The Prodigal Wife" which is being presented at the Palace today matinee and night is none other than the widow of Stuart Robson, whom older theatregoers will remember as the foremost actor of his day. British Canadian News, a funny Strand comedy, and a beautiful Outing Chester Reel are also being shown on the same program.

COMPARISON OF MINSTRELS

Minstrels are not all alike. To be able to demonstrate this fact, the public is urged to attend the Harvey Greater Minstrels when it appears at Griffin's next Wednesday, May 26th, matinee and night.

Never was a colored Minstrel Show dressed as is the Harvey Greater Minstrels. The management of the Harvey Greater Minstrels conceived the idea of assembling fifty really classy, natural and capable performers of that race, and consequently an unusual minstrel organization is the result. The idea of the Octaroon Beauty Chorus is original with Mr. Harvey.

RETURN OF BILLIE BURKE

Billie Burke's latest picture is called "Wanted—A Husband," and is an adaptation of a magazine story by Samuel Hopkins Adams. It will be shown at Griffin's this Monday and Tuesday with a special holiday matinee Monday. The story is said to be admirably suited to the comedy talents of Miss Burke. The heroine is Amanda Darcy Cole, a wall paper designer who lives with two girl friends in the Bohemian section of New York and is slovenly and unkempt in her appearance. Her two companions are about to be married and taunt her so much about her unattractiveness that she invents a fictitious fiance, then goes to a training camp to beautify herself. On the train Darcy meets her honeymooning room-mates and hastily induces a young man passenger to pose as her intended. Later she blossoms out as a ravishing beauty and the events that follow will be found very amusing. Miss Burke's leading man is James L. Crane who also appeared opposite her in "The Misleading Widow," and "Sadie Love". Gypsy O'Brien and Kid Broad, the ex-pugilist, are also in the cast. "The Heart Snatcher," a funny 2-reel Fox Sunshine comedy, the 3rd chapter of the thrilling animal serial, "The Lost City," and the photoplay screen magazine are also being shown on the same program.

HAUNTING SHADOWS

If you are imaginative—if the mystery of the unknown and unseen grips you with icy fingers and you enjoy the thrill of spasmodic shivers jazzing up and own your spine, you will want to see H. B. Warner in "Haunting Shadows" his latest production. It is an absorbing mystery drama filmed from the greatest mystery story of the generation, "The House of a Thousand Candles," by Meredith Nicholson, this screen version something that the spoken drama could not give them—realistic visualization of action and settings which make more vivid the uncanny atmosphere that pervades the story. "Count Your Votes" a funny Harold Lloyd comedy, and the opening chapter of "The Dark Secret" serial, featuring Pearl White and other varied plays have also been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

THE NATIONAL ATHLETIC CONTEST

The National C. S. E. T. Athletic Contest held during the week of April 19-24 was in every way a distinct success. Reports are coming in at headquarters and the results are rapidly being compiled. When the winners for the various provinces and for the whole Dominion are decided upon, full announcement will be made in this column.

I have just been looking at some sample reports. Here is one from Orillia, Ont. Five Tuxis Squares and nine Trail Rangers Camps competed with a total entry of ninety-six boys. The highest Tuxis score was made by James Ryan, who scored 464 out of a possible 500, a percentage of nearly 93. John Evans led the Trail Rangers with a percentage of 91.

From St. John, N.B., comes this postcard message: "We had a great time at the athletic meet. It is a great event in the boy life of our community. We are having a meet in Fairville next with three groups, a Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist. There will be a girls' basketball contest."

How is this? I have just heard that a boy in Brampton, Ontario, made a score of 525 out of a possible 500. That is going some? Who did better?

Mother: "Bobby, did you use this towel before you went to that Athletic Meet last night?"

Trail Ranger: "Yes, Mother."

Mother: "Well, why did you clean your boots on it?"

Trail Ranger: "Why Mother! I only wiped my hands and face on it."

Anaemia Robs Its Victims By Stealth

Conditions of Thin Blood That Could Be Corrected Easily Are Stealing The Health and Energy of Many Men and Women and Boys and Girls

Anaemia, which literally means bloodlessness, is one of the most prevalent troubles of the present day. If neglected it is apt to develop into pernicious anaemia, one of the most hopeless diseases. While anaemia attacks men and boys, it is more prevalent among young girls and women and for this reason every woman, particularly every mother, should know how to recognize the signs of this trouble which makes its approach so gradually and so stealthily that it is often far advanced before the nature of the trouble is noticed. One general symptom of anaemia is pallor. The cheeks gradually lose their color, and the lips become pale or white. With this loss of color there comes a tendency to fatigue, a palpitation of the heart and breathlessness after slight exertion, with occasional headaches. In the more severe cases fainting spells frequently occur.

In ordinary anaemic conditions, including the anaemia that affects young girls in their teens, Dr. Williams Pink Pills are all the medicine required. Fresh air, sunlight and nourishing food will do the rest. Any woman or girl taking Dr. Williams Pink Pills can tell by the growing redness of her lips that the pills are making her blood rich and red.

Miss Mabel Feener, Liverpool, N.S. says:—"Before I began the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills I felt like a complete wreck of my former self. My blood was thin and watery; I suffered from faint and dizzy spells, and had headaches almost every day. I was was taking doctor's medicine, but it was not helping me and at this time I was learning my trade as a tailoress, and was forced through my illness to give up work. After reading an advertisement of Dr. Williams Pink Pills one day, I decided to give the pills a trial. After taking two boxes I felt that I was being benefited and continued their use until I was fully restored to health. The pills certainly did wonders for me and I cannot recommend them too highly."

The purpose of Dr. Williams Pink Pills is to build up the blood. They do this one thing and they do it well They are for this reason an invaluable remedy in diseases arising from bad or deficient blood, as rheumatism, neuralgia, after-effects of the grip and fevers. The pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drug and cannot injure the most delicate system. You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Trenton grocer was before Magistrate O'Rourke on Tuesday forenoon, charged with having Oleomargarine for sale without a wrapper stating it was margarine, or the manufacturers name. The information was laid by an inspector of the Dairy Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Defendant pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $50 and $5 costs.

BARN BURNED

In falling while descending from the mow last Sunday evening, Mr. Wm. R. Hall lost hold of his lantern and it fell over a partition into a stall. He was educated at Annette Street School, Humberside Collegiate, and the University of Toronto, being graduated in arts in 1906, and in medicine in 1908. He became house surgeon in Grace Hospital under the divisional surgeon of the G. T. R. After a year in Grace Hospital he became a partner of Dr. Riordan in his railroad work.

TO OPEN SAFES IN BELGIUM

Roy Gravelle, the "safe wizard," left Renfrew on Friday last to join Rev. Fathers Dooner, Quilty and Harrington upon a European trip. But when the shores of Europe are reached Mr. Gravelle is to leave the clerical tourists and go to Belgium where his services are wanted for the opening of safes in the district devastated by war. There has occurred a loss of combination; besides many an owner lost his life in the war. Already many safes in Belgium have been forced open since the close of the conflict by the use of dynamite. Mr. Gravelle's stay in the old country may last for several months.

NEGLECTED STAMPS

Four of Trentons merchants were visited by a Government Inspector a short time ago and found selling powders and other toilet articles without affixing the Revenue stamps. Before Magistrate O'Rourke on Tuesday each had to pay the customary fine of $50 and costs. There are a good many merchants selling articles demanding stamps who actually are not aware of the law until they get caught. Now, that the war is over, many believe that the tax has been done away with. The same tax as was necessary during the war is still to be affixed.

RETAIL MERCHANTS OBJECT

That the luxury tax, based on the purchase price, instead of the excess over the fixed exemptions, will prove to be extremely excessive and much more than the Government could have imagined, is the claim being put forth by the Retail Merchants' Associaton. It is averred that the turnover of Toronto merchants alone in the specified luxury class of articles runs into many millions a year and that the 10 and 20 per cent. luxury taxes, based on the gross turnover, would draw millions of money out of this city alone. The Government has gone far from the happy medium in this luxury tax," declared W. C. Miller of the Retail Merchants' Association who said representations would be made to the Government to reconsider it. It is contended that the tax should fall, not on the whole purchase price, but on the excess alone. In other words, the tax on a $50 suit, instead of being $5 based at 10 per cent. on $50 should be calculated on only $5, the excess over $45. In this way the tax on the $50 suit would be 50 cents instead of $5 following the system imposed in the United States.

Suffered Three Years Until She Tried "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

DAME PETER LAMARRE

Pointe St. Pierre, P. Q.

"I think it my duty to tell you how much your medicine has done for me.

I suffered for three years with terrible Eczema. I consulted several doctors and they did not do me any good.

Then, I used one box of 'Sootha-Salva' and two boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives' and my hands are now clear. The pain is gone and there has been no return. I think it is a marvellous cure because no other medicine did me any good and I tried all the remedies I ever heard of, without benefit until I used 'Sootha-Salva' and 'Fruit-a-tives.'

'Fruit-a-tives' cooled the blood and removed the cause of the disease, and 'Sootha-Salva' completed the cure."

ELECTRIC WIRING

Before Magistrate Masson yesterday afternoon, a case of considerable importance was heard. Ald. Bone was charged by Mr. Harry Thompson, District Electrical Inspector, with committing a breach of the Power Commission Act which was passed in June, 1916 and amendments thereto added later by not complying with a written order to repair defective wiring. This was the first case ever tried here and considerable interest was manifested. Mr. Thompson in his evidence stated that the wiring in the basement of the premises in the case was fixed to the joist with beaver board instead of passing through porcelean insulators as the law directs, and also by removing approved fuses, and substituting open link fuses and if a blow out occurred the consequent flash would be more than likely to set fire to the paper bond which was in firing distance. This act of employing an open fuse is in direct violation of the new act. Magistrate Masson at the conclusion of the case found the defendant had violated the Act and gave him until Monday, the 31st inst. to remedy the defect complained of and also that judgment would be rendered on that day.

EMPIRE DAY

Empire Day was celebrated in Queen Alexandra School yesterday (Friday) in an appropriate manner. During the forenoon, the teachers of the different Grades explained to the pupils what this day should stand for to all of us. Rev. Mr. Kerr addressed the School in the afternoon and in a very interesting and instructive manner pointed to the many reasons for the greatness of the Empire for which we form a part. He referred to incidents in the lives of Queen Victoria, the Good, Edward the Peacemaker and George V, to show that the nation had been specially blessed by having such sovereigns. Mr. D. V. Sinclair then talked to the pupils in a way that pleased everyone present. He impressed on the minds of all that the greatest asset of any nation is the boys and girls and that each should do their utmost to secure a good education in order to increase their value to the nation. He closed by leaving with them the Prince of Wales' motto, "I serve." On account of the absence of Mr. H. W. Ackerman, chairman of the school, Mr V. E. Bullock, Vice-President, presided. Two choruses by the pupils formed a part of the programme, viz, "O Canada," and "The Recessional," and the programme closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

CHURCH CASE

In the case of Swayne, et al, vs. the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Ontario heard at Napanee before Hon. Justice Rose this week, judgment was reserved. The action is for an interpretation of certain agreements specified in ancient documents of the Church of England in Canada concerning church or glebe lands in Belleville Rectory and the revenue therefrom. It is claimed that all revenue over two thousand dollars a year from this source should be placed in the general fund of Belleville Rectory instead of going to St. Thomas church which has undisputed claim up to $2,000. The question of the disposition of four thousand dollars odd received as the result of expropriation for school purposes of church property including the old parish hall of St. Thomas Church is also in question. St. Thomas church officials claim that this property was sold with the express agreement that the proceeds should be returned to St. Thomas church towards a new parish hall, that it was so disposed of, but that a Synod official mistakenly passed the amount through the general fund instead of a special fund for the sole benefit of St. Thomas Church. The dispute is really between Christ Church, Belleville, and St. Thomas church officials of the former claiming their church is entitled to a share of general church funds now enjoyed by St. Thomas. Officials of St. Thomas church claim that they offered to leave the whole question to arbitration if the writ was abandoned but this was refused by the plaintiffs. Witnesses heard included Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, Rural Dean Swayne, Rector of Christ Church, Belleville; Rev. J. W. Jones, Secretary of the Synod; J. A. Kerr, City Assessor, Belleville; Mr. Chas. Skelcher, Vestry Clerk of St. Thomas. E. Gus Porter, K. C., appeared for pelintiffs; W. S. Herrington, K. C., and J. B. Walkem, K. C., Kingston, for defendants.

THESE ARE THE BOYS WHO WILL MAKE YOU LAUGH AT SPARKS' BIG THREE RING CIRCUS ON WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2nd.

Paradoxically speaking, the brainiest men with the circus are those who are the most foolish. All of which is by saying that one of the hardest jobs in the circus is that of being a clown. Of course all that a clown must do to bring a laugh is just "to act funny." But it is in acting funny that the brains are required. Hence the reason that the forty clowns form one of the chief items of expense in the heavy payroll of the Sparks Big 3-Ring Circus, which is to exhibit in Belleville on Wednesday, June 2nd.

Once upon a time it was easy for a clown to be funny. He had his comic song. He had his lines which could reach every part of the small tent in which the circus of the past held its performance. But that day has passed. The clown has no chance for words now, no chance for songs or for jests. In the Sparks Circus this year the great canvases cover nine acres of ground and seat close to ten thousand persons. Only a man with the voice of a steamship siren could talk to an assemblage like that.

Therefore the clown of today must be a pantomist of extraordinary intelligence. He must make his every movement supply all that voice could add. He must make himself a living caricature of the events of the day—for the idea of a chalk-smeared face and a ruff around the neck has passed as a standard of clowndom.

BY LAKE AND RAIL TO WESTERN CANADA

On your business or vacation trip to Western Canada this summer you may use with advantage and enjoyment the Grand Trunk Lake and Rail route. You will thus combine a pleasant voyage over the great "fresh water seas," with the best in railroad service. Special Grand Trunk steamboat trains make direct connection with the vessels of the Northern Navigation Company at Sarnia, Ont. The traveller finds each hour filled with ever changing interest as he voyages over Lakes Huron and Superior. There is the charm of the daily life on shipboard, the interesting experience of passing through the locks at Sault St. Marie, the visits to Canada's Twin Cities, Fort William and Port Arthur, and—if desired—to Duluth, the city built upon a mountain side.

The steamships of the Northern Navigation Company offer the maximum of comfort, service and safety. The flagship of this mighty fleet, the "Noronic" has accommodation for 588 people, and has six decks—all of steel. Alcohol As Motor Fuel To Replace Gasoline

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN IN ENGLAND AND UNITED STATES IN POSSIBILITIES OF ALCOHOL AS SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLENE — ENORMOUS INCREASE IN USE OF MOTOR DRIVEN MACHINERY DEMANDS GASOLENE SUBSTITUTE.

By ROBERT G. SKERRETT
in the New York Sun.

Old King Alcohol is by no means dead. He will be up and doing presently, and his dominion will be a wider and more potent one than in the past. Even if he no longer makes us dizzy, it is reasonably certain that he will make millions of wheels go round. It is just dawning upon us that we have hitherto failed as a people to appreciate alcohol as a source of motive energy. Circumstances, however, are compelling a fuller realization on the part alcohol is inevitably destined to play in transportation and in those manifold activities where gasolene now furnishes the needful impulse.

Time and again of late certain technical authorities in Washington have sent broadcast the warning message that nature's store of petroleum was being drained away at an alarming rate. Of that original supply 40 per cent. has been withdrawn, and there is no way of building up the subterranean reserve. True, many, many millions of barrels of crude oil still lie deep in the producing sands—a great deal more than has been utilized to date. But this does not warrant complacency in view of the ever increasing rate of consumption.

Last year the U.S.A. produced 376,000,000 barrels of petroleum—nearly 34,750,000 barrels more than in 1918. From this crude oil is secured gasolene; but the total of the petroleum output is by no means an index of the possible yield of motor fuel for the simple reason that the gasolene content is extremely variable. In some petroleums there is but a trace of it; in others the recoverable measure does not exceed 1.5 per cent., while in some of our crude oils the percentage is a great deal higher. In the last twelvemonth the consumption of gasolene has averaged more than 8,500,000 gallons daily, and to meet the ever growing demand the refiners are working some of the heavier oils and resorting to different "crackling" processes to recover the utmost drop of the energizing substance.

An Amazing Increase.

A short while back E. W. Dean, a specialist of the United States Bureau of Mines, made this significant statement in an address delivered by him before the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia: "The production of gasolene has increased from approximately 13,000,000 barrels for the year 1909 to over 85,000,000 for the year 1918, a gain of about 560 per cent. The production of crude oil in the United States has, during the same period, increased only about 95 per cent., while the number of cars and trucks in service has increased about 1,700 per cent. This means that although the petroleum refiner has increased his efficiency more than has the producer, he has not kept pace with the manufacture of automotive vehicles. The possibility of a motor fuel shortage in the reasonably near future, unless other sources of supply are developed, is indicated by these figures."

Today there are registered in America and operating, more than 6,700,000 motor vehicles. There is every reason to believe that by the end of the present year there will be 7,000,000 and possibly a great many more in service, and some experts confidently predict that we shall have close to 15,000,000 automobiles and motor trucks running throughout the United States in the course of the next thirty-six months. At that rate we shall need every twenty-four hours approximately 20,000,000 gallons of gasolene!

No wonder, then, automotive engineers feel that their prime problem today is that of finding a satisfactory substitute fuel—one that shall not depend upon the uncertain measures of nature's hidden reserves of petroleum. Their desire is to adopt a fuel which can be evolved from raw materials which man can produce to a large extent at will and which can be augmented more or less agreeably to increasing demands.

The British View.

It was this angle of the subject that guided the British Interdepartmental Committee on the Production and Utilization of Power Alcohol. This governmental body has latterly made a report and its findings are of deep interest to us despite the fact that we are far more favorably situated than the British Isles in the matter of crude oil. The U. S. has got to guard against the day when its own supplies of petroleum fall far short of its insistent requirements.

The committee says: "The outstanding and fundamental attraction of alcohol motor fuel as a substitute for any fuel derived from coal or oil deposits lies in the fact that, on account of its chief sources being found in the vegetable world, supplies of raw material for its manufacture are being continuously renewed and are susceptible of great expansion without encroachment upon food supplies. We are of opinion that steps should be taken to insure increased production of power alcohol by the extended use of vegetable matters from which it may be obtained. Important materials of this nature are: (1) Sugar-containing products, such as molasses, malfua flowers, sugar beet and mangolds; (2) starch or inulin-containing products, such as maize and other cereals, potatoes and artichokes, and (3) cellulose-containing products, such as peat, sulphite, wood pulp lyes and wood."

The development of the alcohol industry cannot be left entirely to the chances of private enterprise, individual research and the ordinary play of economic forces. We are of opinion that the question of state action to educate the public concerning the merits of power alcohol and mixtures of the fuel by demonstrating, through the agency of series of lectures and exhibitions, or other appropriate means, the manner in which these alternative fuels can be best applied as sources of power in motor vehicle and stationary engines."

The British authorities, having seen the writing on the wall during the period of wartime stress, are keen that no delay should be permitted and no stone left unturned which may tend to promote the cause of power alcohol.

BIGGS FOR ROADS SECOND TO NONE

Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works and Highways, has sent the following greeting "to the people of the Province of Nova Scotia."

"With great pleasure I send greetings from the Province of Ontario to the Province of Nova Scotia. Now that the great war is won, and Canada has so famously distinguished herself in that conflict, it behooves us to avail ourselves of the opportunities which are so necessary in making ourselves one of the great nations of the world, and in no one matter can this be done more than in the development of good roads, with the facilities of transportation both for agriculture and industrial purposes. And the earnest hope of the people of Ontario is that the people of Nova Scotia join heartily in the great scheme of developing on our fair Dominion a system of trunk roads and well managed highways second to none in the world."

MEMBER ASKS IMMUNITY FOR "HONORABLE" CRIMINAL

K. S. Stover, Liberal member for Algoma brought up the robbery of the office of Senator Gordon at North Bay in the Legislature. He said that, apparently the robber was a very honorable gentleman, and had taken no money. He understood that a reward of $500 was offered for his capture. In view of the honor displayed in not taking any money and setting that his only purpose seemed to be a little destruction, he wanted the assurance of the Government that the robber, if caught, would be immune from punishment. Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney-General, made no reply to the unique request.

Gov't Report On Farm Conditions

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall wheat and clover have been almost at a standstill during the past week awaiting a good rain and warm weather, especially where grown on heavy land.

In several counties seeding is about through, but in most districts hoed crops are yet to be got in, and with some farmers the land is only now being prepared for these crops. Reports are almost unanimous as to the excellent quality of the seed bed this spring, but rain was greatly needed when returns were made at the week-end.

Essex and Kent each state that a considerable acreage of sugar beets was put in during the week, and that a good deal of corn had been planted. Tobacco beds in these counties, however, are reported to have become backward on account of the cool weather.

Sweet Clover.

Grey pointedly remarks: "Nearly every farmer here talks of, dreams of, and is sowing sweet clover."

Haldimand states that a number of farmers are going into flax growing, a comparatively new crop in that county.

Lambton states that many fields of cabbage plants have been set out already, and that there will be an increased acreage of sugar beets and flax this season. Norfolk also reports the putting in of many early vegetables.

Fruit Prospects.

Practically all classes of fruit trees will be in heavy bloom when the buds open out, but the season is considered to be ten days later than usual. Raspberry canes have been frozen back in many instances, but other small fruits, strawberries, especially, are in first class condition at present.

Cattle.

Many cattle are on pasture, but some farmers are holding back their animals as the grass is giving only a short bite. Lambton states that local ranchers are paying from 14 to 14½ cents a pound for good grass cattle. Oxford was selling good beef cattle at 15 cents, while Haldimand quotes fat steers being marketed at from 11½ to 13 cents a pound, and calves at from 14 to 16, with cows for the dairy selling at from $120 to $135.

Cheese.

Lennox and Addington states that some cheese factories are paying patrons $2.45 a cwt. for the first month's milk. Glengarry reports cheese bringing 32½ cents a pound at the factory during the week.

Hogs.

Hogs are selling at from $18.50 to $19.50 a cwt. Little pigs vary greatly in value. The following figures are quoted by representatives per pair: Welland, $13 to $16; Wentworth, $16; Peterboro, and Lennox and Addington, $15 to $20. The Grey County Pig Club, however, has a number of young animals from five to eight weeks old for which prices are asked running from $12 to $30 each. Manitoulin states that not so many sows were kept over winter, and that there have been big losses in spring litters.

Horses.

Haldimand reports sales of horses weighing around 1,400 lbs. at from $175 to $225. Several carloads of horses have been recently shipped from Lambton to Montreal at prices ranging from $180 to $240.

Farm Labor Scarce.

The Port Arthur representative states that home grown roots, bulbs and small fruit bushes are finding ready sale.

Farm labor is still scarce, even at the high rates prevailing.

THE FINE ART OF SIDE-STEPPING

Once upon a time, said he, a man died whose life had been wholly indefensible. His best friends had no good word for him. Yet it was demanded by his widow that her minister preach a sermon at his funeral. There was quite an enthusiastic gathering at the event. People wanted to know what the minister could find to say.

So he began with a statement of the man's name and the date of his birth and the date of his death. Then he swept wide his arms.

"Oh, my loving friends," said he, "during these past years—"

And he gave an eloquent description of the period just passed. He told of its greatness and its littleness, its selfishness and its generosity. And in closing—

"Dear friends," said he, "our de

Railway Ties An Important Industry

Belleville Citizen Closely Connected With Canadian Tie Industry

The following interesting article on the railway tire industry, published in The Canada Lumberman, refers to Mr. A. R. Thompson, a well-known resident of Belleville:

TREATMENT OF TIES

Much might be written on the wood preservative treatment of ties, and in recent publication entitled "Creosote Treatment of Jack Pine and Hemlock or Cross-Ties," which is issud by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior and compiled by W. Kynoch, B. Sc. F. E. and J. A. Coderre, B.A., F.E., one or two interesting statements are made. These gentlemen point out that by efficient preservative, decay in ties can be prevented or very greatly retarded and consequently the life of the tie in service can be increased.

Respecting some objections that have been raised to the treating process, they say: "In connection with mechanical wear the question of heaving of track and the consequent shimming, which necessitates the frequent drawing and re-driving of spikes, has frequently been brought forward as a serious objection to the use of treated ties in Eastern Canada. It has been claimed that where shimming is done ties are often spike-killed before they fail from decay, and that preservative treatment under these circumstances would be merely a waste of money. A point of the greatest importance is that heaving deos not necessarily entail shimming. Shimming is only necessitated at certain points where unsatisfactory drainage conditions, combined with the presence in the subgrade of heavy clay or other soil with high water-holding capacity, cause unequal heaving of a marked character which renders the track unsafe. These points are practically the same every year and are, therefore, in most cases known beforehand from previous experience. Only a relatively small proportion of the total number of ties in track is subject to shimming. Further trouble from this source is being gradually eliminated owing to improvements in drainage."

Ties are mostly divided into two kinds—pole ties and squared ties. The pole tie is generally divided into No. 1's and No. 2's, the difference being the width of the face. The same applies to No. 1 and No. 2 squared ties. No. 1 pole tie usually has a face 6 in. to 10 in. No. 2 pole tie 5 in. to 6 in.; Io. 1 squared tie has a face 8 in. to 10 in., and No. 2, 7 id. to 8 ft. The thickness of all ties is generally 6 in. to 7 in., and the length 8 ft. Of course switch ties are much longer and are purchased on certain specifications, being paid for by contractors on the basis of so much per thousand feet, board measure. In switch ties the companies set forth certain specifications, according to the wood used. The Grand Trunk Railway, for instance, calls for long leaf Yellow Pine, Whtie, Post or Burr Oak, Beech and Hard Maple woods in connection with its switch tie requirements.

One of the greatest developments of recent years in prolonging the life, service and strength of ties have been the establishing of treating plants. Much has been published in the columns of the "Canada Lumberman" on the creosote treatment of jack pine and hemlock for cross-ties. Treated ties were first used in Canada about 1896. Since that date a small number have been used each year, but possibly not more than 10 per cent. of the annual consumption. These were all imported from the United States. The first commercial treating plant in eastern Canada was erected in Trenton in 1911 and is known as the Canadian Creosoting Company. It has a capacity of treating 4,000 ties per day. Since then other plants have sprung up and are located at Fort Frances, OntO., and Sydney, N.S., while in the west similar plants exist at Transcona, Vancouver and North Vancouver, and Winnipeg, Man.

One of the veterans connected with the tie industry in Canada is Mr. A. R. Thompson of Belleville, who has been associated with the Grand Trunk Railway for a number of years and has held the position of chief tie and timber inspector of the system for a long period. Mr. Thompson has a wide acquaintance with forest products men in all parts of the country, and previous to the railways dealing with contractors for their supplies, which system was instituted a few years ago, he bought large quantities of railway timber from swmill men and woodsmen in all parts of the country. In a recent conversation he stated that about half of the ties now used by the G. T. R. system undergo preservative treatment and that the principal native timber for tie purposes in eastern Canada at the present time is jack pine, which comes first. A considerable quantity of hardwood is used, the principal varieties being our own native woods, birch, maple and beech.

Mr. Thompson is an ex-member of the Belleville City Council, having been an Alderman for some time and in that capacity rendered valuable service to the city.

Holstein Herd's Quick Growth

"Within a radius of ten miles of Brighton there are at least a dozen Holstein bulls, the dams of which are in the 30-pound class and one of these grand-dams has a record of 35.5 pounds of butter in a week," says Harry Sirrett, Agricultural Representative for Northumberland county.

That is enough of itself to put the Brighton section on the Holstein map. But, what is still better, these high-standard sires are being quite generally used by average local breeders. Nearly all of these have bred at least one or two cows to these superior sires.

Even aside from what has just been stated, Brighton district is entitled to a high place in the Holstein roll of fame as a result of the work of one man—Carman Baker. What Mr. Baker has done forms, indeed, a romantic chapter in Ontario's agricultural history. Six or seven years ago he was practically minus both capital and experience—that is experience as a breeder. In 1915 he sold the last of his grades, and had just one pure-bred cow. He bought a pure bred heifer, nd these two formed the foundation his herd.

CAN SEE BENEATH THE HIDE

"From the first," says Mr. Sirrett, "Mr. Baker displayed an almost uncanny knowledge of what was inside the hide of an animal. This was proved when, within 5 years from the time of starting in purebreds, he sold $160 worth of cream in one month from four cows. It was proved again when he bought a heifer at one of the Belleville sales for $550, and a year later, sold this heifer and her calf for a price sufficient to meet her original cost, pay for a 90-acre farm, which he added to his original holding of 50 acres, and leave a balance of $150 to the good. From November 1 last to May 1 of this year he sold $13,900 worth of Holstein cattle aside from his milk returns. That was certainly going some for a 50 acre farm, even if the sum represented in part sales of animals bought."

Not the least remarkable feature in Mr. Baker's work is in the conditions under which he has worked. His original farm of 50 acres when bought, was in a very much run-down condition still, so far as outbuildings are concerned. A poorer barn, an old frame structure wtih no basement stable, could hardly be found anywhere in Ontario. It would scarcely be considered good enough for an implement shed on a very ordinary kind of farm. But there is one good point in it. The stalls of the cows are bathed in sunlight every fine afternoon. The old barn is doomed, however. Preparations are already under way, now that Mr. Baker can see his way clear, for the building of a new barn and stabling worthy of the cattle to be housed therein.

PLAN TO PREVENT INDUSTRIAL CHAOS

New York, May 20.—A demand for national and state regulations of the right to strike or lockout and the subjecting of all associations of employers and employees to legal responsibility were urged as political 'planks' at the Republican and Democratic national conventions by 500 members of the National Association of Manufacturers here last night.

This is understood to be an effort by manufacturers to prevent industrial chaos similar to the recent "outlaw" railroad strike, when thousands of workers walked out in defiance of their international officers. Also the manufacturers obviously insist that the American Federation of Labor and its officers be placed under legislative control. Denial of the right to organize for the purpose of obstructing or stopping the nation's business was demanded by the manufacturers.

The right of employers to hire labor not affiliattd with the unions was declared to be essential to the personal freedom of employer and employee. The Federal Trade Commission was branded as being "persistently inquisitorial beyond its authority," by the manufacturers.

Repeal of the excess profits tax and the substitution for it of a tax on the gross final sales of merchandise, an effective national budget, the refunding of America's war indebtedness into long term securities and antagonism to Socialistic doctrines were other items in the manufacturers' program.

EIGHT MILLION ORDER HARD TO FINANCE

London, May 20.—Orders for some $8,000,000 have been secured by Mr. F. H. Knapp, secretary of the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers' Association, from Roumania, for Canadian woollen mills. Although these extensive orders have been secured it has been found so far impossible to finance them, as the Canadian Government will not advance any more money to Roumania where a $25,000,000 advance has already been taken.

Mr .Knapp is meeting wtih great difficulty in his endeavor to raise the credit as British financiers would not entertain this scheme unless the trade was divided with British manufacturers. This fact points more conclusively to Canada's necessity for a credit system, such as that of the United States and Great Britain.

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

BY AIRPLANE TO PARIS.

A distinctly novel attraction has now been provided in the C. P. R. office windows at Charing Cross, an attraction which has been much admired by the crowds who have gathered to make inspection. The fine windows usually devoted to the exhibition of things Canadian is being occupied by an excellent model aerodrome of the Aircraft Transport and Travel, Limited, at London, together with scientifically accurate models of various types of airplanes and airships.

Such a display in a railway and shipping office may seem rather unusual at first sight, but—is really a sign of the times, also marking much enterprise on the part of the Dominion Express, Company of Canada. Realizing the importance of maintaining a really "Express" service, if its name is still to be justified, the Dominion Express Company, the premier Express Company in Canada, made arrangements to act as Passenger and Parcels Agents for the Aircraft Transport and Travel Limited on their London-Paris daily air service.

It is thus possible for either passengers or parcels to be booked for conveyance by airplane to or from London and Paris through any of the Dominion Express Company's offices in Europe, and these, in addition to London are to be found in important cities such as Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol and Paris.

The advantages of this arrangement are many, for the Dominioin Express, holding, as it does, the exclusive right of shipping Express parcels over the entire C. P. R. system, as agents for the Airplane Service can ensure that an Express package scheduled to catch a certain ship actually reached its destination in Canada in the shortest possible space of time. As time is money nowadays, more than ever it was, it is easy to realise what an important adjunct an Air Service is to an Express Company.

The time-table shows that only 2¼ hours is occupied on the journey to or from London and Paris—urgent letters are carried at 2 shillings and 6 pence per ounce over the ordinary letter rate.

Parcels for delivery in Paris on the same day have to be handed in at the London office of the Dominion Express Company, 62-65, Charing Cross, London, S.W., before 10.30 a.m. The parcel rates range from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per lb., according to quantity, while special rates are quoted for large and regular consignments. The single fare for passengers is 15 guineas, which includes a car to convey the passenger to Hounslow, the starting point. The Dominion express company's officials at Charing Cross have every reason to believe that a large proportion of Canadian visitors to Europe this year will take advantage of the ease with which it is now possible to book seats for a real flying visit to the Continent through their office. In fact, if they so wish, a falgar Square, and in under three hours they can be walking along the Champs Elysees.

A Corporation With a "Soul"

IT has grown into a proverb, almost universally accepted by men of affairs to-day, that "corporations have no souls." But there are many institutions of which that cannot be said—least of all could it be said of The Mutual Life of Canada. There has been from the beginning a devotion to the principle of mutual helpfulness on the part of the directors, officers, head office staff and agents.

The Spirit of the Mutual is the Spirit of Co-operation

All life companies are co-operative to a degree, but the Mutual Life of Canada is the only Canadian company that is wholly co-operative. There is no private capital drawing dividends on the stock of the Company. The result is that the greatest benefits are available to the members at the lowest cost.

To start a strictly co-operative life company is a difficult task. For the first decade it was necessary for the directors and officers to practice economy that demanded personal self-denial. Years of devoted service were given in some instances free of cost. It has been truly said of these men that "Their Spirit of Sacrifice Supplied the Place of Capital"

The aim of the Company was to issue life insurance to Canadian policy-holders at the lowest possible cost—That aim has never been relinquished. If you secure a policy in the Mutual you secure insurance at net cost.

Be a Mutualist!

CANADIAN PRESS LTD. HAS ANNUAL MEETING

Toronto, May 20—Daily newspaper publishers to the number of between forty and fifty from every part of the Dominion, from Sydney to Victoria, attended today the general and annual meetings of the Canadian Press, Ltd., the co-operative and mutual organization of Canada for the supply of domestic and foreign news service.

Proposals for an improved cable service to be entirely within the control of the Canadian Press, were advanced. The Canadian newspapers, as a body, although grateful to the British Government for its offer of financial aid, decided, however, that they could not, in self-respect, burden the British taxpayer, but were prepared, from their own resources, and by continuation of aid received from the Ottawa Government, to develop a service of inter-Imperial cable news.

GRAY-DORT

The new Gray-Dort is a veritable treat to the eye—dignified, pleasing, modern.

The new hood with its many long, narrow louvres gives a European touch. So, too, does the smaller, smarter cowl. The gasoline tank is now in the rear. And the Rayntite top, hand-tailored in our own shops, is easily the smartest top on any light car.

Crowning all is the lasting elegance of the coach-builder's art and finish which Gray-Dort craftsmen have spent 60 years in perfecting.

But this beauty of line and finish cloaks even more desirable features.

The smooth, quiet Gray-Dort motor with its 5" stroke and 3⅛" bore: the heavy 40 lb. crankshaft: the channel steel frame: the heavier steering gear: the Thermoid brake lining; the improved ignition and carburetor: the Westinghouse starting and lighting systems: the heavier rear axle and cantilever springs, both Chatham-built:—the more you know about cars the more superiorities will you find in the Gray-Dort, hidden under its robe of smart beauty.

At $1465 there is nothing in the light car class to match the refined and improved Gray-Dort.

It is the dominant VALUE. See it first.

The Touring Car
The Roadster
Finished in Gray-Dort green and black. Standard equipment. Touring car, 5-passenger. Roadster, 2-passenger. $1465 f.o.b. Chatham. War tax extra.

The Gray-Dort Special

Motometer. Clock. Tilting steering wheel. Real leather upholstery. Oversize tires. A car above the ordinary. $150 extra on the standard.

And the Ace!
The most beautiful light car of to-day—The Gray-Dort Ace. Sapper green body, with handsome California top to match. Trouble lamp and bull's-eye flashlight. Plate-glass windows. Rear-vision mirror. AND all the features of the Gray-Dort Special. This is the DE LUXE car for the man who does not wish to pile up tremendous operating cost. $255 extra on the standard.

The America's Cup trials between the Vanitie and the Resolute will commence today.

Under the Greenwood Tree

By THOMAS HARDY

In addition to the local musicians present, a man who had a thorough knowledge of the tambourine was invited from the village of Tantrum Clangley—a place long celebrated for the skill of its inhabitants as performers on instruments of percussion. These important members of the assembly were relegated to a height of two or three feet from the ground, upon a temporary erection of planks supported by barrels. While the dancing progressed, the older persons sat in a group under the trunk of the beech—the space being allotted to them somewhat grudgingly by the young ones, who were greedy of pirouetting room, and fortified by a table against the heels of the dancers. Here the gaffers and gammers, whose dancing days were over, told stories of great impressiveness and at intervals surveyed the advancing and retiring couples from the same retreat, as people on shore might be supposed to survey a naval engagement in the bay beyond returning again to their tales when the pause was over. Those of the whirling throng, who, during the rests between each figure, turned their eyes in the direction of the seated ones, were only able to discover, on account of the music and bustle, that a striking circumstance was in course of narration—denoted by an emphatic and fixed look into the center of the listener's eye, for the space of a quarter of a minute, which raised in that listener such a reciprocating working of face as to sometimes make the distant dancers half wish to know what such an interesting tale could refer to.

Fancy caused her looks to wear as much matronly expression as was obtainable out of six hours' experience as a wife, in order that the contrast between her own state of life and that of the unmarried young women present might be duly impressed upon the company—occasionally stealing glances of admiration at her left hand, but this quite privately; for her ostensible bearing concerning the matter was intended to show that, though she undoubtedly occupied the most wondrous position in the eyes of the world that had ever been attained, she was almost unconscious of the circumstances and that the somewhat prominent position in which that wonderfully emblazoned left hand was continually found to be placed, when handling cups and saucers, knives, forks, and glasses, was quite the result of an accident.

PART V—CHAPTER II

Five country dances, including "Haste to the Wedding," two reels, and three fragments of hornpipes, brought them to the time for supper, which, on account of the dampness of the grass from the immaturity of the summer season, was spread in-doors. At the conclusion of the meal, Dick went out to put the horse in, and Fancy, with the elder half of the four bride-maids, retired upstairs to dress for the journey to Dick's new cottage near Mellstock.

"How long will you be putting on your bonnet, Fancy?" Dick inquired at the foot of the staircase. Being now a man of business and married, he was strong on the importance of time and doubled the emphasis of his words in conversing and added vigor to his nods.

"Only a minute."

"How long is that?"

"Well, dear, five."

"Ah! sonnies!" said the tranter, as Dick retired, "'tis a talent of the female race that low numbers should stand for high, more especially in matters of waiting, matters of age, and matters of money."

"True, true, upon my body," said Geoffrey.

"Ye spake with feeling, Geoffrey, seemingly."

"Anybody that d'know my experience might guess that."

"What's she doing now, Geoffrey?"

"Claning out all the upstairs drawers and cupboards, and dustin the second-best chainey—a thing that's only done once a year. 'If there's work to be done, I must do it,' says she, 'wedding or no.'"

"'Tis my belief she's a very good woman at bottom."

"She's terrible deep, then."

Mrs. Penny turned round. "Well, 'tis humps and hollers with the best of us; but still and for all that, Dick and Fancy stand as fair a chance of having a bit of sunsheen as any married pair in the land."

"Ay, there's no gainsaying it."

Mrs. Dewy came up, talking to one person, and looking at another. "Happy, yes," she said. "'Tis always so when a couple is so exactly in tune with one another as Dick and she."

"When they be'n't too poor to have time to sing," said Grandfather James.

"I tell ye, naibors, when the pinch comes," said the tranter—"when the oldest daughter's boots be only a size smaller than her mother's and the rest o' the flock close behind her. A sharp time for a man that, my sonnies—a very sharp time! Chanticleer's comb is a-cut then, 'a b'lieve."

"That's about the form o't," said Mr. Penny. "That'll put the stuns upon a man, when you must measure mother and daughter's lasts to tell 'em apart."

"You've no cause to complain, Reuben, of such a close-coming flock" said Mrs. Dewy; "for ours was a straggling lot enough, God knows."

"I d'know it, I d'know it," said the tranter. "You be well-enough woman Ann."

Mrs. Dewy put her mouth in the form of a smile, and put it back again without smiling.

"And if they come together, they go together," said Mrs. Penny, whose family was the reverse of the tranter's "and a little money will make either fate tolerable. And money can be made by our young couple, I know."

"Yes, that it can!" said the impulsive voice of Leaf, who had hitherto humbly admired the proceedings from a corner. "It can be done—all that's wanted is a few pounds to begin with. That's all! I know a story about it!"

"Let's hear thy story, Leaf," said the tranter. "I never knowed you were clever enough to tell a story. Silence, all of ye! Mr. Leaf will tell a story."

"Tell your story, Thomas Leaf!" said Grandfather William, in the tone of a school-master.

"Once," said the delighted Leaf, in an uncertain voice, "there was a man who lived in a house. Well, this man went thinking and thinking night and day. At last he said to himself, as I might, 'If I had only ten pounds, I'd make a fortune.' At last, by hook or by crook, behold, he got ten pounds!"

"Only think of that!" said Nat Callcome, satirically.

"Silence!" said the tranter.

"Well, now comes the interesting part of the story. In a little time he made that ten pounds twenty. Then a little time after that he doubled it, and made it forty. Well, he went on, and a good while after that he made it eighty, and on to a hundred. Well, by and by he made it two hundred! Well, you'd never believe it, but—he went on and made it four hundred! He went on, and what did he do? Why, he made it eight hundred! Yes, he did," continued Leaf in the highest pitch of excitement, bringing down his fist upon his knee with such force that he quivered with pain; "yes and he went on and made it a Thousand!"

"Hear, hear!" said the tranter. "Better than the history of England, my sonnies!"

"Thank you for your story, Thomas Leaf" said Grandfather William; and then Leaf gradually sunk into nothingness again.

• • • • • • • •

Amid a medley of laughter, old shoes and elder wine, Dick and his bride took their departure, side by side in the excellent new spring-cart which the young tranter now possessed. The moon was just over the full, rendering any light from lamps or their own beauties quite unnecessary to the pair. They drove slowly along Wilderness Bottom, where the lane passed between tow copses. Dick was talking to his companion.

"Fancy," he said, "why we are so happy is because there is such entire confidence between us. Ever since that time you confessed to that little flirtation with Shinar by the river—which was really no flirtation at all—I just thought how artless and good you must be to tell me of such a trifling thing and be so frightened about it as you were. It has won me to tell you my every movement since then. We'll have no secrets from each other darling, will we ever—no secret at all?"

"None from today," said Fancy. "Hark! what's that?"

From a neighboring thicket was heard to issue a loud, musical, and liquid voice:

"Tippiwit! swe-e-et! ki-ki-ki! Come hither, come hither, come hither!"

"Oh, 'tis the nightingale," murmured she, and thought of a secret she should never tell.

A permanent roof at a moderate cost

If you are going to erect a home, store, factory, garage or other building with a slanting roof upon which an attractive, permanent covering is desired at a moderate cost you will find that Brantford Crystal Roofing meets your requirements.

This roofing is comprised of felt, asphalt and crushed crystals of quarry slate and weighs 80 to 85 lbs. per square. Its extra weight will give you an idea of its durability and permanency.

Brantford Crystal Roofing is sold in reddish brown and dark green, which are the natural, unfadeable colors of its crushed slate surface. This roofing adds beauty to any roof covered with it. Being in rolls and pliable it is very easily and quickly laid, which is an advantage when the need is urgent, labor so scarce and wages so high.

Brantford Crystal Roofing

is non-absorbent and therefore completely waterproof. It makes a solid, permanent roof which is proof against rain, snow, frost and heat. Flying embers and clauds of sparks may fall on its crushed slate surface but they harmlessly die out without injuring the roofing.

This German Frau Exhibits Courage

Dares to Remind German Assembly of Brutality of German Soldiers.

BERLIN, May 24.—Stormy scenes in the meeting of the German Assembly arose over the discussion of the employment by the French of black troops in the occupied area. Adolf Koester, Minister of Foreign Affairs, replying to an interpellation complaining of acts of savage brutality by these troops toward women and children only a tithe of whose horrors were known, said that protests from Great Britain, the United States, Sweden and Norway had made little impression on the French Government as the German protests, and Germany intended to appeal to the League of Nations so that the moral pressure of the whole world could be brought to bear.

Frau Zeitz, Independent Socialist, then caused an uproar by reminding the interpellators that they had said nothing about the acts of immoral brutality committed by German soldiers against women in Russia, Belgium and elsewhere.

Indignant shouts of "shame," "unheard baseness," prevented the speaker from continuing. She waited for the storm to pass, then resumed, only to meet with renewed interruptions.

"This is only a racial fight against the blacks," declared Frau Zeitz, amid renewed shouts of "leave the house."

She retorted: "It is the fault of all the capitalistic governments that the blacks have remained behind in civilization. The history of the German colonial police is one long story of German cruelty."

After speeches by other members of the Assembly, protesting against the utterances of Frau Zeitz, the storm subsided.

PUBLIC SCARED INTO PAYING HIGH PRICES

New York, May 25.—The so-called shortage of sugar does not exist," reads a statement by Marcus Blakemore, president of the National Preserves and Fruit Products Association, who has investigated available supplies with the help of the Department of Justice and representatives of the refining industry. "Present prices represent pure inflation, caused through hoarding by sugar speculators."

He said that with the sugar that has already been received in the United States and the amounts contracted for and available, on the Cuban market, an excess of more than 500,000 tons over last year's total consumption, is in sight.

Last year, with a Government fixed price of nine cents a pound, we did not use nearly as much sugar as we have available this year," Mr. Blakemore declared; "and this year, owing to the condition of foreign exchange and transportation conditions the demand for export is much smaller. The net result is that there is plenty of sugar, but the public has been scared into paying the exorbitant and outrageous prices by the speculators who have shouted 'shortage' and held their stocks for still higher prices."

Rev. Dr. Scott Given Fountain Pen

Presented With Fountain Pen at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in the Y. M. C. A. Friday, 21st, with the efficient and indefatigable president, Mrs. S. Gibson, presiding.

After singing Mrs. Gibson read a portion of scripture with its keynote "Our utter dependence on Christ for all W. C. T. U. work," followed by prayer by Mrs. (Rev.) Foster.

Miss Jack, the recording secretary, reported eight regular meeting and twelve executive meetings, beside the many mass meetings for the referendum campaign last October. She spoke of the splendid work in canvasing the city for voters and educating on the meaning and effect of the four questions on the ballot, and the delegation going before the City Council, the practical addresses of Rev. Dr. Scott, Rev. D. C. Ramsay, Dr. Yeomans, Mr. Woodley, Mayor Riggs, Gousell, Miss Alice Sinclair, and others; much more was mentioned in this enlightening report. The mothers meetings held at the City Mission each week received their meed of praise.

A letter was received from Miss Alice Sinclair, thanking the W.C.T.U. for their practical assistance in the addition of a sterilizer to her equipment for the Dental Clinic.

Mrs. Bonter, treasurer, reported a membership of 208, receipts $324.68. After the presentation of departmental reports Dr. Scott, who was present, was called, but owing to the condition of his throat, could speak but briefly. He said that greater things remained to be done. The franchise had added greater responsibility for further achievement, social improvement, moral uplift. Leadership must come from the W. C. T. U., which must organize to prepare and perfect plans for the coming referendum more thoroughly than ever before.

Mrs. (Rev.) Wallace read an address expressing the deep gratitude of the ladies to Dr. Scott for his willing, unfailing and prolonged support of the various activities of the W. C. T. U. work throughout his pastorate here. A gold mounted fountain pen was presented as a small token of the heartfelt appreciation of his oft-repeated kindness.

Mrs. Gibson, as president, added a personal word of gratitude for his sympathetic advice and his willingness to give of his time to aid her in this work. Dr. Scott fittingly replied.

Mrs. Gibson expressed her desire to give up the work, but the ladies were unwilling to lose so capable, efficient and painstaking a leader, so she was again elected President, which office she accepted on condition that an associate president be chosen. Mrs. (Rev.) Wilson was elected as associate president. Miss I. Martin was chosen recording secretary, Mrs. (Rev.) A. F. Hall, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Bonter, treasurer, with assistant, Mrs. S. Vandervoort, for West Belleville, Miss Ida Jack, for East Belleville.

After discussion of the work Mrs. (Dr.) Scott dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Good Work Accomplished At School For The Deaf

SIX CLASSES FOLLOWING PUBLIC SCHOOL WORK, SPECIALIZING ON LANGUAGE — EXCELLENT TEACHING STAFF—CLEVER PUPILS—RETURNED SOLDIERS BENEFITTED.

The Annual Report of the Minister of Education containing the Report of the Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, has been issued, and includes the report of Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., Public School Inspector for Belleville and South Hastings who was appointed by the Minister of Education to inspect the academical work of the School for the Deaf. Mr. Clarke's report is as follows:—

To the Honourable H. J. Cody, M.A., D.D., L.L.D.,
Minister of Education in Ontario

Sir:—I have the honour to present herewith my report on the literary work at the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville, for the school year ending June 1919.

ORGANIZATION

The school is organized in three departments as follows: The Manual Department consisting of six classes, the Senior Oral Department of four classes under the supervision of Mr. Campbell and the Junior Oral Department of twelve classes under the supervision of Miss Ford. The work attempted is that of the Public School as nearly as possible, with a strong emphasis on language which is the great handicap of these children, for we must not forget that these children as a rule come to school without a word, but with the power to make some of their wants known by natural signs which express ideas rather than words. Anyone who visits this school and goes carefully into what is accomplished even in the elementary classes cannot but be amazed at the results. If our hearing children would make the same effort to learn that these children make, we sometimes find in our Public Schools In addition to four forms of the ordinary Public School they have here a class who have advanced beyond High School Entrance standard, and are doing High School work in some subjects. Outside of the literary work proper, Domestic Science and Sewing is taught to the girls, while the boys receive instruction in Agriculture, Printing, Shoemaking, etc.

TEACHING STAFF

During the year, or rather since my last report, there has been some rearrangement of teachers in respect to grade taught, and a change in the personnel of the staff. Miss Haynes, Miss Armstrong, Miss Wheeler and Miss Domm have severed their connection with the school and they have been succeeded with Miss Scott, Miss Nurse Miss Carrol and Miss Aherne. Miss Aherne was taking special training when I last visited the school, but is now on the active staff. Miss Ford, Supervisor of the Junior Oral Department, is at Northampton taking special work, the better to qualify her for her important duties.

PUPILS' WORK

I spent seven days at the school, going into the work as thoroughly as time would permit. The pupils were examined in much the same way as I would examine a hearing school. A casual visitor would be struck with the character of the writing. Almost all the pupils write well, and so far as my observation of several years now go they are good spellers. Considerable attention is given to Nature Study, Hygiene, and Current Events. In the grades where History and Geography form part of the course, the knowledge shown is satisfactory. As I said above language is stressed throughout the whole course. It may not be wise to particularize in a report such as this but I was particularly pleased with the work of the senior class in Grammar, Arithmetic and Literature. This class have read from twenty to ninety books during the year as supplementary reading. Those books have been selected from our best literature and these pupils are familiar with the characters in what they have read. Probably all of them will leave school at the end of the school year, but they will go with the ability to be good company for themselves. Nor are they all the bright pupils in the school There are several other classes coming on that should do work equally as creditable when they reach the same grade

The special work with returned men of the C. E. F. whose hearing has been impaired in the war is still going on and with the same excellent results.

SUGGESTIONS

1. This school is practically an oral school now, but the best results will not be attained until those taught by the manual method are entirely separated from those taught orally since those who could speak learn to spell on their fingers from these who cannot speak.

2. It seems to me that if it were possible to have more supervisors with the pupils outside of class hours who appreciated the value of having the children speak on every occasion possible, that it would add to the progress in speech. I have watched them at play, and they communicate almost entirely by signs, while many of them are quite able to speak and lip read, if they were revived to do so by more thorough supervision.

In conclusion, I would like to say that my opportunities to observe what is going on in this school clearly demonstrate that everything possible is done for the bodily welfare of these children. Their health is carefully looked after, they receive an ample supply of good wholesome food and in sufficient variety to tempt the appetite if that is ever necessary in the case of healthy children while everything about the buildings is scrupulously clean. They are a large and happy family.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
H. J. CLARKE
Inspector of Public Schools

RUSH OF SETTLERS TO CANADIAN WEST FROM UNITED STATES CONTINUES — CANADIAN FARMS CHEAPER AND BETTER.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OMAHA, May 25.—According to a statement by W. H. Bennett, in charge of the Canadian Government Land Office, the great tide of emigration of 1912 and 1913 to western Canada is about to be repeated. In the first three months of 1920 almost as many settlers from the trans-Missouri country have gone to Canada as went all last year. The statement adds that during the past twenty years forty-five thousand Nebraskans have emigrated, taking with them approximately fifty million dollars. The explanation is that farms can be purchased at one-third the price required for lands in the United States.

Early Morning Fire Causes Fifty Thousand Dollars' Damage

BRIGHTON, May 24.—One of the most disastrous fires in the history of Brighton occurred about 5 o'clock Saturday morning, completely destroying the paint shop and storage of Butler Bros.' Spencer's Implement Shop, Cheer & Tweedle's Coal Office, F. Jacques Harnes' Shop and Booths' Shoe Shop were all completely destroyed. At one time it looked as if the Clarendon Hotel and a portion of Main street was doomed, and Trenton was asked for assistance; they promptly sent their motor hose wagon, but on their arrival the local brigade had the fire well under control. The total loss is estimated at about fifty thousand and is partly covered by insurance.

SEWING SCHOOL PRIZES

On Thursday evening the Sewing School at the City Mission gave their closing exercises. All those attending were loud in their praise of the splendid program given, and all were delighted when they examined the work accomplished by the girls under the capable leadership of Miss Maud Reeves and Miss Robina Templeton with their efficient staff of workers. The "nighties" made by the senior girls with the dainty bits of embroidery reflected great credit on their instructors as well as the aprons, bags and handkerchiefs by the juniors. This splendid work is carried on under the auspices of the Y.W.C.T.U. and if no other work was done by them it alone would be well worth while. After the excellent program in which every number was good, ice cream and cake was dispersed to the delighted visitors and performers. The following are the prizes:

Prizes for first year's work—(1) Bernice Blaind, (2) Evelyn Bramhall (3) Gladys Clarke.

Prizes for second year's work—(1) Ethel Lloyd (2) Mabel Brown (3) Florence Clarke.

Prizes for third year's work—(1) Bessie Stapley (2) Myrtle Rushlow (3) Nettie Ronsky.

AUTOPSY SAYS ASSASSINATION.

VERA CRUZ, May 25.—Reports of the autopsy performed on the body of Carranza at Talaxcalantongo fail to agree with the claim of Herraro that the President committed suicide, it was asserted at official quarters here. Surgeons, it is declared, found Carranza had been struck by two rifle bullets, one of which penetrated his breast, and the other his abdomen. The bullets entered from in front, and the conclusion of those who witnessed the operation was that the President had been assassinated.

ENGLISH GIRL CLAIMS HIM AS HUSBAND

Ottawa, May 25.—A special to the Journal from Almonte says:

An interesting situation developed here with the arrival of the midnight train from Ottawa Saturday.

A young lady accompanied by a child, disembarked from the train upon its arrival and as nobody appeared to meet her, she made inquiries from the station master regarding Mr. Percy Oldroyd, who she stated, had married her while he was serving with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. According to the story told by her to the station master, she had just arrived in Canada and had requested Mr. Oldroyd to meet her at the station at Almonte.

The station master, who knew a man of that name, who had recently married a young lady of that town, did not give the newcomer any information and as the hotels were all closed at the hour of her arrival she was compelled to wait in the station.

About 4 o'clock Mr. Oldroyd came to the station, and the young lady apparently recognized him as her pseudo-husband. He, however, claimed that he did not know her, and an argument ensued. Together they took the first train for Ottawa.

Oldroyd was employed as a barber. Neither Oldroyd nor the English girl has been seen in Almonte

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

Societies March To Holloway Church

In commemoration of Victoria Day members of the Sons of England, Prentice Boys and Orangement of the city on Sunday morning attended divine service at Halloway Street Methodist Church. Tho turnout was a creditable one and included a number of boys who are members of the Juvenile Lodge, Sons of England. The parade was headed by the Salvation Army band playing appropriate music. Rev. A. H. Foster, Pastor conducted the service and delivered a discourse which was in keeping with the occasion. He also extended to the Societies a hearty welcome to the service. After the usual devotional exercises the sermon, or rather a talk, on Prince William of Orange was given. The subject was based on a portion of the 5th verse of the 20th Psalm:

"In the name of our God we will set up our banners."

In his opening remarks the divine referred to Empires which had had sway over the destinies of the world in years gone by but they lost their prestige and fell. England, years ago, became the mistress of the seas, and up to the present time she had held that supremacy unbroken by the blast of years. Her ideals stood for freedom and greatness. She still stand sin adoration as our Motherland. Her ideals of greatness and freedom are ever recognized as good for mankind in general. In referring to events in the world's history the Reverend speaker said that there were events we love to commemorate while there were some we would like to forget. One event we delight to commemorate is the advent of Prince William of Orange, the defender of faith and liberty. He was never a great scholar but as a warrior and a leader he did excel and with great determination. Rev. Mr. Foster then dealt at some length in reviewing the career of Prince William from the time of his birth to the achievements which brought him into prominence as a deliverer and as a defender of the Protestant faith. His spirit of determination was the spirit of all Englishmen. The ideals which he stood for and defended were the ideals we enjoy today. They were days of test and trial which were nobly borne and have been handed down from generation to generation. This is still our country, serene and supreme, inflexible in faith and irresistible in arms.

During the service special music was rendered by the choir and solos were rendered by Miss S. Walton and Mr. Allan Schryver which were given in a tuneful manner. After the service the parade was reformed and the members marched back to their respective halls.

Reign of Evil to End in Gigantic Clash Followed by Establishment Of Kingdom of Christ, Says Visiting Speaker

Under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association, an interesting lecture was delivered in the City Hall Sunday afternoon by Mr. W. A. Thratchler of Winnipeg on the subject, "The World's Judgment aDy Is It Here?" The speaker said in part, "Many conflicting views have been and are yet held relative to this great day so clearly written about in the Bible. The correct understanding of this important time is to found only in the Word of God, and those who hold lightly the divine revelation, must of necessity be in a measure of darkness. "The Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my pack." The Apostle Paul distinctly states in Acts ch. 17: v.31, that the world is to be judged by the Lord Jesus Christ in a time appointed by Jehovah that is during his reign upon earth for a thousand years. Revel 20; v. 6; I Cor. ch 15; v 25-26. For this day or time, we have long been praying, "May Thy Kingdom Come" and "Thy Will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." All the conflicting theories have been handed down to us, from the false teachings of Christendom. Notable amongst many is the one that states there is no probation after death that as soon as the soul leaves the body it goes to its eternal abode, either for everlasting bliss or everlasting torment. This enormous doctrine is based upon the great lie that Satan told in the Garden of Eden, viz. "Thou shalt not surely die." This is the fundamental error of all Christendom's confusion and is resulting in her down fall today. If sentence is passed at death, why look forward to a Judgment Day? If death ends everything why speak of a resurrection, and if those who died are not dead how can they be resurrected? The scripture declares that both good graves on that day, St. John 5: 28-29; Rev. 20: 12-13 Instead of being a day to be dreaded, it is to be a day of restoration restitu- The conditions of the world today are 23. Our horse stated it would be ushered in by a time of great trouble, wars revolution, pestilence and famine. The condtiions of the world today are evidence that we are in that very time. The opposing armies for the Battle of Armeggedon have been placed in array by the great world war, capital and labor, kings, civil, financial and exclesiastical on the one hand and the masses of the people on the other. The clash of these opposing forces is inevitable, it will institute the judgment of Johovah brought about apparently by human forces, selfishness and evil in the human heart and will result in the absolute destruction of the present reign of evil and the establishment of the Kingdom of Christ during which the millions on earth may receive everlasting life upon God's terms of obedience, this being made possible by the redemptive work of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ who gave Himself a ransom for all."—I Tein 114-6.

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thorouhly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Wanted—A Husband Ripping Comedy

Dainty Billie Burke Delightful As Usual in her Newest Screen Offering

Billie Burke is supposed to be the "Ugly Duckling" who turns out to be the prize of the flock in her new picture. It is called "Wanted—A Husband," and pleased an audience that filled every seat in Griffin's last night. The early part of the action demonstrated quite conclusively that in the case of Miss Burke, at least, it isn't clothes that make the woman. The titles said she was a slovenly, unattractive wall paper designer living in the Greenwich village quarter of New York. The surroundings were probably authentic, but you can't dishevel Billie Burke's hair, put her in a frowsy smock and run-out-at-the-heels shoes and call her homely. She isn't. Miss Burke's screen name this time is Darcy, and, because of her alleged lack of personal lure, she is taunted by her two girl roommates who have lately taken unto themselves male admirers. To get even with them, Darcy invents one of her own and starts a course in training with a burly ex-pugilist that makes her blossom like a rose into radiant beauty. So, out of the mess that her description leads her into, she derives what she wanted—a husband.

If you like good wholesome comedy, here is the film for you. Billie Burke is her usual sparkling self and does such startling things as take a showerbath and box with her trainer to add to her gaiety. James L. Crane is again Miss Burke's leading man.

An interesting animal study of Ditmar's, Photoplay Screen Supplement showing famous photoplay stars at work and play An amusing cartoon comedy, a new chapter of the popular "Lost City" serial and "The Heart Snatcher," a funny two-reel Fox Sunshine comedy preceded the feature offering and proved very entertaining.

AT THE PALACE

Not only is there a broad adventure and mystery theme in "Haunting Shadows," in which H. B. Warner opened a three days' engagement at the Palace yesterday, but a pretty love story. It is one of strange complications. John Glenarm, central character of the story, played by Mr. Warner, finds himself in love with a girl, Marian Devereaux, who turns out to be a rival for the estate of Glenarm's grandfather, which has been given the young man on condition that he remain for a year on the estate, a woodland tract in Indiana, containing a Tudor Castle. "Haunting Shadows" is based on "The House of a Thousand Candles," which was written by Meredith Nicholson, and which was one of the best sellers of recent years. The backgrounds are very picturesque, showing as they do the woods of a wild part of Indiana, as well as the old unfinished castle, which has been erected by the eccentric grandfather. Great care appears to have been taken in the Robertson Cole studios with this picture which follows the novel closely. Here, at least, is one of the instances in which the photoplay does not lose by so doing. The book was swift of action, and melodramatic, and so is the screen version. The scene in which a wine glass is shot to pieces in the hand of John Glenarm by an unknown would-be murderer concealed outside the castle is particularly well done. A very capable cast supports Mr. Warner, who never had a part better suited to his peculiar talents. Harold Lloyd appears on the same program in a new comedy "Count Your Votes," the opening chapter of Pathe's serial "The Black Secret," featuring Pearl White, bids well to be popular with Palace patrons as it abounds in action and gripping moments, a beautiful Bruce Travelogue also proved very interesting.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

HARVEY'S MINSTRELS

"The Pasadena Rose Ballet" is a big novelty number with the Harvey Greater Minstrels who come to Griffin's tomorrow matinee and night, after a record breaking week at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, last week. Another big dancing novelty is the "Six Panama Dancers," in which something entirely new in the way of stepping is shown. These two acts are entirely new and original with Mr. Harvey and in the former there is fifteen handsomely costumed girls with special scenery and lighting effects, while in the latter there are six decidedly clever men appropriately costumed. Taking all in all, the fifteen vaudeville acts given by the Harvey Minstrels would constitute a whole evening's entertainment, but in order to produce all the performance, Mr. Harvey has brought his circus experience to play and at times there will be three acts going on at one time, all entirely different and distinct. There are fifty people with the show, all travelling in their own all steel specially built cars.

Belleville Wins First League Game

Defeat Peterboro by a Score of 5-2—Large Crowd in Attendance—Good Ball Played

Belleville baseball team which last year landed the championship of amateur ball in Ontario, are again this season off to a good start. On Monday, Victoria Day, the Central League games commenced and Peterboro's fast team was pitted against our boys. The game was played at the Agricultural Park here and drew an immense crowd of spectators. It was anticipated that it would be a good game and such proved to be the case and the score on the right side. Some changes were made in the line up of the team from last year. Owing to the accident which a few days ago befell Walter Gerow, the reliablefirst baseman, Harry Mills, a junior, was assigned to that position and he is certainly in his proper position. He played the position in a faultless manner. Freddie Goyer, as pitcher, was in good form and delivered a fine game having some thirteen strikeouts to his credit. He was ably assisted by Mills behind the bat. All members of the team played well their positions. As usual Weir, the faultless short stop, was on hand to do his part towards winning the game and he certainly did it not only on the field, but at bat. It was a good game and the result was a win for Belleville by a score of 5 to 2. Mr. Claude Wilson, of Oshawa, looked after balls and strikes and Mr. Ed. Thomas, of this city was base umprie.

The first ball was pitched by boro at bat. As His Worship stepped upon the diamond he was greeted with applause. In the 4th innings Peterboro made the first run and in the 6th Belleville secured two by timely hitting and cinched the game in the 7th when three players crossed the plate. Notes

The diamond was in good condition for fast ball and a great improvement over last year.

A number of baseball fans from Peterboro accompanied the team.

Through the generosity of Vermilyea & Son and the druggists of the city the Belleville team have been supplied with a grip and first aid necessities. Mr. T. Sullivan also contributed towards the latter supplies.

The attendance was one of the largest seen at a game here.

HORSE RACING AT PICTON

For a number of years past on Victoria day horse races have been held at Picton and large numbers of spectators attended same. Yesterday was no exception to the rule. Four events were entered on the score card and all were carried out. Some good exhibitions of speed were to be seen, especially in the Free For All. In the final heat of the 2.30 class Wm. Smith, driver of Robt. Patch, owned by Mr. W. Orr, of this city, was thrown from his sulky, but escaped serious injuries. The summary of the events are as follows:

JUNIOR BASEBALL.

In Friday night's game, which took place on Ann Street School grounds the Y.M.C.A. were defeated by the Tigers by the score of 7-3. The game was very good when we consider the condition of the ground, as there were not many errors on either side. The "Y" team have won one and lost one, the Tigers have won one and lost none, the Red Sox lost the only game they played so far and they meet the Tigers tonight for their second game, and a win for the Red Sox tonight will make a three-cornered tie, as each team will have won one and lost one game. The game tonight will be played on the Fair Grounds at 6.30.

What is Pure Paint?

It is a matter of common knowledge that pure rubber alone does not make the best tires, neither does pure cement alone make the best concrete. In both cases other materials are added, resulting in a composition best suited to give the utmost in efficacy and service for the purpose required.

The same principle applies to paint. White Lead and Zinc Oxide alone do not make the best paint, neither can they be termed pure paint, because these two pigments alone do not produce a paint capable of enduring and giving the service required under varying conditions.

In order to obtain an exact knowledge of the correct admixture of paint ingredients which would give the utmost in endurance and service, test fences have been maintained in various sections of the country. These fences have been exposed to all the extremes of weather and climate, so that the tests were most severe.

The chart shown herewith illustrates the results which were obtained from tests extending over three years at the Atlantic City test fence, and were confirmed by similar tests conducted on test fences in other sections of the country.

These tests absolutely bear out the theory upon which Crown Diamond Paints are constructed—that is, that paints giving the best efficacy and service are those in which the tinting materials are strengthened by a moderate amount of reinforcing pigment.

Note the test results of the above formula as shown on the chart and compare with those obtained from an admixture of White Lead and Zinc Oxide alone.

You will see that these tests are convincing proof that from the point of efficacy and service,

ST. PAUL WON KING'S PLATE

St. Paul, b.g., 3, by Plaudmore Panthea, won the 61st King's Plate Saturday at the Woodbine, Toronto, and the fourth for Harry Giddings, of Oakville. Bugle March, owned by T. Riddell, and trained by John Nixon, was second and Primo, also from the Giddings stable, third. Harry Giddings, Jr., trained the entry. The surprise of the race was the inferior display by Crown of Gold, from the Seagram barn. He had not the best of luck, but worked up to a position in the back stretch to make his run, but instead of trying just chucked it and finished in the ruck behind Azraels, Gallant Kitty, his stable mate, and Anmur, the first of the also rans.

RELAY RACE.

On Monday, May 24th, a four-man team from the Y.M.C.A. ran a relay race from Trenton to Belleville against time. It was hoped originally that other teams would be able to enter, but they were not forthcoming. The idea was to set up a challenge relay that could be run at any time at a week's notice, the team making the best time to hold the cup or shield until such time as a better record should be made by another team. The time made Monday was not particularly fast—one hour, fifteen minutes and forty-six seconds. The distance approximately is eleven and a half miles, and the team ran from the Trenton post office to Belleville City Hall. Mayor Ireland, M.L.A., of Trenton, started the run, and the runners carried a message from him to Mayor Riggs of Belleville.

On Monday and Friday evenings a training program for outdoor athletics will be carried out for both junior and senior members of the Y.M.C.A. A field day is being planned for later.

THE CRIME OF SUGAR PROFITEERING.

Canada is at the mercy of the United States sugar barons, who are piling up immense fortunes by manipulating the price of sugar and making a luxury of a necessity which can hardly be dispensed with in any household, rich or poor. Canada is dependent upon the United States for supplies of raw sugar, and the high prices here are the result of the rapacity of the sugar barons across the line, which apparently knows no limit. United States newspapers are agreed that there is no reasonable excuse for the sky-rocketing of the price of sugar, and contend that instead of a scarcity of supply there is an abundance of sugar, charging what virtually amounts to criminal conspiracy in an orgy of price manipulation. The Literary Digest summarizes the editorial opinions of a number of leading United States newspapers on the sugar question in an article which leaves no room for doubt as to the responsibility for price raising. The following extracts from the Literary Digest's summary will be interesting to Canadian readers:

America's sweet tooth is to cost $700,000,000 this year, as against $433,000,000 in the fiscal year of 1919, we are told by the Little Rock, Arkansas, Gazette. "This enormous increase in sugar values is due especially to the extremely high prices of sugar in the countries from which it is imported," according to a statement of the National City Bank of New York. "From the wholesale price of two cents a pound in those countries immediately before the war, the cost has jumped to more than ten cents," the statement continues,. The retail price here, as almost everyone knows, is in the neighborhood of twenty-five cents. Yet, in spite of an indicated shortage of sugar, we are informed by Capper's Weekly, of Topeka, Kan., that "a billion pounds of sugar recently have been exported from these shores to Great Britain, in addition to millions of pounds shipped abroad during recent weeks or months." The Columbus Dispatch, however, assures us that "in Cuba the wharves are loaded down with sugar awaiting shipment." At any rate, whether or not there is a shortage of sugar,,"the present situation does not sweeten the American disposition," remarks the New Orleans Times-Picayune. The shrewd editorial writer of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot admits that he is "saving a few lumps of sugar to trade in for Liberty bonds." Furthermore, [illegible] writer declares that "if the era of thirty-cent sugar has been b[illegible]gitimately, the consuming public should be shown a government b[illegible] certificate."

Shortage Cry Pure Bunk.

The suggestion that there is a real shortage of sugar the Providence Bulletin characterizes as "pure bunk." "Prices have been boosted, but the appearance of shortage is maintained by keeping sugar supplies well concealed and releasing them only in driblets," asserts the Albany Knickerbocker Press. Increased cost of production has been set forth as one reason for the high cost of sugar, but "when a necessity of life, like sugar, is jumped to six times its pre-war price, long after the war is over, and without any proportionate shortage in the world's supply, the familiar excuse of increased cost of production fal's flat," declares the Pittsburg Dispatch. Due to the decline in production of beet-sugar in Europe, the world's output of sugar in the current year will be about 15 per cent. below that in the year preceding the war, the National City Bank statement remarks, but the amount brought into the United States will exceed by 1,250,000,000 pounds the imports of any other year in our history. In view of these facts, the Columbus Ohio State Journal can only conclude that "sugar profiteers have a stranglehold on the American public." A brokerage firm's statement that "the (sugar) producer holds the whip-hand, [illegible] proposes to make the most of his opportunity," leads the Oshkosh Northwestern to reach the same conclusion. Continues the brokerage statement regarding sugar companies:

> "Today it is a poorly handled company that is not earning $10 to $25 a share (par value $100), and there are some that will net $100 and over on their stock. Present dividend payments are no criterion, since shareholders are certain to receive large cash, if not stock, dividends."

Unscrupulous Injustice.

The Boston Christian Science Monitor caustically remarks:

> "And what these facts of profiteering amount to is nothing less than stupendous—stupendous as an achievement of organized business, stupendous as a piece of organized and essentially unscrupulous injustice, stupendous as an aggregate and high-water mark of all the little graspings and gainings that business has for generations been striving to achieve. When American business was less highly organized, these achievements remained local in their effect. But now we see American business organized to the point of being virtually able to control supply."

CRISP COMMENT

Five-dollar wheat is now prophesied, and the poor man's loaf of bread is getting crustier than ever.

The budget speech failed to mention the possibility of saving a few millions by reducing the high cost of government.

The high-stepping team, High Cost of War and High Cost of Living, could win the King's Plate in a walk. See what they have done to the dinner plate!

With the present and future prosperity of the farmer glowing with promise, the wave of prosperity need only envelop the army of low-salaried workers to make happiness universal.

With the soaring price of paper, subscription and advertising rates are of necessity climbing, and many newspapers are disappearing into amalgamations. Canadian pulpwood forests are being sacrificed to feed the enormous demand of the yellow press of the United States which preaches a doctrine of hatred to the British Empire for political profit. Nice situation, isn't it?

Grit Free Traders who would abolish the tariff, lock, stock and barrel, will now have an opportunity of sampling direct taxation by paying the new luxury taxes. Free Trade in theory may sound plausible, but in practice, involving as it does direct taxation, it loses any glamor it might have possessed. Revenue has to be raised in some way, and if the tariff is to be abolished the individual pocket will have to be drawn upon to make up the deficiency and there is no possibility of direct taxation ever becoming popular.

Raise Your Own Potatoes

The Review

The small householder who buys potatoes by the pound is now paying at the rate of more than twenty dollars a barrel. Two years ago when the price of potatoes was less than half this dizzy height, every one in the country who could command a plot of ground was earnestly urged to raise them. Why has not the government issued a similar slogan this year? Two years ago, it is true, potatoes were to win the war. But if an abundance of that staple would this year win a measure of contentment and a thoroughly disgruntled nation, someone in authority has blundered. No doubt we all, including the powers at Washington, have been too obsessed by the thought of profiteers and of ways to smash them to consider helping ourselves to potatoes by the only sort of direct action that really pays.

Unnecessary Clothes

London Mail

When we read that in America the high price of men's clothes is being countered by a resort to overalls, we begin to ask ourselves whether we are not habitually an overdressed people. Up to the time of the Norman Conquest, if not later still, men wore only one garment of wool, leather, or velvet next to the skin, and from all accounts they were just as healthy as we are. Then somebody with an eye to business invented a shirt, which was at first worn only by the nobility. The waistcoat followed, and breeches, trousers and overcoat and other superfluous garments quickly succeeded, till we arrived at the present overdressed state, with al lthe petty ailments that proceed from it.

THE POET'S CORNER

THEY SOFTLY WALK

They are not gone who pass
Beyond the clasp of hand,
Out from the strong embrace;
They are but come so close
We need not grope with hands,
Nor look to see, nor try,
To catch the sound of feet,
They have put off their shoes
To softly walk by day
Within our thought, to tread
At night our dream-led paths
Of sleep.

They are not lost who find
The sunset gate, the goal
Of all the weary years.
Not lost are they who reach
The summit of their climb,
The peak above the clouds
And storms. They are not lost
Who find the light of sun
And stars and God.

They are not dead who live
In hearts they leave behind.
In those whom they have blessed
They live a life again,
And shall live through the years
Eternal life, and grow
Each day more beautiful,
As time declares their good,
Forgets the rest, and proves
Their immortality.

—Hugh Robert Orr in The British Weekly.

THE FIRST SONG

The poet writ a song of May
That checked his breath a while;
He kept it for a summer day,
Then spake with half a smile:

"Oh, little song of purity,
Of mystic to-and-fro,
You are so much a part of me
I dare not let you go."

And so he made a sister-song
With more of cunning art;
But held the first his whole life long
Deep hidden in his heart.

SMALL BEQUESTS TO OTTAWA RELATIVES

New York, May 25.—William Dean Howells, who died here May 11, left an estate valued at $165,000, according to an estimate filed with his will in the Surrogate's office. About $75,000 was said to be in real estate.

The will, dated May 26, 1910, leaves to William White Howells, a grandson $1,000 and the author's gold watch "which my wife and I bought in 1863 with our joint earnings."

A codicil executed on May 15, revokes a bequest of $6,000 left his sister, Aureliah Howells, of Ottawa, who receives "$250 with my love," as do Anne T. Howells, of Ottawa and Samuel Howells of Washington.

The residue of the estate is left equally between a son, John Mead Howells, and a daughter, Mildred Howells.

Ottawa Liberals In Bad Quandry

Coquetting With Protectionists of East and Free Trade Farmers of West

OTTAWA, May 21—Tactics of the Opposition were criticized by the Government supporters, who took part in the debate on the budget in the Commons, and the professions of the Nation Progressive or Farmer's party were contrasted with the practices of corporations affiliated with that party. The Opposition has presented a curious spectacle thus far in the discussion of the statement and proposals of the Minister of Finance. Its members have been torn by conflicting feelings, by the fear of estranging the protectionist elements of the party in Eastern Canada and by the faint hope of winning some support from the free trade section of the population of Western Canada. Sir Henry Drayton's statement on the question of fiscal policy and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne's subsequent speech have indicated that the Unionist party stands for moderate protection. Hon. W. S. Fielding has sought to solve the difficulty of his party by repudiating the tariff resolution passed by the National Liberal Convention last summer, delivering a protectionist speech and introducing a vague low tariff amendment. The majority of Liberal speakers, because the majority of the Opposition represent Eastern constituencies, endeavor to represent the Opposition as the party of moderate protection. A. R. McMaster, of Brome, appeared yesterday as the Oppositions' apostle of free trade.

No Hope of Downward Revision

D. D. McKenzie, of North Cape Breton, who caused some little stir a year ago by his declarations of faith in protection, today, labored to have the past forgotten. He complained that the Government had not carried out a promise made in 1911 that a permanent tariff board would be established, omitting to mention that a bill to provide for the formation of such a body was introduced in the Commons and was defeated by the Liberal majority in the Senate. He asserted that there was no reason to fear a downward revision of the tariff by the present government.

He professed adherence to the free-trade-as-they-have-it-in-England, and tariff for revenue only platform promulgated by the Liberal party in 1893 and forgotten from 1896 onward, and also to the low tariff resolution of the Liberal convention of August last. H. M. Mowat of Parkdale, who indicated his belief in a system of moderate protection for Canadian industries, commented upon the Opposition's evident loss of enthusiasm for free trade. J. H. Burnham, of West Peterboro, asserted that the budget had given birth to a new party, the people's party.

H. H. Stevens, of Centre Vancouver criticized the Fielding amendment as calculated to destroy the measures proposed by the Government with the object of raising revenue without offering alternative methods, and to repudiate the Opposition doctrine of direct taxation.

Don't buy a bicycle just because it looks good. A bright appearance often hides poor materials and workmanship.

Buy a C. C. M. Bicycle.

The beauty of the C. C. M. is more than surface deep. There are three coats of brilliant, waterproof enamel over a coat of anti-rust. That means an enamel that will stand wear and weather.

The smooth, highly-polished nickelling is over rust-proof copper. That's why C. C. M. nickelling retains its bright appearance and wears so long.

You don't always spin along smooth pavements. Sometimes you have to bump over ruts and cobble stones. So the C. C. M. frame has the long, strong "Fishmouth" reinforcement at the joints. This makes a powerful frame with a large margin of safety.

CHAPTER I.

The Last Round.

An oily sea! Stillness—absolute stillness, save for the groan and creak of the yards and booms, as the bark rolled lifelessly on the long, shimmering swells. Not a breath of air; only a stifling heat that beat upon the decks until the pitch in the seams bubbled.

Only a waste of water that reflected the merciless tropic glare of the sun and hurt the eyes cruelly.

Under an awning in the stern a man in cotton shirt and trousers, who was huddled in a chair by the cabin skylight, lifted his head and mumbled through cracked lips.

"Twenty grains of calomel, twenty-four quinine—magnesia, peppermint-water gone."

His hands fumbled with the drugs from the ship's medicine chest that strewed the skylight, and, guessing at the quantities, carried portions to his mouth. He swallowed with difficulty, and relapsed into a huddled position.

After a little he raised his head once more, and began to count upon his fingers. One, two, three, four, five—was it five or eight days, or ten, or a month that the calm had lasted? He did not know. He had lost all track of time. But it worried him, and to his sick brain assumed very vital proportions. The ship's log would tell him.

He reached for it and began to scan the entries. It was strange that trying to read brought red flashes and pain to his eyes.

The words came only to him in snatches.

"October 10. Still becalmed. Intense heat. Native boatswain took sick this morning.

"October —. Buried boatswain last night. Four more of crew down. We've got yellow fever aboard. God help us if we don't get a breeze!"

His eyes went on down the page in a haphazard, irresponsible way, skipping entries here and there unconsciously.

Making Rounds Was Over Now.

"Still becalmed. God have mercy on us! Native crew all down. Chinaman named Won Su, after making a murderous attack in his delirium on Wallen, the first mate, jumped overboard."

Yes, he remembered that. He was Wallen—Stacey Wallen—the first mate of the bark Upolo. It had been a horrible sight.

The poor devil had rushed at him screaming and—he shuddered a little—he did not want to think of that. What was this entry here?

"The heat is horrible. Survivors too weak to bury the dead. Captain Mitchell died at 2:10 a. m."

That was the last entry. There wasn't any date on it. He couldn't remember whether it had been yesterday or the day before. Well, what did it matter; and, anyway, it was time to make rounds.

Rounds!

What rounds were there to make? Everybody was dead. Johnson, the second mate, had died that morning, though he hadn't made the entry of Johnson's death in the log; what was the good? There wasn't any more use for a log. Everybody was dead except himself—the other two white men and the crew, who were all natives. And now he was down, too; he was only waiting for the fever to run its course.

That would take maybe a few hours more.

A voice within him seemed to keep whispering: "Rounds! You've got to make rounds, make rounds." For two days or nights, or whenever it was since Johnson had first taken sick, he had made rounds unceasingly with the medicines; that was why the medicines were on the skylight, so that he wouldn't have to go below.

But making rounds was over now; there was no one to make rounds for—there was only himself. "Rounds! Make rounds; it's time to make rounds!" the voice insisted.

He roused himself. Yes, that was so. Last time he had gone along the deck Ting Wah was still alive. The man would be dead now probably, and the medicines weren't any good, anyway; it was air, God's air, that was wanted. "Rounds! Make rounds!"

He staggered up from his chair, collected some drugs and, reeling to the ship's side where the rail would help support him, made his way painfully forward to where another awning was stretched over the fore-deck. He kept his eyes in front of him; there were shapes about the deck covered with anything that had first come to hand—shapes that should not have been there only at the last Johnson and he had been too weak to do anything but throw coverings over them. He didn't want to look at the shapes.

There was one form, only one, that was uncovered, and he knelt beside it. Ting Wah was still alive.

"Medicine," said Wallen hoarsely.

The Chinaman pushed it away.

"No can take," he answered weakly. "Me finish."

"Wallen steadied himself with an effort, and looked at the other closely.

It was near the end; but still, as under certain conditions it sometimes did, the disease had left the man's intelligence unimpaired.

"Look here, old chap," said Wallen cheerfully through his own cracked lips. "You never know. Buck up. Take the medicine." He stooped to lift the other's head gently, and nearly fell himself in doing it.

A sudden gleam of gratitude came into the Chinaman's eyes.

"You glood man," he whispered. "You all same glood man. But no can take—all same finish now." He pushed the medicine away again; and then plucked at Wallen's sleeve, evidently trying to get the mate's head down closer to his lips.

The man was going fast. Wallen tried to force a kindly smile.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Listen!" said Ting Wah. "Mebbe you die too. Mebbe no. All same me tell—you glood man—last night bling medicine all night you glood man—me—me tell—"

His voice trailed off weakly.

"Yes?" prompted Wallen kindly.

The man tried to speak, tried again, but without avail.

Wallen's own head was reeling, premonitory of coming nausea.

"It's all right, Ting Wah, it's all right," he said soothingly. "Better not try to talk."

But now Ting Wah, with a desperate effort, raised himself to his elbow.

"Yes, me talk!" he gasped out. "But must talk quick. Me here, Won Su here, four more all same Chinamen come on bloard and make crew on ship here for all same knifee you."

There was contortion in the man's face, a pitiful struggle to fight back the weakness and exhaustion that was upon him. Wallen stared at him in a dazed way.

"Kill me, Ting Wah!" he cried out. "What for? You—you don't know what you're saying, do you? You don't mean that!" The Chinaman's elbow was slipping gradually away from beneath him, his eyes were closed. The medicine spilled from Wallen's hands onto the deck, and he caught at the other, propping him up.

"Ting Wah! Ting Wah!" he cried again, shaking the man to rouse him. "What do you mean? Ting Wah, don't you hear me! What did you mean to kill me for?"

There was no answer. The man was—no, not yet! Ting Wah's lips were moving. Wallen bent his head still closer to catch the words.

"Dlink-House Sam — Singapore — him know."

That was all. It was over now. Wallen straightened up unsteadily, and lurched to the rail where he could cling on to something.

Six Chinamen had shipped as part of the crew so that they could kill him. Why? He laughed in a sick fashion. What did it matter? They were all dead, those six—and every one else—and in a few hours he would be dead too. He laughed again, a little hysterically. This Drink-House Sam of Singapore, whoever he was, ought to be satisfied with that!

He clawed his way back to the afterdeck, and dropped into his chair again. His brain seemed to go numb for a time, to be indifferent to everything—and then suddenly to become strangely active. Six Chinamen had shipped as members of the crew so that they could kill him. It wasn't a pleasant thought, even if the whole six were dead now, and that he himself would be dead, too, before long.

Oh, yes, he believed it now, right enough—why shouldn't he? What about that murderous attack Won Su had made upon him, and that he had thought was delirium! But that wasn't all, he had reason beside that to believe Ting Wah's story; reason enough, God knew! now that he came to think of the things that were crowding into his mind.

Out of the shimmering heat waves that rose along the deck and seemed to hover so weirdly over those covered shapes that ought not to have been there, another scene gradually took form, at first indistinctly, vaguely, then in sharp outline, startling, distinct.

It was a stone house, a gray stone house, all by itself, without neighbors, isolated, a silent place. Yes, he remembered it! It seemed to bring a chill upon him now—the cold, dreary, lifeless house had done its best to crush even a laugh out of his boyhood with its eternal, silent brooding mystery. That was why he had run away ten years ago, when he was fourteen.

All his earlier recollections were of that place.

His mother wasn't there, he had never seen his mother. There were just his father, and that tall, swarthy Eastern servant, who frightened his boy's heart—just those two and himself. He never saw anyone else.

No one ever came to the house. No one was ever admitted. Gunga, the servant, fetched the supplies from the nearby village. His own education was superintended by his father. But there had never been any intimacy between his father and himself.

He had never questioned his father but once—after that he had never dared to do so. He remembered the deadly whiteness that had come over the morose, taciturn face, the grip of iron upon his shoulder, the hoarse passion in his father's voice.

"Never speak to me again of that," his father had said. "When you are older, when the time comes, you shall know."

Wallen rocked unsteadily in his chair. What a frightful stench the ship possessed—or was it only his imagination! What was it he had been thinking of? Oh, yes, the six Chinamen who had come to kill him, and the gray house where there were so many bars and locks, and where every night his father and Gunga turned the keys and the chains rattled on the doors as they fastened them.

He raised his hand and passed it across his eyes in a startled way. How vividly it came back to him, that night—as though it were just happening now, as though he were in the very act of living it again!

THIS FEEBLE AGED WOMAN

Tells How Vinol Builds Up Strength and Vitality For Old People

She says: "I am seventy-three years of age and suffered from a weak, run-down, condition, and was so feeble I could hardly get around; my daughter induced me to try VINOL, and it gave me a good appetite, I sleep well, am stronger and healthier in every way, so I can get around and do all my house work."

The reason VINOL is so successful in such cases is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cods' livers, aided by the blood-making, strength-creating, properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites.

Thus in a natural manner it increases the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles and imparts strength, health and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body.

If feeble old people only realized the good VINOL will do them, our druggists would not be able to supply the demand.

MISSING GIRL MARRIED

When James Markell of Brinston's complained to the Prescott police of the disappearance of his sixteen-year old daughter Violet, and asked that a search be instituted for her, Chief of Police Jackson discovered that the girl had been married by Rev. A. Wilkinson, of Prescott to James Barnhart and that she was now living at Wexford, near that town.

RECOVERED DAMAGES

At the Napanee Assizes before Justice Rose, an action brought by Overton Powley and his wife, Orpha Powley, to recover damages against F. J. McAlpine, of Prince Edward county, was heard. While driving with a horse and buggy along the public high way near Cataraqui the plaintiffs were run into by the defendant's automobile, and the plaintiffs were thrown out of said buggy and severely bruised and the left hand of the plaintiff, Overton E. Powley, was broken and crushed and permanently injured. Judgment for plaintiff, Overton E. Powley, for $356 with costs on the supreme court scale.

A PLEASANT HOLIDAY.

Victoria Day was quietly spent in Belleville, the day being fine and cool, the threatening showers not materializing. The big attraction was the baseball match between Belleville and Peterboro, with a victory for the home team. This was well attended. Picnics to beauty spots along the Bay of Quinte, motor rides and railway journeys were indulged in as fancy dictated. Many motored to Picton, where a good program of horse races was presented. The local theatres were crowded, matinee and night, many being turned away at the evening performances, so great was the rush. Several dances afforded a pleasant medium of rounding up the holiday and many enjoyed the exercise.

ALLEGED THEFT OF CAR.

Shortly before noon yesterday the police received a message stating that a McLaughlin car, B45, had been stolen at Prescott and the party accused was driving the car westward, having left Kingston at an early hour. An hour later the police located the car and placed under arrest a young man who gave his name as Worth Lowe. He claimed he did not steal the car. The authorities at Prescott were notified of the arrest, and last night an officer arrived here, accompanied by Mr. John McClaskey, owner of the car, who identified it as his property. Lowe was taken back to Prescott to stand trial on a charge of theft. The car was valued at $1300.

COLLIDED WITH HEARSE

Yesterday afternoon, a collision occurred on the Picton-Belleville road near Mr. Potter's residence in Ameliasburg Township, which was rather serious in its result but fortunately no person was seriously injured. A car in which were six young men from Belleville, namely, W. Ruttan, Jas. Hughes, H. Gorman, J. Cumming A. Schoener and M. Lock was being driven to Picton when it collided with Tickell & Sons motor hearse of this city which was proceeding towards Belleville. In the motor hearse, was the chauffeur and Mr. McMasters and undertaker, Mr. C. R. Cole. The motor vehicles came together rather hard and the car was damaged to such an extent that it had to be towed away. The fender of the hearse was torn off and other damages sustained.

FORTY CANDIDATES INITIATED

Friday evening at Canton Headquarters, Oddfellows' Temple, Canton, Belleville, No. 8, held a most successful evening, initiating thirteen candidates from Stirling, Havelock and Belleville, making a grand total of over forty chevaliers mustered into the ranks within the last month. After the routine business of the lodge had been transacter under the direction of Capt. A. E. Cole and the P. M. Degree under the supervision of the Degree Master, Major W. R. M. Gilbert the officers and chevaliers repaired to the banquet hall where they partook of the good things so lavishly provided by the entertainment committee. After all had taken part with enthusiasm in this part of the evening's program a delightful entertainment was given in the assembly hall. Major Gilbert ably filling the position of chairman. Addresses were delivered by the chairman and officers of the Canton, all expressing their satisfaction with the progress the Canton was continuing to make and voicing their optimism for the future. Numbers were rendered by Chevaliers W. Ralls and F. Smith of Belleville, while Chevalier Ernest Harvey of Trenton, demonstrated his wonderful mastery of the piano. Speeches were given by Chevalier J. M. Clarke, D.D.G.M., of Stirling, Chevalier S. A. Barclay, P.D.D.G.M., Chevalier A. C. Denike and Chevaliers S. Bradley and Jas. Barlow, of Havelock, as well as by several of the newly initiated chevaliers. A very profitable and enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem, the chevalier and officers expressing their keen satisfaction at the success of the event.

STIRLING CELEBRATES 24TH.

The village of Stirling celebrated the 24th of May in a happy manner. The occasion marked the opening of the new agricultural park, about one mile outside the village. This new park contains about twenty-five acres of land, part of which is wooded, and a mile track has been laid out with grandstand and judges' stand and a baseball diamond is located inside the track in front of the grandstand. With the addition of other buildings contemplated, along with the large exhibition hall now erected the society will have one of the very best fair grounds in the province. The events which took place in the morning were a calithumpian parade from the village to the exhibition grounds and a baseball match. The parade was about a mile long and was made up of floats of all kinds, a considerable number of pedestrians in all manner of garb, and decorated autos and other vehicles. The parade was repeated at 1.30 in the afternoon, and after dissembling at the grounds a programme of speeches was put on, those taking part being Brig.-Gen. A. E. Ross, M.P.P. for Kingston, T. H. Thompson, M.P.P., H. K. Denyes, M.P.P., W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., J. Lockie Wilson, Supt. of the Provincial Fairs Association, Reeve Micklejohn, and others. A trap-shooting tournament was also held in the afternoon. Music throughout the day was furnished by the G. W. V. A. band of Belleville, under the direction of Mr. E. R. Hinchey. There was a large attendance and a handsome sum was realized for the society.

MRS. A. L. WILDRICK, of Los Angeles, Calif., who says she had to spend half her time in bed and could not get relief until she took Tanlac. Declares she now feels as well as she ever felt in her life and that she has gained fifteen pounds in weight.

The following remarkable statement was made recently by Mrs. A. L. Wildrick, a well-known and highly respected resident of Los Angeles, Calif., living at No. 222 North Alvarado Street. Mrs. Wildrick is 69 years of age and is the mother of seven children. Her photograph appears here.

"For the past year or more," said Mrs. Wildrick, "I have been in very poor health. I suffered principally from chronic indigestion and my condition was so bad I had to spend half of my time in bed from sheer weakness. In spite of all the medicine I took I could not possibly get any relief and I became so nervous and unstrung that at times I could hardly realize what I was doing. I just had no appetite at all and suffered terribly nearly all the time with indigestion and was really in a very bad way physically. If I did eat a little something I would always have a miserable, distressed feeling afterward and I tell you I was going down hill pretty fast.

"Well, I just can't find words to tell you how really bad off I was and also to tell you what Tanlac has done for me, for I feel as well now as I ever felt in my life. Why, after taking only three and a half bottles of this medicine I have actually gained 15 pounds in weight and everyone tells me I am looking better than in years.

"Since I have been taking Tanlac I have found out that several of my intimate friends are also taking it and everyone of them are delighted with it. I am surely glad to recommend Tanlac and help spread the goodness of their medicine. Yes, I want you to use my photograph too, so that all my friends may see how well I am looking. Anyone who could see me now after seeing me only a few weeks ago would be convinced that Tanlac must be a really wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

Naturally this is pleasing to us, for it shows that our methods inspire confidence thro' the satisfactory results secured, and that the painstaking, scientific care given to each case is appreciated, while in the store and afterward. And surely it is positive proof of the fairness of our charges, as well as the excellence of our glasses.

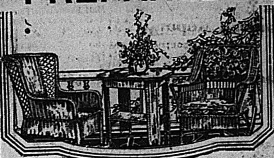
ARE YOU PREPARED?



Did you notice that the Weather Clerk foretells a scorchingly hot summer this year? And are you ready for this? Think when you have finished your day's work and the heat of the day is almost more than one can bear, wouldn't a rest in a cool wicker chair, your feet resting on lovely cool grass mats in a corner of the verandah, sheltered from that burning sun, with a pretty and efficient sun blind—isn't the prospect alluring? Imagine what a pleasure it would be to the men folk to come home from a close, stuffy office to a place such as this where they could really rest and enjoy the most beautiful part of the day. You know he would appreciate this, as you would yourself; therefore, if you cannot give it to him, or to yourself, it means that you are not prepared. After you have read this advertisement think just when and where you could make such a place. Plan everything and make a list of all the things that you will want, and then bring it along to us. We'll help you in every way possible. Don't think that it is going to cost you a small fortune to make that Porch or Gallery, or whatever place you choose, cosy and cool, because we have everything that you will require at prices that will suit all incomes.

Allies Had Secret Agents In The Soviet Government

AMAZING DISCLOSURES OF THE EXISTENCE OF AN INTERNATIONAL SECRET SERVICE TO COMBAT BOLSHEVIK PLOTS—HUNDREDS OF ARRESTS MADE IN PARIS IN PAST TWO WEEKS.

PARIS, May 26.—Amazing disclostures of the existence of an international secret service with world-wide ratifications, organized by France, Britain, the United States and Italy to combat Bolshevist plots to Sovietize the world, were revealed when it was learned that hundreds of arrests have been made in France, during the last two weeks, including practically every prominent radical agitator.

The French police, in making these arrests, are said to have been acting on information obtained by international secret agents, who have in some cases actually held important posts in the Soviet Government and therefore know the inner workings of the Leninist system. Among these agents are Americans, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Spaniards and Danes.

The founding of the International Secret Service is believed to have been broached by the Secret Service Chief of the United States Department of Justice, following admissions by United States radicals that there is a plot afoot to Sovietize the world.

Hanged As Traitor Is Now A Saint

Oliver Plunkett ,the First Archbishop of Armagh, Beatified

ROME, May 26.—Oliver Plunkett the Irish divine who was made first Archbishop of Armagh in 1669 by Pope Clement IX, and who was executed for treason at Auburn, July 1, 1681 was beatified with fitting ceremony on Sunday.

The ceremony of beatification took place in the Babilica. In the congregation were Count George Plunkett, representing the family of the archbishop, Sir T. Grantam Esmonde and family, Sean O'Cealligh, member of the "Irish Parliament," and the vice-mayor and members of the municipal council of Dublin.

It had been originally announced the mass would be celebrated by Archbishop Edward Isley, of Birmingham, but Irish bishops objected to the choice of an Englishman for the service and Mons. Peltro Paelo, canon of St. Penlif's Church, officiated. Mons. Hagan, rector of the Irish College, delivered to the Pope in the name of the postulators a reliquary containing fragments of the bones of the archbishop. This reliquary was a replica of the shrine which contains the bell of St. Patrick in Dublin.

The Papal Bull announcing the beatification was read, the relics were exposed and a Te Deum was chanted. Then the curtain before the picture of the new saint was withdrawn and the bell of St. Peter's rang out the tidings, being answered by peals from other churches throughout the city.

Sunday afternoon there was a great concourse when Pope Benedict, in the midst of gorgeously-robed and uniformed dignitaries and attaches of the Vatican, visited the Basilica to beatify the relics. The ceremonies ended with the Eucharistic Benediction by the Pontiff.

Cardinal Logue, the octogenarian Primate of All Ireland, headed the list of distinguished ecclesiastics present, With him were Achbishop John M. Harty, Archbishop of Cashel, 15 Irish bishops and many Irish abbots and pilgrims. There were also in attendance several church dignitaries from Canada, including Archbishop Michael J. Spratt of Kingston, and Bishops Michael J. O'Brien of Peterborough and Edward A. Leblanc, St. John, N.B. Australia was represented by Archbishop Michael Kelly, of Sydney.

SHOOTS AT A BIRD AND KILLS CHUM

Newmarket, May 25—Edmund Richardson, a fifteen-year-old boy, was shot and killed by his chum Charles Thoms, in Wood's bush here Saturday afternoon. The two lads were within a few feet of each other when Thoms fired at a bird. His companion, who was lying down, suddenly raised himself and was struck on the head. The bullet penetrated his brain, and, although medical aid was immediately summoned, nothing could be done for him. He died during the night.

Richardson was the step-son of Wm. Elms. He was fond of hunting, and with his chum, Charlie Thoms, had done much shooting in the last two years. The gun they used was a 22-calibre Winchester.

Convention Calls For Proper Beer

Labor Educational Body Asks Government to Take Action

BRANTFORD, May 25—That the workingman still wants his beer with an alcoholic strength sufficient to make it palatable was the decision of the Labor Educational Association of Ontario at its 18th annual convention here by a vote of 62 to 42. The resolution adopted included the following: "Be it resolved that this convention go on record as favoring and asking that the Government take such measures as will permit of the purchase of the aforesaid beer in an open pub manner, thereby doing away to a large extent with the existing order of bootleggers, kitchen barrooms and other forms of subterfuge now practiced in order to obtain vilest concoction of so-called liquor now said to be obtainable at war profiteers' prices."

James Simpson's amendment for a trades union referendum was defeated. The convention brought some 200 delegates to the city. Jos. T. Marks of Toronto, was appointed permanent secretary-treasurer with salary to devote all his time to the work of advancing labor educational propaganda. Preston outbid Hamilton for the next convention, and the executive was instructed to push the sale of union-made goods to the limit.

Three Drowned When Boat Tipped

Montreal Girl and Two Companions Lost Lives at Chateauguay

MONTREAL, May 25—A sad incident occurred on Sunday afternoon at Chateauguay, when a boat capsized and six people were thrown into the water ,three of them being drowned. The dead are Miss Lucianna Primeau, 20 years old, of 2387 St. Hubert St., Montreal; Miss Blanche Laberge, 20 years old, of Chateauguay, and Xavier Laberge, 22 years old, her brother. The rescued are Miss Zepherine Bourdon, 21 years old, of Chateauguay; Miss Laura Querin, 19 years old, of 91A Rose de Lima street, Montreal, and R. Caron, 22 years old, of Chateauguay.

The accident occurred at about 5.30 in the afternoon; the six young people were returning home for supper after an outing, when the boat, which was a flat bottomed one, struck a large submerged rock and capsized. The three who were saved were rescued by Joseph and Arthur Bourdon, who heard the victims' cries for help and ran to their aid. They swam out, but had only time enough to save three as the others had sunk when they returned for them. The bodies of the victims were recovered a short time after the accident, not over a hundred feet away from the spot where the boat capsized.

Coroner Trepanier, of Beauharnois district, was notified, and an inquest will be held tomorrow.

Hanna Starts Slander Action Against Cahill

Papers Served In Suit by C.N.R. President to Recover $50,000

OTTAWA, May 26.—A civil action in which Mr. D. B. Hanna, General Manager and President of the Canadian National Railways asks for $50,000 for slander, alleged to have been contained in the remarks of F. S. Cahill, M.P., before the Reform Club of Montreal, in April, has been commenced, and Mr. Cahill has been served with legal notice of the suit.

The statement of claim in connection with the action has arrived in the city. It sets forth that, by the remarks of Mr. Cahill, it was indicted that Mr. Hanna had acted in a fraudulent manner and in violation of his mandate and duty to the public and Dominion of Canada. It also sets forth that the remarks of Mr. Cahill were false, malicious and defamatory and constituted a slander of the most damaging character, reflecting on the character and integrity of Mr. Hanna and subjecting him to the loss of public confidence.

Mr. Hanna's claim is for $50,000 and interests and cost of the action, and he asks that, in default of payment, Mr. Cahill be subjected to "coercive imprisonment."

The statement of claim is a bulky document and in it reports of the remarks of Mr. Cahill as contained in The Montreal Gazette and The Toronto Daily Star are set forth. They assert that Mr. Cahill said that Mr. Hanna was putting the Canadian National Railways into the hands of Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann were selling coal ties and other supplies to the C.N.R. At another stage it is reported that the Government had been "stung" for $140,000,000 in connection with the Canadian National Railways. Further on, the statement of claim says: "That the said charges imply a dereliction of duty on the part of the plaintiff as Director and President of the C.N.R. and as operating and managing the Canadian Railways.

The legal firm of Bisaillon & Beique Montreal, is acting for Mr. Hanna. Mr. August Lemieux, K.C., is the Ottawa agent for the Montreal firm, and personally served the writ on Mr. Cahill. It is stated that Mr. Cahill has made the remark that he intends to fight the action to the limit. The case is of a jury nature and will be heard in the Montreal courts.

CHILDISH POLITICAL TALK

"Utter foolishness: childish political talk without the slightest foundation in fact," was the way in which President D. B. Hanna, President of the Canadian National Railways answered the statements of Frank S. Cahill, M.P., for Pontiac, that he had made in the House of Commons a week ago respecting Mr. Hanna. "My sole reason for issuing the libel writ is simply to give Mr. Cahill an opportunity to prove his statement. If he can, I want to know about it," said Mr. Hanna. "So far from my being a stock-holder or having pesonal interest in Northern town properties," he said. "I am probably unique in the fact that I have never at any time bought such lands or held any personal interest in them whatever."

"Regarding the moving of terminals the statement is almost too ridiculous to be taken seriously. I wonder if Mr. Cahill thinks that terminals can be taken up and put on a waggon and dumped down anywhere we please. The statement is foolish in the extreme."

"The Canadian National Railways are the property of the people," concluded Mr. Hanna, "and we want to serve the people with the best service of which we are capable. If we do not do that they have the right to tell us about it. It is their property and we are responsible in the last analysis to them."

DETROIT BANDITS GET $1,800, PLANT'S PAYROLL

Detroit, May 25—Five men in a large touring car held up the office of the American Brass & Iron Co., and escaped with $1800 in cash. L. K. Douglas, Secretary and Treasurer, and two clerks, were preparing the payroll in the office when the car drove up.

Four men leaped out, two of them armed, another carrying a leather brief case. The armed men covered the three while the others scooped the money into the bag. Then they left, the armed men backing out.

As soon as they were outside Douglas reached for a pistol and fired seven shots after them as they sped toward Grand boulevard, but, apparently, no damage was done.

Dublin Workers Strike.

A serious extension of the railway trouble here occurred this morning when the railwaymen refused to transport war materials which had been landed from a steamer and loaded into a train by soldiers after the dockers had declined to work.

The supplies were destined for the west of Ireland, and when the soldiers tried to move the train the signalmen struck and all work was stopped. The men employed in the station supplying power to the giant cranes at Dublin wharves were also withdrawn and the cranes are at a standstill.

Some steamers from Ireland to England were held up owing to the men on the docks refusing to load luggage.

Prevents Holding Session.

Tobbecurry, Sligo, Ireland, May 26.—Judge Wakely was unable to open the Quarter Sessions here today because the Court House was burned down early Monday morning.

One hundred armed men participated in the destruction of the building. They picketed all the roads in the vicinity and held up traffic while the Court House was saturated with petrol and the torch applied.

Two explosions occurred when the fire started, and the building was demolished by them. All the books and papers inside were destroyed.

Publicity Lacking In Timber Sales

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, May 26.—That on several occasions he had urged upon Hon. G. H. Ferguson the necessity for greater publicity in regard to the sale of timber limits, but in vain, was the statement made by Albert Grigg, Deputy Minister of the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines, before the commission investigating the sale of timber limits here today. It was revealed that over four hundred square miles of timber limits were sold to the Graves-Bigwood Lumber Co. just prior to the election last fall without any investigation or report from the department officials. Mr. Grigg, in answer to Justice Latchford, stated that he could not agree with the methods employed.

Gen. Dyer Showed Lack Of Judgment

Finding of Government Committee on Amritsar "Massacres"

LONDON, May 26.—The report of the committee appointed by the Government to inquire into the Amritsar "massacres," will be published during the Parliamentary recess. The Daily Herald, the labor organ, published an authoritative forecast of the report. This verdict of the majority of the committee of inquiry is that General Dyer who commanded the British troops, committed 'a grave error of judgment' in 'prolonging the firing' on the crowd in Jallianwala Bagh (a suburb of Amritsar).

The majority report is signed only by the European members of the committee. There is a strong minority report signed by the three Indian members, which condemns in uncompromising language the shootings and the authorities responsible for it. The bombing of the crowds from airplanes is held by the majority to have been unavoidable. For the rest there is some mild criticism of some of the other excesses, such as Col. Johnston's treatment of Hindu students. The effect of this report on the Indian public will be most grave, the Daily Herald predicts.

Price Of Sugar To Go Up At Once

Foreshadowed in Refiners' Statement in Comemrce Probe at Ottawa

OTTAWA, May 26—Immediately increased price of sugar was indicated in the statements made by refiners at an informal inquiry held by the Board of Commerce in the sugar situation in Canada.

Parties well posted on the situation afterward expressed the opinion that this increase will amount to about two cents per pound, will go into effect this week, and will be followed by a similar increase within a couple of months. Wholesalers and retailers' profits on handling sugar, are a percentage of the price, so that the increase to the consumer will be proportionately more than two cents per pound. The present retail price is about 22 cents a pound.

Present sugar prces in Canada are based on advantageous purchases by refiners when raw sugar was less than half the price at present. It was pointed out that retail prices are considerably higher in the United States than in Canada and that Canadan refiners have not taken the net proft of 40 cents per cwt. allowed them under the recently abrogated sugar control. It was stated that the present retail price in Canada does not come within several cents of the cost of production in Canadian refineries, on account of the greatly increased cost of raw sugar in Cuba.

Eight Reserve Battalions For Service In Ireland

LAWLESSNESS IN IRELAND WILL BE MET WITH STRONG MEASURES — CAVALRY PROTECTING FARMS FROM RAIDERS—ANOTHER COURT HOUSE BURNED—STRIKE AT DUBLIN.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 26.—Aside from fresh troops recently sent to Ireland eight more battalions are held in reserve for transfer there on short notice, according to the Daily Mail.

A flying column of cavalry has arrived in the district of Westmeath to protect the farms in the region from raiders. Several cattle drives have occurred there during the week.

Raiders have attacked and burned the Brandon coast guard station in West Kerry. Six members of the coast guard, aided by their wives and families, desperately resisted the raiders, but were overcome.

Cash Discounts Liable To The Tax

Some Luxuries Subject. to Sales As Well as Luxury Tax

OTTAWA, May 26—That typewriter ribbons were subject to the new tax on ribbons was one of the points brought out in a citizens meeting here at which R. W. Breadner, Commissioner of Taxation, interpreted the new tax proposals of the budget. Mr. Breadner promised to consider exceptions which would remove such articles as this from anomolas position of luxuries, which they might be technically interpreted to be.

The one per cent. sales tax to be charged by the wholesalers was much discussed. Some of the rulings on this head were:

1 Tax was applicable on cash discounts.

2 Tax does not apply on articles sold for export.

3 Specified luxuries sold by wholesale houses to contractors subject to one per cent. sales tax as well as luxury tax.

4 Goods delivered on May 19 or after subject to tax irrespective of when contract was made.

Some technicalities on which Mr. Breadner promised consideration were:

1 That a contractor who builds a house, or a merchant tailor who builds a suit are technically manufacturers.

2 That small cash sales in wholesale houses may be reported in some other way than by copies of invoices which might be difficult to produce.

As regards the taxing of luxuries on the sale direct to the consumer, many questions asked brought the ruling that goods may be reduced in price to exempt them from tax. "One of the objects is to reduce the cost of living," said Mr. Breadner. Another ruling was that the vendor was responsible for the payment of the tax to the Government. It was permissible to nclude the tax in the sale price is retailers believed that prejudice against the tax would des-

Civil War Breaks Out In Albania

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 26.—Messages from Durrazo picture Albania as in the throes of civil war, the ultimate consequences of which it is impossible to forecast, according to a despatch from Rome today. The provisional government seems incapable of dominating the situation and its call to the colors for the establishment of a national army remains unanswered. The message declares that the Greeks, who formerly were anxious to occupy northern Epirus, have decided to delay occupation fearing complications and attacks by bands. The advices state that the civilian population is petitioning the Italian command not to withdraw their garrisons from the interior.

War In East With The Reds About To Begin In Earnest

SOVIET TROOPS OCCUPY SILK CENTRE IN NORTHERN PERSIA—BRITISH FORCES HASTENING TO TEHERAN—FRENCH AND INDIAN TROOPS LAND AT BATUM.

LONDON, May 26.—The war in the East between the Allies and the Bolsheviki is about to begin in earnest. The Daily Sketch learns that Soviet troops have occupied Rasht, the big silk and cocoon centre in North Persia. British troops are hastening to Teheran, the Persian capital, to check the southward drive of the Soviet forces. French and Indian troops have landed at Batum, the big oil pipe line terminus on the east coast of the Black Sea, 440 miles from Baku (on the west coast of Caspian Sea), which is in Bolshevist hands. Rasht lies 205 miles south of Baku, while the distance between Rasht and Teheran is 150 miles.

Bolsheviki have taken to Baku the vessels on which they travelled to Enzeli, as well as the whole of Denikine's Caspian fleet, which was interned at Enzeli. Infantry still occupy the latter port, as well as the roads leading from the town.

Prince Evrouz, Persian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has arrived in London in connection with the Bolsheviki landing at Enzeli. He is already in touch with the British Foreign Office and the League of Nations.

The British force which left Enzeli is at Rasht, 16 miles southeast of Enzeli, and no anxiety is felt for its safety.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

An enjoyable time was spent by the sergeants of The Argyll Light Infantry at the Armouries last evening.

For a purely regimental affair the social was highly successful, and, considering the time from forming the idea to finish, the thanks of the members are due to the committee (R. S. M. Playford, R.Q.M.S. Mills and Sgt. Cross) in making the evening a pleasant one.

Among the officers present were the C. O. Lieut.-Col. R. Vanderwater, Capt. and Adjt. D. Thos. McManus Major S. E. Vermilyea and Lieut. L. F. Green and it is hoped the first social held by the sergeants is a fore runner of regular periodical gatherings of this nature and in time be a recognized source of amusement.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(What the Press Agents Say)

MINSTRELS TO-NIGHT

For singing and dancing none can excel the colored race and it seems as if the cream of the colored talent has been brought into the Harvey's Greater Minstrels, at least this company is establishing itself rapidly as a top liner attraction and is not thought of as a "nigger show"—it being in the same class and character as any white minstrel, unless it be that it is superior, and the white people appreciating the efforts of these deserving people are very liberal in their patronage. So far this season, reports verify the fact that five night out of the week hundreds are turned away from the Harvey's Greater Minstrels. They are appearing at Griffin's to-night for one night only.

DOUBLE FEATURE BILL AT PALACE TO-NIGHT

A splendid program of photoplays have been arranged for presentation at the Palace to-night only, when a double feature bill will be shown consisting of Billie Burke in "Wanted—A Husband," H. B. Warner in "Haunting Shadows," a funny 2-reel Sunshine comedy, "The Heart Snatcher," the third chapter of the thrilling animal serial, "The Lost City" and Pearl White in an engrossing mystery play, "The Black Secret." Owing to the length of the program the performance will commence at 7.30 p.m.

BESSIE BARRASCALE

Not only does Bessie Barrascale play the part of a Greenwich village sculptress in "A Woman Who Understood," a superior feature which is being shown at the Palace to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily, but she dons a smock and actually "sculps." Miss Barrascale is supported by Forrest Stanley, a handsome young leading man. A program embracing comedy and topicals are also being shown on the same program.

NAZIMOVA TO APPEAR IN ROLE OF "THE BRAT"

The supreme Nazimova in her latest production, "The Brat," has been booked as the attraction at Griffin's to-morrow to Saturday with a matinee Saturday, and the management promises a rare treat to its patrons. "The Brat," is Nazimova's own screen version of Maude Fulton's highly successful stage play. In "The Brat," Nazimova is to be seen for the first time in her screen or stage career as an American girl. Her great fame hitherto has been derived from her impersonation of foreign types. It will be recalled she was a Burasian, or half Chinese girl in her last big feature "The Red Lantern." As star and dramatist, therefore, she is coming in "The Brat." The story has to do with the vicissitudes and final triumph of "The Bat," a nameless waif on the turbulent sea of life in a big city. Charles Bryant who has been Nazimova's leading man in every one of her great screen vehicles save The Red Lantern again plays opposite the brilliant Russian star in the role of the absent-minded, but likeable author. Some spectacular and very unusual settings are said to feature the big production of "The Brat." One of these is the interior and "back stage" of a metropolitan theatre. This was built in its entirety at the Nazimova studios especially for the production. Another is an exact duplication of the New York night court, where the dregs of humanity pay the toll for their follies in the drab hours of early mornnig. Larry Semon in a very funny 2-reel comedy, "Between the Acts," and other varied plays of merit have also been arranged for presentation on the same program.

Climbing Ladder To Railway Greatness

W. D. Robb Chosen by Government For Government Railway Management Committee

Mr. W. D. Robb, formerly of Belleville, who has been appointed by the Dominion Government a member of the Committee of Management for the co-ordination of the G. T. R. and C.N. R., has risen from an apprentice in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway to that of vice-president in charge of operation, construction, maintenance and equipment. He is regarded as one of the most practical railroad chiefs in the Dominion. His father was a railroad man before him and came to Canada from Scotland to join the Grand Trunk in its earliest days. Mr. Robb was born at Longueuil, Que., and received his early education at Sherbrooke Academy and St. Francis College, Richmond, Que. Entering the service of the Grand Trunk Railway System as an apprentice at Hadlow Cove in 1871, he went to Montreal to finish his apprenticeship as a machinist in 1873. He was appointed night foreman at Belleville in charge of motive power and car departments in the same year. In 1897 he was appointed master mechanic of the middle division with headquarters at London, Ont. and in 1901 was made acting superintendent of motive power in the following year, a position which he occupied until his appointment as vice-president in charge of motive power, car department and machinery in 1917 His jurisdiction was increased in 1918 to take in the operating, maintenance and construction departments of the system. He is a man of great energy, who holds the confidence of the whole of a large organization of which he is the head.

NO MORE CIRCUS BANNERS ON BUILDINGS

Advertising car No. 1 of the great Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus arrived in Belleville yesterday afternoon and today began billing the coming of this circus on Wednesday, June 9, just two weeks from today. In another week car No. 2 will be here. It has been announced by the advertising manager, J. C. Donahue that no banners will be tacked on the buildings this year. Asked the reason of this policy he remarked:

"This method of advertising has been discontinued by the big circuses, though the small ones of ten or twelve cars, continue to tack. The reason for this change of method by the big shows is that there is nothing that spoils the beauty of a city more than these rags. The big circuses have realized that after the banners remain on the walls for several weeks they become faded and raggy with the result that they hang there to the disgust of the property owners and the community, for they are never removed by the circus. This method has also been the direct cause of many deaths. In attempting to remove the dirty rags from their buildings, the property owners have fallen, either being killed or receiving serious injuries."

Therefore this circus will not be hanging banners on the walls of business buildings. The merit of their performances is known to everyone and this advertising is unnecessary. It is said the performance this season surpasses all previous years. The best of talent has been brought from England and with the headliners of this continent and the greatest of wild animal acts, the program offered is un rivalled.

A feature which only big shows provide is a downtown ticket office where seats can be obtained on circus day. The location will be announced later.

Hoover Gives Eight Reasons For H. C. Of L.

Hits Excess Profit Tax—Says Profiteering Cannot Be Stemmed by Legal Procedure

NEW YORK, May 26—Eight major economic causes were assigned for the high cost of living by Herbert C. Hoover, when question by the Lusk Committee at the City Hall. These he listed as follows:

First: Shortage in commodities due to underproduction in Europe and to our participatino therein through the drain of products by exports.

Second: Inflation, more especially in its expansion of credit facilities for the purpose of speculation and non-essential industries. Perhaps that would be more correctly stated, not for the "purpose," but their "use."

Third: Profiteering and speculation arising from the combined opportunity in the two previous items.

Fourth: Manner of adjustment of taxation, particularly the excess profits tax.

Fifth: Decrease in our own productivity due to relaxation of effort since the war, to strikes and other causes.

Waste and Extravagance

Sixth: Increase in our own consumption, the waste of commodities and increase in extravagance.

Seventh: Deterioration of our transportation system during the war.

Eighth: An expensive and wasteful distribution system and other less important causes.

"Maladies of this sort," said Mr. Hoover, "cannot be solved by economic patent medicines, nor by extreme application of any particular remedy. They do require definite co-ordinated policies of readjustment going below the surface of things."

In regard to the shortage of production, he said that, while we purchase the surplus of our own primary commodities, except sugar and a few other things, this country is participating in the European scarcity of production because of the drain upon it through exports.

Mr. Hoover explained that the pressure of a greater demand than the available supply had created every opportunity for excessive profits, speculation on and the boosting of prices.

ELEPHANTS PLAY FOOTBALL

No Harvard or Yale stars ever had a thing on "Mutt" star quarter back of the Sparks Elephantine Foot Ball Squad. It is a real sight to see "Mutt rush the line," in his efforts to make a "touchdown," only to be stopped by "Big Zulu," the mastodonic half back of the world's mightiest foot ball team. The foot ball used by these four-footed comedians only weighs a mere matter of forty pounds and there's surely something doing in outdoor sports, when their herd of monsters get together in desperate, but ludicrous efforts to win the trophy which stands for pachydermic gridiron supremacy. Of course there are many other trained animals with the Sparks Circus besides the football squad and a group of bears whose accomplishments include tight rope walking, tango and shimmy dancing, boxing and wrestling, bicycle riding and roller skating will also be seen at the performances, when the Sparks Circus comes to Belleville on Wednesday, June 2nd, to exhibit for one day on the Dufferin Ave. circus grounds.

Grape-Nuts

is rich in the solid meaty values of wheat and malted barley, and has a substantial amount of sugar.

This sugar is not added in making but is developed from these grains by processing and long baking.

This decreases your sugar requirements, for the average cereal needs sugar for greatest palatability. Grape-Nuts needs none.

Bear this in mind when you order your cereal and ask for Grape-Nuts.

CENTRAL LEAGUE

On Monday at Cobourg 2,000 fans saw the Cobourg team get away to a good start in the Central Ontario League by defeating Lindsay by 8 to 3. The batting of Turpin for the winners was the feature. The batteries:

Cobourg—Wellington and Turpin.
Lindsay—McIlroy and Carew.

ONE SIDED GAME

The Port Hope vs. Oshawa game was frightfully one sided. It was played at Oshawa and the score was 22 to 2 in favor of Oshawa.

RED SOX 14—TIGERS 3

Last evening at the Fair Grounds the Red Sox recovered their last year championship form and smothered the Tigers in a rather one-sided game. The score was 14 to 3 and that just about indicates what the game was like. With Hunter pitching airtight ball and the whole team backing him up in dazzling fashion, the Tigers never really had a chance to score, the three runs they did get being the result of one innings in which bad playing featured on the part of the Sox, after which not one of the Tigers got to 3rd base. Hunter and Moxam were the battery for the Red Sox and they certainly put up fine work. Moxam with his deadly throws caught three men stealing second, after which the Tigers hugged the bases. Dennis on first, F. Myles on second, and Jose on short, with Marakas on third put up an almost errorless game. Their throwing needs practice but will improve as the season grows on. The Red Sox meet the Y. M. C. A. team on Friday night and they are out for revenge for the drubbing they were handed in their first game.

The line up of the teams was as follows:

Red Sox—Moxam, Hunter, Dennis, F. Myles, Marakas, Joss, Ashley, Wardhaugh and Rushlow, B. Myles.

Tigers—Townsley, Cummings, Stork, Holloway, Ashley, Lowe, Mericole, Buskart, Anderson.

The standing of the teams:

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Red Sox	1	1	.500
Y. M. C. A.	1	1	.500
Tigers.	1	1	.500

Mr. Ed. Thomas umpired the game to the satisfaction of all.

FALCONS AT WINNIPEG GIVEN GOLD WATCHES

After their series of conquests at home and abroad the Winnipeg Falcons, Allan Cup winners and champion hockey players of the world arrived back in their home town Saturday and were accorded a reception that was second only to the demonstration given the war veterans upon their return from overseas. Reception committees from the provincial government, civic government and local and provincial sporting bodies greeted the boys as they came from the train.

Moving picture cameras clicked; the men were besieged with a cheering group of fans, who insisted on shaking hands all around and after three hearty cheers, the team, accompanied by the reception party, passed through the station to line up in a great parade. The parade was impressive, practically every local sporting body being represented and more than 200 cars taking part.

In the evening the players were banqueted at the Fort Garry Hotel and presented with gold watches. Monday morning the players were formally presented with the Allan Cup during the holiday senior baseball at Wesley Park.

PLAINTIFF IS MONTH OLD

New York, May 26—The right of Joseph Drobner, one month old, to sue for injuries received before his birth was upheld in the Supreme Court here when Justice John Ford denied the motion of attorneys for August L. Peters, defendant, for a demurrer.

Mrs. Sarah Drobner, Joseph's mother, filed suit for her son for $10,000 damages against Peters. She alleged her unborn child was seriously injured when she fell through an open coal hole in front of Peter's home.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM TALKS PENAL REFORM

"The world moves slowly in some things, and penal reform is one of them," said the Hon. George P. Graham, presiding at a board meeting of the Canadian Prisoners' Welfare Association at Montreal for the first time since he was elected president of that body. "The war has changed our views in many ways, but very little as far as the unfortunate prisoners is concerned," he added. "The time will come, I hope, when Canada will come into line with the more progressive states by abolishing capital punishment and also by adopting some more advanced methods in the treatment of those who go to prison, so that these men may have the opportunity of making good."

Mr. Graham added a word of tribute to the efforts of Robert Bickerdike—who attended the meeting against doctor's orders, as he had sustained injury in a fall a few days ago—and expressed the hope that he would live to see the fruits of his life's work in combatting the hanging of men. The new president was warmly welcomed by members of the board.

A draft programme of intended action by the legislative committee was submitted by that committee, embodying some important reforms such as the adoption of the indeterminate sentence, the care of the discharged prisoner, the freer use of the suspended sentence for first offenders; but this was deferred to next meeting for fuller consideration.

FELL FROM HEIGHT OF OVER 2000 FEET

Vancouver, B. C., May 26—E. B. Beasley, managing director of the British Columbia Union Steamship Company, and one of the most prominent business men of this city, was instantly killed and Major A. R. Baker was seriously injured when an airplane in which they had taken a flight over the city crashed to the ground from a height of 2,500 feet.

As the machine was about to descend at Minora Park, Lulu Island, the machine fell. Mrs. Beasley had previously taken a flight, and was a witness of the accident.

$1,000 FOR HEALTHY SLEEP WITHOUT DRUGS

Scores of persons besieged the home of Benjamin Hyde, a retired contractor, who in a newspaper advertisement offered $1,000 to anyone who could tell him how to obtain sleep without the use of medicines.

Mr. Hyde said he had suffered six years with paralysis agitans, which caused his body to tremble with a constant palsy, and that he could not sleep or write.

"I can't sleep," he said. "It jars me awake constantly. I need sleep and I'm advertising for it. He said physicians were unable to benefit him and that he hoped someone who saw the advertisement would be able to render him aid.

SIR H. M. PELLATT WAS SEARCHED FOR BOOZE

New York, May 25.—Sir Henry Pellatt and Mr. Gordon Perry, of Toronto, while on a recent trip to New York, were given a personal demonstration of the enthusiasm displayed by some United States prohibition enforcement officers in seeking for Canadian alcoholic refreshment at the border. The experience is described in a letter from Sir Henry printed in this morning's issue of the Sun. Sir Henry declares that the incident convinced him that prohibition in the United States is bringing about "a condition of things in which the old time name of 'land of liberty' becomes little more than a joke."

Intrusion on Individual Rights.

"It involves an intrusion upon ordinary individual rights," Sir Henry continues, "that is contrary to the simplest principles of British liberty. No man is any longer free to arrange his own life as he likes. His going and coming are watched by a horde of spies and informers. The ordinary peaceful traveler is treated as if he were a criminal."

Sir Henry thus describes his experiences with the United States official: "When we came to the American border, in walked a customs inspector. He first went through our valises, then through our overcoats that were hanging on the pegs. Then each of us had to get up so that he could look underneath among the pillows, etc.

"He then took the sofa seat off and made a thorough examination of the cushions. After this he went into the washroom and looked around, even taking the top off the ice tin. I truly believe that the only place he did not look was down our throats."

"Morality is Being Undermined."

Sir Henry expresses the opinion that "it is ridiculous that any law should be tolerated which necessitates such treatment of the ordinary citizen." He sums up the result of Uncle Sam's experiment in prohibition, as he sees it, by declaring: "Public morality is being undermined by a vast illicit traffic in intoxicating liquor, often adulterated in the most science is being shocked by the sight of people being deliberately tempted to break the law by appeals to friendship or sympathy on the part of hired informers." poisonous way, and the public con-

DIVORCES NOT EASIER, BUT CHEAPER.

Opposition is developing to the measure which will be introduced in Parliament this session providing for the establishment of Divorce Courts to replace the present farce of divorce by Senators. The opposition is principally clerical and is mistakenly based upon the idea that divorces will be easier under the Divorce Court system. What could be easier than the divorce mill now separating married couples by the hundred at Ottawa in a little back room at the extreme end of the new Parliament buildings, couples whom God was charged with having joined together being put asunder by a few weary legislators in record time. Divorces will be harder to get under the Court system, charges will have to be proven under the laws of evidence, and poverty will not prevent one of the parties from presenting a defence. Many of the divorces being granted now with such rapidity are undefended because the woman lacks the time and the money to present a defence at Ottawa under the present regulations of the divorce mill, and in the absence of any defence the evidence presented for the applicants is said to be weird and wonderful, consisting mostly of hearsay evidence, what Moll told Bill, what Mary heard at the sewing circle, and all the old exaggerated scandal germinated over the back fences.

Divorce Courts will not make divorces any easier to get; in fact, the reverse will be the case, and anyone who has the least acquaintance with the divorce mill in Ottawa of nine Senators, with a quorum of three, will heartily endorse the change as one long overdue and altogether sensible.

TIME RIPE FOR HOUSECLEANING AT OTTAWA.

H. H. Hocken, M.P., Toronto, told Parliament that if a vacation was taken for one year in making government appointments millions would be saved. Taxes—luxury taxes, to provide luxuries for the faithful—that the people have been staggering under for years contribute to the maintenance of the large and growing army of office holders at Ottawa which has overflowed the Parliament buildings and even obliged the Government to rent private buildings to keep them out of the wet. Every administration has been obliged to find offices for the faithful, none are ever discharged, and few die, and the appointments go on forever; in fact a highly organized machine has been devised to improve the breed and keep them stepping lively. It's no wonder the old Parliament buildings burned down. Perhaps 'twas better so, for the walls would have bulged out and the buildings collapsed under the ever-increasing strain of office-holders marching into the civil and uncivil service. Mr. Hocken's idea of a year's vacation in appointments is a good one, and during that year every department should be gone over with a vacuum cleaner, and the cobwebs removed. There is no reason why the government business should not be conducted upon an efficiency basis as well as private business. Spasmodic efforts to make the public believe that housecleaning takes place regularly on Parliament Hill will not go down any more. Centralizing the appointing power in one department with all of the influence of Parliament magnetizing it, and discharging a few decrepit old printers from the Government Printing Bureau will not fool anybody. The new Parliament buildings will cost a whole lot of money when finished; too much, perhaps, and in the new setting there should be a start at business efficiency, a pruning down of staffs to a workable basis, elimination of useless red tape, and a halt in new appointments.

CHAMPAGNE RECIPROCITY.

Under the caption, "Canada and Tariffs," the New York Evening Post says:

...."Canada, too, expects a general election before long, and one of the most hotly contested issues in it will be the tariffs. Little is heard just now of Canadian fiscal relations with the United States, but one of the earliest tasks of the new diplomatic representative of Canada at Washington may be to strive for trade agreements and possibly a reciprocity treaty. The one negotiated for Canada in 1856 by Lord Elgin was said by his secretary, Lawrence Oliphant, to have been 'floated through on a sea of champagne.' Today in dry Washington it would take a perfect ocean of grape juice to do the trick."

CRISP COMMENT

With the provincial highway running through Belleville's finest residential section, motor car visitors will sniff with pleasure the odor of pigs in the knowledge that the high cost of living is being smacked even at the expense of public health.

What's the use of making a holler? No one is forced to pay luxury taxes if they prefer not to. The men can dress as the women do at social functions—undress, in fact; and the women can go back to cave stuff, furs, fig leaves and fixin's—Will they? Not so you could notice it!

OTHER VIEWS

Lindsay's Definition
Hamilton Herald

"Imperialism" is an elusive and very elastic term, capable of many meanings. We know now what the official meaning of it is, for we have it from Lindsay Crawford's paper, the Toronto Statesman, the champion anti-imperialist publication on this continent. "Imperialism," according to this authority, is the creed of those in Canada who are not in favor of the establishment of a Canadian republic. It is quite a popular creed.

Maintaining Highways
Toronto Telegram

The old time theory of road maintenance was to go over the road with some kind of a scraper or drag in the spring and push the dirt, mud and dust from the gutter into the centre of the road. The next time it rained all the loose material went back into the gutter.

Then came a period when large sums were spent in substantial construction along the leading highways, but there was no sufficient plan for maintenance. As soon as a little hollow got started it would keep growing, and in one or two seasons became a very bad hole.

In many localities the system of road patrolling is now established. The patrol arrangement may be simply one man who carries a spade, pick and scraper. He is perhaps made responsible for a twenty-mile stretch. When he sees a hole starting, he fills it up before it gets worse. Persistent work of this kind at very moderate expense will save a very costly construction job later on.

THE POET'S CORNER

CANONIZATION OF JOAN OF ARC

May 30, 1431—May 16, 1920

"Warm me with that torch of thine!"
And couldst thou know, O Gallant Girl
Amidst the torturing flame,
That one day it would leap to weave
A Diadem! A Name
Around thy brow as Bride of God,
Amidst the selfless Souls who trod
Their Lover's path of shame!

Beyond the bound of reckon'd stars,
'Midst banks of Seraphim,
O Joan of Joy, today bend low
And hear our human hymn!
Nor roar of guns. No, no! the cry
Of burden'd leaders! Blindly
The varied 'Voices" swim.

In clang on clang, confused today's.
The Maiden lays apart
The ivory lute that harps God's praise
To grip our human heart.
Its chords!—repeating Pearls of Faith,
That GIRL'S! shall lead through Scathe,
An ORIFLAMME of rays!
As heroes' chorus her "Voices" o'er us,
"A toi mon trone, a toi mes jours!
A toi ma joie toujours!"

"Died today, S. Wallen, first mate"

So it was scrawled in the log of the bark Upolo—the last entry in the book—when the craft was picked up in the Java sea with not a living soul aboard, all victims of the dreaded yellow fever. Therefore it was but natural for anyone who might state that he was one Wallen, former mate of this ill-fated ship, to be looked upon with suspicion.

DAYS OF FENIAN RAID

CITIZENS OF YOUNG CANADA WERE EXCITED.

Old Torontonian Recalls the Surprise of Everybody When the Authorities of the United States Permitted Dastardly Attack Upon a Small and Friendly Neighbor.

PRIOR to 1860 the question of freeing the slaves in the south was creating such political agitation between the Northern and Southern States of America, which was finally brought to a head whether Kansas should be admitted to the Union as a free or a slave state. The Southern States were solidly in favor of slavery, whence arose the term "The Solid South," and with the election of the Republican candidate, Abraham Lincoln, a pronounced abolitionist, the States in the South seceded one after another, and the great Civil War was on with its varying fortunes till the surrender of Gen. Lee to Gen. Grant brought it to a close.

During all the time the war was on, the Fenian organizations in the States were very active advocating their cause, and numerous threats were made about invading Canada.

The close of the Civil War and the subsequent disbanding of the soldiers let free hundreds of Irish soldiers and those who were in sympathy with the movement, were enrolled under Gen. O'Neil, who organized the movement to attack Canada.

The Canadian Government were warned as to the intentions of the Fenians, and also to expect a rising of local sympathizers, but did not take the question as seriously as they should, nor did any sane person think it possible that an attempt of such a nature would be allowed by the American Government.

The winter of '65 and '66 passed with many rumors of raids, but on the 17th March it was definitely stated that there would be local disturbances in Toronto, and to guard against this all the local volunteers were kept under arms in the drill shed, south of Wellington, by Simcoe, the whole day.

I well remember what a bitter cold day it was—the ground was bare of snow and as hard as flint. A biting north wind blew all day and the poor boys in the drill shed suffered terribly from the cold. The day passed quietly, as on account of the tense feeling there was no outward demonstration or procession, and St. Patrick was honored quietly at home and by the usual concert in the city.

With so many rumors and threats about the Fenians, the military authorities were on their toes all the time. The different regiments were kept up to full strength. In addition to the volunteers were the 30th Regiment of the line and a brigade of artillery.

As I remember how bitterly cold St. Patrick's Day was, so well I remember how hot the weather was on June the 1st. Phew, but it was warm. We were busy planting dahlia bulbs by a tall Norway spruce hedge, the pride of the nursery from the length, vigor and evenness of its shape, but the sun beat down on us unmercifully. The thermometer showed 100 degrees in the shade, and any excuse was sufficient to make us stop work. But when the word came that the volunteers were to report at once for active service, that the Fenians were crossing Niagara in force. The 30th Regiment, regulars, stationed in Toronto, were on the march. Extras from the Leader and the Globe were flying around and being read by excited people. Good-bye, dahlias, there was no more planting that day.

This was real excitement. War! War, while every fresh extra would state fresh alarms. But the same old spirit was there as in 1812. No hesitation. Brickyards stopped work, farmers left their ploughs and gardeners their planting, and all hurried into the city to get the latest news.

The day was passed amid great excitement, watching the bulletin boards, the beating of drums, with the troops boarding the cars on their way to Niagara. June 2nd the same scorching hot weather continued, and news was eagerly watched for by throngs who gathered early around the newspaper offices, anxiously looking for news, and the bulletins came thick and fast, such as: "Enemy in force at Ridgeway, and firing began on both sides." How thrilling was the excitement only those present can realize. Several names appeared on the board. "Ensign McEachren shot. Mark Defries shot." And as the other details came the excitement grew to fever pitch. So passed the day in frenzy, with wondering remarks, "Where were the regulars? What are they doing?" And not till afterwards came fuller details, that the situation was in hand, that some Fenians were captured and Gen. O'Neil was in full retreat.

Not till the funeral of dead volunteers was held, and the whole city turned out to do honor to the brave boys, and the solemn tones of the Dead March as the cortege sadly followed the coffins on the guns, with the Union Jacks lovingly and proudly draped over them, did the people realize the dastardly villainy of the raid, and it would have fared ill for any prisoners had the crowd got hold of them.

The country was deserted, as everyone for miles had gone to the city. The Fenian prisoners were escorted and guarded carefully by a troop of cavalry on their way to the city jail.—J. McP. Ross, in Toronto Telegram.

Ralph Connor's New Post.

According to an official announcement from Provincial Secretary Armstrong, of Manitoba, Dr. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), will be appointed chairman of the Joint Council of Industry to be set up by the Provincial Government under the Industrial Conditions Act.

Belleville has the only lens grinding plant between Toronto and Kingston at Angus McFee's.

TREATMENT IS ANTIQUE.

Dr. C. K. Clarke Speaks of Insane In Canada.

That the people of Canada have so far been criminally remiss in their treatment of the mentally diseased through prejudice and apathy, is one of the serious charges made by Dr. C. K. Clarke, president of the National Committee of Mental Hygiene and Dean of the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Toronto. Dr. Clarke has been in nearly every asylum for the insane in Canada and expressed the opinion that the condition of the public asylums was not anything to be proud of. He gave the opinion that as in the educational system the individual had been overlooked, patients were herded together, and staffs were not properly qualified.

"Hospitals for the insane should not be built with any other end in view than that of the betterment of the individual patient," he said. "Many provinces have apparently proceeded along the line that when they have built highly ornamental and extravagantly constructed institutions, they have done their duty. I am firmly of the belief that if more money were lavished on building up staffs of proper size and ability, more efficient administration would be secured."

Anyone familiar with the requirements of even a custodial institution at the present time, knows that the medical staff should have at least one well trained phychiatrist for each one hundred patients, an ample staff of trained women nurses, a staff of occupational therapy experts, a social service department, proper segregation of different types of disease, well-equipped hydro-therapeutic and physio-therapeutic departments, work shops, gymnasiums, and other outlets for the purpose of winning back the diseased to health. These are only a few of the things required, and yet how many of the so-called hospitals for the insane have them? Why the staffs are generally appointed with the idea that the physicians will attempt to do the impossible, and to give these amiable gentlemen justice they make the effort with a pertinacity that does them credit.

"Public institutions, such as asylums, are peculiarly the stamping grounds of the needy politicians," says Dr. Clarke, "and the staffs are ordinarily appointees of politicians who have not only enunciated, but practiced the dictum that "to the victors belong the spoils." Superintendents have rarely been selected, because they were accomplished phychiatrists, but rather because their political applications demanded and received recognition. Now to be quite frank, many of these superintendents have been admirable men, full of the best instincts, but it is not possible to acquire a knowledge of psychiatry and institutional management by divine inspiration.

Dr. Clarke instanced the military hospital at Cobourg, as an institution where, due to methods of treatment a patient who had a chance would get it, and proceeded:

"What are the requirements, then, for the model treatment of the insane? (1) The recognition of the fact by provincial governments that while the care of the insane is their responsibility in a sense, yet the management and control of the institutions should be in the hands of commissioners whose reputations are beyond reproach. The Board of Commissioners should have an accomplished psychiatrist, a well-qualified lawyer, and an astute business man as their chief members, all of the type not to be influenced by political considerations. (2) Psycopathic hospitals should be erected in cities in close proximity if possible to the universities and large general hospitals. They should be as well equipped as a surgical hospital. They should provide facilities for medical students to become acquainted thoroughly with the knowledge of psychiatry. Thus they are able to take advantage of the laboratory service of the hospital, of the X-ray department, and afford mental facilities for the training of special nurses. The fact, too, that acute cases can receive immediate and thorough treatment, without suffering the stigma attached to going to an asylum, is one that has no end of therapeutic value. (3) Hospitals for the insane should be built with no other end in view than the betterment of the individual patient. The reaction against extravagant asylum building is founded on common sense."

Dr. Clarke says that some of the Ontario Hospitals for the Insane are a credit to the province, and Whitby as an institution is admirably equipped, as is Rockwood Hospital at Kingston and the Eastern Hospital at Brockville. His chief point is that prevention is not regarded as the "sine qua non," and early treatment in psycopathic hospitals is not provided for acute cases. Until this is done, regardless of the responsibility of the municipality which has ordinarily been made the scapegoat by wily politicians, reforms will not come. He insists that the Government should boldly face its responsibility and show that it is really what we all hope for, a Government of action rather than promise.

"If there are particular provinces that should be commended, these are British Columbia and Manitoba. Winnipeg has taken the lead, while Ontario has fallen out. All through the West psycopathic hospitals of the latest type are being built. I have always believed in the virility and constructive ability of the great West," said Dr. Clarke, "and when asked to assume the directorship of the Canadian National Committee on Mental Hygiene, frankly said that if our work was to succeed we must get the co-operation of the West. The people there are unhampered by a host of traditions that keep back the East."

A Difference.

BLAME IT ON THE TIRE

He didn't pump it full enough, though
all the air is free;
He left it soft and spongy like, and
scooted on with glee,
He skidded and he gridded and whooped through dust and mire,
And when it burst,
He cursed and cursed,
And blamed it on the tire.

He drove it on the street car tracks with confidence superb;
He scraped it on the lamp posts and scraped it on the curb;
He slammed it and he jammed it any way he might desire,
And when it popped,
Right out he hopped,
And blamed it on the tire.

He cut it on some broken glass, but said that didn't hurt;
He kept right on through sand and mud and filled the cut with dirt;
It spotted here and rotted there, and soon, he howled in ire,
When up it blew,
He blew up, too,
And blamed it on the tire.

He put on chains that ground and chewed and gouged into the tread
He knew his wheels were out of line,
"But what of that?" he said.
He whizzed along and sizzed along,
he picked up nails and wire,
And when it banged,
His fists he whanged,
And blamed it on the tire.

Who is this man? Go ask the boys who meet him every day,
Go ask the boys who have to hear the things he has to say,
He fores in and he roars in with words of angry fire,
Though he's to blame,
It's all the same—
He blames it on the tire.

98% Metal

A Maxwell is 98% metal, and the very best metal that metallurgists can specify. Pound for pound it equals the metal in any car built.

The Maxwell is made of light-weight but strong metals.

They had to be light because the mission of the Maxwell is economical transportation.

They had to be strong because the Maxwell is built to carry just as heavy a passenger load over the same roads and at the same speed as any car, despite its price or size.

Any engineer will tell you that in getting that rare combination of strength with lightness high prices must be paid for the metals.

Their use, however, repays the makers of the Maxwell in many ways because each car each day is winning friends.

To-day these friendships, expressed in terms of cars, are well on the road to 400,000.

You cannot go back of these numbers any more than you can go back of the fact that the sun rises in the morning.

They tell the story; and it's largely a story of what the Maxwell is made of—fine metals.

CHAPTER I.

The Last Round.

An oily sea! Stillness—absolute stillness, save for the groan and creak of the yards and booms, as the bark rolled lifelessly on the long, shimmering swells. Not a breath of air; only a stifling heat that beat upon the decks until the pitch in the seams bubbled.

Only a waste of water that reflected the merciless tropic glare of the sun and hurt the eyes cruelly.

Under an awning in the stern a man in cotton shirt and trousers, who was huddled in a chair by the cabin skylight, lifted his head and mumbled through cracked lips.

"Twenty grains of calomel, twenty-four quinine—magnesia, peppermint-water gone."

His hands fumbled with the drugs from the ship's medicine chest that strewed the skylight, and guessing at the quantities, carried portions to his mouth. He swallowed with difficulty, and relapsed into a huddled position.

After a little he raised his head once more, and began to count upon his fingers. One, two, three, four, five—was it five or eight days, or ten, or a month that the calm had lasted? He did not know. He had lost all track of time. But it worried him, and to his sick brain assumed very vital proportions. The ship's log would tell him.

He reached for it and began to scan the entries. It was strange that trying to read brought red flashes and pain to his eyes.

The words came only to him in snatches.

"October 10. Still becalmed. Intense heat. Native boatswain took sick this morning.

"October —. Buried boatswain last night. Four more of crew down. We've got yellow fever aboard. God help us if we don't get a breeze!"

His eyes went on down the page in a haphazard, irresponsible way, skipping entries here and there unconsciously.

Making Rounds Was Over Now.

"Still becalmed. God have mercy on us! Native crew all down. Chinaman named Won Su, after making a murderous attack in his delirium on Wallen, the first mate, jumped overboard."

Yes, he remembered that. He was Wallen—Stacey Wallen—the first mate of the bark Upolo. It had been a horrible sight.

The poor devil had rushed at him screaming and—he shuddered a little—he did not want to think of that. What was this entry here?

"The heat is horrible. Survivors too weak to bury the dead. Captain Mitchell died at 2:10 a. m."

That was the last entry. There wasn't any date on it. He couldn't remember whether it had been yesterday or the day before. Well, what did it matter; and, anyway, it was time to make rounds.

Rounds!

What rounds were there to make? Everybody was dead. Johnson, the second mate, had died that morning, though he hadn't made the entry of Johnson's death in the log; what was the good? There wasn't any more use for a log. Everybody was dead except himself—the other two white men and the crew, who were all natives. And now he was down, too; he was only waiting for the fever to run its course.

That would take maybe a few hours more.

A voice within him seemed to keep whispering: "Rounds! You've got to make rounds, make rounds." For two days or nights, or whenever it was since Johnson had first taken sick, he had made rounds unceasingly with the medicines; that was why the medicines were on the skylight, so that he wouldn't have to go below.

But making rounds was over now; there was no one to make rounds for—there was only himself. "Rounds! Make rounds; it's time to make rounds!" the voice insisted.

He roused himself. Yes, that was so. Last time he had gone along the deck Ting Wah was still alive. The man would be dead now probably, and the medicines weren't any good, anyway; it was air, God's air, that was wanted. "Rounds! Make rounds!"

He staggered up from his chair, collected some drugs and, reeling to the ship's side where the rail would help support him, made his way painfully forward to where another awning was stretched over the fore-deck. He kept his eyes in front of him; there were shapes about the deck covered with anything that had first come to hand—shapes that should not have been there only at the last Johnson and he had been too weak to do anything but throw coverings over them. He didn't want to look at the shapes.

There was one form, only one, that was uncovered, and he knelt beside it. Ting Wah was still alive.

"Medicine," said Wallen hoarsely.

The Chinaman pushed it away.

"No can take," he answered weakly. "Me finish."

"Wallen steadied himself with an effort, and looked at the other closely.

It was near the end; but still, as under certain conditions it sometimes did, the disease had left the man's intelligence unimpaired.

"Look here, old chap," said Wallen cheerfully through his own cracked lips. "You never know. Buck up. Take the medicine." He stooped to lift the other's head gently, and nearly fell himself in doing it.

A sudden gleam of gratitude came into the Chinaman's eyes.

"You glood man," he whispered. "You all same glood man. But no can take—all same finish now." He pushed the medicine away again; and then plucked at Wallen's sleeve, evidently trying to get the mate's head down closer to his lips.

The man was going fast. Wallen tried to force a kindly smile.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Listen!" said Ting Wah. "Mebbe you die too. Mebbe no. All same me tell—you glood man—last night bling medicine all night you glood man—me—me tell—"

His voice trailed off weakly.

"Yes?" prompted Wallen kindly.

The man tried to speak, tried again, but without avail.

Wallen's own head was reeling, premonitory of coming nausea.

"It's all right, Ting Wah, it's all right," he said soothingly. "Better not try to talk."

But now Ting Wah, with a desperate effort, raised himself to his elbow.

"Yes, me talk!" he gasped out. "But must talk quick. Me here, Won Su here, four more all same Chinamen come on bloard and make crew on ship here for all same knifee you."

There was contortion in the man's face, a pitiful struggle to fight back the weakness and exhaustion that was upon him. Wallen stared at him in a dazed way.

"Kill me, Ting Wah!" he cried out. "What for? You—you don't know what you're saying, do you? You don't mean that!" The Chinaman's elbow was slipping gradually away from beneath him, his eyes were closed. The medicine spilled from Wallen's hands onto the deck, and he caught at the other, propping him up.

"Ting Wah! Ting Wah!" he cried again, shaking the man to rouse him. "What do you mean? Ting Wah, don't you hear me! What did you mean to kill me for?"

There was no answer. The man was—no, not yet! Ting Wah's lips were moving. Wallen bent his head still closer to catch the words.

"Dlink-House Sam—Singapore—him know."

That was all. It was over now. Wallen straightened up unsteadily, and lurched to the rail where he could cling on to something.

Six Chinamen had shipped as part of the crew so that they could kill him. Why? He laughed in a sick fashion. What did it matter? They were all dead, those six—and every one else—and in a few hours he would be dead too. He laughed again, a little hysterically. This Drink-House Sam of Singapore, whoever he was, ought to be satisfied with that!

He clawed his way back to the afterdeck, and dropped into his chair again. His brain seemed to go numb for a time, to be indifferent to everything—and then suddenly to become strangely active. Six Chinamen had shipped as members of the crew so that they could kill him. It wasn't a pleasant thought, even if the whole six were dead now, and that he himself would be dead, too, before long.

Oh, yes, he believed it now, right enough—why shouldn't he? What about that murderous attack Won Su had made upon him, and that he had thought was delirium! But that wasn't all, he had reason beside that to believe Ting Wah's story; reason enough, God knew! now that he came to think of the things that were crowding into his mind.

Out of the shimmering heat waves that rose along the deck and seemed to hover so weirdly over those covered shapes that ought not to have been there, another scene gradually took form, at first indistinctly, vaguely, then in sharp outline, startling, distinct.

It was a stone house, a gray stone house, all by itself, without neighbors, isolated, a silent place. Yes, he remembered it! It seemed to bring a chill upon him now—the cold, dreary, lifeless house had done its best to crush even a laugh out of his boyhood with its eternal, silent brooding mystery. That was why he had run away ten years ago, when he was fourteen.

All his earlier recollections were of that place.

His mother wasn't there, he had never seen his mother. There were just his father, and that tall, swarthy Eastern servant, who frightened his boy's heart—just those two and himself. He never saw anyone else.

No one ever came to the house. No one was ever admitted. Gunga, the servant, fetched the supplies from the nearby village. His own education was superintended by his father. But there had never been any intimacy between his father and himself.

He had never questioned his father but once—after that he had never dared to do so. He remembered the deadly whiteness that had come over the morose, taciturn face, the grip of iron upon his shoulder, the hoarse passion in his father's voice.

"Never speak to me again of that," his father had said. "When you are older, when the time comes, you shall know."

Wallen rocked unsteadily in his chair. What a frightful stench the ship possessed—or was it only his imagination! What was it he had been thinking of? Oh, yes, the six Chinamen who had come to kill him, and the gray house where there were so many bars and locks, and where every night his father and Gunga turned the keys and the chains rattled on the doors as they fastened them.

He raised his hand and passed it across his eyes in a startled way. How vividly it came back to him, that night—as though it were just happening now, as though he were in the very act of living it again!

A crash in the dead of night through that silent house, and he had sat up, trembling, in bed. Then a cry, the report of a pistol shot, and the echoes of the shot rumbled and reverberated through the house, striking terror into his young heart. And he was crawling out of his bed, and out into the hall and down the stairs in his nightshirt.

And half-way down he stopped in horror.

Below, in the hallway, stood the giant form of his father holding a candle, and on the floor lay stretched a huddled form, and Gunga, with a revolver, was bending over the Thing that did not move. Then came his father's voice, in a strange, queer note of tense eagerness.

"Look again, Gunga. Has he one finger on the left hand?"

And Gunga had shaken his head as he had answered.

"I have looked, sahib, and the hand is whole."

Spellbound he had stood there on the stairs, a lad of fourteen, and Gunga had lifted the Thing in his arms and gone away with it; and the great figure of his father, dressed in pajamas, had stood motionless for a long time, then turning had faced the stairs and caught sight of him—and suddenly had sent a wild, unnatural laugh ringing through the house.

"You there, eh, Stacey?" he had laughed out, as though unmanned. "Well, I'll tell you something now. Never go to the East. Remember that—never go to the East."

And then he had pulled himself together, and his face had set sternly as he had pointed up the stairs. "Go back to your bed!" he had commanded sharply. "Go back to your bed instantly!"

"Yes," said Wallen aloud to himself. "That's what he said: 'Never go to the East—never go to the East.'"

But he had come to the East and six Chinamen had shipped aboard the Upolo to kill him. His father had been quite right in telling him not to go to the East. How was it that he had come there? He had run away from that gray house after that night, and he had never heard of his father since.

That was in California.

He had gone to Frisco, and gone to sea. He had been at sea ever since in all kinds of ships, and he had done pretty well. He had his master's certificate already.

But that did not account for his being here in the Java sea, and for those six Chinamen. He had been fourth officer of the Tokamaru when they had touched at Shanghai a few weeks ago. She was a fine ship, the Tokamaru, the biggest passenger liner in the fleet—only a fourth officer's pay was very small.

He had met Captain Mitchell of the Upolo ashore there, and Captain Mitchell had persuaded him to ship as first mate on the Upolo for double the pay he had been getting. The Upolo, of course, traded through the Java and Banda seas—that was what his father had meant by the East—touching at Shanghai as a port of call in a liner wasn't the same thing.

How that sun burned through the awning! It seemed to stab and drill into his skull with little shafts of exquisite pain. He could get away from it, of course, by going below into the cabin, by putting the deck between him and that torturing ball of fire, but in the cabin one couldn't breathe.

One couldn't live in the cabin—Captain Mitchell was there and Captain Mitchell was dead.

Had Captain Mitchell anything to do with those six Chinamen? Or anything to do with Drink-House Sam in Singapore? And where was it those six Chinamen had joined—at Shanghai like himself?

If he could remember that he would know whether Captain Mitchell had had a hand in the cursed game. Hadn't Johnson said something about new hands? But then native crews were everlastingly shifting about. It was a long way from Singapore to Shanghai.

Who was this Drink-House Sam? What was it Ting Wah had said? "Dlink-House Sam—him know."

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words began to run through his mind in a singsong, crazy fashion—and then a passionate, merciless anger seized upon him, and the splendid six-foot bulk of the man heaved up from the chair, and, clenched fist raised, he swayed upon his feet.

They had got him! Not the way they had thought to get him—but they had got him. And he could not fight—there was no one to fight—he could only die like a trapped rat, while this Drink-House Sam laughed a thousand miles away!

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words coursed like fire through his brain. He shouted aloud, and the nails of his fingers in his clenched fist bit into the palm of his hand. He could not choke the life, as his own went out, from this devil in Singapore that he had never seen—he could only die.

The uplifted arm, as though too heavy for him, fell to his side, a ghastly whiteness spread over his face, he reeled, clutched at the skylight for support, and slipped prone upon the deck. It was the nausea upon him again.

The virulence of the attack passed after a while, but for a long time he lay where he had fallen, weak and exhausted.

He was semi-delirious when he stood up again, and hung limply against the skylight. Medicine—yes, that was what it meant—that stuff there spilled all about. He put some into his mouth. His eyes fastened on the ship's log open in front of him. What kind of a book was that? What was it doing there? Had he been reading? He couldn't read when he was sick.

It was very strange. No; he remembered now, he had been writing in it. Whenever any of the crew died he wrote it down in the book.

And now the crew was all dead, and he would be dead, too, very soon; therefore he should also write his own name down while he could still write. He remembered it all perfectly now—that was what the book was for.

He lurched forward and picked up the fountain pen from where it had rolled into a broken package of powdered quinine. He lurched again heavily as he leaned over the book. A nervous twitch of his hand gouged the pen-point into the page and left a blot.

He shook his head in a gravely puzzled way.

It was queer that the pen wouldn't write as it had written before; it seemed to travel all over the page, and—he paused, his hand going to his eyes again—it was strange that he couldn't think of his own name!

He was first mate, he knew that; but—yes, his name came back to him now. He wrote on laboriously. He finished the entry, dropped the pen, and stared at what he had written, nodding his head.

"Died today, S. Wallen, first mate."

He read the words aloud, and nodded his head again. It was true, quite true. When that damnable sun that was tormenting him through the awning was gone, that would be the end of today and he would be dead.

His eyes strayed forward along the deck—and widened with a dawning fear. What were those shapes there! He began to mumble to himself, and suddenly shrieked out aloud. It was a horror ship.

He shrieked aloud, rushed to the rail, and in the delirium of his mind crouched low to hide himself from this dread throng that raved like demons for medicine, ran screaming forward to where the ship's boat bumped monotonously in its rise and fall against the vessel's hull.

He hurled himself over the side, cast the boat loose, and snatching at the oars began to pull like a madman away from the ship. Two hundred yards off he stood up and shook both fists and yelled tauntingly—they could not reach him now. But why not? Suppose they should swim after him! He flung himself to the seat again and plied the oars furiously.

And then slowly the strokes lessened, and presently an oar fell from his grasp, and after that, with a moan, he pitched forward into the bottom of the boat—and all was blackness.

CHAPTER II.

On the Road to Pobi.

"Mon," expostulated the Scotch trader, "but you're fair daft! You're but out of the jaws of death, and I'd no say you're all the way out at that. Bide a bit, there'll be anither in a month—or in two, anyhow."

Wallen, standing in the center of the little galvanized-iron-roofed storehouse, his eyes on the native who had entered a moment before, shook his head.

Terrible Experience of Mr. J. Harrop

It is seldom that anyone who has been continually exposed to every weather condition does not contract some form of Kidney or Rheumatic trouble. In many cases, cold, settling in the kidneys, so weakens those important organs that they are unable to filter the waste and poison out of the blood. These ills can all be made right. Gin Pills give quick, certain and sure relief. Read what Mr. J. Harrop writes to us:—

INCREASE IN EVERY LINE

The annual meeting of the Campbellford District Women's Missionary Society was held at Stirling when a marked increase in money, membership and interest was shown by the desired 20 per cent. increase, which was the objective at the beginning of the year, had been exceeded.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE

George Ward, Prince Edward County, had a narrow escape from death when he was struck on the head by a brick in a house he was moving. The chimney of the house collapsed, one of the bricks striking him on the head, inflicting a scalp wound several inches long. Eighteen stitches were required to close the wound.

MEMORY GONE

Temporarily deprived of his memory through exposure to the hot suns of Arizona, Uriah Beeman, of Brockville aged 67, and a life-long resident of that locality, refused to be convinced on his return that Brockville was his home, and admitted his identity only when familiar faces greeted him at his residence. A railway police officer intervened as the man was beseeching the conductor on the train to carry him to Montreal. He carried a considerable sum in cash and also a variety of western oil stock certificates.

INSPECTING MEAT

His right leg was broken in two places above the ankle and he received a severe shaking up.

FARM BUILDING BURNED

The dropping of a lighted lantern accidentally while coming down a ladder from the loft in his barn was responsible for a fire which entailed serious loss for William Hall, who resides near Castleton village, Northumberland county. The lantern exploded and the whole building was in flames in a very short time and completely consumed, with its contents including two horses, some pigs, poultry, farm implements and a new surrey. Mr. Hall has only a small insurance.

42 MILLS RATE

The tax rate of Campbellford for 1920 is 42 mills, an increase of ten mills over last year's levy. In 1919 the town raised for school purposes $14,720, and the estimate this year is $18,400, an increase of $3,689. This is due largely to advances in the salaries of Public School teachers to the staff. As the High School staff has been reduced by one teacher, the estimate there will not be greatly increase. Added to all this, the assessment has changed very little the past five years, while the cost of everything has advanced enormously.

PHONEY CHECKS ALSO

In regard to the alleged theft of a car belonging to Prescott, Lowe, alias White, who was arrested here on Sunday in charge of the car is also wanted for passing worthless checks. The car was stolen from the garage of a firm in Ottawa, Lowe who is a Mulatto, endeavored to cross from Prescott to Ogdensburg, N.Y., at 4 p.m. Sunday, but was turned back as an undesirable by the United States immigration authorities. The car was without regular license markers, but cardboard markers had been substituted the driving claiming his regular marker had been stolen.

AMONG THE MINERS

On Tuesday evening, May 25th, in the Lecture Room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Mrs. McIntyre of Toronto, gave a very bright and interesting lecture to a Union Meeting of the W. M. Societies of St. Andrew's and John Street Churches on her work among the miners at Lethbridge where her labors were connected with men, women and children of many nationalities, the foreign-born far outnumbering those of British birth and where an unpromising beginning developed in a few months into an earnest desire on the part of very many to lead truer and better lives.

A GOOD ICE BOX

The old ice box on the east pier at the Port Hope dock saved a couple or young men from a cold dip and probably a serious accident on Saturday night. They were running along the dock in their large automobile quite unconcerned until they were confronted with the ice box. They came to a sudden stop, and a young man who happened to be on the pier at the time and went to their assistance. They enquired if they were on the right road to Belleville, and when informed that they were only a few feet from the lake, the driver replied that he thought they were crossing a bridge. The car was turned carefully about and the autoists were quite relieved when they found the Kingston road.

SMUGGLERS UNEASY

There is consternation at Prescott through the operations there of Mrs. White, a customs inspector, whose stay it is said, will be prolonged in order to check smuggling from Ogdensburg. Brockville people recently protested at the presence of a woman customs officer when Prescott, which, it was claimed was practically an open port, received no attention.

It Has Kept Him On The Payroll

Montreal Man Gains Fifteen Pounds on Three Bottles of Tanlac—Feels Fine Now

"My comrades down at the foundry all call me 'Tanlac,' for I am all the time praising it for what it has done for me," remarked Ovila Rochon, 429 Fallum street, Montreal, Que., while discussing the medicine with some callers at his residence, recently. Mr. Rochon, who has been an iron founder for the past fourteen years, is now employed by Miller Brothers and is popular with all who know him.

"I have the best of reasons," he continued, "for praising Tanlac, for if I had not taken it I doubt if I could have remained on the company's payroll much longer. I had been suffering from indigestion and other troubles for two years and was in an awful run down condition. I was actualy so weak that at times on my way to the foundry I would get so dizzy my head seemed to be spinning around like a top and I had to go back home and lie down. My appetite was gone entirely and I could not eat anything without bloating up and feeling sluggish and miserable for hours. My nerves were so upset that I was always fidgeting and jumping in my sleep at night and I always felt more tired in the mornings than when I went to bed. My kidneys bothered me a great deal and there was a constant nagging, twitching pain in the small of my back. My complexion was greenish looking and there was a sour, sickening taste in my mouth all the time.

"Tanlac was recommended to me by a druggist and the results have been far beyond my expectation. I now get up in the mornings after sleeping good and sound all night, feeling rested, cheerful and happy, and can work the entire day without pain or inconvenience. My kidneys have stopped bothering me and the pains have disappeared from my back entirely. My appetite is fine and my stomach is in such good condition that I can eat just anything without feeling a touch of indigestion. I have just finished my third bottle of Tanlac and have already gained fifteen pounds in weight. It is doing me so much good that I wouldn't think of being without it, and to avoid missing a dose I always carry a bottle in my dinner pail to the foundry every day. After getting such wonderful results I could not do otherwise than praise Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by leading druggists in every town.

NEWSPAPERS HITS AGAIN

According to a press despatch from Ottawa newspapers are to be classed as manufacturers and subject to a sales tax on advertising contracts under the new schedule of special taxes. Whether subscription will be affected is not yet decided, the despatch states.

BUTCHER SHOP BROKEN INTO

Some time during last night the front door of Thomas butcher shop on Front street was forced open and the office was ransacked, but nothing or importance was to be secured. A few small pieces of meat taken was the only rewards of the party or parties who committed the act.

IMPROVING PROPERTY

Walmsley & Company who purchased the property at the corner of Pinnacle and McAnnany streets for a store house are making improvements to same. For the time being a portion of the building will be used as a garage. It is the intention of the firm to erect in the future an up-to-date store house.

PLANS FOR MEMORIAL HOME

The plans of the G.W.V.A. Memorial Home, which will be erected here on Riverside Park, have arrived and show a fine building. New York, May 26—Henrietta Bulte fifteen, who disappeared on the afternoon of April 12 last, when she left her home, 116 East 116th street, to deposit $260 in the bank, and who was found in Los Angeles, Cal., last week, was taken to police headquarters by Policewoman Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, directly after her arrival here. The girl, who was smiling as she arrived at police headquarters, was taken to the office of acting Captain John Ayers who questioned her as to why she had left home, and whether she had been induced to go away.

WOMAN ARCHITECT GRADUATES AT TORONTO

The first woman architect to get her degree from the University of Toronto is Miss E. M. Hill, of this year's Faculty of Applied Science. Miss Hill is from Edmonton, and before coming to the University of Toronto was a school teacher.

Now that she has qualified as an architect Miss Hill is thinking of specializing in modelling although she has not decided on this point.

Men of her year affirm that the presence of a woman in the drafting room and laboratories was not a serious handicap to the freedom of speech.

"Sometimes when we knew Miss Hill was coming it was necessary to start a prolonged ah!"

Another woman architect, Miss Jean Hall, is now in her second year at the University. Miss Hill is the second woman graduate from the Faculty of Applied Science, Miss Scott, the first, having changed from Arts to Chemistry a few years ago.

BANK BANDITS ESCAPE

Pittsburg, Pa., May 26—The First National Bank at Finleyville, Pa., near here, was held up and robbed shortly after noon by six men, who escaped, according to word received here by the police.

The bandits are said to have escaped with $100,000 in bonds and securities and $15,000 in cash.

The assistant cashier, who was the only man in the bank at the time, is reported to have been knocked unconscious and locked in the vault while the institution was rifled. A sheriff's posse has gone in pursuit.

PADEREWSKI REJECTS $1,000,000 CONCERT OFFER

Though he continues to be showered with offers from America and England for concert tours, Ignace Paderewski, pianist and ex-Premier of Poland, declares he has forsaken his art forever, believing it irreconcilable with the service for his country. M. Paderewski says he has not touched the keys since May, 1917, just three years ago, when a gala concert was given in New York in honor of Marshal Joffre. One recent American offer to Paderewski for a concert tour amounted to $1,000,000.

THE CHILDREN'S HAPPINESS

Can be Assured by Providing Plenty of Music in the Home

And incidentally their education will be more quickly and easily acquired, for, according to authorities on child education, music, instead of interfering with school work, is actually of a great help as a spur to all the other mental faculties of the child.

To cultivate the love of good music in your children nothing will do so much as a good Player-Piano. Children are natural imitators and what they hear on the Player-Piano they like to learn to play. So with a Player-Piano in the home you will not only satisfy their craving for music but also furnish the incentive to learn. Before deciding what particular make of instrument to buy bring the children along to see and hear the

HUERTA PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

Mexico City, May 26—Adolfo De la Huerta, Governor of Sonora, was named President ad interim of Mexico by the extraordinary session of Congress. He received 224 votes, against 28 for Pablo Gonzales.

General Antonio Villareal was the only other candidate.

The extraordinary session had been fixed for 3 o'clock this afternoon, but did not begin work until 6 o'clock because of the lack of a quorum. After one hour and a half of balloting, Governor De la Huerta received the necessary two-thirds majority.

Put Nature's Curve into your Glasses

If you put a flat glass before the eye it can see distinctly through the centre, but toward the edges the angle changes so that sight is not so good.

But if you put a glass curved like the eyeball—a Toric lens—before the eye, the field of vision is enlarged. It is an improvement over the flat lens in sight, in comfort and appearance.

Blackburn makes a specialty of Toric lenses. Let him fit you with such glasses.

ARE YOU PREPARED?

Did you notice that the Weather Clerk foretells a scorchingly hot summer this year? And are you ready for this? Think when you have finished your day's work and the heat of the day is almost more than one can bear, wouldn't a rest in a cool wicker chair, your feet resting on lovely cool grass mats in a corner of the verandah, sheltered from that burning sun, with a pretty and efficient sun blind—isn't the prospect alluring? Imagine what a pleasure it would be to the men folk to come home from a close, stuffy office to a place such as this where they could really rest and enjoy the most beautiful part of the day. You know he would appreciate this, as you would yourself; therefore, if you cannot give it to him, or to yourself, it means that you are not prepared. After you have read this advertisement think just when and where you could make such a place. Plan everything and make a list of all the things that you will want, and then bring it along to us. We'll help you in every way possible. Don't think that it is going to cost you a small fortune to make that Porch or Gallery, or whatever place you choose, cosy and cool, because we have everything that you will require at prices that will suit all incomes.

Depend On Retailers To Keep Sales Records

DOMINION GOVERNMENT DOES NOT PURPOSE ISSUING LUXURY STAMPS TO DEALERS—MORE RULINGS ARRIVE NEWSPAPERS ARE MANUFACTURED ARTICLES—TAXES HIT CONTRACTS MADE BEFORE MAY 19.

Scores of official rulings have been handed out from Ottawa on doubtful points regarding the new taxes.

It is made clear that the Department of Finance does not propose to issue luxury stamps. Retailers are told they must use their own discretion in keeping records of sales and should be able to verify their returns by affidavit and proof, if necessary. Local officials say that retailers who neglect to keep reliable evidence of their sales since May 19th make themselves laible to prosecution. No advice is offered as to how best records should be kept.

An important decision with regard to newspapers was given out. It states that newspapers are considered manufactured articles. There will be a sales tax on all sales of advertising space, but whether or not subscription sales to individuals and to newsboys will be taxed has not yet been decided.

AFFECTS PRIOR CONTRACTS

Following are the important rulings received from Ottawa by G. E. Dunbar, the Collector of Inland Revenue for Toronto:

The luxury and sales taxes are applicable to all goods shipped or deliver ed after May 19th last. This will affect contracts entered into before this date for deliveries to be made after May 19th. Ottawa is not concerned as to which of the parties to the contract will arrange for the payment of the tax, but lays down the law bluntly If the goods are delivered after May 19th, the tax that applies must be paid.

The twenty per cent. excise tax on phonographs is substituted for the former ten per cent. tax. Drafts drawn in sterling on British customers in payment for goods exported will not be taxed until the budget bill has been assented to. A similar ruling is made with regard to the two cent. tax on transfers of stocks or shares. Coke is subject to the one per cent. sales tax. Smoked hams and bacon are subject to tax, but sausages, bran, middlings and mixed feed for cattle are exempt. Domestic and imported rugs are to be taxed upon yardage figuring on a width of 27 inches.

NOT TAXABLE

Sales of Canadian or foreign made goods to countries outside of Canada are not taxable. Gold bullion purchased for manufacturing purposes is exempt from sales tax. All ceiling electroliers, gasoliers and candelabra having two light or more are subject to the 20 per cent. excise tax.

Watches, china, spectacles, gold or silver monnted are not taxable. Plated good taxable include lamps, clocks mirrors, electrical wares. Ivory and articles sold as ivory are taxable. Bread, vegetables and fruits in their natural state, hogs and poultry food are not taxable. Hats, bonnets and hoods costing more than $12 for women, misses and children are taxable. Prayer beads are not taxable.

The sales tax applies to all sales of automobiles, trucks and parts. Cornmeal and oatmeal sold in bulk or package are exempt from sales tax. Canned vegetables, fruits, jams, coca cola and similar goods are subject to the sales tax. Fur skin dressers and dyers must charge a one per cent. sales tax. Glucose and split peas are not taxable nor are razors and shaving brushes. Retail confectioners who manufacture in part or wholly the goods they sell are subject to the same excise tax as wholesale candy manufacturers. Solid chocolate is not classified as confectionary but chocolate products are.

NOT RETURNABLE

A manufacturer who pays a one per cent. tax on materials imported and used in producing other materials subsequently exported asks if he will be permitted to refund to himself the amount of the tax paid in the first instance. To this, Ottawa replies: "Sales tax not applicable to goods ex ported," which does not answer the question. Apparently once the tax is paid it is not returnable.

Following are some of the queries sent to Ottawa and the replies received: "Advise if wholesaler should collect one or two per cent. from retailer on all taxable sales. If we only collect one per cent. and pay that to the Government and pay one per cent. to the manufacturer on all goods purchased by us we will loose one per cent. Seems to be a misunderstanding on this point Is the tax to be levied once or twice on the same goods in passing from manufacturer to wholesaler and thence to the retailer?" "Sales tax applicable to both manufacturer and wholesaler unless it is absorbed. Tax must be shown separately on the invoice from the manufacturer to the wholesaler and also on the invoice from the wholesaler to the retailer," is the answer.

Answering a jobber, Ottawa says: "The tax must not be included in the cost on which the profit is calculated. The tax must be shown separately on all invoices when it is not included in the purchase price." This seems to imply that the jobber may use at least two methods in collecting the sales or luxury tax. He may either itemize it on his invoices or include the amount of the tax on the price of the article in question. Thus a $200 victrola may be charged: "To one victrola, $200, excise luxury tax, $240." Or the invoice may read, "To one victrola, including excise luxury tax, $240."

MANUFACTURER PAYS

"On resales of confectionery purchased from manufacturers on which they charge us a ten per cent. luxury tax,. do we charge another ten per cent. or only one per cent. sales tax? Also goods transferred to our branch house invoiced at cost are all exempt from sales tax or only such as are named in your list?" "Luxury tax and sales tax on confectionery," is the reply "are payable by the manufacturer or at the Customs House when imported. One per cent. sales tax is charged on the invoices by the wholesaler to the retailer unless it has been absorbed in the price. Further information desired re transfer of goods to branch houses, before decision can be rendered.

"On sales of plated ware to hospitals, hotels, steamships, railway companies, restaurants and institutions to whom we sell at wholesale prices owing to the wholesale quantities they buy, subject to the one per cent. sales tax or does the 10 per cent. tax apply?" "Both luxury and sales tax are payable."

"Will jobbers be charged excise tax on invoices on which excise has already been paid by the manufacturer?"

"Yes."

FIVE MASKED MEN LOOT JEWELRY SHOP

New York, May 26—Five masked bandits escaped in an automobile yesterday with jewelry valued at $8,000 after holding up six persons connected with the jewelry store of David Gumbiner, at Broadway and 105th St.

Dashing down the crowded West Side after their robbery, committed in broad daylight, the bandits narrowly missed striking a traffic policeman and several pedestrians, as their machine, driven at top speed, swerved from one side of the street to the other.

The car was later found abandoned on Central Park West, its gears stripped and its brakes out of commission. Empty watch trays were found on the floor of the machine, which the police later found also had been stolen.

HOTELS PROSPEROUS

Absence of receipts from the sale of liquor are proving no detriment to the profits of Winnipeg hotels, according to F. W. McGill, city hotel inspector, who stated that last year's profits by hotel keepers were the largest in the history of the city, and that as a result this year will see a great improvement in hotel service. No Winnipeg hotels have closed their doors during the past year and business at present is proving a record.

General Dyer Censured By Indian Government

MISCONCEPTION OF DUTY RESULTED IN LAMENTABLE LOSS OF LIFE, SAYS GOVERNMENT REPORT — ARCHBISHOP OF SIMLA DEFENDS ACTION OF BRITISH GENERAL IN FIRING ON THREATENING MOB.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, May 27.—The Government of India, reviewing the findings of the special commission investigating the recent disorders in India, declares that General Dyer, British Commander in India, exceeded the reasonable requirements of the case and showed misconception of his duty, resulting in a lamentable and unnecessary loss of life. This judgment, it is announced, has been communicated to the Commander-in-Chief, with the request that he take appropriate action.

The Catholic Archbishop of Simla has sent a letter to the London papers defending General Dyer. He says that hesitation by the authorities would have meant the general murder of European men, outraging of women, loss of public buildings and desecration of Christian churches. The archbishop maintains that General Dyer saved Europeans and saved India.

Armenians Treat With Bolshevik

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

PARIS, May 27—Armenians have accepted the invitation from Russian Bolsheviki to send delegates to Moscow, according to information received by the French Foreign Office. A Tiflis despatch says that Georgians have already reached an agreement with Moscow under which the Tiflis government undertakes to prevent Georgian territory being used as a base for attacks against the Bolsheviki. The reported willingness of Armenians to negotiate is explained by the fact that they are exposed to attacks by Turkish nationalists on one side and Bolsheviki on the other and probably have in view an arrangement assuring them tranquility on their northern boundary.

Carranza's Death Caused By Herrero

Report of Commission Sent to Obregon to Probe Murder of President —Was Betrayed

MEXICO CITY, May 27.—Blame for the assassination of former President Venustiano Carranza was definitely placed upon Rudolph Herrero and his followers in the report made last night by the commission sent to Tlaxcalantngo by General Alvaro Obregon to investigate Carranza's death.

The commission, in making its reports, urged that a formal hearing be held, declaring such action necessary to establish Herrero's motive and the responsibility of the individual members of his band, as well as to determine the conduct of Carranza's cabinet members, his friends and defenders, who accompanied him in his flight.

Herrero carefully planned his coup by gaining Carranza's confidence, which he then betrayed, the commission declared.

Colonel Jupiter Ramirez, who supported Barragan was quoted as saying that although Herrero organized the plot to assassinate Carranza, Colonel Marquez Ceron led the attack.

According to the report of the commission, Herrero joined the Carranza party in Puebla May 20, after a conference with General Mariel in which he promised undying loyalty. Mariel who stood high in Carranza's esteem, assured the president that Herrero was trustworthy and then left the Carranzista camp. He did not return.

WANTED TO DEFEND SELF

The report said that between 3 and 3.30 o'clock some 20 or 25 soldiers attacked the hut. The first shots wounded the President, who told his roommates he was unable to rise because his leg had been fractured. He asked for his rifle, so he could defend himself. These were his last words, for a second volley caused his death. Herrero appeared leading his men and made prisoners about 60 Carfranzistas whom he released about twelve miles away, forcing them to sign statements that Carranza committed suicide.

The fact that Carranza wore his glasses when his body was found, was said to indicate he had not gone to sleep.

The report was based on the testimony of Generals Neira, Sanchez and Perez and Captain Ramirez. Perez said that Herrero had told him he also wanted to kill Murguia, Bonillas and Cabrera. The report verified General Amador's version of the murder.

Charges Against C.P.R. Men Heard

Witness Alleges He Bought Montreal-Quebec Transportation.

MONTREAL, May 27.—The enquete of the seven C.P.R. conductors accused of theft of tickets from the company was opened today before Judge Cusson. William Gaudreau was the first to appear, his hearing occupying the greater part of the sitting.

Inspector John Cadieux, of the C. P. R. police, was the first witness called by the prosecution. On being examined by Peter Bercovitch, K.C., he stated that on searching the caboose of the train on which Gaudreau was about to leave, he found in a coat pocket, which he says he was positive belonged to Gaudreau, two tickets for passage between Montreal and Quebec.

J. H. Coleman, the second witness, stated he searched the caboose, and in a trunk found two tickets. When he arrested Gaudreau and took him to the police station in Quebec he searched the accused and found another ticket. Ludger Crevier, C. P. R. constable, corroborated the evidence given by Coleman.

Rene Lachance, a private detective in the employ of the railway company, who gave his address as 321 St. Denis street, asked by Mr. Bercovitch if he knew the accused, stated that he did. On further questioning he said that he had had considerable dealings with Gaudreau and that Gaudreau had sold him tickets. Mr. Bercovitch inquired the date on which Gaudreau had sold tickets and received the answer, Nov. 15, 1919. Lachance during his evidence stated he had gone to Quebec and there received a note from Gaudreau stating the accused had been up to see him and found him out but if he desired anything else to phone him at the freight yards in Quebec. Witness stated he phoned Gaudreau, who told him he would send him some railroad tickets, good between Montreal and Quebec. At this stage Mr. Bercovitch inquired if he had previous dealings with the accused in railroad tickets, the witness answering in the affirmative.

Next, day, continued Lachance, the accused sent him up some tickets by one of the red caps at the station named Parks. With the tickets, he said was a note, (which was produced in court) which stated "Enclosed please find something in regard to our conversation. Mr. Bercovitch: "Was anything else in the envelope?" Answer: "Yes, five railroad tickets for passage between Montreal and Quebec."

Went to Hotel.

Lachance states he told the messenger Parks to accompany him to a Mr. Wilson, who was at the King Edward Hotel. At this point the witness explained that Wilson was known as Operative No. 35 and was in the employ of the C.P.R.

They proceeded to the hotel and went to the room occupied by Wilson here, stated the witness, the envelope was handed over to Wilson, who, in the presence of the witness, gave the boy $12 to give to Gaudreau, the boy signing a receipt for the same, which was also produced.

On returning to Montreal the witness stated that on December 9 he was instructed to get into touch with Gaudreau. He did so by leaving a note at the home of the accused at 2965 St. Dominique street, asking him to meet him in the Monarch pool room, 278 St. Catherine street east. Wilson and the witness met the accused, he stated, and they each purchased six tickets from the accused, for which they paid him $15. Asked by Mr. Bercovitch the regular fare between Montreal and Quebec, the witness replied it was $5.75 each way. The enquete will be continued.

Will Save Money For Coal Importers

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 27.—Prepayment of freight difficulty which has held up coal imports in Eastern Canada for the past month has been settled as far as Ontario except the Ottawa district is concerned, and the railways will shortly make an arrangement which will provide for a similar solution of the difficulty for Montreal and Ottawa districts. The action of Canadian railways in agreeing to accept coal shipments with charges on Canadian haul waybilled collect was rendered easy in Ontaroi by the fact that the rates to practically all Ontario points are made up on a combination of local rates to and from the International boundary Arrangements with the Railway Association of Canada provided that coal importers in Canada can avoid paying for the haul in Canada in United States currency, thus effecting considerable saving in the cost of transportation. The settlement effects only coal and coke shipments.

Liquor Business Not Dispensary Says Dewart

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limtied

TORONTO, May 27—H. H. Dewart Liberal Leader, in the Legislature today threatened to kill the estimates of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners by moving an amendment when they come up for concurrence. The License Board, he declared was nothing more than a large liquor dealing business instead of a medical dispensary.

Objections to Hon. W. Rollo's amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act were made this morning by a deputation consisting of Col. W. B. Kingsmill, Canadian Counsel for the Michigan Central Railway and Angus McMurchy, representing the C.P.R. They submitted that the consolidation of all funds under the Act for the payment of maintenance to widows would act unfairly on permanent companies in that they would frequently be called upon to pay a share of firms which go out of business and leave widows of employes to be supported. The Ministers did not promise to agree to the request.

Ask $12 Limit On Shoe Tax

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 27—The Shoe Manufacturers' Association, of which F. S. Scott, M. P., for South Waterloo, is president, will wait upon the Minister of Finance to make representations regarding the luxury tax on boots retailed at nine dollars and over. It is understood the members will ask Sir Henry Drayton to raise the minimum price for the tax to at least twelve dollars. The manufacturers claim that boots cannot be manufactured for retail at less than this figure and the delegation will attend the conference armed with statistics to show they are manufacturing as cheaply as possible.

Representations on luxury tax continue to flood the Department of Finance and arrangements are being made to receive many delegations including jewelers and electrical men.

Canada's Taxation Policy Approved

New York Paper Says Plan Merits Emulation by Other Governments.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Under the heading "Sound Taxing in Canada" the Sun and New York Herald discusses the new Ottawa Budget, declaring that the Canadian Government's courageous and determined measures to make the 1920-21 Budget balance merit commendation by all and emulation by other Governments which have far less excuse for swollen expenditures which have to be met by higher taxes."

"Canada," continues the newspaper, "has problems of development, transportation and distribution that are even more difficult than our own. Except for a small section northwest of Winnipeg and south of Saskatchewan and along a strip of territory about 100 miles wide paralleling the border the population of Canada is less than one person to the square mile. Only in a small section in the East does it exceed 16 to the square mile. Such a sparse population spread over so vast an expanse of territory spells hardship and privation for those engaged in the development of the country.

"One would think it difficult enough to endure the privations of pioneer life without being called upon to assume tax burdens to pay for a war fought thousands of miles away. Yet the Canadian readily shares his bread with the Government. So we see the Government slashing expendtiures as much as possible and then impsing additional taxes.

"The one object was to make the revenue equal to the expenditure. The object has been achieved. Apparently the Budget framers were more engrossed in their task of making the Budget balance than they were in winning the favor of the discontented voter. The new taxes are economically sound and in the long run the money paid by the tax payer would be a good investment, for the method by which it is being taken conforms with the science of taxation and not the game of vote getting."

PRICE OF NEWSPRINT.

New York, May 27.—While it is admitted that some advance in newsprint prices to customers of the International Paper Company will go into effect July 1, it is not expected that the increase will reach anything like $30 a ton, as reported in market gossip. No intimation is forthcoming from the company as to the quotations for the third quarter, but it would not be surprising if a 10 per cent. advance, $10 a ton, is agreed upon between the company and the publishers. Present price contracts is $100 a ton. Newsprint for spot delivery in the open market is selling from $200 to $300 a ton.

According to figures furnished by International Paper Company peeled wood is today selling at $34 a cord delivered at the mill, compared with less than $25 last year. Approximately 1 3-10 tons of wood is consumed in the manufacture of a ton of newsprint. The cost of labor has advanced from $8.68 a ton in 1915 to $25 under the new wage scale, which went into effect May 1 last.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
by Alex Ray, Opt.D.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

NAZIMOVA IN "THE BRAT"

Nazimova, the phenomenal Russian artiste, in her new screen production, "The Brat," will be the attraction par excellence at Griffin's to-night to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday.

In "The Brat," Nazimova will be presented in the dual guise of star and dramatist, for it was she, in collaboration with Charles Bryant, who adapted Maude Fulton's sensational stage success for her own use in the name role.

"The Brat," will show Nazimova for the first time in her brilliant career in the part of an American girl. Latin and other foreign types had been considered Nazimova's metier; but she is said to amaze even her warmest admirers by her remarkable impersonation of the nameless waif of the streets around whom the dramatic action of "The Brat" revolves.

The vicissitudes and final triumph of "The Brat," a child-woman whose life has been one charitable institution after another until she lands in the chorus, form the theme of Nazimova's version of Maude Fulton's play. How the Brat loses her job because she is too shabby to compete with the other girls; how she is later insulted and then taken to the night court on a trumped-up charge, and how she is noticed by an author who takes her home to study her as the type for his new novel, are the beginnings of a romance that has a distinctly original flavor and is pungent with wit and satire.

Charles Bryant, who has been Nazimova's leading man in every one of her great screen vehicles, save "The Red Lantern," again plays opposite the brilliant Russian star in the role of MacMillan Forrester, the author. Among the spectacular and unusual settings provided for the production are an exact reproduction of the night court in New York and a fashionable theatre, which was built on the stage at the Nazimova studios especially for the picturization of "The Brat" Larry Semon also appears on the same program in an original and amusing 2-reel comedy "Between the Acts," and other varied plays of interest will also be presented on the same program.

MINISTER DENOUNCES WELCOME TO BATTLER

Millbrook, Ont., May 27.—"You never heard an evangelist or missionary being accorded a civic welcome in Toronto?" This interrogative remark was followed by a denunciation of the recent action of the Toronto City Council giving a public reception to a prize fighter by Rev. W. D. Lee of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, at the service on Sunday.

He characterized the present day tendency towards shorter hours and a shorter working day as contrary to the biblical injunction to labor six days a week and rest on the seventh. He concluded with a plea for a united church.

Minstrel Show Popular As Ever

Judging by the size of the audience which greeted Harvey's Greater Minstrels at Griffin's Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, and by the appreciation of the work of the clever black-face performers which that audience gave expression to, minstrelsy has not lost its old-time popularity. Certainly Harvey's Minstrels proved themselves worthy exponents of the form of entertainment made famous by such celebrities as George Primrose and Lew Dockstader, Al G. Field and other white-faced exponents of the art. The show from the opening to time-honored "first-part" to the last bars of the finale gave plenty of occasion for applause which was not slow in coming. The staging falls far short of the elaborate settings which were the rule in the halcyon days when black-face minstrelsy was at the zenith of its popularity, but the jokes, many new and a few rather threadbare, the vocal numbers and the vaudeville novelties are all of excellent quality. During the progress of the first part Noah Robinson, Lawrence Baker, Willie Edwards, Charlie Beechum, Slim Jim, Austin and Frank Kirk proved themselves a sextette of capable jokers with Whitney Viney performing the duties of interlocutor in able fashion. A number of popular numbers intermixed with plantation melodies are provided by these performers, assisted by several other members of the company, including Emmett Moss, who gave an excellent imitation of a big bass viol in his rendering of "Old Black Joe." Outstanding among the vaudeville numbers is the laughable burlesquing of Frank Kirk, who plays several well-known selections on musical instruments "of his own make." Whitney Viney provides a good colored wench impersonation, assisted by Noah Robinson. Willie and Mabel Edwards have a contortionist-acrobatic act which is above the average, while the Australian Waites do some whip-cracking stunts which are splendid. The show closed with a "musical melange" introducing several entertaining selections.

CIRCUS DAY WILL SOON BE HERE

The old adage about spring and summer coming together surely comes true this season, but in any event, the circus will be here on Wednesday, June 2nd, even if warm weather is conspicuous by its absence. The Sparks Big Three Ring Circus recently closed a very successful tour of the larger cities of the South appearing under the auspices of the Shriners and since then it has been battling the elements on its way to Canada without suffering any diminuation of crowds or enthusiasm that seems to be characteristic of this circus.

The Sparks Circus is a three ring affair with the performances given under a tent with a seating capacity for thousands of spectators. This year's program is entirely new and includes among its trained animal features the Captain Gassel Seals, the Sparks Dancing Horses, Madge Evans and her two herds of elephants and three groups of marvelously trained statue horses and dogs. Among the offers of the thrilling circus program proper will be found in the Cornallas Family of European acrobats, the Flying Earls, the Aerial Yorks, the Guice trio of aerial bar experts, the Ezuma troupe of Royal Japanese, the Riding Hollis and Flora Bedini America's foremost equestrienne star. A new mile long open den street parade will traverse the principal streets of the city at 10.30 a.m. on the morning of the exhibition in this city.

ONE MAN IS MAIMED, ANOTHER IS BLINDED

Cobalt, May 26—Vincent Arney, aged 18, a young miner, stood talking to his friend, Albert Desjardines, near their home, and at the same time juggled four or five dynamite caps in his hands. Evidently one struck another harder than usual and the five exploded. One of Arney's hands was blown off and all but one finger of the other. Desjardines received the full force of the explosion in the face and lost one eye and may lose the other. He was also badly injured in the side. They were brought to the Mines Hospital and are in a serious condition.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

The budget debate was continued, Dr. Michael Clark (Red Deer) being the first speaker. He announced that he would support the Fielding amendment because it called for downward revision of the tariff.

Other speakers were Joseph Demers, E. K. Spinney, Dr. J. E. Fontaine, F. Falard.

Dr. Edwards (Frontenac) adjourned the debate.

Hon. Mr. Rowell stated that pending legislation should meet the needs of complaining postal employees.

Light On Great Sugar Robbery

Witness Before Lusk Commission Says Money Loaned to Cuban Planters

NEW YORK, May 27.—A prediction that the price of sugar would soar to 27 or 28 cents per pound within 48 hours was made by Raymond M. Wilson, sugar broker, testifying before the Lusk committee investigating alleged profiteering in sugar and other commodities.

This statement followed the disclosure by George Henry Finlay, another witness, that more than a quarter of billion dollars have been loaned by American banks to concerns in Cuba to enable them to hold sugar.

Mr. Finlay, who was the first witness called when the hearing was resumed today, testified that about 650,000 tons of sugar was being held in Cuban ports, and added that many planters have stored their entire crops in warehouses in the interior.

Asked whether he thought the planters took this action in order to wait for further rises in prices, Mr. Finlay answered in the affirmative.

He said the National City Bank in Havana would lend $25 a bag on raw sugar thus stored, while other banks lend as much as $56 a bag.

Asked for any other information in his possession which might throw light on the existing high prices, he called attention to 400,000 tons of sugar not previously counted in the estimates of the available supply, which, he said, brings the total amount of sugar available to refiners in Cuba up to 1,000,000 tons.

ROBBED BY BRIGANDS

Arriving in Vancouver arrayed in a borrowed unclerical looking suit of grey tweed which had seen better days, Rev. R. A. Whiteside, a missionary, who has penetrated about as far into the heart of China as any living white man, has a thrilling tale to tell of having been held up and robbed by Chinese brigands while on his way with his wife and children, to join the steamer Katori Maru at Shanghai. They were robbed of all their belongings, even Mrs. Whiteside's wedding ring, but the parents are very happy in that their two little children were not taken away from them and held for ransom as the brigands had at first planned. In Sze Chuan province where Rev. Mr. White side was stationed for fifteen years, military chiefs demand as high as 30 per cent tax, he stated, and the only hope of the people is that if a strong and fair-minded governor comes into power he orders a general beheading of tyrancus tax collectors.

FUEL CONTROLLER WINS VICTORY FOR PROVINCE

Toronto, May 27—Fuel Controller J. A. Harrington was rewarded for the strenuous efforts which he put forth on behalf of the people of this Province with the Railway Commissioners at Ottawa in connection with the prepayment of freight charges on coal and coke coming from the United States. Incidentally the fight of Ontario's Fuel Commissioner will save the people of this Province an amount in the neighborhood of two and one-half million dollars.

This figure represents the amount which will be saved as a result of a telegram received last night by Mr. Harrington which brings an important change in the conditions governing prepayment of freight charges and the adverse exchange situation in the United States. The message was signed by Mr. J. Hardwell, and was worded: "Canadian carriers decided to instruct agents that coal and coke originating out of American connections or locally at border junctions may be exported to Canadian destinations with charges collect, when waybilled under authorized or proportional tariffs applying to such junctions, providing all charges of American carriage are prepaid."

WOOL SUBSTITUTE PROVES SUCCESS

Leeds, England, May 27.—Experiments are being conducted at the Textile Institute in manufacturing by a hemical process artificial wool from cellulose derived from cotton waste. The efforts have been very successful and, although it is only a substitute for wool it is said to have great wearing possibilities especially if used with ther fabrics.

You take no chances when I guarantee a photoplay to you. I have always made it a rule in the different cities I have managed theatres to never put my personal guarantee behind an attraction until I was sure I had the goods. I have no hesitation in guaranteeing "The Brat," with the incomparable Nazimova, which I am screening at Griffin's Tonight to Saturday. This screen play is Nazimova's own adaptation of Maude Fulton's drama of the same name, which had a phenomenal run of more than two years in New York and other big cities throughout the United States and Canada. It is one of those intensely human and appealing stories in which there are smiles and tears. It follows the picturesque career of "the brat", a nameless waif of the streets, who, after having been "fired" from the chorus, becomes the protege of a famous author who takes her to his home and studies her as a type for the heroine of his novel.

She is a quaint little body and lovable in the extreme. Naturally there is a romance, that has all the fascination of charm and simplicity. In "The Brat" Nazimova appears for the first time on the screen or stage as an American girl. And you are assured of the rarest sort of a treat.

Respectfully soliciting your patronage Tonight, Friday or Saturday of this week, I am,

Respectfully yours,

Good Road Boosters Meet At Winnipeg

Lucius E. Allen of Belleville President of Ontario Good Roads Association Will Attend

The meeting of the Canadian Good Roads Association in Winnipeg during the week of June 1st, is attracting wide attention from all those interested in the development of good roads throughout Canada, and it is expected that this will be one of the most important conferences on good roads yet held in Canada.

The Premiers of seven Provinces will be present in addition to highway officials from coast to coast. A very interesting program will be presented, including addresses from several expert road builders from the United States. The Ontario Good Roads Association has made arrangements for a special car to accommodate its members going to Winnipeg which will leave Toronto on Saturday evening of this week.

Among those who will be in this party are S . Squire, President Canadian Good Roads Association, Toronto; Major T. L. Kennedy, M.P.P.; Lucius E. Allen, C. E. President Ontario Good Roads Association, Belleville; Wm. Findlay, Manager "The Globe," Toronto; W. G. Robertson, Secretary The Ontario Motor League, George Hogarth, Chief Engineer Dept. Highways Ontario; A. M. Rankin, M. P.P., Kingston; and C. R. Wheelock, C.E. County Engineer Peel County.

BATTLEFIELD MEMORIALS OFFICIALS ARE NAMED

Ottawa, May 27—In order to carry out preliminary steps in connection with Canadian battlefield memorials the Governor-in-Council has authorized the appointment of Brig-Gen. H. T. Hughes as chief engineer, in charge of the work, and Capt. Maurice Pope, of the Royal Canadian Engineers as his assistant. Lt.-Col. J. T. F. Gagnon, Canadian Army Pay Corps, has been detailed to act as financial officer, and Lt.-Col. L. M. Ross as officer in charge of landscape work. The chief engineer is authorized to negotiate with the British, French and Belgian Governments on such matters as may be necessary. His authority to do these things is subject to the approval of the High Commissioner for Canada in London.

Milk And Water Says Red Michael

Liberal Member for Red Deer Does Not Think Much of Fielding Amendment.

Ottawa, May 27.—Leading counsel for two parties presented their cases before the High Court of Parliament on Tuesday afternoon and evening. On the [illegible] question of the tariff, Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, submitted his brief for the Agrarians, and Hon. Arthur Meighen submitted his for the Government. Both were in excellent form.

The two speeches in their own particular line probably constituted the most comprehensive discussion on the question of the tariff which has characterized any one day of the debate on the budget so far. Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the agrarian group, had been absent for some days and on his return he gave to his acting leader, Dr. Clark, the task of speaking on the amendment before the House. It had been the intention of farmers to move a further amendment of their own, as soon as the present amendment (for which they will vote, has been disposed of. It is doubtful, however, whether they will do so. Hon. Arthur Meighen called attention to the fact that, two sessions ago, Mr. Speaker ruled against the moving of more than one amendment to the budget, or an amendment to the amendment; and it is probable that he will do so again.

Farmers Support Fielding.

Dr. Clark declared that his party would vote for the Fielding amendment, though it was a "bit milk and watery" and they would have liked it better had the speech of the mover, Mr. Fielding, been less protectionist in its character.

CHEAPER LIGHT

Cheaper electricity rates for the citizens of Winnipeg within five years was predicted by Alderman Fowler, acting mayor, commenting on the report of the city light and power department presented to the fire, water light and power committee. This report shows a surplus for the year amounting to $150,000 and a revenue of $1,250,000. The surplus at present is being expended on the erection of additional plants which will give Winnipeg within a couple of years a civic owned electric power plant of 100,000 horse-power.

Performing elephants and trained wild animals that perform bewildering feats to the astonishment of the grown-ups and delight of the kiddies, are part of the famous programs offered by the Great Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus, which will exhibit here on Wednesday, June 9th.

The club is in a flourishing condition and has a large membership.

COOKS AND STEWARDS GET FIRST-CLASS STATEROOMS

London, May 27.—Cooks and stewards occupied first class cabins in the steamer Augusta Victoia when that vessel sailed for New York. The luxury enjoyed by the galley and dining room forces resulted from a controversy over accommodations between the cooks and stewards and the officials of the steamship line, which delayed the sailing of the vessel for eleven days. Finally the company agreed that the men should have the best accommodation available on this trip and that they would immediately build new and more commodious compartments for their employes on the steamer.

U. S. POLITICAL MACHINES ARE WELL GREASED

"Presidential Row," an institution unique in American politics is preparing for the final drive that will culminate the week of June 8 in the nomination of a Republican candidate for President of the United States.

The 'Row' which each four years is the centre of national pre-convention politics, is going through the biggest season in its history.

'Presidential Row" includes parts of two Michigan Boulevard hotels, at Chicago, which are connected by a subterranean passageway, and along the row every leading presidential candidate has established or will establish his headquarters. Here too, the Republican National Committee maintains extensive offices, while the Democratic committee meets here on occasion.

Since the Republicans began holding their conventions here regularly in 1904 the 'Ro' has become an institution of the party.

National headquarters of Governor Frank O. Lowden and Major General Leonard Wood were the first to open this season. The Wood delegation has been active on the 'Row' since early last winter and the Lowden camp has been on the ground since January 1.

Later arrivals included western headquarters for Herbert Hoover and Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, and the regional offices of the National Personal Liberty League, working in the interests of Governor Edwards Democrat of New Jersey.

Reservations have been made for Senator Hiram Johnson, Senator Miles Poindexter and Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts. They will open offices several days before the convention.

The Republican National Committee has had offices on the 'Row' for several months. The committee will move to convention headquarters at the Coliseum about May 24, and there will begin hearing contests for convention seats on May 25 or 26 according to present plans.

Following the convention the Republican committee will occupy the entire floor, including the ball room, in a downtown hotel, and also establish work rooms in a loop office building.

Will H. Hays, chairman of the committee, is expected to spend considerable time during the campaign here and one of the large hotel parlors is being prepared for his private office.

The Democratic National Committee will maintain headquarters here, but has not yet selected a location. Chairman Homer S. Cummings will divide his time between the offices here and those at the Grand Central Palace in New York.

OUR MINERAL WEALTH

VAST AREAS STILL UNOPENED IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Canada Will Be Silver Centre, and the Potentialities of the Precious Metal Contained In the Earth Cannot Be Over-estimated—Valuable Coal and Coke May Also Come From the Far West.

ONE outstanding feature of mining in British Columbia naturally appeals to all interested in the development of metalliferous ores, as well as coal and coke, namely, the vastness of mineral areas. Hundreds of miles have been traversed by exploring prospectors, and in a majority of instances discoveries made, now awaiting capital and active development.

The following official table (omitting a few minor districts not yet explored or worked) conveys practical proof that the above statement is in every way credible:

Cassiar and Omineca district.
Boundary-Yale district.
Slocan mining division.
East Kootenay district.
Trail Creek mining division.
Ainsworth mining division.
Nelson mining division.

The ores yielding gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, shipped from various properties within the zones above enumerated, average about 3,000,000 tons annually, while the fact that new silver fields on Salmon river and Alice Arm, in the vicinity of Portland Canal, less than seven hundred miles north of Vancouver and about 80 miles northwest of Prince Rupert, are already yielding good values in reassuring bulk, establishes the fact that metalliferous ores in paying quantities exist throughout the province.

This is no random statement, but a tangible certainty; no mere lure of treasures undiscovered, but palpable entities worthy of consideration, because Canadians must discipline themselves to appreciate a heritage worthy of conservation and exploitation by Canadians, for Canadian interests, and with responsibilities entailed thereby. Home capital lays deep and strong the foundation of self-reliance, self-confidence, progress and prosperity.

Self-preservation has been termed the first law of nature—why not of nations? Hence, with marvellous wealth awaiting the garnerers, with gradual shrinkage of supplies in other spheres, why should Canadians hesitate at the requisite efforts to utilize the situation, particularly during a period of high values, and at a time demanding concentration of energies towards replenishing domestic and national exchequers?

In presaging the possibilities of Canada becoming a great silver centre, one is reasonably assured even by cursory investigation. Sixteen years ago, Cobalt, whose revealed treasures placed the Province of Ontario in the front rank of mineral producers, a slip of broken country four miles long and four miles in width, was accidentally discovered during railway construction. Since then (1904) that area has yielded fully one hundred and thirty million dollars in silver, and incidentally pointed towards Porcupine, with its output of more than fifty million dollars in gold. Next to Ontario, British Columbia is a silver, gold, copper and lead producer, as the following figures, gleaned from official records and supervised by the very able provincial mineralogist, Mr. W. Fleet Robertson, in his annual report, will show. The tabulated statement includes the total yields of metalliferous products and coal, coke, miscellaneous metals and building materials of mineral origin:

Placer gold to date	$ 75,722,603
Lode gold 1894-1919	100,052,151
Copper 1894-1919	154,373,275
Silver, 1893-1919	50,710,194
Lead ——1919	43,952,572
Zinc, 1909-1919	15,994,360
Miscellaneous minerals	680,000
Coal and coke, 1919	196,387,653
Building stone	29,000,000
Total	$566,872,808

This is a fair showing when the seemingly insurmountable obstacles such as the absence of the necessary pack trails, in fact trails of any description, hampered prospectors at every step; added to this freshets and no bridges, long distances over precipitous passes and a score of other impediments were to be overcome. When the Canadian Pacific, with spurs and subsidiary lines through every part of the province made things easier, giving heart to the intrepid explorer, travel and ore transport became easier; each year brought and still brings improvement.

Iron exists in immense quantities, yet to be thoroughly tested according to the "Bessemer Limit," platinum is found in the Similkameen district; arsenical iron, manganese, chromite, and many non-metallic minerals. More than this—the Province of British Columbia—providing the people employed in every branch of industry, appreciate conditions and concentrate energies—is beginning a new era, and one of her greatest assets will be new discoveries of metals and with this, continuity of output.

On the other hand, it must not be overlooked that mineral wealth in the United States is declining, the volume of silver ores shrinking, that gold hoards are falling off, and mining magnates are turning towards Canada.

The annual silver output of the United States yields not more than 75,000,000 while her exports are only 239,021,054 ounces, the bulk being distributed as follows:

	Ounces.
China	77,588,367
Hong Kong (British free port	20,245,301
England	15,635,386
British India	109,180,718
Total ounces	222,649,772

ANGLICAN CHURCH IS OPPOSED TO DIVORCE

Bishop Sweeney in his charge to the Synod of the Diocese of Toronto, in session at St. James Parish House after reviewing the activities of the diocese for the year touched on the question of divorce and emphatically stated the attitude of the Anglican church in this matter. "The Anglican church is opposed to divorce,' he said, "(save for the one allowed by Her Divine Head.) This is plainly indicated by her legislation adopted in 1905 which states that no Anglican clergyman shall solemnize a marriage between persons either of whom shall have been divorced from one who is living at the time.

"Thus does she set her face sternly against that which imperils the indisolubility of the marriage tie. Thus does she strengthen the Divine appointed social order to safeguard the sanctity of the home and protect the issue of the union from plight and scandal of parental separation. In matter she is second to none. We must oppose by every legitimate means any legislation which seeks to enlarge the causes for which divorce is granted.

I SAW IT IN THE INTELLIGENCER.

One of the best methods of coping with the high cost of living is to watch the advertisements in The Intelligencer. Progressive merchants send their announcements directly into the homes of the people in the daily paper, which is eagerly watched for and carefully read. Modern merchandising forbids the carrying over of goods, hence the advertisements are gold mines of saving values. The favorite indoor sport is now a careful perusal of the advertising columns of The Intelligencer, and it is a profitable study for all concerned.

EXPENSIVE ECONOMY.

Premier Drury's Government was expected to practice economy, sweep through the government departments with a fine broom, and get rid of all the surplus salary-drawing office-holders. Instead, he pushed a bill through the Legislature placing permanently upon the provincial payroll all the old standbys who have drawn good fat salaries for years. Perhaps that is his method of preparing the way for a bunch of hungry hacks who want to get in where the work is easy, the burdens are light, and the salary is good. Drury's superannuation bill will permit the retirement of many now holding down remunerative positions in the government service and their replacement by friends of the present administration. Would Premier Drury do anything like that? Certainly not, nit-not; but the wine of office has been known to turn stronger heads than that of Farmer Drury.

IMMEDIATE GOVERNMENT ACTION NECESSARY.

All Canadians are newspaper readers and consequently deeply interested in the conditions which confront the publishers of Canada today, conditions which are not only driving newspapers out of business, but compelling radical advances in the rates of subscription and advertising to permit the survivors to continue serving the Canadian public under the steadily increasing costs of publication. The price of newsprint is being advanced to unheard of heights under pressure from the United States, and Canadian publishers find it increasingly difficult to get paper supplies even at fancy figures. One million cords of pulp wood from Canada are absorbed by United States paper mills every year, and evidence given at Washington in the newsprint investigation there indicates that United States paper manufacturers desire to increase this to five million and a half cords annually, and are seeking to apply pressure through a threat to curtail coal and sulphur supplies to enforce this demand upon Canada's forest wealth.

The situation is a serious one for Canadian publishers and the Canadian public generally.

One remedy proposed is for the Canadian publishers to unite in the establishment of a paper mill to furnish their own supplies, but in the meantime the situation calls for immediate action by the Government to protect Canadian publishers and the Canadian public from conditions fast becoming intolerable.

Too much pulpwood is being exported from Canada now. Forest wealth belonging to the public which should be manufactured into the finished article in Canada giving employment to Canadian workingmen.

Prodigal extravagance has wasted the forest wealth of the United States and what they have left they desire to conserve until the Canadian supply is exhausted.

Canada desires to sell as much as possible of its manufactures to the United States, but not at the expense of its own publishing enterprises and the public generally of this country, but the benefit derived from the immense export of raw material in pulpwood is infinitesimal compared to the great benefit which would be derived by compelling manufacture here into the finished produce.

Canadian publishers are entitled to have this uncertainty wiped out, to secure assurances of permanent and regular paper supplies at fair prices and the newspaper reading public, being vitally interested, will endorse this.

If the Canadian Government is of the people, by the people, for the people, it will take up this question at once and devise means of protecting Canadian publishers and the Canadian public from being sacrificed upon the British Empire-hating altars of the yellow press of the United States.

Jimmie Wilde's visit to Toronto was covered by a $10,000 guarantee. Patsy Wallace, his opponent, had to be satisfied with a guarantee of $1,500. The only difference between the two fighters, outside of a slight difference in ability, is that Jimmie has arrived and Patsy is still on the way. OTHER VIEWS

Hurt By a Good Act
Edmonton Journal

For years we have heard a great deal about the evils of patronage. They were not denounced a bit too strongly. But it is fairly clear that the Union Government has been weakened because it has gone so far as it has in meeting the oft-expressed deal about the evils of patronage, system abolished. It has been driven out of public service with respect to appointments and it is extremely doubtful if it ever will return, despite the demands which old-line party men are all the time making for its return. But the dissatisfaction of the latter seems to be counting for more in determining the electoral fortunes of the Government than any satisfaction which the abolition of the patronage system may have created among the mass of citizens.

The Searching Test
Toronto Star

One of the fundamental principles taught by the Founder of Christianity was that there was only one absolute value in life and that is life itself, and that all other values are relative and derivative. They can only justify themselves in so far as they minister to and beautify human life. Every institution, every law, every social force should be put to this simple but searching test. Does it increase the length and breadth of life or does it lessen it Humanity, its enrichment and development, is the goal of all action and achievement.

THEPOET'S CORNER

WHEN THE COWS COME HOME

With klingle, klangle, klingle,
Way down the dusty dingle,
The cows are coming home;
Now sweet and clear, and faint and low,
The airy twinklings come and go,
Like chimings from some far-off tower.
Or patterings of an April shower,
That makes the daisies grow,
Go-ling, go-lang, go-lingle-lingle,
Way down the darkening dingle,
The cows come slowly home;
And old-time friends, and twilight plays,
And starry nights and sunny days,
When the cows come home.

With a tinkle, tankle, tinkle,
Through fern and periwinkle,
The Cows are coming home,
A-lottering in the checkered stream,
Where the sun-rays glance and gleam
Queen Bess and Doll and Sulph and Sue,
Across the fields I hear her moo-oo,
And clang her silver bell,
Go-ling, go-ling, go-lingle-lingle,
With faint far sounds that mingle,
The cows come slowly home.
Let down the bars, let in the train
Of long-gone songs, and flower and rain,
For dear old times come back again
When the cows come home.

COMMERCIAL FLYERS HAVE SALARY FIXED

Atlantic City, N.J., May 27.—Just what will constitute "soaring wages" in the brand new field of commercial aviation, this week placed in actual operation over two great aerial lines, constituting transcontinental runs and the other following the waterways developed spirited discussion before sessions of the third Pan-American Aeronautic Congress here, and a regular scale for pilots, clear down to the men who handle the minor details on the ground was officially adopted.

The rates provide for a minimum retaining fee for pilots of $1,000 payable at $150 a month, in force whether through no fault of his own, the aviator flies or not. In addition, the following hourly pay is stipulated:

For single motor ships one to thirty hours, $1.75 an hour; 31 to 60 hours, $2.25; 61 to 90 hours, $2.75; 91 to 120 hours, $3.25; 121 to 150 hours, $3.75. An additional 25 cents an hour is given for operators for two or more motor ships with the possibility of further advancement in rates for actual living time on recommendation of the Superintendent of Flying when approved by the Board of Directors. The increased air is something novel in the way of payment.

HOUSEHOLD WORKERS SCARCE

"The problem of obtaining household workers for western Canada will not be solved by immigration from the Old Country, but a limited number of girls might be obtained if the provincial governments would advance part of their passage money," declared Mrs. Charles Robson, who has recently returned from investigating conditions in England and Scotland on behalf of the Dominion Government. The result of Mrs. Robson's investigation reveals the fact that England's war conditions have succeeded in diminishing the servant class to such an extent that in England alone there is a short of 40,000 servants.

MOTHERS NEED NOT WORRY

Because Children are Frail, Ailing and Sickly

Vinol Will Build Them Up and Make Them Strong, Robust and Rosy

There is nothing that will build up frail, sickly, ailing children like VINOL.

Mrs. L. Andrews, Bainbridge, N. Y., says: "My little daughter was run-down, tired all the time, pale, thin, nervous, and had headaches so we had to take her out of school. VINOL has built her up, she has a good appetite, no more headaches, her color is good and she has returned to school."

VINOL owes its success in such cases to the tissue-building extractives of fresh cods' liver, without oil, aided by the blood and strength-creating elements of tonic iron, beef peptones and hypophosphites which it contains.

Thus in a natural manner it creates a healthy appetite, aids digestion, makes rich, red blood, and the result is a good, healthy color, strength and vitality.

Never a corn
on millions of feet nowadays

Do you know that millions of people who use Blue-jay keep entirely free from corns?

If a corn appears it is ended by a touch. A Blue-jay plaster or a drop of liquid Blue-jay is applied.

The corn pain stops. Soon the whole corn loosens and comes out.

The method is scientific. It is gentle, easy, sure. Old-time harsh treatments are supplanted by it with everyone who knows it.

It is made by a world-famed laboratory, which every physician respects.

It is now applied to some 20 million corns a year. You can see that corn troubles are fast disappearing.

Then why pare corns and keep them? Why use methods which are out-of-date?

Try this new-day method. See what it does to one corn. You will never forget its quick and gentle action. Your druggist sells Blue-jay.

WELL-KNOWN CAPTAIN DIED AT KINGSTON

Kingston, May 24—Captain William Simmons, one of the oldest lake mariners, died in the General Hospital of blood poisoning following the amputation of his leg some time ago. He was born in Ireland 78 years ago and lived in Canada 70 years.

About fourteen years ago he became an international figure through an episode that occurred at Charlotte, N. Y., on the Fourth of July.

He entered the port with a Union Jack flying over his schooner, Acacia. A customs officer ordered him to haul down the Jack or float the Stars and Stripes alongside it. Captain Simmons refused, and when the U. S. officer and others threatened to board the Acacia and haul down the British flag, Captain Simmons drew his revolver and declared that no one would step aboard his vessel for such a purpose.

The captain is survived by several sons, who conduct a well-known Kingston store.

U. S. IS HUMILIATED BY ITS POLITICIANS

"There is a great feeling of humiliation in the United States on account of the action of the politicians on the peace treaty and the attitude toward Great Britain," said Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, General Supt. of the Methodist Church of Canada on his return from a trip to the American republic.

"The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting in Des Moines, passed a resolution calling on Congress to mind its own business, or words to that effect, and not to interfere in the internal affairs of Great Britain. This was in regard to the Congress action on Ireland. The New York Methodist Conference, I am told, passed a similar resolution."

"I found that there is a great gulf between the average citizen of the United States and the politicians in regard to the attitude of that country toward Britain," says Dr. Chown.

ACTION TAKEN AGAINST U. S. SUGAR REFINERS

Boston, May 26—The Federal Government today has taken action against sugar refiners here for alleged profiteering and hoarding.

The Revere Sugar Refinery and Henry E. Worcester, its vice-president were charged with exacting excessive prices and with holding sugar from the market, and the American Sugar Refining Co., and W. K. Green, as general manager, were charged with selling sugar at excessive prices. The complaints asserted that the companies had made millions of dollars by hoarding and regulating the price.

Sitting or Standing

"Goddess" corsets with their scientific cut and special French boning give absolute comfort.

They yield to any change of position and gently hold up the figure, assuring its greatest beauty, yet causing neither fatigue nor pain.

Many of the best dressed women in Canada are wearing "Goddess" laced in front corsets and share Anita Stewart's opinion: Without undue compression they add to the grace of the figure".

There is a style for every figure.

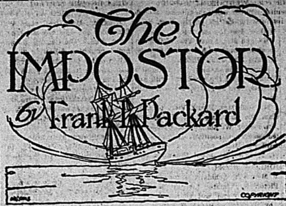
GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM



"I've got to get away, MacKnight," he said earnestly. "There's no use talking about it. What kind of a ship does he say it is?"

MacKnight flung out a question in the native tongue.

"He says it is a big smoke-boat," translated the trader, "which will be by way of saying it's some measly steam coaster that's so small it's no able to accommodate its own cockroaches, d'ye mind! Mon, pay no attention to it. What's anither month or so—and you'll be strong then, and—ah, mon, but I hate to have ye go!"

Wallen, gaunt and thin from his illness, shook his head decisively again, though the other's words had brought a quick responsive smile to his lips.

Six weeks ago a proa from the village here had picked him up at sea and brought him, as it were, to this big-hearted man's door. He owed his life to MacKnight.

"It's no use, MacKnight," he answered. "I've got to go."

"It'll be that black devil in Singapore!" ejaculated the trader, screwing up his wizened face and pulling viciously at his beard. "You'll no play the fool, Wallen. It's not fit you are to go. Listen to me, mon: it's a matter o' twenty miles across the island, as ye know well, and no conveyance, ye mind. And it's no regular trader that's called, for none is due—she'll have put in for water or the like, and will be sailing again at daybreak."

"I can make it by daybreak, MacKnight," Wallen stated quietly.

For a moment MacKnight stared at Wallen, then his hands dropped from Wallen's shoulders.

"Well, go, and be damned to you, then!" he said gruffly, deep down in his throat to hide his emotion—and, turning, stepped abruptly outside.

There were not many preparations to make—very few.

Wallen's worldly possessions were his only through the generosity of the trader. But MacKnight did not stop at that now, for, five minutes later, as Wallen started for the night's tramp across the island, a Malay guide, well loaded with supplies, started with him, while MacKnight cursed with earnest profanity as they wrung each other's hand.

At the edge of the clearing Wallen looked back. On the great bearded figure that leaned against the door frame of the solitary trading station Wallen's eyes lingered.

The man waved his hand and shouted:

"Mon, ye'll no forget MacKnight o' Arru! Ye'll no forget MacKnight, mon!"

And then suddenly a mist dimmed Wallen's eyes. He tried to shout back—and could only wave his own hand in return. And then the trees hid the trader from view.

Forget MacKnight! The man who had nursed him back to life as a mother would nurse her child! Forget that solitary human outpost of civilization—a man with an iron fist, a barbed-wire tongue and a heart as tender as a woman's! No; he would not forget MacKnight!

He forced a smile to his lips. One made strange friendships in these far parts of the world, and made them under strange circumstances. The chances were a thousand to one that he and MacKnight would never meet again—but, for all that, it was a friendship that would last.

Twenty miles across the island before daybreak!

Wallen fell to wondering what sort of a ship and, more pertinent still, what sort of a skipper was on the ship that had put into Pobi. He had refused MacKnight's offer of an advance of money, and he hadn't a penny—but he was satisfied that he would not be refused passage in any case. He could work his way.

A white man who knew his business was worth his weight in gold on a ship any time in these parts. It was true he wasn't any too fit yet; but he was fit enough for that, fit enough—a dull flush came into his face, and his eyes hardened—fit enough to get to Singapore somehow!

He had not forgotten that ghastly afternoon in the reek of the pest ship, nor the Chinaman who had died in his arms whispering of Drink-House Sam of Singapore! Forget! He had thought of nothing else all these weeks, raved of it in his delirium, so MacKnight had told him.

There was one thing dominant in his life now—Drink-House Sam of Singapore, the man who had tried so mysteriously to take his life, to stab at him treacherously, without warning, out of the dark.

Singapore! Singapore! It was never out of his mind now. To get there, to force the truth, the motive, the reason, the story behind all this from the human spider that lurked in his web, and then—his fists clenched fiercely—and then settle with the man himself!

And that was why he must get to Pobi before daybreak, before this steamer sailed.

He walked on steadily, without sense of fatigue, his mind abnormally active. And then, with a little shock of surprise, as the Malay made signs to halt and set about kindling a fire, he noticed for the first time that it had grown almost dark.

And also, to his surprise, he noticed that where he had experienced no fatigue before, he was, as he sat down, suddenly grateful for the rest.

He scowled a little over his dipper of tea that the Malay had prepared—and rubbed his leg muscles vigorously. They twitched nervously as he put his weight upon his legs. That was bad! His lips set grimly. Well, bad or not, they'd have to take him across the island before daybreak!

They started on again.

Half Rose to Accept the Offer, Then Shook His Head.

An hour went by, and he was obliged to rest—and after another start and many more after that, to rest again and again with alarming frequency. And, worse still, his progress when he was walking kept growing less and less.

Women Doctors in Canada

WITHIN a few years the practicing woman doctor should be known in every part of the world. Nearly 3,000 women students are taking up the profession of medicine in Britain.

Women doctors excelled themselves during the war in hospital work and in "carrying on" while male doctors were required on the various battle fronts. Dr. Elsie Inglis and the noble band of women doctors associated with her in the Scottish Women's Hospitals in Serbia and other allied countries won the warmest praise from every quarter. Their courage and fortitude during the severe hardships of the Serbian retreat are among the most thrilling and impressive pages in the history of the great war. There is no doubt that Dr. Inglis sacrificed her life in the allied cause. Her memory will ever be fragrant among university women.

It was the courageous persistence of Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell in the United States and of Dr. Sophia Jex-Blake in Scotland that opened the doors of medical schools to women. To-day women are welcomed as heartily as the male students of surgery and medicine in the schools of this continent and of Britain. The spade work of the pioneers in the movement has been amply justified.

Approximately there are 250 women doctors in the Dominion. The Queen City has a large share of these. They are to be found in every province, and many of them have large practices. A few have gained distinction in their profession. Dr. Maude Abbott, for instance, is one of the chief authorities in the medical world on congenital cardiac disease, and is the author of the article on this subject in Osler's "Modern Medicine." Dr. Abbott is curator of the Museum at McGill University Medical Faculty, and assistant editor of the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association. This notable physician was one of the first to point out the great utility of the museum as a means of teaching medical students.

Dr. Edna M. Guest, who recently returned from overseas, was appointed by the British War Office to the staff of a war hospital in England, and was afterwards on the staff of the Scottish Women's Hospital in Corsica. Dr. Guest was subsequently summoned to Royaumont Hospital in 1918, and remained on the surgical staff there until shortly after Armistice Day. Her war record is fine.

Other Canadian physicians who held overseas appointments were Dr. Margaret Parkes, of St. John, N.B., and Dr. Evelyn Windsor, Calgary.

So far as Canada is concerned, there is no hesitancy on the part of women to enter medicine as a career. There are no fewer than 78 women students in all the years of the medical course in Toronto. One is a trained nurse, one was a V.A.D. overseas, one a dentist, and a fourth holds a degree in pharmacy. The course occupies six years.

Toronto, too, has the distinction of possessing a Women's College Hospital which is entirely staffed by medical women and is a great credit to them.

Whatever medical women may have to face across the line in the nature of jealousy by male physicians there is no handicap of this character for medical women in Canada. The men and women doctors work harmoniously together. They are animated by a true spirit of comradeship in the fight to overcome disease and relieve suffering. The ability of the woman doctor is acknowledged by none more readily or more generously than her male colleague.

The supply of women doctors is not equal to the demand. They are wanted for general practice, for salaried officers in state institutions and for resident physicians in hospitals. The profession of medicine insists on a long and arduous training. It involves from six to seven years' hard work before the real education of practice begins—and with little or no income during that period.

At the outset the general practitioner is confronted with the expense of an office equipment and it is no easy task to build up a practice. Even when success has been attained in this respect, if the doctor would keep abreast of modern methods she takes a post-graduate course every two or three years.

Medicine is one of the most arduous professions; but it has compensations for those who are wedded to their work. And women in a marked degree have proved their serving worth in the hospital, state institution and the home.

Want Fish First.

The high cost of living forms a vehement argument by the British Columbia Indians who oppose the proposed amendment to the Indian Act.

"Our Heavenly Father gave us food long before the white man came by placing salmon in our rivers. Now the white man, millionaires who can afford better food and want to make a little more money come and take our food away from us," said George Matheson, of Sardis, B. C. Indians have been arrested for taking their winter's food supply from the rivers running through their own reserve.

Matheson, along with other braves, declares that the Indians would never be at peace until their land, fishing and hunting rights were fully restored to them. Other matters such as education and enfranchisement could wait.

A snail, crawling without a pause, would occupy fourteen days and five hours to travel a mile.

SEIZED WIRELESS OUTFITS

A Dominion Government Inspector seized three wireless apparatus used by private individuals in Kingston. BUSH FIRES

For the last couple of weeks there have been serious forest fires in the back woods north of Bobcaygeon running over the timber limits f the Macdonald estate and of The John Carew Lumber Co. of Lindsay, and doing considerable damage. So far the fires have now been checked, but not extinguished. Several skidways of logs which came within the path of the fires were destroyed. Mr. John Carew stated that the Company lost considerable standing timber last week, but the fires were pretty well out by this time. The Company has some 45 square miles of timber in Cavendish and Harvey Townships which suffered slightly.

FOREST FIRES

Thus early in the year a bush fire has been taking its toll of woodland and some other property in Renfrew county. It began a number of days ago in the swamp back of the church in Black Donald and has covered a considerable section of the country despite hard fighting on the part of a gang of men. At times the buildings at the mines were in danger, and for a few days operations at the mines were closed down in order that the miners might join the firefighters. They have fought heroically under the direction of Mark Mead. A barn in the path of the flames was consumed; there was also lost some cordwood belonging to the Black Donald Graphite Co. The residence and out-buildings of Edward Dodge had a narrow escape For a while the course of the fire led along the highway leading out of the Black Donald to Calabogie.

Shannon was appointed to the position.—Kingston Standard.

SHADOWY RICHES

Members of the Quinn family scattered throught Leeds County who have filed claims for an estate of nineteen million dollars alleged to have been left by a British soldier named Thomas Quinn, who left, at death, large holdings in India, which later were found to possess mineral wealth are disturbed because of the statement that the story originated in the mind of an Oswego, N.Y., practical joker and returned soldier. Lawyers who have investigated have been unable to locate information regarding the supposed estate.

WARDEN SAVES FISH

Men who will take the initiative are the kind of men the Government require to hold such positions as game and fishery wardens and inspectors. Such a man is Mr. J. C. O'Leary, game warden, who resides at King's Wharf, Lindsay. He has the interest of game at heart, as well as the interest of the sportsman, and there is no person more keen on the proper observation of the Act and law than the same gentleman. A year ago Game Warden O'Leary noticed hundreds of dead fish along the shores of Pigeon Lake after the ice went out and came to the conclusion that they were smothered to death. To prevent a like misfortune this year, he chopped several holes in the ice along the bog where the fish had been suffocated the past year and that this was a good thing to do was demonstrated by the fact that not a dead fish was to be found when the ice went out this season around the vicinity where he had chopped breathing holes through the ice. The fish thrived through the winter. It would be a good thing if other game wardens followed Mr. O'Leary's example.—Lindsay Warder.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES AT HOME.

Under the auspices of Belleville Lodge No. 83, United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way, and Railway Shop Laborers, in connection with the G.T.R. system here, a social evening was held last evening in the Oddfellows' Temple, and it proved to be a profitable and enjoyable affair. A large number of railway employees were present, also a number of ladies. Mr. H. W. Lindstrom, President of the Lodge, occupied the chair, and in a few well chosen remarks extended a hearty welcome to all present, and also referred to the fact that the local lodge was in a flourishing condition. General Chairman Cummings, whose home is in the eastern part of the province, spoke generally of the Brotherhood, its aims and objects, and the good it was accomplishing. He denounced Bolshevism in no uncertain manner. While there was no unrest among the members of the Brotherhood, there was, nevertheless, a desire for increased pay owing to the high cost of living. Vice-President Cummings, of this city, in his remarks said it was pleasing to note the harmony that existed between the members of the Brotherhood. Bro. McCullough, of Port Hope, representing the C.P.R., gave a brief address, as did also Bro. J. Johnson, of Brockville. The addresses were interspersed with vocal and instrumental selections, also readings. The character songs given by Mr. W. Edwards were an especial feature of the program. At the close refreshments were served. Before the company broke up a vote of thanks moved by Mr. J. Rainbird and seconded by Mr. W. Mossman, was unanimously tendered to the speakers and those who had taken part in the program.

A peculiar accident happened a few days ago to the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, 275 Albert Street. The little lad was playing between the houses and was heard to scream. It was found that his face had been badly cut. No one saw the accident and the only light thrown upon the cause was the little fellow's reiteration of the word "horse." A delivery horse was standing nearby and it is thought the little lad may have been kicked. Several stitches were necessary to close the wound but the child is recovering nicely.

Called by Death

JAMES QUIGLEY

James Quigley died Sunday morning at his home in Kingston, after a month's illness. The deceased was born at Jones' Falls but lived in Kingston the greater part of his life. He was an engineer for Rathburn company, of Deseronto, for thirty-five years and assistant engineer at the Royal Military College for over ten years.

SISTER MARY STELLA

On Friday, the 21st inst., the Angel of Death visited the House of Providence, Kingston, calling to her reward a devoted, promising young religious in the person of Sister Mary Stella. The deceased sister was stricken with influenza in January last while teaching in the Separate School of Arnprior. She came to the Mother House, Kingston, for a rest and to receive treatment, on February 17th. For some time hope was entertained that she would regain her former robust health and be able to resume her duties, but the dampness of the past season was not in her favor. When no longer able to go out in the open air she began to decline, and for the last few weeks it became apparent that her earthly pilgrimage was about to close. She passed away peacefully at 8 a.m. surrounded by the sorrowing members of her community. Sister M. Stella was the daughter of the late Daniel Kennedy, Enterprise. In March 1908 she entered the Community of the Sisters of Providence. After her profession in the Order she attended the Normal School at Ottawa, obtaining a second class certificate in April 1915. From that time until her illness she was employed in teaching, having successfully taught in the separate schools of Glen Nevis, Trenton, Belleville, Perth and lastly at Arnprior. Being of a sweet disposition, she was beloved by her pupils, as well as by all with whom she came in contact. Besides her mother, she is survived by one brother, and three sisters; Vincent and Loretta at home, Birdie a professional nurse in New York and Mrs. John Hinch, Enterprise.

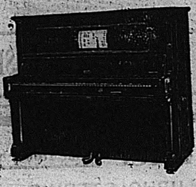
THE CHILDREN'S HAPPINESS

Can be Assured by Providing Plenty of Music in the Home

And incidentally their education will be more quickly and easily acquired, for, according to authorities on child education, music, instead of interfering with school work, is actually of a great help as a spur to all the other mental faculties of the child.



To cultivate the love of good music in your children nothing will do so much as a good Player-Piano. Children are natural imitators and what they hear on the Player-Piano they like to learn to play. So with a Player-Piano in the home you will not only satisfy their craving for music but also furnish the incentive to learn. Before deciding what particular make of instrument to buy bring the children along to see and hear the

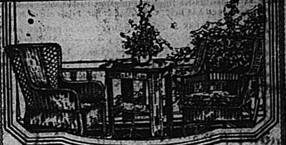
ARE YOU PREPARED?



Did you notice that the Weather Clerk foretells a scorchingly hot summer this year? And are you ready for this? Think when you have finished your day's work and the heat of the day is almost more than one can bear, wouldn't a rest in a cool wicker chair, your feet resting on lovely cool grass mats in a corner of the verandah, sheltered from that burning sun, with a pretty and efficient sun blind—isn't the prospect alluring? Imagine what a pleasure it would be to the men folk to come home from a close, stuffy office to a place such as this where they could really rest and enjoy the most beautiful part of the day. You know he would appreciate this, as you would yourself; therefore, if you cannot give it to him, or to yourself, it means that you are not prepared. After you have read this advertisement think just when and where you could make such a place. Plan everything and make a list of all the things that you will want, and then bring it along to us. We'll help you in every way possible. Gay Fires Investigated By Provincial Fire Warden

SEVERAL FIRES AT GAY DAIRY SUBJECT OF PROBE BY PROVINCIAL OFFICER—PREVIOUS ATTEMPT AT INCENDIARISM WHICH FAILED DESCRIBED BY WITNESSES—BANK INDEBTEDNESS, INSURANCE AND LOSSES INQUIRED INTO.

Before Provincial Fire Marshal Heaton, of Toronto, the investigation into a fire which on April 29th destroyed a dairy building, the property of Mr. George A. B. Gay, of Sidney township, just west of the city limits, was concluded last night after several witnesses had been examined. It will be remembered that on January 28th of this year, Mr. Gay's barn was burned and upwards of forty head of cattle and some horses were cremated and three months later his dairy building was destroyed. In the evidence submitted it was shown that an attempt to destroy the latter building by fire was made six days previous to the fire which did destroy it. At the investigation Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, directed the examination of witnesses for the Fire Marshal; Mr. Chas. A. Payne, for Mr. Gay and Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., for H. Detlor, who claims he was accused of causing the fire.

Attempted Incendiarism

Mr. Gay was the first witness examined and was in the witness box for a considerable time. In referring to the fire which destroyed the dairy building, he stated that on April 23rd an attempt was made to burn the building by lighting a bundle of papers near boiler. In answer to an enquiry from the County Attorney, Mr. Gay said he did not notify the County Constabulary or the insurance companies of the attempt. He made enquiries from his neighbors about the matter. An attempt was made to burn the creamery building some time before it was finally destroyed by fire. Paper was placed near the smoke stack and the paper was partially burned and a hole was burned in the flooring. It was evidently the work of some one who desired the destruction of the building.

Mr. Heaton to Mr. Gay—That little fire placed you in a most unfavorable light and you let the matter rest with absolute indifference.

Mr. Gay—The fire referred to was put out by five pails of water. The dairy was about 400 feet from the house. The next fire occurred on the 28th of April. He did not think he was used just right as to the insurance after the first fire. $10,725 was the amount the loss was adjusted at. He thought he should have had the full face of the policy which was $10,875. Some of the money he received was invested in this business. This fire was in January of this year. The companies did not cancel his policies. He took advice in regard to this matter from the firm of Porter, Butler and Payne. The insurance only covered about one-half of his assets. He valued the cattle burned in January at $150 each and horses at $100 each.

A detailed statement prepared by Mr. Gay as to what was destroyed in the dairy building was minutely gone into, and some discrepencies were discovered.

Continuing Mr. Gay said the fire on April 28th at the dairy occurred at about 10.30 at night. Witness was in the dairy at about 8.30 that evening. There had been a fire under the boiler that day, having been lit in the afternoon. When he left the dairy building that evening everything appeared to be all right. No person was in the dairy building that evening with witness after tea. He had a good watch dog but could not say he gave any alarm that evening. The building was not locked up. All members of the household retired early that evening. The first he knew of the fire was when he awoke and saw the flames. He partially dressed and then went out to loosen some horses which were in an adjacent building. The fire appeared to have originated in the upper part of the building. Some empty milk cans were thrown out of the burning building. Mr. Sinfield and his son arrived upon the scene and assisted witness to get out some things.

Bank Dealings

Mr. MacFadyen, Manager of the Merchants Bank, at Belleville, testified that Mr. George Gay was a customer of the bank. The bank obligated Mr. Gay at times. A statement presented by the witness showed the personal and real assets of Mr. Gay. The statement showed the property was worth $10,000. It showed an incumberance of $2,700 on January 1919. The horses and cattle showed an asset of $8000 for cattle and $900 for horses. Farm implements $2,500. There was a mortgage which covered the $23,700 encumberances. Just before the first fire Mr. Gay's indebtedness to the bank was $8,226. Witness could not say that Mr. Gay asked for large advances for the purpose of procuring stock. The indebtedness to the bank after the fire was reduced to $1,630. Mr. Gay was not being forced by the bank to reduce his indebtedness, but was asked to make payments on same. Mr. Gay made a proposition to sell half interest in his business in order to meet his obligations. No statement had been made to the bank since the fire. There was a stock list in existence before the fire which took in every dollar and cent of assets on Mr. Gay's place. It showed something like an asset of $29,000. Witness took a land mortgage to cover the balance of Gay's indebtedness to the bank. This mortgage is not due.

Cross examined by Mr. Payne.—Advances were made to Mr. Gay to buy stock and make improvements to his premises. Mr. Gay did not buy stock and made improvements on his farm buildings. No procedure in the way of seizure had been made against Mr. Gay to induce him to pay the bank.

Mrs. Murphy's Evidence

Mrs. William C. Murphy testified that she knew Mrs. Detlor. Witness knew Mr. Gay, but did not know where his premises were. She had a conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Detlor and it was to the effect that Mr. Gay wanted to sell out his business. Mr. Detlor was employed at one time with Mr. Gay, some time last year. After the fire at Mr. Gay's place she had a conversation with him in reference to the procuring of milk. On the day before the fire occurred Mr. Detlor was at witnesses' house with Mrs. Detlor and he went to Oshawa. On the Saturday after the fire witness heard Mr. Detlor say that he had told James Robinson theer was liable to be trouble. She heard Mr. Detlor say to Mr. Gay that he had burned his building and cattle and Mr. Gay struck him This was on William street.

To Mr. Payne—Mr. Detlor worked for Mr. Gay some time before the fire, and there was some talk as to a partnership between Gay and Detlor. Witness did not take the remark of Detlor seriously as to Mr. Gay burning his building.

John Wesley Graham testified he lived at Hasting's village. For some time he worked for Mr. Gay, in November 1919 until after the fire which destroyed the barn and cattle. Never saw an inventory made by Mr. Gay Witness was a butter and cheese maker. Some 75 or 80 pounds of cheese was made daily. As to what butter was made he did not know. At one time in January there was some 500 or 600 pounds of cheese spoiled. Witness bought some at 5 cents a pound. Could not say whether Mr. Elliott secured any of the cheese. Witness knew a man named Detlor who worked for Mr. Gay. Witness heard Detlor speak of going into partnership with Mr. Gay and understood he (Detlor) had made an inventory of chatels. Witness left Mr. Gay, the Saturday after the barn was burned.

What Detlor Said

Wm. Orr testified that Mr. Harold Detlor had told him (witness) that he made $5,000 out of the fire at Gays. Witness asked Detlor if he was a partner and he said yes. Detlor was talking of buying the place Orr was in. This was about three or four weeks ago, after the first fire.

Value of Machinery

Howard J Clarke testified he was proprietor of the Belleville dairy. Witness knew Mr. George Gay and about two weeks ago he bought out Mr. Gay's milk route. He had been in Mr. Gays dairy premises and considered the machinery, etc., in the building worth about $1,500. He saw some cheese in boxes. Witness never heard anything spoken of in regard to the fire.

Canada's Claim Against Germany For Reparation

BILL RENDERED OF $1,871,000,000 FOR COST OF WAR AND INDIVIDUAL CLAIMS — HALIFAX LOSSES THIRTY MILLION—CANADA WILL SHARE INDEMNITY TO BE PAID BRITISH EMPIRE.

OTTAWA, May 28—Canada's claim against Germany for reparation for losses sustained by the country and by individual citizens during the war has been forwarded to England for presentation at a conference of representatives of all parts of the British Empire soon to be held in London, and, subsequently, at an Inter-Allied Conference at Spa. The bill rendered by the Dominion is for a total of $1,871,000,000. The total is made up of the following items:

Cost of war and demobilization.	$1,715,000,000
Separation allowances ..	85,500,000
Halifax losses.	30,000,000
Army of occupation	8,000,000
Illegal warfare..	31,500,000

The separation allowances alluded to are those paid to families and dependents of persons who served in the military and naval forces during the war. By Halifax losses is evidently meant the damage occasioned in that city by the explosion of the munition ship Mont Blanc, in 1917. The sum claimed under the head of army of occupation is the cost of maintaining Canadian troops on the Rhine frontier for a period and after the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, 1918. The last item is a claim for compensation for damages sustained by Canadians as a result of the resort by Germany to illegal methods of warfare. Included in this item, for instance, would likely be a sum to cover losses of Canadian merchant and fishing vessels sunk by German U-boats during the period of unrestricted submarine warfare.

How Indemnity Will be Shared

It is intimated that Canada and other British dominions will share the indemnity received by the British Empire in the proportion which their expenditures bear to the total expenditures of the Empire. In correspondence which has taken place between Sir George Perley and the Government here, the former has asked for additional information with respect to the items covered by the expression cost of the war and demobilization. The question raised is whether military expenditures other than the expenses in connection with prisoners of war, pensions and separation allowances are claimable under the reparation clauses of the treaty of Versailles.

Transport Workers Rulers Of Ireland

LONDON, May 28.—"The real rulers of Ireland are not the Sinn Feiners but the transport workers, whose organization holds forth at Liberty Hall," telegraphs the Dublin correspondent of the Daily Express.

"There would have been no rising in 1916 but for them. McNeill, chief of the Easter rebels, who was later executed and De Valera were unwilling Larkin and Connolly insisted that the hour had struck.

"Liberty Hall is infinitely more formidable today than it was then, the Bolshevist element has power and makes Bolshevism more than a swaggering threat. It will not only go all the way with the Sinn Fein, but furthermore it wants a Republic along the I.W.W. lines.

"Agents throughout Ireland have the Lenine doctrines on the tip of their tongues. Their leaders, Thomas Foran and Thomas Johnson, both more dangerous than Connolly and Larkin are in control of the farm laborers, as well as the transport workers. The munitions trouble is the work of Foran and Johnson, not of the Sinn Fein Politicians."

RURAL SCHOOL BOARD COMPOSED OF WOMEN

Huntsville, May 28—Probably the only instance in Ontario where a rural School Board is composed entirely of women is at School Section No. 7 in Chaffey township, where a ratepayers' meeting was recently held to fill two vacancies caused by removals.

At the meeting, the only remaining man trustee resigned, and the ratepayers elected three women to constitute the board. Their names are: Mrs. Thomas Martin, Chairman; Mrs. D. Cousins and Mrs. Wesley McQuain. The Secretaryship is retained by Mr. Jefferson Clarke.

The new board has already held a meeting.

The resolution has already passed the Senate. Its passage will be practically automatic. The amendments inserted by the House were of minor importance. The report follows in full:

NO NEW MILLS BUILT

"Your committee has made an exhaustive investigation of the shortage of pulpwood in the United States and finds it is largely due to those embargoes which were laid upwards of ten years ago, and that, with the exception of one or two mills on the Pacific coast, there has not been a paper mill constructed in the United States since those embargoes were laid, and no additions built to present mills. The spruce, pine and hemlock, which alone can be used for the making of print paper, have been rapidly reduced ni quantity and quality until there is none available for the Eastern mills, except in small portions of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Minnesota and Michigan. In these States the supply is rapidly diminishing and becoming more inaccessible.

MAY HAVE TO SHUT DOWN

"The reports of our Consuls together with the newspaper clippings printed in the hearings, will show conclusively that it has been the policy of the Dominion of Canada, for upward of ten years, to force American paper makers to move into Canada in order to secure an adequate supply of pulpwood. This a number of them have already done.

"The embargoes are limited to the Crown lands, but the testimony shows that quite recently during the last year strong efforts have been made to prohibit American manufacturers from buying pulpwood from the owners of land in fee. The testimony also conclusively shows that we must have pulpwood from the Crown lands of these three Dominion Provinces (Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick), otherwise our paper mills will eventually be compelled to close down or move into the Dominion of Canada. Canada must have coal, sulphur, kaolin and dyes from the United States or suffer a similar misfortune.

WOULD MAKE REPRISALS

"It is true that the Dominion of Canada or the Provinces have a legal right to lay these embargoes, but on the other hand, we have the same legal right to lay embargoes on the products of the United States; and if we adopt the same policy as Canada the paper mills in both countries would have to cease operation.

"Your committee feels confident that the appointment of the committee to confer with the Dominion and Provincial Governments, as provided in the resolution on this matter which is of much grave importance to the people of the United States would bring about an amicable adjustment of the matters in dispute."

United States' Budget For Navy Is $436,000,000

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Next year's naval budget was fixed at about $436,000,000, under a complete agreement on the naval appropriation bill reached by Senate and House conferees. The original House bill carried $425,000,000 and the Senate about $467,000,000.

In lieu of the Senate appropriation of $1,[illegible]00,000 to begin work on the new Pacific coast base in San Francisco Bay, the conferees authorized a Congressional commission of five Senators and Representatives to investigate available sites on San Francisco Bay and report to Congress not later than December 31.

The conferees agreed on twenty million dollars for navy aviation, a compromise between the $15,800,000 voted by the House and $25,000,000 by the Senate.

Shot And Killed Circus Treasurer

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

DUNNVILLE, May 28—An inquest will be opened on Monday next, on the remains of L. D. Thillman, of Dayton, Ohio, assistant manager of Howe's circus, who was shot three times yesterday by "Humburger" Joe Porter, alias Appert, a disgruntled concessionaire with whom he was having a dispute over money matters. Porter who was shot and dangerously wounded when he drew his revolver on the approach of town constable Winslow and circus hands to arrest him is under close guard in the hospital, where it is stated this morning that he will probably recover.

Friction Reported On Commerce Board

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, May 28—The report of the Board of Commerce covering its activities during the past year will be submitted to the Government on Monday, May 31. This is the last day under the requirements of the law on which a report can be made. Asked today if there was any truth in the report published in an Ottawa paper that there was disagreement between two commissioners of the Board over the tenor of its report to the government, W. F. O'Connor refused to make any statement. The probability is that the decision of the Supreme Court defining the jurisdiction of the Board of Commerce as a profit-finding tribunal also will come down on Monday morning.

Great Area Of Timber Burned

Some 200,000 Acres of Crown Lands in New Brunswick Destroyed.

FREDERICTON, N.B., May 28.—Approximately 200,000 feet of standing timber on Crown Lands near Rogersville, Northumberland county, N.B., have been burned.

With no rain and none in sight, the forest fire situation throughout the province shows no improvement, and is in fact getting worse every day. Some relief may be obtained from the cancellation of all permits for burning brush and slash, which order was signed yesterday afternoon by Hon. E. A. Smith, Minister of Lands and Mines, upon recommendation of Provincial Forester G. H. Prince, but only rain can bring about much of an improvement, it is believed.

A fire which originated on the Indian reservation at Perth, Victoria County, is still burning, and orders have been received by the Indian agent from the Federal Government to have it fought energetically. The fire has spread and is on private lands. Villages in the southwestern part of Victoria County are threatened with destruction, and a desperate fight is being made to save Tilley settlement. Frank Gregg, of Rowena, is in charge of the fire-fighting crews, and the forest service branch is cooperating in the fight.

Seven hundred and sixty-three cars of hay from Ontario and Quebec have passed through Lethbridge under the Alberta government since November 11, 1919.

Two Government Supporters Cross Over To Opposition

UNIONIST MEMBERS FOR BATTLEFORD AND LETHBRIDGE VOICE THEIR DISAGREEMENT WITH THE BUDGET PROPOSALS AND ANNOUNCE THEY WILL VOTE FOR FIELDING AMENDMENT.

OTTAWA, May 27—Two defections from the ranks of the Government's supporters in the Commons were announced during the debate upon Sir Henry Drayton's budget proposals. Both H. O. Wright, of Battleford, a former Conservative, and W. A. Buchanan, of Lethbridge, a Liberal-Unionist, announced their intention of voting for the Fielding amendment, vaguely advocating substantial reductions in Customs duties on necessaries of life and implements of production. Both found reason to approve the actual taxation proposals of the Finance Minister, and both based their action upon the opinion that the Government had embraced a policy of protection and could not be expected to enact a low tariff intended to protect industries in the country. Neither dispayed any great enthusiasm for the Fielding amendment. Mr. Wright said that the former Finance Minister, Sir Thomas White, had promised a revision of the tariff. His pledge for various reasons had not been implemented, however. Mr. Wright now required something more than promises. He was unable to see how a low tariff policy could be expected from the present Government, and he was an advocate of the platform of the Dominion Council of Agriculture. He felt he had carried out his pledge of support to the Government for the period of the war and demobilization. Therefore, he proposed to vote for the amendment. "Not," he added, "because I think there is anything material in the amendment, but because I understand the rules of the House preclude the moving of any other."

Tariff for Revenue Only

Mr. Buchanan said he had stood for a tariff for revenue only. He had concluded that in any revision of the tariff by the present Government the protective principle would be retained. He felt that he now stood at the parting of the ways insofar as the tariff issue was concerned, and that he should go on record as in favor of a lower tariff. Therefore, he, too, proposed to vote for the amendment.

Many More Speakers

Any expectation that the division on the Fielding amendment and the motion to go into committee of ways and means would be reached tomorrow has now been abandoned. A score more of Unionist members have intimated an intention to speak, and the Opposition may be expected to put up a considerable number of speakers.

Some Government members might not insist upon speaking if there was a possibility of an early division. It is practically certain, however, that a vote will not be reached until the middle or end of next week.

Dr. J. H. Edwards contributed a vigorous defence of the Government's policy to today's debate. He pointed out that the present government had done much more than its predecessor in the reduction on farm implements. He objected to the adoption of a policy which would deprive the farmers of the country of protection and subject them to competition by farmers in other countries whenever prices of foodstuffs in Canada rose above a certain level.

F. F. Pardee, of West Lambton; Fernand Rinfret, of St. James Division, Montreal; Roch Lanctot, of Laprarie, Napierville, and other members also spoke. Mr. Rinfret was complimented even by opponents upon the quality of his first extended effort since his election to the House. his?dUPofCtjtcff

Clauses Dropped In Workmens Act

Retroactive Features to be Left Over For Next Session

TORONTO, May 28—The Ontario Government's amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act went through committee in the Legislature late last night, after a warm two-hour discussion on certain features that did not meet with the approval of Liberal and Conservative opposition members. The bill got through, however, only by the making of concessions to the Opposition; and while they were received with little welcome by Hon. Walter Rollo and his Labor colleagues, they bowed to the inevitable when Premier Drury suggested concessions, and promised that the dropped clauses would be brought up early next session.

The clauses dropped include that providing for the payment of the increased pensions to all pensions accruing after the change goes into effect. In other words, it was proposed that where a pension or disability payment has already been fixed it would be increased to the scale to be set for pensions hereafter provided. The opposition to this retroactive feature was pronounced and the Government finally withdrew it, with, however, a provision that widows' pensions heretofore fixed will be increased to the level of those for the future.

Clauses Were Dropped

A fight developed over the clause providing means of collecting the increased sums necessary for these 'retroactive' payments, but it was passed after the part providing for a levy on Schedule 2 employers to cover cases where the employer individually liable does not pay the amount of the award, was struck out on the motion of Charles McCrae, of Sudbury. Another clause, providing for the capitalizing of pensions payable by employers in Schedule 2 (which covers large corporations, railways, etc., which pay compensation separately), in order to guard against a company going out of existence and leaving pensioners unprotected, and providing for a reserve fund to be amalgamated with the fund derived from Schedule 1 payments, was dropped.

Toronto, May 28—On important committee composed of representatives of all parties to investigate the Ontario Temperance Act and its administration and return its findings to the House in the form of drafted amendments at next session was named by Premier Drury in the Legislature this morning. The possibilities of proportional representation will also be investigated by another committee named. At the opening of the session Col. W. H. Price, Parkdale, requested the Premier's permission to introduce an amendment to the Beck Act of 1909 to make it impossible for any municipal council to pass bylaws permitting any alterations or modification of a franchise without consent of the Electors. Consent was given and the bill given first reading.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE" BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.
IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR?
FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

Nazimova's "Brat" Quaint And Lovable

Strong Week End Program at Movie Theatres

"The Brat" a Nazimova production and the successor to "The Red Lantern," was shown last evenidg at Griffin's to a large audience which gave every manifestation of delight and approval of the Russian artist's work. Interest was added to the star's adroit performance by the fact that she herself in collaboration with Charles Bryant adapted Maude Fulton's successful stage play to the screen.

"The Brat," is the first of Nazimova's screen or stage impersonations that present her as an American girl. Her great fame hitherto has been derived from portrayals of Latin and other European and Asiatic types; but as a real American girl, the product of a crowded city, she revealed anew her extraordinary ability as a feminine virtuoso of the emotions.

The story relates the experiences of "the brat," a nameless girl who loses her job in the chorus and who, cast forth into a pitiless world, is first insulted by a masher and then haled to the night court on a trumped-up charge. There an author in search of "local color," and especially for a heroine for his forthcoming novel, rescues her and takes her to his aristocratic home. Their friendship ripens into love and "the brat" shows pretty soon that beneath her rough and slangy exterior, she is a woman with tenderness and warm sympathy. She saves the author's ne'-er-do-well brother from the consequences of his follies and in the end brings the novelist to a realization that he loves her and cannot live without her. Nazimova's acting is superb, and her wonderful characterization is heightened by the generally humorous quality of the sub titles, which convey "the brat's" odd collection of slang phrases and whimsical philosophy. Mr. Bryant, as the star's leading man in the role of MacMillan Forrester, the absent-minded but likeable author, is a lavish scale.

"Between the Acts," a funny 2-act Larry Semon comedy, the 3rd chapter of the "Prince of Wales' Tour Through Canada," this week showing his Western tour and a very interesting Pictorial Life, showing life in all its phases, preceded the feature offering and was well received by the large audience present.

Gay Fires Investigated

Hay Burned

Walter Tucker testified that he was employed at Mr. Gay's for some time previous to the first fire. There was some eight or ten tons of hay there just previous to the fire. The day of the fire there was about five tons of hay on the premises. He was feeding 39 head of cattle and 9 horses were in the barn at the time of the fire as far as he knew. The day before the barn fire he placed an number of empty grain bags in other bags.

Everett Rollins testified he lived in Belleville and was for some time employed at Mr. Gay's as a milk deliverer. He was working there when the barn was destroyed by fire. In his opinion there were possibly four or five tons of hay in the barn the day before the fire also some 8 or 10 bags of cracked feed. There were two silos and both contained a considerable quantity of ensilage. Witness saw Gay and Detlor together on William St., after the fire and some words ensued between them with the result that Gay struck Detlor. The latter told Gay he had burned the barn and cattle. After the fire witness had a talk with Gay and what was in the newspapers and he said "he had to put something in the papers."

To Mr. Payne—Detlor used some insulting language to Mr. Gay and the latter hit him. Detlor did talk about having an interest in the farm.

Harold Detlor

Harold Detlor testified he lived outside of the city boarding at Mr. Robinson's. Witness worked for some time for Mr. Gay commening his duties on the 3rd of September last. His wages were to be $18 per week and work from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. He worked for Mr. Gay until a week before the barn was burned. Witness and Mr. Gay talked about going into partnership in business. Witness did not see any books all being done by word of mouth. Mr. Gay at first asked witness for $1000 as a loan as he needed it to improve his business. Mr. Gay did not tell witness that he was at all indebted to any person. Mr. Gay said that $14,000 would be a fair price for half the business. Witness saw a detailed inventory of everything on the farm. The cattle were put down at $3,900 and seven horses at $700. He took a copy of the inventory and later he gave it to detective Boyd. The amount ran up to over $20,000. Mr. Gay asked witness where he was going to get the money and he said at Picton. Witness made a visit to Mr. Gay's banker and ascertained what position Gay was in in reference to the bank. From Mr. Gay he learned that the insurance policies were for a considerable sum. At one time Gay asked witness for a loan of $3,000, this was after all negotiations for partnership had ceased. Gay said he had to have some money right away or Mr. MacFadyen of the Merchants Bank would do something. At one time Mr. Gay stated that the business would turn over $40,000 a year. Witness related the circumstances of a conversation with Mr. Murphy and he stated that the thing would go up. This was in reference to the business and not to the fire. Witness admitted that Gay struck him in the face and that bad language had been used by both parties. In reference to the feed in the barn previous to the fire witness said there was possibly two or three tons of hay also bran and shorts Gay said he owned everything on the place and he did not say anything about there being anything against the place or chattels.

To Mr. Payne—Witness did not have any means, but intended to get the $1,000 for Mr. Gay as he requested it. He had told persons that he intended to go into partnership with Mr. Gay. Witness had reasonable grounds to believe that he would enter into partnership with Mr. Gay. He had never been on Mr. Gay's place since he left. Witness admitted that he at one time told Mr. Gay that he had burned the barn. This was in a heated argument. He spoke before he thought. There was no truth about that statement. Witness said he had heard that Mr. Gay had stated that witness was responsible for the fire. Witness denied that he told Mr. Orr that he got $5,000 as a result of the fire.

Mr. Rollins being recalled said he did not know anything about Mr. Gay's financial position. This completed the case.

"JOE" OF THE SPARKS CIRCUS LOOKS AFTER BABIES WHILE MOTHER IS ACTING.

It is a well known fact that the ordinary house cat has been known to adopt an entire family of puppies and on rare occasions a mother dog has reared beasts of the jungle variety, but never in the annals of zoology has a member of the monkey family been known to "mother" a family of puppies until Fifi, one of the star actresses in Minnie Thompson's troupe of statue canines with the Sparks Circus recently gave birth to four healthy English setter puppies.

As it happens, Fifi enacts very important roles in the canine dramas and statue numbers enacted under the "big top" and during the performances cannot devote much of her time to the babies; therefore it fell to Miss Thompson to provide an efficient nurse during Fifi's thespian duties. Ever since the birth of the youngsters, Joe, a large good-natured baboon of the dog-face variety, who occupies an adjoining cage in the menagerie, seemed to show such an untiring interest in the babies that finally Miss Thompson carefully approached his cage with one of the fuzzy mites, when to her surprise he held out both arms and upon receiving it immediately began to "coo" in true monkey language and fondle it as only a mother's instinct knows—in fact he proved to be such an adept in the role of nurse that the babies quickly adopted him and during Fifi's absence in the ring it is one of the daily sights of the Sparks Menagerie to see this simian nurse fondling his little charges. Joe is a natural born comedian and his cage will undoubtedly be the centre for all eyes when the circus comes to Belleville to exhibit on the Dufferin Avenue grounds Wednesday, June 2nd.

Get-Together Outing For Belleville Business Men

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL SPONSOR MOTOR TRIP TO DELORO, DINNER AND DISCUSSION—GETTING BUSY ON BAY BRIDGE QUESTION—HOUSING COMMISSION RECOMMENDED.

Something new in the way of a summer meeting and outing is planned by the Chamber of Commerce for Wednesday, June 16th. The Directors, at their meeting yesterday decided to introduce this new note in the summer programme by having a "Get-Together" outing which will have a two-fold purpose. In the first place, it will enable the members of the Chamber to get better acquainted with each other and to discuss in an informal way the work of the organization; and in the second place, it will provide an opportunity of getting better acquainted with some of the near-by sections of the country that many of the members have never visited. The plan is to leave by auto from headquarters in the morning and tour by easy stages the sections between this city and Deloro. Stops will be made at points of interest, and upon arriving at the destination, a fine dinner will be served. There will then be a programme of a varied character and a speaker of prominence will be with the party to present a subject of general interest to the members. The return trip will be made over an equally attractive route, although this will be optional with the different cars because some of the parties may want to tour through different sections. In any event it is planned to reach Belleville in the early evening, so as not to interfere with other engagements for that day. Sufficient cars will be provided by the members to take care of the entire party and it is estimated that at least one hundred and fifty will make the trip.

This is the first of a series of similar tours and outings which the Chamber will hold during the summer on all of which occasions it is planned to combine pleasure with profit as some speaker of note will be with the party on each occasion.

BUSY ON BAY BRIDGE

It developed at yesterday's meeting that the Bay Bridge situation has progressed to a point where some definite action is likely in the very near future. The Directors are urging upon the city the necessity of appointing, immediately, a delegation from this city to confer with a similar delegation from Prince Edward County for the purpose of presenting to the Bridge Company a proposition for purchasing the Bay Bridge. The receipt of recent information from the Government Highways Department has given the city something to work on and the prospects of closing this matter satisfactorily are brighter now than at any time in the past.

HOUSING COMMISSION

The Chamber has also gone on record as favoring the appointing of a Housing Commission to take up the work of the housing program which is in prospect for the city. This important work cannot be undertaken too soon as there is a growing demand for homes and it has been shown that on numerous occasions the city has lost valuable additions to industrial and social life because of the lack of suitable homes for families that have contemplated coming here. In the case of one industry the heads of eight departments have been obliged to seek other locations because they could not find homes in this city. Other firms report that they have lost valuable employes for the same reason. It is believed that with the appointing of a Housing Commission the work of putting up homes can be started at once in compliance with the new Housing Act.

BOOST G.W.V.A.

The Directors heartily endorsed the G.W.V.A. celebration on June 3rd and will urge all manufacturers and leading merchants to do everything possible to make the affair a success. It is hoped that suitable floats will be provided for the parade and that all citizens will aid in making the day a memorable one.

Lady Bowlers Open The Season

Four-Rink Tournament Won by Miss MacLean's Rink—Many Visitors

Belleville Lady Bowlers opened the season officially Thursday at the bowling green with a very interesting tournament and reception to visitors. Everything was bright and pleasing about the club house and grounds and the scene was a striking one, the white dresses of the lady bowlers contrasting pleasantly with the rich green of the velvety lawns with here and there a touch of summer colors and dainty shades in a fancy parasol or visitor's frock. After the tournament refreshments were served and a delightful social hour spent.

Four rinks competed for the handsome prizes donated by Mrs. (Dr.) McCullough and Skip Miss Jessie MacLean's rink were victors, the runners-up being the rink skipped by Mrs. Duff, the other two rinks being skipped by Miss MacRae and Mrs. Kinnear.

The winning rink was composed of Miss Jessie MacLean, skip, Mrs. Stewart Robertson, Mrs. Wagper, Miss Clara Wallbridge.

Among the guests present were: Col. and Mrs. Dunbar, of Ottawa; Mrs. Sills, of London, England; Mrs. Jack Sills, Mrs. Rixon, Mrs. Jas. Shurie, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Temple of Trenton.

CHEESE BOARDS

Brockville, May 27—At the meeting of the Cheese Board today a small aquntity of cheese sold at 28¼ cents. Messrs Taylor and Sanderson purchasing 400 boxes of colored out of the 3,400 boxes offered. The offering of white chese totalled 725 boxes, balance being of the colored variety. The registrations were made up of 17 factories and three combinations. All through the meeting the going was heavy, the auctioneer finding it difficult to secure bids.

The dairymen listened to an address by D'Arcy Scott, Ottawa, secretary-treasurer of the National Dairy Council of Canada. With increased consumption and better marketing conditions of milk and its products, he said, the council was striving with success to promote increased production which will mean a better return to the producer for his labors. This can best be brought about by co-operation with the Dominion and Provincial Governments in aiding a movement for the use of only pure bred sires of a good milking strain, and the encouragement of cow testing and the building up of good producing herds.

Stirling, Ont., May 27—At today's cheese board 605 boxes were offered; 320 sold at 28 7-8, balance at 28 13-16c.

Kngston, May 27—At today's session of Kingston Cheese Board 583 boxes were offered. All sold at 29 5-16c.

Campbellford, May 27—441 boarded. All sold at 28 3-4c. Cook, 143; Olive and Dorien, 128; Morton, 105; Ayer, 65.

SALARY OF $1,500 FOR GROUP LEADERS

A Government bill providing for salaries of $1,500 to the recognized leader of any group in the House numbering not less than fifteen members was introduced in the Legislature by Hon. E. C. Drury. This means that the Government is saving $2,000 since the Leader of the Opposition, under the law as it stands, would receive $5,000.

YANKEES WANT IT ALL.

United States paper magnates seek to secure the services of the Washington Big Stick to make a clean sweep of Canada's pulpwood resources. Already they are taking away from Canada one million cords of pulpwood each year, and begrudge even the comparatively small amount of paper needed for Canadian newspapers. One million cords of pulpwood and over eighty per cent. of the paper manufactured in Canada goes to the United States each year, and still they are not satisfied; they want five and a half million cords of Canadian pulpwood annually and ALL the paper manufactured in Canada—the Canadian publishers can go to the wall, or to the devil, for all they care—the latter preferred by the Yankee Yellows, who need miles and miles of Canadian paper to bait John Bull, Twist the Lion's Tail, give aid and comfort to the Sinn Feiners of Ireland, the malcontents in Egypt and India, and generally threaten and insult the British Empire and trample upon its most cherished ideals.

Today at Washington there is actually an attempt being made to get government backing to coerce Canada into surrendering her forest wealth to Yankee paper speculators, who desire to seize also the pulpwood on the Crown lands, the forests still belonging to the people of Canada.

What are Canadians going to do about it?

What is the Government at Ottawa going to do about it?

Is it to be Canada First and Canadians First, or Yankees first, Canadians last?

Time to quit gassing away about the budget taxes and get down to brass tacks—Canadian interests have been sacrificed to the alien exploiter long enough—it's time for a change and red-blooded action by red-blooded men.

Uncle Sam is all right as a customer, but when he begins to show a desire to swallow the cracker barrel, hoops and all, it is time to put the hobbles on him—and now is the time.

THE DIVORCE CONTROVERSY.

It seems to the ordinary citizen that all this controversy about the merits of divorce is entierly out of place, says the Kingston Whig, which points out that the question at issue is not whether we shall have divorce in Canada, because divorce is already established and has always been. The proposal to take the trial of divorce cases out of the Senate and place it under the jurisdiction of a regularly constituted court, where evidence will be subjected to judicial discrimination in accordance with regular legal procedure, is not a retrograde step but a sorely needed elevation of the trial of such cases. We have not heard it proposed to increase the causes of divorce and until this is done we cannot see any reason for the heated controversy that is going on. If, by the establishment of divorce courts, we are to substitute justice for expediency, policy, etc., then by all means let us have the courts and wipe out the national scandal of lobbying the Senate, and the publication of the details of domestic tragedies and the moral perversion associated with such cases.

CRISP COMMENT

Business men of Canada have been conscripted by the Government as tax-gatherers, says the Financial Post, and it might be added that the new tax-collectors are also tax-payers extraordinary.

It is whispered that Germany is financing the sugar squeeze and other food hold-ups to secure money enough to pay war indemnities. German capitalists always were partial to sugar speculation.

Just as soon as the Dominion Board of Commerce took up the sugar question the price jumped two cents higher, with a promise of a further advance later on. "That Man O'Connor will please keep his fingers out of the sugar bowl." Even at that Canadians are paying less for sugar than the Yanks, where the squeeze originated.

The removal of the paving machinery from Front street, with its noise, dirt and hindrance to traffic will be appreciated by the business men and the public generally. The outfit should never have been allowed on the principal business street and Charlie Hanna should shoot on sight if it attempts to return. "Charlie, get your gun!"

When a man receives notice to file an income tax return and fails to do so he is subject to a fine of $100 per day. Several men in Windsor have just been fined $600 each. Their excuse was that their income was not large enough to be taxable. But even so, when notified to file particulars of their incomes they should have done so. A man's income may be small, but one of these solid, big fines makes it a good deal smaller, remarks the Toronto Star.

OTHER VIEWS

The West and Free Trade
Calgary Herald

Hon. Frank Oliver, of Edmonton, is in Montreal. While there he was interviewed on the tariff and declared the western farmer body had never specifically supported free trade, but rather wanted a reduction in the tariff. Mr. Oliver has lived a long time in the west and there is reason to believe he is speaking something close to the truth when he says this. We are not all foolish free trade cranks, not by a long way.

Putting Them Next
Edmonton Journal

The wisdom of these Toronto "wise dues" who have been telling how they could defeat the new taxation, would have been more readily admitted if they had put their ideas into practice first. With the warning given ,the revenue officers have to be very stupid not to find the means of circumventing the little game.

Resolutions No Use
Fort William Times

If the dollar today will only go as far as sixty cents would four or five year ago, it stands to reason we can't stretch the dollars by passing wordy resolutions about it. It is a universal condition which like changes in the weather, will pass in its own good time.

THEPOET'S CORNER

SEA-FEVER

I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by,
And the wheels kick and the wind's song and the white sail's shaking,
And a grey mist on the sea's face and a grey dawn breaking.

I must go down to the seas again, for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied;
And all I ask is a windy day with the white clouds flying,
And the flung spray and the blown spume, and the sea-gulls crying.

I must go down to the seas again to the vagrant gypsy life,
To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;
And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover,
And quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over

DYSPEPTICS QUIT STOMACH DRUGGING

A physician says that in most cases of stomach trouble there is realy no diseases of the stomach at all, but just too much acid. Excessive acid prevents natural digestion, causes sour stomach, fermentation of food, and this upsets the liver and intestines and causes nervousness, weakness, sleeplessness and "blues."

Quit stomach drugs and artificial digestents. Simply take a teaspoonful or four tablets of ordinary Bisurated Magnesia in a glass of hot water after meals to neutralize the excessive acidity and you will be all right.

It works fine. You can eat what you want and sleep all night—no more walking the floor at three and four o'clock in the morning and suffering from extreme weakness and nervousness all the next day. Bisurated Magnesia is for sale by all druggists in powder or tablet form. Try this plan for three weeks.

$17,000,000 Total For Hydro Power

Commission Requires Above Amount for the Current Financial Year.

More than $17,000,000 will be required by the Hydro Electric Power Commission for the current financial year, according to the estimate of the commission, accompanying the further supplementary estimates tabled in the Legislature. MAJOR MOYER, D.S.O. APPOINTED Major E. Clare Moyer, D.S.O., of Regina, has been appointed by the Saskatchewan government as law officer, director of soldiers' estates, to succeed Capt. A. L. Geddes, who was promoted to deputy attorney-general a few days ago. Major Moyer left for overseas with the 195th battalion in 1916 with the rank of captain. He was promoted to a majority in the field and was awarded the D. S. O. for conspicuous gallantry during the big retreat of 1918. He was twice mentioned in despatches. The new director of soldiers' estates graduated from the University of Toronto in 1910 with a B. A. degree. For a short time he was attached to the editorial staff of the Toronto Star and in 1911 came west and joined the staff of the Regina Morning Leader which paper he served as legislative reporter for over a year. He then became attached to the staff of the attorney-general's department as a student at law. After completing his course with a down town legal firm he was admitted to the Saskatchewan bar in 1915.

HITTING HEARST

An Estavan, (Sask.) news store, owned by L. J. Taylor, advertises that in the future it will not handle the Hearst publications. Mr. Taylor in his published statement, says in part: "As a British subject I cannot continue to support a firm who are conducting an anti-British and anti-Canadian campaign throughout the United States If the individual dealers will act there will be no need of approaching the Dominion Government to suppress these publications. The Saskatoon Phoenix announces that it will refuse advertising for the Hearst publications, and the Regina Leader has taken a similar stand. The Phoenix states that a Saskatoon book store withdrew from its stock the Hearst publications and gave notice that it would not handle them in the future.

BALE SURPLUS WHEAT

Failing absolutely to see any substantial reduction in prices of fodder, F. Maclure Sclanders, formerly commissioner of the Saskatoon Board of Trade, has made a suggestion which may prove of great interest to agriculturalists of the west, that farmers everywhere should start baling their surplus wheat and oat straw, for sale in foreign markets, and the deputy minister of agriculture, London, Eng., should be communicated with, to discover what the market price would probably be this fall for western baled straw.

TONS OF SUGAR ON DOCKS AT HALIFAX

Halifax, N.S., May 27.—An interesting commentary upon the announcement that sugar is due for another advance is to be found in the fact that great quantities of sugar are being piled up here, presumably for exportation. It is stated that several hundreds of thousands of bags of sugar are at present awaiting shipment at one pier, and that the quantity is daily increasing. At another pier, upwards of a quarter million bags of flour are awaiting shipment abroad.

Here Comes Daddy!

"HERE comes Daddy! Do you 'member?—He promised to bring Maple Buds!"

A stampede of little feet—an uproar of "Daddy, Daddy" in shrill, childish voices, as they leap down the steps to meet him; a clutching of his coat tails by eager little hands, and at last—Daddy, tired, but very happy, is in his big chair, with the youngsters climbing over him.

Children must have candy. Nature demands it. Then safeguard their health by getting the best and purest—Cowan's Maple Buds.

But remember—there is only one kind of Maple Buds, and that is Cowan's. Unless the name "Cowan's" is stamped on the back, they are not Maple Buds.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Stacey Wallen, first mate of the bark Upolo, in the Java sea, is the sole survivor of the crew, all victims of yellow fever. Ting Wah, Chinese sailor, last man to die, tells Wallen he and five other Chinamen were sent aboard by "Drink-House Sam," notorious character of Singapore, to kill Wallen. The latter recalls an incident of his childhood which seems connected with the confession. While delirious, Wallen enters in the ship's log the announcement of his death and abandons the vessel in a small boat.

CHAPTER II.—Wallen's boat drifts to the island of Arru and a Scottish trader there, MacKnight, cares for him. Learning that a ship is in port on the other side of the island, twenty miles away, Wallen, though unfit for the task, determines to reach it. He sets out but falls exhausted on the trail. There he is found by a man and woman who are from the ship he was trying to reach, Mott, first mate, and Helen MacKay, a passenger. They convey him to the vessel.

He could see nothing, and he stumbled constantly in the vines and creepers that everywhere overgrew the path. He was at last forced to admit that he was not making much more than a mile an hour, and twenty miles at a mile an hour was—he groaned.

It was breaking day when Wallen finally gave up—gave up when will power, and the grit of the man that did not know defeat, no longer sufficed for the physical strength to go farther.

The Malay, regarding him anxiously, offered by signs to carry him on his back. Wallen, from where he had flung himself down upon the ground, half rose to accept the offer, then shook his head. It was no use attempting that; it was too far.

He was bitterly convinced that he had accomplished little more than half the distance.

But there must be some way out. He wasn't beaten yet. He had to catch that steamer.

Suddenly he looked up.

Yes, of course. He had been a fool that he had not thought of it hours ago when he had first begun to realize that he was playing out, instead of it now when it might be too late, when the steamer might be already gone! He couldn't speak the Malay tongue, but MacKnight would have told the man why they were crossing the island. He could send the Malay on ahead, and follow himself as fast as he could.

If he could write a message he might even get them to send him help from Pobi.

He felt in his pockets. Nothing! Well, the Malay was an intelligent fellow; he would get word to the ship and a written message after all wouldn't make any difference—it all depended on the ship's skipper.

The skipper would wait, or he wouldn't, after hearing the Malay's story just as readily as he would for a written message. He began to make signs, pointing to the other, then in the direction of Pobi, then to himself, and then to the ground, indicating that he would stay behind.

"And hurry—quick—Pobi," Wallen ended anxiously.

The Malay nodded.

"Pobi—quick," he repeated—and started off at a run along the path.

Wallen watched the man disappear, and after a little while started on again himself—and then gave it up completely. He was down and out, and he was furiously angry with himself for the state he was in.

There wasn't anything to do but wait. He might make a mile before the Malay got back—but what good was that mile!

One thing was certain, any further exertion would bring serious consequences, if the serious consequences were not already an established fact.

A tropical island was no health resort for a fever-shot body, and a relapse of the slow fever that had followed his recovery from yellow jack would be—he put it pithily in his mind now—good night to Singapore and everything else.!

He might as well admit it to himself—he wasn't fit to work his passage. He began to regret that he had not accepted MacKnight's offer of money. After all he could have paid it back to the trader by mail sooner or later.

But that was a vain regret! He hadn't taken the money—the thought that he would not be able to work his passage if necessary had never entered his head. And now, even suppose he reached the ship, would they take, not only a penniless passenger but a sick one as well?

He had no means of judging the time there in the forest, save that it grew hotter as the morning advanced, nor had he any idea how long it had been since the Malay had left him, when at last at the sound of voices he raised up suddenly, supporting himself with his back against the trunk of a tree.

Came then the pad-pad of horses' hoofs, and the Malay, running, burst into sight around the bend of the path a few yards away, while a girl's laugh rang out—and was instantly checked as she and a man riding beside her also came into view.

"Oh!" she cried. "There's someone here! That must have been what the native meant. And—and I think he's hurt. Quick, Mr. Mott!"

She had slipped from her saddle and was running toward him—a little figure in white, brown-haired, brown-eyed, whose face was now very anxiously puckered up in dismay and concern. Wallen wondered a little vaguely who these people could be, where the Malay had found them—and somehow he didn't like the man's face.

"Hello!" exclaimed the man. "What's wrong? Hurt?"

"No," said Wallen, a little weakly; "done up, I guess, that's all. Nothing serious. I— Could you tell me if that steamer that came into Pobi yesterday is still there? I overdid it a bit trying to get in from MacKnight's across the island in time to catch her."

"MacKnight's!" echoed the girl quickly. "Why, that's where we're going. Isn't it, Mr. Mott?"

"Yes," her companion answered, looking curiously at Wallen.

Then to Wallen: "We met this native fellow on the road, but couldn't make out what he wanted. He was going toward the town, but turned and came back with us, and kept running on ahead. You needn't worry about the steamer—we're from her ourselves. I'm second officer—but, I say, you're too seedy to stand up there and talk!"

Wallen was swaying unsteadily as he leaned against the tree.

"I'm all right," he said. "Just giddy for a moment. I'm—I'm rather anxious to make the ship."

"Well, there's no hurry now," Mott returned. "She won't sail without us. Look here! You've come from MacKnight's, you say. We heard at Pobi that there was a survivor from the bark Upolo there, and we were taking the ride over—Miss MacKay and I—to investigate. Is there any truth in the story?"

Wallen gasped. What interest could they have in the Upolo!

"A little," he said, with a faint smile. "Seeing that I'm the survivor."

"What!" ejaculated Mott. "The deuce you are! Well, then"—excitedly—"can you tell us what became of Stacey Wallen, who was the first mate on her?

Wallen laughed a little hysterically.

"I am Stacey Wallen," he said.

There was a cry of amazed excitement from the girl. Mott, gazing in utter surprise at Wallen, tilted the visor of his cap back and mopped mechanically at his forehead with a handkerchief.

Wallen's laugh died away, and he looked from one to the other anxiously.

"I—I don't understand, of course," he said. "But the point is, do you think your skipper will give me passage? I—I didn't save anything from the Upolo, and I was figuring on offering to work my way, but I'm afraid I'm hardly up to that for a spell."

"Could you ride a horse, d'ye think," inquired Mott with apparent irrelevancy, "if this Malay here and I held you on?"

"Yes," said Wallen eagerly. "Yes; but the skipper—"

"Oh, I guess that'll be all right!" said Mott queerly. "As near as I can figure it you're the one on earth the skipper wants to see."

CHAPTER III.

Accident—or Murder?

MacKnight's caustic estimate of the steamer's size had not been very wide of the mark. The Mouleigh was certainly very small, and certainly a frowsy, unkempt and weatherbeaten little craft; and her general appearance bespoke her as one of those homeless, vagrant waifs of the ocean that knew no schedule—that took the crumbs of the world's commerce where she could find them—and was grateful for the crumbs.

Wallen had been afraid that morning that he was in for a relapse, but he had no fever now—there was none of that disquieting giddiness in his head, and—he smiled happily to himself—a few days at sea would put him back again in his old form.

He sat up in his bunk as the ship's bell sounded from forward. Two bells—five o'clock in the afternoon. He got up, went over to the wash basin and plunged in his head.

R. A. DENNISON, of Los Angeles, owner and trainer of fine trotting horses, who says Tanlac put him right back on his feet again, after he had been in bad health for over a year. Declares he is feeling like his old self now.

"For the past year or more I have not been right physically, I just didn't feel good at all, but last April 22nd I had an awful attack with my stomach which nearly drew me up and I have been worse ever since.

"About the best way I can describe the way I felt is to say I was just leg-weary and all in. I really did not have strength to keep going and I gave up all idea of trying to work. For a long while I had no appetite but would eat anyhow though my food never seemed to do me any good.

"I would go to bed at night and would sleep, but apparently did not rest for I would get up just as tired as when I went to bed. I got so I could scarcely go a block but what I would have to stop and rest.

"Well, I read about Tanlac one day and that reminded me that a friend had spoken about the same medicine, so I got some and began to take it. I had been taking it about a week when one evening, after supper, I started to walk and before I realized it I had walked up to First street and back, about 14 blocks, and never felt it at all and then I realized that the tonic was helping me.

"I have taken four bottles now and am just feeling real good again. I am able to be back at the Exposition Stock Yards every day and have just as much energy as I ever had. I get up refreshed in the mornings now and I have a real appetite which makes me enjoy three good square meals every day. Anyone who needs a good tonic will certainly be satisfied with Tanlac and I am glad to recommend it to my friends."

The above statement was made recently by R. A. Dennison, a well-known owner and trainer of fine trotting horses, residing at No 214 East 8th St., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Dennison has lived in California for 32 years; he is 63 years of age and has followed his present line of business for 30 years. He is well-known on the Pacific coast.

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

UNKNOWN COLORED AMAZONS ASSAULT AND ROB MERE MALE

Montreal, May 28.—To be set upon and robbed by three colored women was the experience that Armand St. George, 222 St. Andre street, told the Court this morning. Lelia Fultz, colored, of 118 Sanguinet street, was also in court, but to answer the charge of theft from the person of Armand St. George. It is alleged that as Armand was passing along Sanguinet near Dorchester that he was seized by three colored women, dragged into a passageway and robbed of $45.

His cries for help brought Constable Daoust to the scene, whereupon the ladies ran away. The constable caught up with Lelia Fultz at the corner of Sanguinet and St. Catherine street and the money was found in her hand. The accused was remanded to June 2, in bail of $500.

COMMERCE BOARD EXONERATES ALLEGED SUGAR HOARDERS

Ottawa, May 28.—The Board of Commerce of Canada has exonerated all concerned in the charge of hoarding sugar preferred against the Dominion Warehousing Company and firms using the warehouse. The largest holder, J. Freedman, merchant, of Ottawa, was justified in stocking up several weeks in advance the board rules, in the light of present conditions, and its stored surplus, 123,400 pounds of white and yellow sugar, was shown to be about ten days supply for Freedman's business. No attempt at raising prices was disclosed in connection with the transaction.

The board will investigate tomorrow a charge that an Ottawa firm charged 36 cents a pound for sugar over the counter. The defence will be that the merchant paid a proportionately high price for the sugar. The transaction will be traced back to discover who exacted the unusual profit in the handling from refiner to consumer.

The plaintiff's solicitors say they understand Mr. Meighen will not claim parliamentary privilege as a bar to a suit.

How A Letter Saved A Grandstand

Mayor Riggs, who takes much interest in baseball is desirous of having the diamond at the Agricultural Park placed in first class condition. On Wednesday he wrote a letter to Mr W. Parks requesting him to give a price for putting the diamond in shape Yesterday afternoon in response to the Mayor's request Mr. Parks in company with Mr. Walter Patterson visited the park to look over the ground with the object of ascertaining what was needed to be done. While they were thus engaged they discovered the grand stand was on fire. With a few pails of water they succeeded in extinguishing the blaze. But for the fortunate discovery there is no doubt the stand would have been destroyed and in all probability some of the sheds. In regard to placing the diamond in shape Mr. Parks will reply to the Mayor's letter when he has made an estimate of costs.

AUTO RUNS AMUCK AND BUMPS HOUSE

Ottawa, May 28.—A motor car, belonging to Dr. Kinney, of Kingston, came to grief in a peculiar manner at the corner of Victoria and Stanley avenues shortly before 6 o'clock last evening. Just as the car was turning the corner the outside wheel buckled and jammed the steering geer. The car ran across the road and on Mr. M. McCarthy's lawn. Continuing, it charged into the corner of Mr. J. A. Ellis' house on Stanley avenue. A lady who was in the car fainted, but beyond that the occupants were not injured. The car sustained a smashed wheel, broken fender and damaged gears.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1920.

Honor Of Nation At Stake Says President Wilson

IN VETOING PEACE RESOLUTION, WHICH HE STATES IS "A COMPLETE SURRENDER OF RIGRTS OF UNITED STATES AND WOULD PLACE AN INEFFACEABLE STAIN UPON THE GALLANTRY AND HONOR OF THE NATION.

WASHINGTON, May 28—President Wilson vetoed the Knox peace resolution declaring an end to the war between the United States and Germany and Austria-Hungary.

The resolution, Wilson declared, "is in effect, a complete surrender of the rights of the United States, so far as the German Government is concerned."

The text of President Wilson's message vetoing the Knox peace resolution follows:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my signature House Joint Resolution 327, intended to repeal the joint resolution of April 6, 1917, declaring a state of war to exist between the United States and Germany, and the joint resolution of December 7, 1917, declaring a state of war to exist between the United States and the Austro-Hungarian Government, and to proclaim a state of peace.

I have not felt at liberty to sign this joint resolution because I cannot bring myself to become party to an action which would place an ineffaceable stain upon the gallantry and honor of the United States.

Relieves Germany Only

The resolution seeks to establish peace with the German Empire without exacting from the German Government any action by way of setting right the infinite wrongs which it did to the people whom it attacked and whom we professed it our purpose to assist when we entered the war. Have we sacrificed the lives of more than 100,000 Americans and ruined the lives of thousands of others and brought upon thousands of American families an unhappiness that can never end, for purposes which we do not now care to state and take further steps to attain?

Treaty Covers Case

The attainment of these purposes is provided for in the Treaty of Versailles by terms deemed adequate by the leading experts and statesmen of all the great peoples who were associated in the war against Germany.

"Do we now not care to join in the efforts to secure them.

"We entered the war most reluctantly. Our people were profoundly disinclined to take part in a European war and at last did so, only because they became convinced that it could not in truth be regarded as only a European war, but, must be regarded as a war in which civilization itself was involved and human rights of every kind as against a belligerent government. Moreover, when we entered the war we set forth very definitely the purposes for which we entered, partly because we did not wish to be considered as merely taking part in a European contest.

Only a Surrender

This joint resolution which I return does not seek to accomplish any of these objects, but in effect makes a complete surrender of the rights of the United States so far as the German Government is concerned. A treaty of peace was signed at Versailles on the 28th of June last which did seek to accomplish the objects which we had declared to be in our minds, because all the great governments and peoples which united against Germany has adopted our declarations of purpose as their own and had in solemn form embodied them in communications to the German Government preliminary to the armistice of November 11, 1918.

But the Treaty as signed at Versailles has been rejected by the Senate of the United States though it has been ratified by Germany. By that rejection and by its method we have in effect declared that we wish to draw apart and pursue objects and interests of our own, unhampered by any connections of interest or of purpose with other Governments and peoples.

Notwithstanding the fact that upon our entrance into the war we professed to be seeking to assist in the maintenance of common interests, nothing is said in this resolution about the freedom of navigation upon the seas, or the reduction of armaments, or the vindication of the rights of Belgium, or the ratification of wrongs done to France, or the release of the Christian populations of the Ottoman Empire from the intolerable subjugation which they have had for so many generations to endure, or the establishment of an independent Polish state, or the continued maintenance of any kind of understanding among the great powers of the world which would be calculated to prevent in the future such outrages as Germany attempted and in part consumated.

Shifting the Burden

We have now in effect declared that we do not care to take any further risks or to assume any further responsibilities with regard to the freedom of nations or the sacredness of international obligations or the safety of independent peoples. Such a peace with Germany—a peace in which none of the essential interests which we had at heart when we entered the war, is safeguarded—is, or ought to be, inconceivable, is inconsistent with the dignity of the United States with the rights and liberties of her citizens and with the very fundamental conditions of civilization.

I hope that in these statements I have sugiciently set forth the reasons why I have felt it incumbent upon me to withhold my signature.

(Sgd) WOODROW WILSON.

STERILIZING WATER WITH VIOLET RAYS

By means of one of the latest electrical devices the use of the ultra violet ray for sterilizing water, the Manitoba government is ensuring that the water supply for the Brandon hospital for the insane shall be as pure as humanly possible. Recent inventions in the electrical world have made it possible to utilize the powerful ray for this purpose, and the effect is said to be to kill all the living organisms in the water. Water from the Assiniboine River, tested after passing through the process, has been found to be absolutely sterile. The device used is much the same as the mercury lamp used in printing establishments. The total capacity of the Brandon installation is 250,000 gallons per day.

BIG ADDITION TO WINNIPEG VOTERS' LIST

Forty thousand more names can be placed on the Winnipeg civic voters' list by amendments made by the legislature to the city charter. Returned soldiers who served in His Majesty's forces, British or Canadian, during the war and were honorably discharged, are, with their wives, entitled to have their names on the list, even although they do not own property, do not rent a house, and are simply roomers. Up till now roomers of all classes were unable to vote at civic elections. There should be approximately 100,000 names on the next election lists if those entitled to a vote register.

MIDLAND MAN ELECTROCUTED WHILE STRINGING WIRES

Midland, Ont., May 29—Lloyd Bugg, 21 years of age, the younger son of Mr. Arthur Bugg, met instant death while stringing wires on Hugel Ave. for the local Hydro Commission. His body was held at the top of the pole after the shock passed through it, and was lowered by ropes.

The tour will open in the extreme western point of Macklin and will proceed by easy stages to the extreme eastern border of Saskatchewan.

Farmers Rapped In Budget Debate

OTTAWA, May 29.—Some timely advice was offered the National Progressive or Farmers' Party by Unionist speakers in the debate on the budget in the Commons. J. D. Chaplin of Lincoln, a believer in a policy of moderate protection, urged Hon. T. A. Crerar and his followers to adopt a construction policy instead of their present destructive one.

The member for Lincoln pointed out that in Western Canada there were great possibilities for the development of industries. He suggested therefore that the farmers' party would be better employed in advocating utilization of these opportunities than in attacking existing industries. He indicated that combines existed even in free trade England and that free trade England was tending toward the adoption of protection for many industries.

G. B. Nicholson, of Algoma, charged that Hon. T. A. Crerar, the leader of the Independent Farmers' group in the House, was himself the head of the greatest combine in Canada, the Grain Growers' Grain Company. The Algoma member quoted Premier C. E. Drury, of Ontario a free trader as authority for a statement that customs duties had only increased the cost of producion of foodstuffs on Ontario farms by four-fifths of one per cent.

Mr. Nicholson said Mr. Crerar was responsible for the participation of Mrs. R. Henderson, of Montreal in the recent by-election campaign in Timiskaming. Mrs. Henderson, the Algoma member said, was a self-confessed Bolshevist and the campaign waged on behalf of Angus Macdonald, M.P., was a "One Big Union" campaign, although the new member might not have appreciated the fact. Mr. Nicholson suggested some changes in the taxation proposals but approved of the principle underlying them.

He declared himself a believer in policy of moderate protection, and asserted that the Liberal Party which had sought office in 1896 on a free trade platform and had reduced the average of the tariff duties only 1½ per cent. in fifteen years, had now no policy whatever except that of being all things to all men.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux spoke at considerable length on behalf of the Opposition, attacked the budget taxes as unfair to the workers and sought vainly to convey the impression that the Liberal party had never stood for free trade.

Food Held Till Unfit For Use

MONTREAL, May 29.—The report of the Health Department of the City of Montreal containing in some respects only details up to the end of the week of May 15, contains startling figures regarding the amount of food confiscated and destroyed as being unfit for human consumption and also striking figures regarding the health of the citizens during May and also in the first five months of the year.

Regarding the meat seized and destroyed the figures given show 180 pounds for the week ending 1st May, 105 pounds for the week ending 8th May, and 33,900 pounds for the week ending 15th May, making 34,185 pounds of meat condemned at butchers' shops, abattoirs, restaurants, stations, etc., and afterwards destroyed in the first three weeks of the month. Four hundred and forty-six inspections of milk were made in the city by inspectors during the week ending 15th May, and 114 inspections in the country.

The cases of contagious diseases reported for the week ending 22nd May showed 192 cases and 40 deaths Among these were 78 cases of German measles with 3 deaths; 35 cases of scarlet fever with 2 deaths; diptheria, 21 cases, with 5 deaths; tuberculosis, 29 cases, with 28 deaths; mumps, 13 cases, no deaths; chicken pox, 6 cases, no deaths; whooping cough, 5 cases, no deaths; grippe, 2 cases, 1 death; typhoid, 1 case, 1 death.

The figures given in regard to cases of contagious diseases since the beginning of the year show that German measles have been very prevalent, the details for the first five months being 1,458 cases with 26 deaths.

Four thousand two hundred and eighty cases of grippe, with 433 deaths are also reported during that period, while the total of all kinds of contagious diseases since 1st January, 1920 is given as 8,679 cases with 1,193 deaths.

New Tax Will Cost Hospitals $150,000 A Year

Alcohol and Proprietary Medicines Source of New Revenue

MONTREAL, May 29.—The proposed tax on alcohol and proprietary medicines will mean a tax of something approaching $150,000 per annum on the hospitals and other charitable institutions of the Province of Quebec the major portion of which will be borne by those situated in the city of Montreal. The governing of bodies of the different hospitals this morning sent telegrams to Sir Henry Drayton the Minister of Finance, pointing out how hard the tax would bear on the hospitals, and how it would mean they would have to curtail their treatment of patients owing to the enormous increase in the cost of tinctures and all liquid medicines that contain spirits.

The superintendent of the Royal Victoria Hospital stated that the tax would mean from $15,000 to $18,000 increase in their expenditure while the Montreal General Hospital will have to pay an additional $16,000 or more, the Notre Dame and Hotel Dieu Hospital having to pay at least $10,000 each.

Fishing Industry For Ex-Service Men

Pensions Committee at Ottawa Taking Opinion of Fisheries Experts

OTTAWA, May 29.—Re-establishment of the returned soldier in the fishing industry of British Columbia was urged upon the special committee on pensions and re-establishment by Col. C. W. Peck, V.C., (Skeena) Col. Peck said there was room for returned men in the fishing industry controlled by white men should be built up. This would also solve the unemployment problem to a great extent and would mean a greater production of food.

W. A. Found, Federal General Superintendent of Fisheries, said the Department of Marine and Fisheries had felt from the outset that men might be encouraged to go into this industry as into farming. There were many men among the veterans who had previous experience in fishing. Loans to encourage the fisheries industry were not a new idea. Money was provided by some countries for placing engines in fishing boats and otherwise encouraging industry. J. J. Cowie, chief inspector of the Fisheries Department also gave evidence in this connection. Some $200,000, he said, had been provided in this way in England. Plans for extension of aid in Canada were submitted by the Departmental officers. Mr. Cowie explained the British plan of assisting demobilized fishermen. Men were helped in acquiring steam drifters, steam trawlers and other fishing craft.

The questionnaire criculated among members of the C. E. F. showed a total of 1,088 former fishermen in the Canadian Army who proposed to reenter that work on their demobilization.

Col. Peck said that statistics in British Columbia showed that gill-netting licenses were issued last year to only 473 Canadian-born and to 2,273 Japanese.

Mr. Cowie was of the opinion that a man could earn a good living if provided with boat and gear. The returns, of course, varied from year to year.

Mr. Found declared his idea would be to start men in general fishing. The salmon fishing in British Columbia would be only incidental as the man would catch whatever fish were in season.

Messrs. Found and Cowie are to give the committee an idea of what will be necessary to outfit returned men for entering the fishing industry and also submit plans for re-establishing men in this work.

O. Turgeon (Gloucester) said about 1,900 farmer-fishermen had gone overseas from his constituency. A schooner would cost from $1,200 to $1,500 and a man should be able to pay for it within ten years. The life of such a boat would be about twenty years, and most of the men in the county could build their own boats.

A. B. Copp (Wesmoreland) suggested getting a practical man to discuss this question with the committee. The committee decided to ask William Duff (Lunenburg) and William Logie (Northumberland) to attend next Monday afternoon and go over Messrs. Found and Cowie proposals, supplementing these where necessary.

Seymour Power Purchase Under Fire In House

Hartley Dewart Makes Demand for Investigation—Says Minority Shareholders Were "Sold Out.'

TORONTO, May 29—A demand for an investigation of the purchase by the government of the Seymour Power enterprises in eastern Ontario was made by H. Hartley Dewart, K. C., while the Hydro estimates were before the house in supply. Mr. Dewart charged that the whole transaction was open to question. He stated that the minority shareholders claimed they had been "sold out," that they were not aware that negotiations for the sale were going on. The negotiations had been carried on in such a way that the Sun Life Insurance Co., which held the majority stock as security for bonds, had realized a profit of $1,275,000 on the deal. They had received par for their bonds, whereas they had paid but 85 for them Mr. Dewart wanted to know why the central Ontario system was not taken over by the Hydro commission instead of remaining the property of the government.

The reason he suggested was that Sir Adam Beck, knowing the character of the transaction would have nothing to do with it.

Methodist Ministers' Pay Will Be Raised

The Minimum Salary to be $1,500 With Parsonage and House Upkeep

TORONTO, May 29—Every Methodist minister in Canada and Newfoundland henceforth is to be paid a minimum salary of $1,500, with parsonage and horse-keep in addition, according to a decision arrived at here yesterday by the General Conference special committee.

Rev. S. D. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist Church, at the outset, spoke in favor of advancing the minimum from $1,200 to $1,500, which he said was necessary in view of the upward trend of food prices and other commodities, and the members of the committee agreed with him.

Church Union Discussed

Church union was discussed by the committee, and Rev. Dr. S. P. Rose, of Ottawa, and Senator Lorne C. Webster of Montreal, were named to represent the general conference in favor of union when the question coms before the assembly at its meeting in Ottawa.

Dr. Chown said the Methodists in Western Canada were becoming restive because of the long delay in the proposed union of the Presbyterian, Congregational and the Methodist Churches, and he feared that still another denomination might be formed in consequence.

Prisoners captured by the Poles west of the Beresina River, the statement says, include four hundred Cossacks cut off from the rest of the Bolsheviki army in the drive towards Minsk.

Betting On Ponies Again Restricted

OTTAWA May 28—Important amendments to the Criminal Code were presented by Hon. C. J. Doherty in the House this afternoon. One of them deals with race track betting and another with houses of ill-fame.

In regard to betting on race tracks the amendment limits methods of organized betting to the pari-mutuel machines and provides that the sums taken by the machines shall be restricted to a limited percentage of the amount of the stake.

Another amendment provides that where a person is convicted three times for keeping a bawdy house the imprisonment shall not be less than three months. This proviso applies not only to the person but to the premises. Where a conviction is registered more than once against any specific place it shall be regarded as a third offence whether or not the ownership has changed meanwhile.

The age of consent is raised to 18 years by the provisions of another amendment.

The clause in regard to the use of fire arms is extended to include a wider range while it is made a criminal offence to improperly wear uniforms, badges or buttons.

Another provision is that in the event of appeal, courts of two different provinces differing upon a finding an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court.

An amendment to the Penitentiary Act provides that wardens may be transferred from one institution to another.

A bill to authorize the building of three small extensions of the Canadian National Railways was introduced by Hon. J. D. Reid.

The Minister stated that the three lines were in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Mr. W. F. Cockshutt then resumed the Budget debate, directing his attention chiefly to the tariff issue.

Sinn Fein Reign Of Terror Continues In Ireland

BURNING OF BUILDINGS AND SHOOTING OF CITIZENS GOES ON NIGHTLY—SECOND CAMERONS ON THE SCENE HEAVILY ARMED—SINN FEIN "COURTS."

LONDON, May 29—Burning of private and public buildings and shooting of citizens continued in various parts of Ireland last night.

The coastguard station on Sybil Head in County Kerry was burned, Califield Barracks in the same county were likewise destroyed by fire.

In County Clare, a farmer living near Ennis on the River Fergus was attacked and seriously wounded. A civilian near Lisdoonarna in the northwest part of the county was attacked and shot.

The whole of Ireland is reported to be awaiting tensely the arrival of the military reinforcement now en route from Aldershot. The Second Camerons, who were despatched under heavy arms, each man equipped with fifty rounds of ball cartridges and the regiment supplied with Lewis machine guns, was expected to reach its destination to-day or to-morrow.

SINN FEIN "COURTS"

London, May 29.—Disclaiming responsibility for the period of lawlessness in Ireland, which culminated in the destruction of 300 vacant military barracks, followers of the Irish Republic have taken the law into their own hands and apparently are going far towards successfully repressing further outbreaks.

They have established a new system of "volunteer citizens' courts," conducted after the fashion of courtmartial for the purpose of trying malefactors and those suspected of burglary, theft and wanton destruction Through their efforts a mass of stolen property has been already returned to its owners.

The destruction of barracks came when the authorities closed down the most isolated military headquarters, thus leaving some districts absolutely unprotected. And the subsequent absence of police brought about an epidemic of looting and burglary of private and public buildings.

TO END CRIME WAVE

The Republicans now manifest a desire not to be linked with the crime wave, and have decided to establish a system of volunteer police in those unprotected districts, to be backed up by an efficient citizens' court which might effectively deal with lawbreakers.

The result has been that evil-doers are thoroughly alarmed. Many arrests have been made during the last two weeks and trials have satisfactorily imposed punishment that may act as a deterrent.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Alex. Ray, Opt. D.

IS THIS WHAT YOU FEAR? FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye-defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

MANY NEW ATTRACTIONS WITH SPARKS CIRCUS

Wednesday, the rushing of switch engines as they clatter here and there in the C. P. R. railroad yards with great strings of gaudily painted yellow cars.

Wednesday, the tugging of horses and a rush of work for several hundred persons that a city may reap a beenfit of happiness. For

Wednesday the circus is coming, coming with its truckling wagons, its shouting, hard working "razor backs" and seat plank men, its horde of performers—many from strange lands, its waving banners and flags, its brass throated bands.

For Wednesday, out at the Dufferin Avenue show grounds there will rise the great dun colored tents of the "biggest circus in the world," while the workmen hurry here and there in the preparations for the afternoon show and the performers wander about the lot looking for the landmarks that were memories of their last visit here. But all that is beside the case.

The fact is that the circus is coming to town and that before noon Wednesday, while the great parade winds its way through the principal streets, the big tents of the Sparks World Famous Shows will be ready and waiting for the crowds it will invite. And incidentally, there are plenty of new attractions this year to bring those crowds. There will be the Sparks stable of manege, marble-like statue and tango dancing horses, including "Caesar," the champion high jumping horse in the world and holder of the record of 7 feet 4¼ inches. There will be a group of monster bears that skate, ride bicycles, wrestle, box, walk the tight rope and play musical instruments. Two large herds of elephants, worked entirely by lady trainers, is also one of the unusual sights of this modern circus. All in all, 250 performers—animal and human—participate in the performances. Just as a sort of display of all the features of the show a sample of everything is to be shown in the parade, which will be given at 10.30 o'clock Wednesday.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

NAZIMOVA'S OWN VERSION

The amazing Russian Artiste, Nazimova, is presented in the dual guise of star and dramatist in "The Brat" at Griffin's today, matinee and night. Nazimova not only plays the difficult and highly emotional role of "The Brat," but it was she who adapted it, in collaboration with Charles Bryant, from the original stage play written by Maude Fulton, and in which Miss Fulton starred throughout the United States and Canada.

A number of Nazimova's own ideas are incorporated in the screen version of the great stage success, in the shape of added incidents and twists in the plot. Nazimova who is an accomplished linguist and musician as well as one of the foremost actresses on the screen today, took as part of her education for the stage, a course in stage direction in Russia. She is both producer and star in her own productions, and her acquaintance with the world-famous books and plays of literature is intimate and extensive. "Between the Acts," a very funny Larry Semon comedy, Pictorial Life revealing life in its different phases and the third episode of the Prince of Wales through Canada, this week showing the handsome Prince as a westerner are also being shown on the same program.

BIG BILL HART

Ladies, how would you like to buy your spring hat from Bill Hart? That's not as improbable as it seems, for the noted two-gun man is proprietor of a modiste shop in his new picture, 'John Petticoats,' which is coming to Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday. The filming of the story, which was supervised by Thomas H. Ince, took the famous star from the great north woods to the old Creole section of New Orleans. He starts as a lumberjack and is surprised to learn that he has inherited a modiste shop from a deceased uncle in the southern city. Determined to investigate 'Hardwood' John Haynes, the hero, played by Mr. Hart, travels to New Orleans and there becomes involved in a serio-comedy of big dramatic scenes, laughs and a pretty little romance. Mr. Hart is said to be thoroughly at home in this strikingly new type of role and to shine as brightly in a dress suit as he does in the familiar garb of western parts. Winnifred Westover is his leading lady in this picture. The Fourth Chapter of the thrilling and popular animal serial "The Lost City," this chapter titled "Jungle Death," and a funny two-reel Mack Sennett comedy are also being shown on the same program.

GUELPH CATTLE BUYER INJURED BY ANGRY BULL

Guelph, May 29.—Mr. Alex. White, the well-known local cattle buyer, was the victim of an unfortunate accident. He was engaged in loading some cattle at the Marden Station, when one of the bulls became fractious and unruly and attacked Mr. White. He was badly trampled and received injuries which will cause him to be laid up for some time. He was brought home and is resting as quietly as possible. There were no bones broken, but it is not known yet just how serious his injuries are.

Came For Day Decided To Stay

California Tourists Delighted With Belleville—Will Tarry a While

Last winter, when W. C. Mikel, K. C., was on his way to Los Angeles, California, he met Mr. B. L. Case of San Francisco and impressed him with the advantages of Belleville. Mr. Case and his wife were on their way from California to visit New York and later Europe, and stopped off at Belleville last Wednesday. They were so much pleased with this city that they have taken apartments and will remain about a month. Mr. Case is interested in large industrial enterprises in the United States and may become interested in Belleville.

Mr. Case was seen by an Intelligencer representative today and in answer to the query, "What do you think of Belleville?" he said, "Belleville looks like the makings of a great city. It reminds me of what some of the big cities of the Untied States looked like twenty years ago. Your natural and other advantages have not been all grabbed up as in the case of some of our cities. I have made arrangements for a big industry to take care of the trade in a line in which I am interested along the Atlantic Sea Board States and also with other parties in the Interior States. I have not yet made arrangements for the Canadian trade or the English trade. Some delays have arisen in the Canada Patent Office as to my Patents, but these will be straightened out soon. We have not yet decided whether we will arrange to have the Canadian business taken care of through the United States plants or start a Canadian plant. If the Canadian people display the courage in developing the country that they did in the war, there will be a great growth in a short time."

Late Tim Foley Noted Contractor

Like James J. Hill Deceased Was a Product of Ontario

Timothy Foley, head of the firm of Foley Bros. and Stewart, famous railway builders, who are known from Alaska to Mexico died at his residence in St. Paul. Jim Hill, born at Almonte, Lanark County, Ont., were the pride of the western states during five and thirty years. They were proclaimed empire builders and unofficial statesmen, but always retained an abiding attachment for their homeland Ontario and the Dominion. Jas. J. Hill died on May 29th, 1916, aged 78 years, while Timothy Foley was in his 83rd year when the summons came.

The late Timothy Foley was widely known in Toronto and built nearly all the railways in Northern Ontario, including the Algoma Central, at Sault Ste. Marie; the Lake Superior branch of the Transcontinental R. R.; the Nickel Company's line at Sudbury; 600 miles of the Canadian Northern; and the Ross-Government offered them the contract to build the Timiskaming and N. O. line in 1902, but they declined. Minnesota State and the city of St. Paul offered official funerals, while General J. W. Stewart, the junior member of the firm who had supreme command of transportation troops for Canada in France, was authorized to recommend military honors, but the family would not consent. He was president of the 1st National Bank, owned ranches, farms and timber limits in Canada and Montana, while the flourishing town of Foley, Minn., is part of the estate. His wealth is estimated at many millions but nothing will be known for several days.

The Foley boys were interested in the lumber trade and had saw mills at Almonte and Hall, and on the Mississippi river 40 years ago. They went west with the C.P.R. builders in the early 80s. Their contracts in Canada which they completed in the early years of the war, were the ocean terminals at Halifax and the nine miles of tunnel through the Rocky Mountains, at Rodgers Pass, in Alberta.

Mrs. Foley, who survives her husband, is advanced in years, and belonging to a widely known Ontario family. She was a niece of the late ex-Premier Alexander Mackenzie.

MID-DAY HOLD-UP ANCIENT CAPITAL

Quebec, May 28.—A daring midday hold-up was carried out without a hitch on St. Peter street in the heart of the business section of the city at noon yesterday when two men entered the office of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Agency and after overpowering the clerk in charge, ransacked the office and scattered the papers and documents about the floor, but did not get any money.

When the men entered the office they inquired about prices of flour and as soon as the clerk's back was turned they pounced on him and tied him up with office towels. After they had made a fruitless search through the office, they warned the clerk not to give the alarm until they had got safely away.

The young man was found gagged and tied by his fellow employes when they returned from lunch. The police are working on the case.

Neuralgia and Sciatica

Caused by Starved Nerves, Due to Weak, Watery Blood

People generally think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve of the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease is the same. The cause is the same and the remedy to be effective must be the same. The pain of neuralgia, whether it takes the form of sciatica or whether it affects the face and head, is caused by starved nerves. The blood, which normally carries nourishment to the nerves for some reason no longer does so and the excruciating pain you feel is the cry of the starved nerves for food. The reason why the blood fails to properly nourish the nerves is usually because the blood itself is weak and thin.

When you build up the thin blood with Dr. Williams Pink Pills, you are attacking neuralgia, sciatica and kindred diseases at the root. As proof of the value of these pills in cases of this kind we give the statement of Mrs. Thomas McGuire, North Malden Ont., who says: "I have been a severe sufferer from sciatica, which attacked the sciatic nerve in the left leg. At times the pain was most excruciating and as a result of the trouble there was a distinct shrivilling of the leg. I could only hobble about by using a cane and if I attempted to walk to the fields I would have to sit down every little while to ease the agony I felt. I was under medical treatment, but as there was no improvemnt shown, I was getting very despondent, as the trouble was affecting my general health. Finally a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills and I decided to do so. I took the pills faithfully for several months, finding a gradual and increasing improvement in my case, until finally every vestige of the trouble had gone, and I was again enjoying the blessing of good health and freedom from pain. What Dr. Williams Pink Pills did for me seems almost a miracle and I hope that my experience may benefit some other sufferer."

If you are suffering from any ailment due to weak blood avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams Pink Pills so easily afford and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicnie Co., Brockville, Ont.

Subscription Rates Will Be Increased

Quinte Publishers In Self-Defence Will Have to Increase Rates

Weekly papers at two dollars per year and dailies at increased subscription rates were decided upon at the meeting of the Bay of Quinte Press Association held on Friday in the Hotel Quinte. The publishers present in view of the largely increased and increasing cost of newsprint and everything which goes into the making of a newspaper could see no other way out than to make sharp increases in subscription and advertising rates. There was no division, the question was decided unanimously, and the feeling of the meeting as one of uncertainty as to the possibility of getting regular supplies of paper at all, now that Canada's paper output is controlled by the United States paper trust. One publisher reported that despite increasing circulation he was told that his paper supply would be confined to the same amount he has received during the past year and no increase would be granted him. No doubt it is necessary to restrict Canadian publishers in order to increase the supply to the Yankee yellows with their hundred-page Sunday editions and yelps at the British Empire.

Mr. Alloway, editor of the Oshawa Reformer, gave a very interesting talk upon newspaper policy, editorially and otherwise, and started a general discussion which was very instructive.

Resolutions were passed endorsing the two-dollar subscription rate for weeklies and recommending that it go into effect July 1 next, and that the dailies increase their subscription rates at once.

Delegates were present from Picton, Trenton, Madoc, Stirling and other places, and the Belleville press was well represented.

NO ADVERTISING ON TIMBER LIMITS

Toronto, May 28—When the timber limit probe was continued yesterday at the Parliament Buildings the condition of granting permits to Bigwood and Farlinger, of 405 and 35 square miles respectively, was brought up. Under questioning from Mr. Justice Riddell, Mr. Albert Grigg, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, stated that he had been asked to make a careful inquiry to ascertain whether a report had been made before licenses were granted. He stated that he had inquired, but had not found any reports, and he believed that if there had been such reports he would have found them. That Mr. Grigg agreed, means that the former Minister either has the reports himself, or was mistaken.

Mr. Harding brought up the point that a limit of 72 square miles went to R. S. Potter on his own offer, written on a letter to the department in October of 1916 and received in the department on the same day, although the letter was supposed to have been written in Matheson. Mr. Grigg admitted that, according to his estimate, some eight million feet of timber were sold to Potter without competition or advertising. The only security received was a bond for $2,000, signed by Potter himself.

C. C. Hele, former private secretary to Hon. G. H. Ferguson, giving evidence with regard to the nature of the correspondence and files taken by the ex-Minister upon giving up his office, stated that the letters consisted chiefly of personal or political papers. In cases where letters contained both private and departmental business, the letters were copied out and were left upon the files.

DEATH OF MRS. A. W. COOKE.

Kingston, May 29.—Mrs. A. W. Cooke, widow of the late Canon Cooke, passed quietly away at her son's house at Barriefield. Mrs. Cooke was born at Halifax in 1837 and was connected on her mother's and father's side with the early naval history of that port. She was a descendant of the old Lecain family on her mother's side, and her father, Felix King, was a naval officer in the admiralty dock yards.

LEAGUE GAME

Belleville baseball team went to Port Hope today to play a Central Ontario League match with the team of that town. Of the game The Port Hope Guide had the following note: "The famous Fred Goyer and his team of Belleville will visit Port Hope Saturday. We still remember that 25 to 2 trimming, which Goyer handed us on our own grounds last year. Revenge is sweet and the local boys will be out for revenge Saturday. The battle will start at 3.15 sharp."

RED SOX 8—Y. M. C. A. 7

Last evening at the fair grounds a fast, snappy game of ball was played between the Red Sox and the Y. M. C. A. team. The Red Sox were victorious but it was only after they had been given the battle of their young lives. The Y. team played grand ball and they deserve much credit for the battle they put up. Yeomans and Kerr were the battery and they certainly were good, especially Yeomans, who pitched great ball. Hunter and Moxam were the battery for the Red Sox and were very prominent in the Red Sox victory. Hunter pitched the best game of his career which shows how good he was. He struck out Jack Lee, the home run hitter of the Y. team three times, every time with men on bases where a hit would have meant runs. Dennis on first base played dazzling ball, making all sorts of wonderful catches and stops. While that boy is around first you can heave it most any place with the knowledge that Bill will get it somehow. Owing to an injury to Joss, the Red Sox short stop, Al. Wardhaugh played short and he put up a good game. Where he shone being at bat having four hits and four runs to his credit. Marakas and Myles completed the fastest infield in the league. Myles got two men stealing second, as did Marakas. Bob Myles, G. Ashley, and B. Joss were the outfielders and did some good work. B. Myles made the best hit of the night, by driving a triple to right field with two men on bases. By winning this game the Red Sox break the three-cornered tie and are now on top. Manager Leo. Barrett and coach H. Collins, were pleased at the way their team is working. They worked hard training the Sox and they certainly got results.

Mr. B. Canning umpired the game to the satisfaction of all.

The line up:

Red Sox—Moxam, Hunter, Dennis, Myles, Marakas, Wardhaugh, Myles, Ashley, Joss.

Y.M.C.A.—Kerr, Yeomans, Leigh, Fowlie, Deacon, Bongard, Anderson, Harnes, Jeffries.

RODOLFO HERRERO HAS SURRENDERED

Mexico City, May 29—Rodolfo Herrero has surrendered to Gen. Lazaro Cardenas and was brought to Mexico City to answer charges of murdering former President Venustiano Carranza, according to telegraphic advices received by Gen. Alvaro Obregon from Gen. Cardenas. Herrero gave himself up at Coyutla, Vera Cruz.

In a joint message to the Senate, Generals Obregon and Gonzales requested that body to designate a chief magistrate of the lower courts to sit at the investigation of Carranza's assassination.

HIGHER PRICES FOR NEWSPRINT

Canadian Publishers May Pay $110 a Ton After July 1.

Montreal, May 29—The announcement by the International Paper Company of a price for newsprint of $115 a ton after July indicates that Canadian prices will pass the $100 mark on the same date, and The Financial Post understands that at least $110 a ton will be charged. This will include Canadian publishers as well. The increase for export would be $20 a ton, and to publishers in Canada an advance from $80 to $110.

NO MILITARY TRAINING CAMPS THIS SUMMER

Ottawa, May 27—There may be no military training camps this summer. Some time ago it was intimated that the training camps would be opened this year, but now, for several reasons, the subject is being reconsidered. It is said that there will likely be difficulty in getting men to go to the camps. Returned soldiers are busy re-establishing themselves in civil avocations. Re-organization of old militia units has not been completed in many cases. In some military districts commanders have not been appointed to such units. Hence, it is feared that camps might not be a success this year. A decision on the question is expected by the end of the week. Even if camps are not opened, there will be training as usual for units in urban centres. Organization of units will proceed in rural districts. By next summer units may be ready for training under canvas.

WIZE GAZABOS WIN UNDYING HONOR.

Once Upon a Time there was a City Council who, realizing that Fifty-Cent Dollars would some day soon look more like One Dollar and a Half in value received, and that many men might be glad of employment, decided to Stand Pat and spend no money on Public Works of any kind for one year, outside of absolutely necessary repairs, and to Lock the Civic Treasury and Throw Away the Key, so that This One and That One, this society and that organization which came begging for a civic grant would be turned empty away, for this was an Off Year—a year to pay debts and prepare for the Slump, not to pile up new ones.

That was Once-Upon-a-Time, and after that came the Great Reaction when work was scarce and Some People Went Hungry—Money was Cheap and Labor was Plenty and that there Wise Gazabo Council fished the Key of the Treasury out of the lake and straightway proceeded to make those Fifty-Cent Dollars act like Two Dollars at a Dutch Picnic, and Public Works Bloomed and Blossomed in profusion, while the Taxpayers smiled and everybody was Happy.

The members of that City Council were elected forthwith to the Hall of Fame, their praises resounded around the world as the only Wise and Prudent Gazabos in a mad world of crazy spenders.

Any Fool can spend money, but it takes a Wise Guy to Save a Stake for the Lean Years.

Then the darn old alarm clock went off and the Editor opened his eyes on the same old gay and careless world booming along on the same old ticket, eat, drink and be merry today, tomorrow may never come, and the Miracle City Council with the shade of George Ade sadly dissovled in the morning sunlight.

AN UNNECESSARY BURDEN.

Canadian publishers struggling in the choking embrace of the United States paper octopus, have enough to worry them without being subject to the tax on manufactures. If some bonehead had not asked for a ruling on the subject it is more than likely newspapers would never have been considered as coming within the compass of the new taxes. Someone is always spilling the beans. However, here's to carry on, if we can, and the only way we can is for the Government to provide protection at once so that Canadian newspapers will be assured regular supplies of newsprint paper at fair prices.

TAXING THE GLAD GAME.

Dominion and Provincial Parliaments seem to be trying to outdo each other in creating new forms of taxation to hit the greatest number of pockets possible. Even beer and spirits, boosted to exorbitant prices now by excessive imposts, have been saddled with more taxes—thirty cents a gallon on beer and two dollars a gallon on spirits—perhaps three times the cost of manufacture. Other things also get the hoist, but the public pays, and smiles—and as long as the public has a laugh left all is well. The public seeks to escape the increasing worries of trying to make both ends meet by light amusement, and finds that this also is taxed to the limit to pay for the high cost of government, and the price of entertainment keeps constantly climbing, for in this field the government finds the easiest crop of easy tax money. Circus, drama, movies, races, dances—wherever a few or many gather together to play the glad game—there stands the tax-gatherer, invisible, but represented in an apparently endless roll of war tax tickets. It's a great game; but what if we weaken?

YANKEE YELLOW PLAGUE KILLS CANADIAN PAPERS.

The Peterboro Daily and Weekly Review has joined the procession to the journalistic grave-yard under the pressure of high and steadily increasing costs of publication, and now Peterboro, with over twenty thousand population, is served by one daily paper only—and the survivor will only be able to live by vastly increasing rates for subscription and advertising, and will not be able to live at all if the United States control of Canadian pulp and paper is extended to its logical conclusion and Canadian newspapers find it impossible to secure supplies of Canadian paper.

Canadian publishers are already finding that their requests for paper supplies are being referred to United States publishers for decision as to whether Canadian newspapers can be supplied with paper from Canadian paper mills controlled by United States interests.

In the interests of the Canadian newspaper reading public the Government of Canada should take immediate steps to protect Canadian publishers and prevent them from being driven out of business by a monopoly formed in the interests of United States publishers.

CRISP COMMENT

Pulpwood from Crown lands in Canada can not be exported, but must be manufactured into paper in this country. United States paper magnates who have bottled up the best of the pulp and paper supplies of Canada are now massing for a frontal attack upon the Canadian Crown lands embargo which they expect to sweep into the discard as easy as raising the price of two-cent paper to twenty-two.

Canada's claim against Germany for loss sustained by reason of the war amounts to nearly two billion dollars. Of course Canada will not get the full amount, for Germany is settling for twenty-five cents on the dollar, or less, but whatever our share is we want it, just to show the once haughty Huns that war is hell, and then some, even if there is a possibility of a generous victor given to discounts for slow notes.

Hitting a man when he is down is not British fair play, and old John Barleycorn has a legitimate complaint against the new budget which takes another thirty cents per gallon government rake-off on beer and two dollars a gallon on spirits. According to the Salvation Army "a man may be down but he is never out"; but if everybody is going to take a whack at old John Barleycorn he will soon be both down and out. (Loud applause from the Amen Corner!)

Produce and Save. Thrift will prevent the ship of state from wreck on the jagged rocks of unrest and worse caused by high prices, selfishness, greed and profiteering, so the sages glibly tell us. Quite so; let us shift our menus from T-bone steaks to chuck steak and horn trimmings, cut out potatoes, cream, fresh bread, pastry, etc., and get down to prophets' fare. Fine, but let us all do it—the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, the banker, financier and favorites of fortune pitchforked into wealth by war conditions. Let us all go on rations if that is the cure, and put away the frock coat, high hat and skimpy ball gown with so much eastern and southern exposure.

Have potatoes got eyes that they see not? sadly asks the Guelph Herald. Editors have eyes but they can not see potatoes at the price asked.

In support of her claim that $175 a month alimony is not sufficient to furnish "bare necessities," Mrs. Katie Wolfe Hart, young wife of James H. Hart, 83 years old and wealthy, of Brooklyn, N.Y., sets forth that among her reasonable yearly needs are three summer dresses at $50 each, three winter dresses at $100 each, four to six pairs of shoes at $15 a pair, twelve pairs of stockings at $3 a pair, three summer hats at $16 each, three winter hats at $15 each, four pairs of gloves at $4 a pair, etc. If Mrs. Hart dines as extravagantly as she dresses, hubby may also be called upon to settle some doctor bills.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Attorney-General of the United States is to be known henceforth as Mitchell Palmer, lopping off the superfluous Alexander with which he started his career. An Eye for Business

Kitchener Telegraph

Once Great Britain prided herself upon being "Mistress of the Seas."

That was before the days of gasoline.

Now John Bull wants to be King of Oil.

Sir E. Mackay Edgar says Great Britain has obtained control of all oil fields outside of the United States, and predicts that the time is coming soon when Americans will propel their automobiles and airplanes with the aid of British "gas."

Edgar argues that being king of oil will prove even more profitable than playing the title role of mistress of the seas. But, at this distance, according to a U. S. exchange, it would appear that Britain was killing two birds with one stone by thus cornering the worlds oil supply. Probably the ship of tomorrow, commercial or naval, must have oil or stay tied to the pier. The nation that has the fuel oil will not only drive your automobiles, but your ships as well.

Great Britain may be up against an unprecedented exchange situation, but she still, apparently has an eye for business.

THEPOET'S CORNER

OPEN ROAD

There's an open road before us
  Stretching on for many a mile;
And although before we reach it
  We must wait a little while,
Wait—and tread a trail that's rocky,
  Tread a trail that patience tries;
There's an open road before us—
And it leads to Paradise!

O, that open road is sunny!
And it leads through green fields, honey,
There are things not bought with money
  On the road to Paradise!

There are skies of gold and azure—
  There are meadows sweet with dew;
There are birds and bees and squirrels—
  There are flowers of every hue;
Nothing that the Lord created
  Which uplifts and glorifies
But is strewn with lavish plenty
  On the road to Paradise.

(O, that open road is sunny
And it leads through green fields, honey,
There are things not bought with money
  On the road to Paradise!)

"SPECS"

Great-granpa's "specs" have rims of horn,
They are the kind he's always worn,
My daddy's "specs" have rims of gold,
They do not make him look so old,
When daddy on his motor bike rides
He has another pair besides.
At first I felt afraid of him,
They make him look so fierce and grim.
Aunt Sarah's have a handle, too,
And seem to look you through and through.
My Mummy, when she reads and sews
Just pinches hers upon her nose.
My uncle shuts his left eye tight,
And sticks a round glass in his right.
Gran wears her's on her nose's tip
And looks above! I fear they'll slip.
Aunt says gran has another pair
(Which I have never seen her wear;
I think she keeps them put away).
Rose-colored "specs," I heard aunt say."

You Know What You Think of Them

The worst extravagance, from your neighbors' point of view, is buying what the neighbors think you can't afford—Boston Globe.

And the chances are at least even that the neighbors have the right view of the matter.—Biddeford Journal.

A Double Surprise

The young man with the uncut hair and funny look had submitted a poem for editorial consideration.

"Well," said the man behind the blue pencil, after a hurried glance at it, "how does thirty shillings strike you?"

"Why—er—really," stammered the rhymster, "that is more than I —er—"

"Well, that's the best I can do," interrupted the busy editor, "I couldn't think of printing a poem like that for less!"

To His Sorrow

"Indeed!" said the affable passenger, and he cast an admiring glance at the man who sat in the corner of the compartment facing him. "So you're a music hall artist, are you? Dear, dear! That's very interesting! D'you know, I'm a banker and it must be at least twenty years since I was last in a music hall.'

"Ah!" sighed the other, gazing wistfully through the window at the panorama changing quickly as the train thundered along the metals. "And d'you know, sir, it must be at least twenty years since I was in a bank."

Got the Wrong Office

"Got any mail for Mike Howe?" asked the stranger at the small town postoffice window.

"No, nor anybody else's cow," retorted the indignant postmaster.

THUMBNAIL HISTORY OF WALLACE SHOWS

The billboards and dead walls about the city are proclaiming in all the eloquence of pictorial art that the Hagenbeck-Great Walalce shows combined is to visit Belleville, Wednesday, June 9. Great interest attaches to the event because amusement lovers will genbeck-Great Wallace shows combined performance of the two greatest circus organizations on the road. The trained wild animals are famed in every nation on the globe. At the European headquarters of the show, London, England, the animals are transported after their capture and taught to perform remarkable feats. There are lions that ride upon the backs of galloping horses; tigers that ride bicycles; polar bears that play roller coaster and in fact there may be seen during the performance almost every wild animal broken and subdued to execute tricks. Almost a score of noted wild animal trainers have charge of the performing wild animals They all perform in a massive steel arena.

The history of the Great Wallace circus is part of the history of America. With the stalwart B. E. Wallace as the originator the show grew from a single wagon to one of the most colossal institutions of its kind. Starting as a poor Indiana farmer boy Mr Wallace by perserverance and honesty in the course of thirty years, saw his show reach the pinnacle of America's circusses. He was once so poor that he was glad to work for fifty cents per week. Today he is rated as America's richest circusman. The assertion has never been questioned. Yet, with his many and varied interests he devotes his personal attention to the interest of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. There are in the neighborhood of 1,000 people connected with the big show. He personally engages every attache. The combined shows are transported from city to city upon three of the largest circus trains in America. If they were any longer the railroads would be unable to handle them. The twenty-two tents that house the great circus covers a small size farm, forming in fact a complete city within itself.

BULL MOOSE FOUND GRAZING ON OTTAWA GOLF GROUNDS

Ottawa, May 29.—A huge bull moose chose the grounds of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club as a grazing ground this morning, and created considerable commotion while members of the club and attendants endeavored to capture him alive. After the attacking force had made several futile attempts to surround him, the great animal, with springing lopes, made off for the northern woods. Native red deer have often been seen in this vicinity, but this is the first time on record that a "monarch of the northern woods" has appeared.

GOLFERS VISIT PICTON

On Thursday afternoon a number of Belleville lady and gentlemen golfers visited Picton and after a friendly game with Picton golfers were entertained by their hosts to supper at the Royal Hotel—Picton Gazette.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED

A new McLaughlin touring car owned by Mr. Marshall Palmer, of Picton, was stolen from in front of Gilbert's restaurant. The car was found on the Bloomfield Road in the middle of the highway. Something had gone wrong with the gasoline feed and the car was abandoned unhurt.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

At Prescott William White, alias Lowe arrested at Belleville, appeared before Magistrate Halpin on a charge of forgery. He was committed for trial and lodged in jail here this morning by Chief Jackson. He is also wanted in Ottawa for the theft of an automobile.

NEGLECTED TO PAY BOARD BILL

Three employes of Deloro Smelting & Refining Co. whose homes are in Montreal attempted to get out without paying their board bill. They were arrested and on Tuesday morning were given a hearing before Justices of the Peace Wm. Bonter and H. R. Pearce of Marmora. After hearing the evidence the magistrates committed them to Belleville for trial.

WORLD RECORD COW

Mr. E. B. Purtelle of Bloomfield is to be congratulated on being the owner of a world record cow. Countess Alcartra Segis, a senior yearling has just completed a 30-day test at 1 year, 11 months and 9 days, with a record of butter, 7 days 26.16 lbs; milk 7 days 462.9; butter, 30 days, 1719.6; milk, 1 day, 71.50. This heifer is a daughter of the famous Purtelle and Leavens sire, King Segis Alcartra Spafford who has many other famous daughters with high records.—Picton Gazette.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

While returning home from Trout Lake after a pleasant days' outing with friends on Monday last, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Shephard and family received a severe shaking up, when their team took fright and ran away, the glaring headlight on a C. N. R. engine which happened to be passing caused the accident. The accident happened just north of the station, at a point where the road comes in close contact with the railway. Mr. Shephard had his shoulder badly injured and his young son, Kit, was picked up unconscious. Mrs. Shephard and daughter escaped unhurt, but received a severe shaking up.—Bancroft Times.

JOINT TERMINALS

While the formal taking over of the Grand Trunk will occur only after the arbitration has determined the value of the stock, the creation of a board to manage it means practically its absorption into the government system. The board, which comprises representatives both of the G. T. R. and C. N. R. will not have anything to do with the Canadian National lines, save as regards evolving plans whereby the two services can be co-ordinated. In this regard it is intimated at Ottawa that, in several instances, duplication of lines and terminals will be cut out and that train services will be worked in together. As an instance, the transcontinental trains, starting from Montreal by the Grand Trunk, may go from Ottawa to Winnipeg by the Canadian Northern and from there to the coast by the G. T. P. In Ontario, the network of local lines will be coupled with the C. N. R. as feeders. Wherever possible, joint terminals will be arranged for and duplicate ticket offices in the same city will be eliminated.

BICYCLES RECOVERED

Two bicycles which were recently stolen in the city have been recovered by the police, also the culprit who took them. The latter is a boy of rather tender years who appears to have a craze for taking wheels.

RESCUED CHILDREN

Capt. Ruston, Inspector for the Children's Aid Society, accompanied by Crown Attorney Carnew visited Maynooth this week and brought back three children, made wards of the Society by local magistrates. Capt. Ruston found conditions very bad in some northern sections where children are surrounded by influences of the worst kind and where morality is noticeable principally by its absence.

CALLS FOR FIREMEN

Yesterday afternoon at 3.50 the fire brigade was called to the rear of Mr. Carney's store on the west side of Front street. From a bon fire in a yard a spark set fire to some papers which were in an outbuilding nearby. The quick response on behalf of the brigade averted what might have proved to be a bad fire. The damage done was trifling.

DIED IN B. C.

A former well known G. T. R. employee passed away some days ago in Duncan, B. C., in Isaac Newton Van Norman, who was for 18 years foreman bridgeman on the G. T R. with headquarters at Montreal. He was born in Campbellford, Ont., 58 years ago and 13 years ago went to British Columbia. His wife and four children survive.

LEG FRACTURED

Evan Tashoff, a Bulgarian, in the employ of the Standard Paving Co., was this morning the victim of a painful accident. He was working about the steam conrete mixer which is in operation on Catherine street when he was struck by what is termed the skip, a heavy iron shaft. The skip struck him on the right leg fracturing it above the knee. As soon as possible the unfortunate man was conveyed to the hospital, where the fracture was reduced. Had he been struck upon the head it would, no doubt, have proved fatal.

PENNY BAG

When the Women's Christian Association distributed the penny bags for a monthly collection in aid of the Hospital and Home, it was in the expectation of realizing a sum sufficiently large to help combat the H. C. of L. problem. So far the results have been most gratifying. Each ward in the city is doing its best to reach the top place on the list. Ketcheson Ward led last month by a small surplus. Every one knows the work done by a Hospital in any community, but few realize what a splendid work is being done in a small way by the Home for old people, situated in West Belleville. It is in the hope of enlarging this work that a liberal response is being asked for each month. Have your bags ready when the collector calls, for the sick, the poor, and the needy are with us always.

MEMORIAL TABLET UNVEILED

A very pleasing and impressive ceremony took place in the Bancroft Continuation School last Friday afternoon when a beautiful memorial tablet was unveiled. This tablet bears the names of fourteen Bancroft heroes who attended school here and later fell in the service of their country during the Great War. The tablet is of polished brass, mounted on an oak frame. Under a royal crest surmounted by the flags of the allies is the following inscription Erected by the Women's Institute, Bancroft, Ontario, Roll of Honour. In memory of the men who gave their lives that we might live H. L. Jarman, Captain; H. Maxwell, Gnr.; E. Whitefoot, Pte.; W. Davy, Gnr.; W. Powers, Lance Sgt.; L. Moore, Pte.; D. Collins, Sgt.; A. Collins, Lieut.; F. Daly, Pte.; F. Sweet, Pte.; L. Meather, Pte.; S. Robinson, Pte.; M. Stimers, Pte.; W. Laundry, Pte. Mr. E. J. Keenan ably occupied the chair during the ceremony. Musical numbers on the programme included our national song, 'O Canada,' by the school, 'Soldiers of the King,' by a number of girls and a solo by Charles Jones. These numbers were given by Rev. H. R. Pettem, Rev. M. E. Wilson, Mr. Keenan and Mr. Bradley. The tablet was unveiled by Mrs. Jarman and Mrs. Davy, after which the ceremony ended with the singing of 'God Save the King.'

Simpson was stolen from the armories here and enclosed therein was a cheque made by Capt. T. McManus to Simpson. That same day Wilson obtained $10 from Leo Young, a Chinaman, on the cheque and was to get the balance later but he was subsequently arrested. He pleaded not guilty to the charges preferred. Mr. Carnew for Crown, and Mr. A. Abbott for the accused.

Music will be furnished by the famous G.W.V.A. band. Thursday, June 3 will be Belleville's Biggest Day and provision will be made for a vast army of visitors, while the gay scenes will be preserved for future showing on the screen by the motion picture men.

BIG BUILDING PROGRAM IN WESTERN CANADA

The 1920 building program in Western Canada for which it is estimated $85,000,000 will be spent, includes the building of 50 new branch banks, 25 churches, 60 public garages, 10 hospitals, hotels and institutions, 10 mills and factories, 3 packing plants, 8 power development schemes, Canadian Pacific Railway docks and station, technical school at Calgary, universities at Saskatoon and Edmonton, 10 new ships at Vancouver and Victoria, and an irrigation scheme at Sumas Lake, B. C., which has already been commenced, and which will reclaim a vast acreage of land, costing $2,000,000. These figures were given out by A. R. Whittemore, manager of the McLean Daily Reports, Limited, Toronto, on his return from a two months' tour of the west.

Speaking of building trade conditions, Mr. Whittemore declared that there is not much likelihood of prices in trade coming down this year. He figures to show that in the case of 15 basic building materials the prices have advanced 108 per cent. since 1914

Manitoba's program is well under way and it is expected that 800 houses 40 schools and 10 warehouses, involving an expenditure of $25,000,000 will be created. In Winnipeg and environs 600 houses and 14 schools, costing approximately $4,500,000 will be erected, it is expected.

Put Nature's Curve into your Glasses

If you put a flat glass before the eye it can see distinctly through the centre, but toward the edges the angle changes so that sight is not so good.

But if you put a glass curved like the eyeball—a Toric lens—before the eye, the field of vision is enlarged. It is an improvement over the flat lens in sight, in comfort and appearance.

Blackburn makes a specialty of Toric lenses. Let him fit you with such glasses.

AN ONTARIO MINISTER

Cornwall, May 29.—A special meeting of the Presbytery of Glengarry was held at Alexandria yesterday, at which the resignation of Rev. J. W. Fulton from the charge at Dalhousie Mills was accepted. Mr. Fulton resigns to go to Scotland, where his father, who has died, was engaged in a law suit as a claimant to the Earldom of Eglinton. The death of his father necessitates his return to Scotland to continue the suit.

Legislators Will Improve O.T.A.

TORONTO May 19—Premier Drury in the Legislature named the special committee to conduct during the recess an inquiry into the operations of the Ontario Temperance Act with power to report as to improvements in the Act or its administration. J. W. Curry, South-east Toronto, after the names had been submitted, thought he should be on the committee, adding "I don't know why my name was not on that committee."

The Premier replied he had nothing to do with it, saying he had asked the different organizations in the House to submit names. He thought it would be a loss if Mr. Curry were not on the committee and added Mr. Curry's name, together with that of Mr. Warren, U.F.O. member for North Renfrew.

The personnel of the committee is: U.F.O.—Messrs. Drury, Raney, Nixon, Watson, McCreary, Sandy, Lethbridge, Casselman, Hicks, Warren. Liberals—Messrs. Dewart, Marshall, Tolmie, Hay, Clarke, Curry Pinard. Conservatives—Messrs. Godfrey, Ross, Henry, Ecclestone, Thompson, (N.E. Toronto). Labor—Messrs. C. F. Swayze and P. Heenan.

When the item of $250,000 for enforcement of the O.T.A. came up for consideration, Mr. Dewart moved:

"That the resolution be not now concurred in, but be recommitted to Committee of Supply with instructions to amend the same by reducing item 3 from $250,000 to $150,000.

"And that this House is further of the opinion that the machinery for the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act is unnecessarily expensive that the number of commissioners should be reduced to one and that such commissioner should devote all his time to the business of his office under the direction of the Minister.

"That the present Government vendors' system is unduly expensive and should be reconstructed.

"And that the salaries and expenses of the Government Dispensaries with all accounts relating to the same should form part of the Public Accounts of the Province."

Mr. Dewart's amendment was lost.

Belleville Citizen Views Sights Of Pacific Coast

RECOLLECTIONS OF INTERESTING PLACES VISITED IN CALIFORNIA, OREGON AND BRITISH COLUMBIA BY J. J. B. FLINT — MET SEVERAL BELLEVILLE OLD BOYS.

In commencing the journey from Los Angeles to San Francisco of about five hundred miles, you can choose one of two routes. One takes you along the ocean shore for many miles. Occasionally, steamers are seen bound for different ports. It is pleasant to watch the great waves forming and dashing along the beach. Here and there, are fishing boats overhauling their nets, and bringing in many fish Should there be a strong wind, they seek shelter. Upon no occasion have I seen a storm. At several points, tall columns have been erected and from them appear iron or steel rods hanging in the air. A few years ago looking at these columns and rods, one would have imagined some lunatic from aberration of the brain had built these towers. Now we learn that from these rods depart electrical messages which circuit the globe, faster than Shakespeare's "Puck" who in a moment or two put a girdle around the world. These rods carry the news of the world in a circuit of the globe, in a few seconds. Ships, storm tossed and endangered, are saved from loss and their passengers landed in safety. Verily, we are "gods" and there are apparently no limits to the intelligence of a Marconi.

Out from the shore, among the waves, are oil wells. These are drilled to great depths and yield the sought for oil.

JAP QUESTION ACUTE

The Japanese have villages, which depend upon fishing for a livelihood. There is a strong feeling against the Japanese. This arises from several causes. They are industrious. The great agricultural products of the valleys are brought to perfection through their wonderful industry. Japanese and Mexicans are the workers of California. The best flower shops and nurseries are controlled by Japs. They are to be found in all trades and occupations; cleanly, well dressed and intelligent. I have been told but for their labors, the people would starve. No Jap appears before the Police Magistrate. The birth rate is immense. The American birth rate small. I have never seen an application for divorce made by a Jap. Lawyers grow wealthy from handling many divorce cases in the United States. The Jap children born in California are American citizens. When a Jap contracts to remove a crop of grain, his entire family join in the work with profitable results.

PICTURESQUE ROUTE

If you desire to see the farms, orchards etc., you go by a route which takes you through such large cities as Fresno, Bakersfield. The many cities are growing rapidly. Fresno is in a grape country. Fields of this delicious fruit, become raisins and native wines. Immense orchards of fruits of various kinds are seen in every direction. Frost is not feared by grape growers. The eighteenth amendment forbids intoxicating wine to be manufactured. Yet the fact is, that much wine is still produced. A friend largely interested in land, told me that a grape grower told him his sales of grapes last year netted him $7,000 more than the preceding year.

Farm buildings are generally inferior to ours. The houses do not equal our farm residences. They have no winter to fear. Their stock does not require shelter from snow, as none falls.

Much of the country for five hundred miles cannot be described as a fruit country, but beans, potatoes, barley, oats, alfalfa, pumpkins, melons and strawberries prove very remunerative. Cotton gives a splendid return, but not in the vicinity I am describing.

It is broken by mountains and woodpeople use wood for household purposes. I saw but little coal. There seemed to be an abundance of firewood. Wherever there are mountains, wood can be secured.

It seems strange that on warm days bright and sunny, you look at mountain tops and find masses of snow the year round. Sometimes streams of milky whiteness run down the mountain sides, refreshing the valleys and presenting a charming contrast to the dark mountain foliage.

HARVESTING BY CONTRACT

The crops are generally handled by companies. This saves the producer much trouble, and he is certain to receive fair treatment. The great orange crops are treated in this manner.

Soon Oregon is entered. The country now assumes a different character. It is broken by moudtains and woodlands. Great ranges of snow capped mountains, valleys filled with grain. The railway has to horse-shoe constantly, seeking valleys and canyons between mountains. Often on curves you see the engine and about half the train. Occasionally, one would see orchards. Much of the land seems recently broken. The Shasta Range has many mountains. Towering above others, is Mount Shasta 13,280 feet high. Intensely white from continual snow and outlined against the deep blue sky, it presents a charming appearance. There are also many beautiful lakes and rivers. Colopadria and Walkers Ranges, Mount Hood 12,000 feet high.

A BELLEVILLE BOY

Passing Salem, you strike the great industrial city of Portland on the Willamette River, which runs into the Columbia River, and finds a home in the Pacific Ocean at Astoria. In this city is the residence of Hugh Blair Barrister, formerly a Belleville boy. Of all the many cities I have seen, none of them compare with Portland as the centre of an immense lumber industry. The Willamette is wider than the Moira and has as many as ten large lumber mills in the city and vicinity. The river is as full of saw logs as the Moira used to be in her palmy days of old. The country adjacent is heavily wooded. It was a delightful sight to see all these industries at work. The Columbia is a wide river of great length. Its banks are crowned with farms. The general appearance of the country resembles Canada. If your readers desire to follow this journey, it would be better to consult a map.

MORE BELLEVILLE OLD-BOYS

From Portland I entrained for Tacoma, on the Puget Sound. Many years ago, I visited this city which is the home of Sam Baldwin, Dr. Coleman and Mr. Ashton, Barrister, all Belleville boys. I motored for forty miles to the great city of Seattle, also situated on the Sound. The Sound is United States water. It terminates where it joins the ocean at Port Townsend. Opposite the last named city, is Vancouver Island, separated from Port Townsend by the Strait De Fuca.

Facing the ocean stands the queen city of Victoria, the capital of British Columbia. The people of this city think it a veritable Garden of Eden. Its climate is perfection, its coal mines inexhaustible. Mr. Dunsmuir was a miner working in coal, as a day man. I understand that by wonderful luck, he became possessed of inexhaustible coal mines on Vancouver Island, obtaining the same for a song. He became a multi-millionaire and the great man of the country. His son obtained eminence and is still the lord-paramount of Victoria.

An elderly Scot from the city of Victoria has bowled with me for two seasons in Los Angeles. He said he has in Vancouver Island a soft coal mine which is a steam shovel proposition. That is the shovel gets out the coal and lands it on the cars at a cost of thirty cents per ton. For each ton, this gentleman receives $3.80. It was said that his income ran into thousands daily. I do not know his name. He may be Dunismuir.

BOLSHEVIK INVASION

The good things of this world appear according to the Bolshevik to be unequally divided. He thinks it is time to make a re-distribution of all lands and treasures, each person receiving the same share as his neighbor. A good many wise men in Los Angeles fear a revolution. No person has yet been able to compute the number of I.W.W. and Bolsheviki in the United States. The soldiers are at present used to arrest suspicious persons. I saw halls filled with socialists. They were guarded in their language. It is the dregs of Europe, ignorant, deprived, blood-thirsty, who are the Bolshevik used as tools by designing men.

Seattle is a splendid city.

Both Tacoma, Seattle and Port Townsend are sea ports. From them you can steam into the ocean.

SIDNEY OLD-BOY

Seattle possesses that splendid former Sidney boy, M. MacCaughey, who in the prime of life, has made a fortune in lumber in connection with the Northern Pacific Railway. Mrs. McCaughey is an aunt of Miss Hudson, daughter of the late W. P. Hudson.

At Seattle the splendid steamer Prince George, 416 feet in length, the length of a city block as high as a four story building, nearly two hundred officers, stewards, etc., accommodations and menu, equal to the best hotels, started on her trip to Skaginay.

I saw Mount Renaud from Tacoma upon a former visit. From apex to base, the whole mountain seems to be pearl white tinged with the blush of a red rose. It is only when the atmosphere is just right that this charming appearance is presented.

BEAUTIFUL VANCOUVER

Steaming to Vancouver, you glimpse the ocean which was very well behaved Soon we landed at Vancouver, the home of many former citizens of Belleville. When I visited this city years ago I looked across the water to the north and saw three or four white buildings which I learned were Indian Missions. Today you see North Vancouver, a growing, thriving city. Great ferry boats ply beneath the city and North Vancouver. The beautiful climate, seldom having a severe winter, enables flowers to mature in all their loveliness when farther to the east, the lands are still enveloped in a white mantle. One is struck by the fine streets, public buildings and beautiful residences. Of course, Stanley Park is the gem of the city. Its great trees of the Douglas pine attract every visitor. It is regrettable, that so many of these lordly trees have died. Their many stumps are not picturesque. An exceedingly fine collection of animals beautiful flowers, conservatories meet the eye. The park is of great extent and affords many beautiful view; It is a splendid breathing place, the lungs of the large city. The Museum is a wonderful storehouse of objects of great interest, connected with the Indian tribes, inhabiting Queen Charlotte Islands. Their totem poles are of great length, carved in most grotesque designs. Their wonderful mats, cooking and household vessels, made of the native grass, display great ingenuity and good taste. The sea front is filled with vessels bound for many ports. The Prince George gave evidence of her intention to start on her voyage, so I got on board and prepared to enjoy a delightful trip upon these great waters. I was fortunate. Had I been one day later, I would have had to abandon my trip northwards because of a strike which effectually tied up all navigation. The Prince George was permitted to make her trip upon the understanding that upon her return she would be tied up. Enormous losses must be sustained by the steamship companies.

Yours truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT

FOURTEEN MEN INJURED DURING AN EXPLOSION

Portland, Me., May 28.—Fourteen firemen were burned or cut by flying glass from a hot air explosion while fighting a fire in a lunch room and an adjoining cigar store on Temple Street, today. The others were only slightly injured. The force of the explosion was so great that two pairs of horses attached to fire apparatus on the opposite side of the street were thrown to the sidewalk, and a large piece of plate glass was forced into the side of a hose wagon.

BOMB EXPLOSION IN ARMORIES BEING INVESTIGATED

Hartford, Conn., May 28.—Small details of the state guardsmen were kept on duty throughout the night as the result of a "bomb" explosion in the cellar kitchen of the state armory and arsenal last night. The capitol and the Connecticut river bridge to East Hartford were kept under guard until daylight. Experts had opportunity today to examine fragments of the "bomb." Its outside casing was a fifteen inch section of brass tubing, apparently. The material damage to the kitchen was not great.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Remarkable Statement of Woman Who Was Nothing but Skin and Bones

You have heard the old adage, "Laugh and Grow Fat", but this woman tells of a more reliable method. She says: "I was nothing but skin and bones — was weak, nervous, rundown—could not sleep, and was unfit for work. Three doctors had failed to help me. One day I saw VINOL advertised and commenced to take it, and I really believe it saved my life. I have regained my strength, flesh and health, and everyone is so surprised to see such a change in me in such a short time."

The reason VINOL was so successful in this case is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cods' livers, aided by the blood making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites. Thus in a natural manner it increases the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles, and imparts strength, health and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body.

Physicians recommend it and druggists guarantee it.

Exact Back Taxes From Nickel Co.

Government to Insist on Payment For Years Illegal Flat Rate Was in In Force

The Ontario Government proposes to institute an investigation into the operations of the International Nickel Company of Ontario and its obligation to pay over to the Province a large sum of money for the years when the illegal flat rate taxation was imposed. An assurance to this effect was given in the Legislature by Hon. E. C. Drury in suggesting the withdrawal of a resolution by H. Hartley Dewart, K.C., asking for an expression of opin ion by the House. The Liberal Leader took Mr. Drury's statement as a pledge that acton would be taken and withdrew his amendment.

Ontario To Spend Over $17,900,000

Increase of Several Millions in Expenditures is Foreshadowed

An increase of several million dollars in the expenditure of the province for the fiscal year of 1920-1921 is indicated by the main estimates for that year tabled last session is roughly about $4,000,000 but the actual increase is much less since the 1919-1920 estimates provided last session were considerably under the actual amounts required for the business of the province. The total main estimates tabled amount to $17,941,557, compared with $13,814,258.

The increase is largely due to the greatly augmented expenditure contemplated for the advancement of education. The vote for education will be $4,403,342 or an increase of nearly a million dollars. The new Department of Labor of which Hon. Walter Rollo is head, will require $770,000. About $250,000 will be needed to cover increased grants to hospitals and charities, while $750,000 additional will be necessary to meet the increased cost of maintenance of public institutions. About $400,000 extra is asked for public buildings and repairs to Government buildings, while salary increases to the civil service, etc., are represented in an increase of $390,000 in civil government.

HYDRO REQUIRES $7,590,000

A new feature of the main estimates this year is the inclusion of the estimates of the Hydro-Electric Commission and the T. and N. O. The Hydro is able to forecast expenditures of at least $7,590,000, but this covers only five months from November 1, 1920 to March 31, 1921. The T. and N. O. estimates that it will require $450,000 for new locomotives and equipment for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1921. The details of the Hydro estimate include four big items, $5,000,000 for the Queenston-Chippewa development, $400,000 on the Niagara system, $1,000,000 on the Thunder Bay system and $750,000 on the Central Ontario system.

QUEBEC WANTS LAND HELD BY MENNONITES

Swift Current, Sask., May 28—Jacob Friesen, head of the Mennonite colony south of Swift Current, left a few days ago for Mississippi, to make the final arrangements in connection with removal of the Mennonites from this district to settle upon land in the southern States. If arrangements in Mississippi are not made the colony will consider a proposal to move to Brazil.

The Mennonites are receiving offers from several quarters for the 150,000 acres of rich farm land they contemplate vacating. Following an offer from one American syndicate recently efforts are now being made by representatives of French settlers in Quebec and Maine to obtain options on every possibly colony farm. The price offered is $40 an acre to include implements and the season's crop. Crop prospects are so favorable at present that many of the Mennonities will refuse to join in any exodus that may take place. The Provincial Government has arranged for the erection of several more schools in the settlement and to enforce the School Attendance Act.

GIRLS BROUGHT BACK FROM STATES

Toronto, May 28—In custody of Detective-Sergeant Wickett, Olive and Alma Chrysler, aged 19 and 17 respectively, were brought back to the city from Detroit early yesterday morning to face charges of theft. Olive, the police say, was employed as a domestic in the home of R. M. Thompson, 34 Parkwood avenue, and Alma worked in a similar capacity for William Gifford, 102 Spadina avenue. On May 10 the girls disappeared from their respective places of employment, and at the same time jewelry, silks and clothing were found to be missing. The girls were located where they had secured employment in Detroit. Search of the girls trunks, the police say, revealed a number of silk dresses answering the description given by the victims of the thefts. The jewelry, however, has not yet been recovered.

Something About Sneezing

A JOKE is a joke and a sneeze is a sneeze, but a sneeze is not a joke, as a rule, though the dictionary, somewhat mechanically and facetiously, says that it is "the convulsive motion and explosive sound attendant upon the ejection of air through the nose or mouth." This may be true, through I have little faith in dictionaries.

A great many people, when they sneeze, are like Mrs. Sparrit. You have forgotten who Mrs. Sparrit was? Tut, tut! turn to your "Hard Times" by a somewhat celebrated author, Charles Dickens, and read: "Mrs. Sparrit with a violent cold upon her, and her stately frame so racked by continual sneezes that it seemed in danger of dismemberment." Mrs. Sparrit's condition at the moment was certainly no joke, and we have all probably been in the same condition at some time or other.

The—or a—sneeze has an interesting history. From the time of Adam to the days of Jacob sneezing was a divine sign of death, but Jacob, by making sacrifice and prayers, succeeded in changing it to a sign of life. From Jacob's day you may have noticed that all babies have sneezed on coming into the world.

The first man that sneezed was so surprised that he couldn't understand what was happening, and straightway went and insured his life. Our ancestors were equally alarmed and astonished by their sneezes, and when gradually the idea of spirits and gods and devils developed to account for mysteries, naturally the sneeze came in for its share of superstitious explanation.

One of the loudest sneezes recorded by history was delivered by Timotheus the Athenian. He and his fleet were just putting out to sea on a hazardous expedition when he sneezed so heartily and loudly that it startled the entire fleet. The sailors took the sneeze as a bad omen and demanded that he instantly return to port. Timotheus, however, rose up and spoke thusly: "And do you wonder, O Athenians, that amongst so many there should be one with a cold in his head?" These grave words restored the shattered confidence of the sailors and they sailed off to victory without more ado.

Then there is the famous sneeze of Xenophon. This sneeze decided the fate of Athens. There came a moment in one of his wars when his soldiers were wavering. Suddenly one of his soldiers sneezed loudly—extremely loudly. The idea was promptly spread by some ingenious officer that the gods had employed the sneezing soldier's nose as a trumpet wherewith to sound the blast of victory. Inspired by the idea, the army made up its mind to do or die, and so saved Athens.

Eastern legends would have us believe that in the place of everlasting fire sits a judge who keeps a book in which the names of all mortals are written. Every day he turns one page and this settles what mortals are to come into his presence for judgment. As the leaf is turned each of the chosen ones sneezes.

In ancient Greece the sneeze was greeted with "Jove preserve thee!" In Italy with "Felicite!" In Germany with "Gesundheit!" In France with "Bonne Sante!" In England with "God bless you!" and in this country generally with "Oh! stop it!"

In England the north country folks have a rhyme which runs:

Sneeze on a Monday, sneeze for danger!
Sneeze on a Tuesday, kiss a stranger!
Sneeze on a Wednesday, sneeze for a letter!
Sneeze on a Thursday, you'll get something better!
Sneeze on a Friday, you sneeze for sorrow!
Sneeze on a Saturday, love comes on the morrow!
Sneeze on a Sunday, you'd best safety seek,
The devil will have you the rest of the week!

This little ditty has not yet been set to music, although a sneezing sarabande might well be developed out of the interesting lyric.

There are times to sneeze and times not to sneeze. Aristotle believed that a sneeze in the morning was a good augury, but in the afternoon a bad augury. If the ancients sneezed when they were going on a fasting journey they promptly went back to bed. They considered the moment was not propitious for rising. If a Hindoo sneezes while he is bathing in the Ganges and before his prayers are finished he begins to say them all over again from the beginning. Some people say that one sneeze brings good luck and a double or treble sneeze bad luck. But there is certainly a time to sneeze and a time not to sneeze. The most awful time to sneeze is when making a proposal of marriage to a lady. A whole volume of fiction was once fashioned out of the idea that the hero sneezed half way through his proposal. In consequence he lost his opportunity and never recovered it.

I have said that a sneeze is no joke. It isn't, but it may lead to hilarity. Such occasions do occur. It was only the other day that some one said to me in an extremely rude tone of voice, "Oh! I can keep my eyes open." At that moment he sneezed. This gave me my opportunity for a splendid repartee. I replied on the instant, "Yes, and if at the same time you kept your mouth shut you'd be perfect!"—La Touche Hancock.

There are between 600 and 700 puddling furnaces in the Staffordshire district in England, all operated by hand. When operating on full time they employ about 10,000 men.

MOTOR CAR NEWS

OUR MONEY AT PAR, AGREE U. S. HOTELS

Very shortly the Ontario Motor League will have available for the use of motorists a list not only of hotels in the United States, but garages as well that will accept Canadian money at par. Replies are coming in from the hotels on the other side of the line to a query sent out by the league, and the majority of them are favorable. When all are received a list will be compiled.

Rochester may be cited as an example, where two out of the three leading hotels promise to accept Canadian money at par. Some of the hotels offer to carry part, but not all of the exchange.

The league hopes to establish a chain of garages and hotels throughout the United States thus favorably inclined towards Canadian currency, so that Ontario tourists can cross the line with nothing but Canadian money in their pockets. There are "no stings attached" to the arrangement so far as either the hotels in question or the league is concerned. The hotels merely require that members identify themselves by the presentation of their card.

Some of the replies from the hotel managers are in a most friendly spirit. They say that they receive a good deal of Canadian patronage and appreciate it very much. Hence their desire to fall in line with the league's proposal.

With exchange for the last while hovering round 10 per cent. the average Canadian touring party should be able to save enough by having their money accepted across the border at par to pay at least for gasoline on the trip.

GRAY-DORT

Immediately the armistice was signed, Gray-Dort executives began working towards a readjustment of motor car values.

Last fall we were able to put in production the present Gray-Dort—the first car to offer you heaping, peace-time value.

Overshadowing Other Light Cars

Ordinary light car standards did not satisfy us in building the Gray-Dort.

So we built a bigger and better motor—with 3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke; with a heavy crankshaft—weighs 40 pounds, as against about 25 pounds in other light cars. Specially-designed, quiet valves; extra-large wrist-pins; extra-light, three-ringed pistons.

As in the motor, so it is throughout the chassis. A cellular-type radiator and extra big water jackets for cooling. *A heavy, safe steering gear which is unusually easy on the driver. Frame heavier and sturdier than the light car standard. Rear axle specially strong and fine—and built right under our supervision here in Chatham. The long springs are built here, too. *The gas tank is big and is placed in the rear for convenience and appearance. *The emergency brake is on a lever, as in big cars—and the brake lining is Thermoid.

Convenience has not been sacrificed to sturdiness in the Gray-Dort. *The side-curtains open with the doors as in cars costing $2000 and up, and they fit smoothly. *The tonneau has very much more leg-room. *A shorter, smarter cowl does the same for the driving compartment. The gears can be shifted with the pressure of two fingers. The brakes are positive in action. To drive a Gray-Dort is real pleasure.

Clothed in Beauty

Completing this high-grade chassis is a body wonderfully good-looking. The smooth lines do not force themselves upon your attention. They are not extreme. But always you are aware of their supreme good-looks. And Gray-Dort design is the type which remains in favor for many years.

And then the wonderful Gray-Dort finish! We have spent 60 years developing this finish for vehicles. It is applied as only master craftsmen can finish a job. It is lasting and lustrous. It is one of the outstanding features of the Gray-Dort.

*You will notice, too, the rather high nood with its many long, narrow, louvres. *The smart top, hand-tailored in our own shops. The French pleated upholstery. The full sweep of the heavy gauge fenders.

At $1465 the Gray-Dort will be the fastest selling car of the year. The output has been doubled. Yet there is every sign of a shortage. We advise you to see the Gray-Dort dealer now.

*Features marked with this asterisk are some of the improvements new to this Gray-Dort.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Stacey Wallen, first mate of the bark Upolo, in the Java sea, is the sole survivor of the crew, all victims of yellow fever. Ting Wah, Chinese sailor, last man to die, tells Wallen he and five other Chinamen were sent aboard by "Drink-House Sam," notorious character of Singapore, to kill Wallen. The latter recalls an incident of his childhood which seems connected with the confession. While delirious, Wallen enters in the ship's log the announcement of his death and abandons the vessel in a small boat.

CHAPTER II.—Wallen's boat drifts to the island of Arru and a Scottish trader there, MacKnight, cares for him. Learning that a ship is in port on the other side of the island, twenty miles away, Wallen, though unfit for the task, determines to reach it. He sets out but falls exhausted on the trail. There he is found by a man and woman who are from the ship he was trying to reach, Mott, first mate, and Helen MacKay, a passenger. They convey him to the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—The ship proves to be a small tramp steamer, the Monleigh, Capt. Laynton. Laynton tells Wallen the vessel had been chartered by Wallen's father to find him, the father knowing his son to be in grave danger because of a long-standing feud between the elder Wallen and a notorious pirate, Ram Gulab Singh. Laynton also informs him of the death of his father, explaining that the fatality was believed to be an accident. Wallen instantly associates his father's death with the Chinaman's confession on the Upolo. He takes over the charter of the vessel.

How had Helen MacKay—she had told him her name on the way down to Pobi—come to be not only on a tramp like the Monleigh but to be here at all? He hadn't seen any other women on board; but then—he was spluttering deliciously in the water—he hadn't seen much of anything.

Helen MacKay had side-tracked even that thin-faced, queer-eyed skipper and insisted that he should go immediately to bed.

Wallen's thoughts began to run riot as he completed his toilet. The ship, and everyone connected with it whom he had seen—except Helen MacKay—had somehow got him wrong. He hadn't liked that fellow Mott's face from the instant he had set eyes on it in the forest. And his momentary interview with the skipper, despite the same effusive attentions, had produced the same intuitive distrust.

They were still at anchor off the three traders' storehouses and verandaed bungalows that were dignified by the name of Pobi. What, after all, did it mean?

What was the Monleigh doing at Pobi?—there was no sign of any cargo being handled. And, above all, how had they heard of him and the Upolo—and what was their interest in him that would account for the second officer being sent to cross the island to MacKnight's to question a supposed survivor of the bark about him?

"Drink-House Sam of Singapore!"—the words unbidden came flashing through his brain.

Wallen whistled in a low, perturbed way, under his breath. Could there be any connection? It seemed absurdly impossible! And yet what had happened was obviously not mere coincidence.

"It's a bit queer when you come to think of it," he muttered slowly. "I guess I'll hear what the skipper's got to say."

He opened the door of his cabin and stepped out into what was evidently the vessel's main saloon, down whose length ran a long mess table with five revolving chairs on either side.

There was no one in sight. Wallen crossed the saloon to the doorway and paused to get his bearings. Directly in front of him a short companionway led upward. He mounted this and found himself in a small box-like smoking or lounging room. Here doors on either side gave onto a boat-deck that was fairly spacious for the size of the ship.

He stepped out onto the deck—and again paused to survey his surroundings. Forward from the smoking room was a small house, very evidently of temporary construction—his eyes rested on it speculatively for an instant, then he glanced quickly aloft. Wireless!

He hadn't noticed that in coming aboard.

It was a little strange. Ships like the Monleigh weren't in the habit of indulging in expensive luxuries of that description! His brows gathered for a moment; and then, with a shrug of his shoulders, he walked forward to the captain's cabin under the bridge and knocked.

"Come in!" bawled a voice gruffly.

Wallen entered to face the little man with the thin face and queer eyes—he promptly modified "queer" by "evasive" now—that he recognized as the captain.

"Hello!" exclaimed the captain in suddenly altered tones. "If it ain't Mr. Wallen! And on your pins already! Well, I'll be ——! But sit down! Sit down!" He waved Wallen to a seat on the locker and pushed forward the bottle and glass that were on the table. "Sit down, Mr. Wallen, and help yourself!"

Wallen shook his head as he seated himself.

"Thanks just the same," he said; "but I'm still sticking to quinine."

"Quinine, eh?" repeated the other, "Yes, of course! Yes—right you are! Well"—he poured a glass for himself—"here's to you, and just as hearty if I drink alone. And I'll add, Mr. Wallen, that it's to the rummest meeting that ever I've known in my life!"

Wallen watched the man's neat disposal of four fingers, leaned back on the locker, swept his eyes around the cabin, and, suddenly looking up at the captain again, intercepted a furtive glance that the other was stealing at him over the rim of his glass.

"That ever I've known," said the captain hastily as his eyes dropped. "There'll be a lot to say to each other, Mr. Wallen."

"Yes," Wallen agreed. "I'll confess I'm puzzled on several points, Captain—Laynton, isn't it? I'm not sure I caught the name correctly when Miss MacKay introduced us."

"That's right," said the other. "Laynton. Captain Laynton—Mark Laynton."

"Well, Captain Laynton," said Wallen, "your reference to our meeting being a rum one only leaves me a little more up in the air. I can understand, of course, that you might have heard of the Upolo being missing—or reported lost; but I can't understand how you knew I was on her—or, knowing that, what interest you could have in me."

Captain Laynton laughed a little in a constrained way.

"I didn't know anything about the bark's loss until I put in here yesterday and heard there was a survivor from her on the other side of the island—but I knew about you fast enough."

"Captain Laynton—Mark Laynton."

He paused, shot a swift, restless glance at Wallen, then began to pace, three steps one way, three steps the other, up and down the narrow cabin.

"D—n it, man!" he said abruptly. "I've got bad news for you. Your father's dead!"

For a moment Wallen neither moved nor spoke. It was difficult to grasp the full significance of the words. His father—dead!

What did this thin-faced man, with the little black eyes that always refused to meet one's own, who was tramping nervously now up and down a little cabin on a rusty tramp steamer here in the Java sea, at the other end of the world, know of his father, who never left the four walls of that lonely gray stone house in California?

"What do you know about my father?"—he found himself speaking in a quiet voice.

Captain Layaton stopped impulsively in front of his table, pulled the drawer open, took out a sheet of paper and handed it to Wallen.

"You'll get the drift of this yourself, I guess," he ventured.

Wallen stared at the paper, at first with curious bewilderment—and then, with the sudden flash of comprehension, he was on his feet. It was a list of the ports of call scheduled for the ill-fated Upolo on her last voyage—ports of call that she had never made.

"What does this mean?" he demanded in a low voice. "How did you come by this?"

"Your father gave it to me," the captain answered. "And now, if you'll just listen for a minute, I'll give you the whole story, and you'll see for yourself. First I might as well tell you, though, that I own this ship. Well, I was in Honolulu—light, you understand—when your father came aboard one evening and offered to charter me for a three months' cruise down here. He made the price right, paid the money down in advance, and I closed with him.

"He gave me the list of ports, and said his son was on a trading bark called the Upolo, and that he wanted to get track of him as soon as possible, and offered an extra bonus for all hands if we made a quick job of it. That's all I know about the reason for the cruise. Well, to cut a long story short, we started away, and were down just south of the line when the accident happened.

"Your father was alone down in his cabin. We heard a shot, rushed below, and, thinking it strange that he didn't show up in the excitement, called to him—but got no answer. Well, we burst in his cabin door and found him dead across the bunk."

"You mean," said Wallen through tight lips, "that he committed suicide?"

"No. Wait!" Captain Laynton shook his head. "It wasn't that. God knows how it happened! The thing went off—that's all. He was cleaning one of those patent automatic pistols.

WIRELESS AT WINNIPEG

If experiments being conducted by Prof. John Dorsey at the University of Manitoba wireless station prove satisfactory, Winnipeg will become a central station for receiving wireless messages from all over the globe, Mr. Dorsey declared today. A message was recently caught from Mexico City 2,500 miles away under unfavorable static conditions, indicates that the experiment will be successful. This is the first time an aerial at Winnipeg has received a message from such a distance. Equipment will be installed immediately which will give the station here a wave length sufficient to receive and send news to any city on the American continent. Prof. Dorsey said: Within the next few months we hope to be catching messages from England, Australia and South Africa.

Temperance Act Annoys Doctors

Protest Against Stating Nature of Malady in Liquor Prescriptions

TORONTO, May 27—The fortieth annual meeting of the Ontario Medical Association made great progress yesterday, when practically 400 doctors from the province were in attendance. At the time first business meeting of the association in the morning, the reports of the various committees were received, and the feature was the faults found in the Ontario Temperance Act as now worded and the suggested remedies. The doctors were of the opinion that too much was placed on their shoulders in connection with the supply of liquor.

In the afternoon President and Mrs. Marlow held a reception at the Academy of Medicine, which was largely attended. In the evening the annual dinner and president's address were the outstanding features.

Several objections were raised in connection with the Ontario Temperance Act from the practitioner's point of view. The wording of the Act compels the doctor to state the nature of the disease of the patient when a prescription is given. The association declares that in these cases, as well as any other which a doctor might treat the disease, is confidential. Again the Act practically makes the medical profession the keepers of the liquor supply of the Province, and the doctors are of the opinion that another source of responsibility should be found. Objection is made to the limit being placed on the extent to which it is prescribed, no other drug is the subject of similar legislation.

The arrangements, as they now are, do not bring the supply of liquor reasonably within the reach of all. Throughout the province there are only seven vendors, and the distance apart is considered too great. It is claimed that the closing of the liquor stores on Saturday afternoons, Sundays and holidays is not proper when liquor is considered a drug. One of the most serious points against the present legislation is the fact that a doctor is only limited to give fifty prescriptions a month, and this is resented because it places the whole of the profession under the control of a small body of laymen. Considerable annoyance is also caused the members of the profession by the necessity of people wanting liquor having to go to the doctors and having them, in many cases, suffer waste of time in refusing and also offending the patients. Besides finding fault with the legislation, the association offers some suggestions towards remedying the various sources of complaint. The Government is asked to make the following changes in the Act: (1) Elimination on the prescription form of the nature of the disease, and (2) make it obligatory for all druggists to carry in stock whiskey and brandy in original six ounce bottles.

KILLING SEA-LIONS

Large numbers of sea-lions of the British Columbia coast which destroy vast quantities of food fish may be slaughtered and their hides placed on the market to reduce the world's leather shortage. The proposal, first put forward by Premier Oliver, has the approval of many experienced fishermen.

One Prince Rupert pioneer declared recently that, with three companions he had killed seven hundred sea-lions on the Queen Charlotte Islands in two days. The sea-lions, it is said, weign from 2,000 to 2,500 pounds. The hides are nearly an inch in thickness and made of tough and durable rough leather such as used in workmen's gloves and saddles. Fishermen declare that a sea-lion will eat fifty pounds of fish in one day.

ONTARIO OSTEOPATHS IN ANNUAL SESSION

Toronto, May 28.—The Ontario Osteopathic Society held its 19th annual convention at the Hotel Carls-Rite yesterday.

The advisability of amalgamation with the International Association of Osteopathy was the chief matter under discussion. It was decided to affiliate with the main body. The election of officers resulted in the presidency going to Dr. R. B. Henderson, of Toronto, and the secretaryship to Dr. E. D. Heist, of Kitchener. Consideration of technical subjects of interest to the profession completed the business.

YOUNG BRITONS GROW

During the past year there have been 33 applications for new Orange Young Briton Lodges. Twenty lodges which shut down on account of enlistments durnig the war have been recuscitated. Of 2,256 enlistments for overseas service from the membership 216 paid the supreme sacrifice. The assets of the Order are now $4,400. A grant of $200 was made to the Orange Loyal True Blue Orphanage at Picton and another of $100 to the legislation committee. The secretary's salary was also doubled, and will amount to $400

POINTERS ABOUT MILK

Information Relating to Cheese, Factory and Town Supply.

The Percentage Composition of Milk—Handling Milk for the City Trade—Hot Weather Poultry Counsel.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE term percentage means so much in 100—that is, in one hundred pounds, gallons, etc. The composition of milk is usually stated as so much of each part in one hundred parts or pounds. This varies considerably according to breed of cattle, lactation period, or length of time milking, whether first or last of the milking, and upon many other conditions. Usually, however, in Ontario, the milk will have about the following composition:

Water	87.5
Fat	3.5
Casein and albumen	3.2
Sugar	5.0
Ash	0.8
Total	100

The buttermaker takes one part only from the milk, the fat. The cheesemaker takes out chiefly two parts or constituents, casein and fat. The condensery and powder milk manufacturers make use of all the solids in milk for human food, hence are able to pay higher prices for milk than can manufacturers of butter and cheese. Because milk contains on the average only about three-and-one-half pounds of fat, which when made into butter has mixed with it from 15 to 20 per cent. of water and salt, thus making only about four pounds of butter out of 100 pounds of milk, we see why butter must of necessity be a high price per pound. The cheesemaker is able to make 8½ to 10 pounds cheese per 100 pounds milk, consequently is able to sell his product at about one-half the price per pound which butter sells for, and yet pay as high, or higher prices per 100 pounds milk than can the butter manufacturer. The condensed and powder milk manufacturers are able to sell their products at a still lower price per pound, because they are able to recover from twelve to twelve-and-one-half pounds of solid food material from 100 pounds milk.

From the foregoing we see that the commercial value of milk has a very close relation to its composition, and the use that is made of the various parts of the milk solids.—H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Milk For the City Trade.

"Safety First" is a good slogan in the milk business. To make milk safe it must be drawn from healthy cows—preferably those which have passed the tuberculin test; the stable, pasture and all surroundings must be clean; the utensils which come in contact with the milk must be clean; the persons handling the milk should be a living advertisement of exemplified cleanliness; the delivery wagons, cans, measures, etc., should be clean. In order that assurance of safety may be doubly sure, it is advisable to pasteurize the milk—that is, heat it to 140 degrees to 150 degrees F., hold at this temperature for twenty to thirty minutes, then cool to 50 degrees F. or below and hold at this temperature until delivered to the consumer. Pasteurized milk is the safest kind of milk for humans to drink.

The person buying milk has certain duties in order to ensure a safe product, especially for children. Among these may be mentioned, placing the milk at once on delivery in a refrigerator or cool cellar protected from dust and odors, and by keeping it in a tightly closed vessel—preferably in the milk bottle covered with an inverted glass tumbler, or special cover; the top of the milk-cap should be wiped to remove dust before taking it from the milk bottle; no more milk should be taken from the supply bottle than is required for a meal; any "left-over" milk should not be put into the supply vessel after the meal, as this will likely spoil the whole of the milk on hand; milk taken to a sick room should not be used for any other purpose, except it be boiled, and then only for cooking; milk bottle should be washed as soon as empty, and be promptly returned to the milkman. In no case should milk bottles be used for any other purpose in the house than for holding milk.

Milk is a perfect food for children, and also for "grown-ups," along with other substantial material. It is cheap food at ten to twelve cents a quart compared with the price of other foods. Insist on good, clean milk and be willing to pay a reasonable price for such milk. Milk producers and milk consumers should co-operate.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Hot Weather Poultry Counsel.

The rooster, unless kept for next year's breeding, is too expensive a luxury to keep—and he'll help relieve the meat shortage.

The market for the cull stuff promises to be good this month—and by marketing in June the distribution is more equalized.

By eating the poor layers the farmer gains in two ways—he eliminates the profit-takers from his flock and he lowers the meat bill for his table.

The small farm flock of good layers is always more profitable and satisfactory than the large flock of poor layers.

The good layer of the yellow-legged breeds at this season loses the color from the feet and bill and these latter becoming almost white. The sleek plumaged, fat yellow-legged hens are usually very poor layers. It will pay to cull them out now.

Michael Clark Has Remarkable Power Of Sight

OTTAWA, May 27.—Dr. Michael Clark has remarkable eyesight and a peculiar mentality, said a prominent Unionist after listening to the member for Red Deer. He can see Newcastle-on-Tyne from Red Deer, Alberta, but he cannot see anything between these points. He is content to remain in a country that he claims has the worst government and is in the most deplorable condition in the world. He opposes a luxury tax advocated by his leader. The farmers have been declaring they were bled white by taxation. Dr. Clark says they are not the worst hit by the new taxation and one of the defects of the Government's financial policy was that it had not got enough out of the farmer. He condemned all existing forms of taxation in effect in Canada and offered no substitute measures.

This was the criticism of one of the most moderate protectionists in Parliament of the fiscal exposition of the member for Red Deer. Dr. Clarke's speech was most entertaining. He was listened to attentively and, without an interruption. He did not show the same courtesy to Hon. Arthur Meighen. From the beginning of the speech of the Minister of the Interior, he was continuously interrupted by the member for Red Deer. Toward the close of Mr. Meighen's speech the Speaker called Dr. Clark to order, although Mr. Meighen requested that he be permitted to ask questions.

The Speaker ruled that the member for Red Deer had no right to interrupt.

"Don't let him (Hon. Arthur Meighen) keep asking me questions," protested Dr. Clark.

"A member in addressing the House can use the questioning method in his argument," replied the Speaker.

ILL-ADVISED DEPARTURE

Dr. Clark then left the House amid the ironical laughter of the Unionists and the silence of the Liberals. It was a hasty and ill-advised departure and will affect the member for Red Deer's standing in Parliament. He had spoken without an interruption, but he continuously interrupted Mr. Meighen. It is true that the Minister of the Interior was without mercy in his criticism of Dr. Clark's arguments.

BANKS FINANCE SCHOOLS

Schools in the southeast part of Saskatchewan will be enabled to keep open during the coming year as the result of negotiations between Government officials and the banks. Due to the poor crops in this district during the past few years, the municipal councils are unable to collect taxes and consequently the banks have shown some reluctance to make advances even for school purposes. Representations made to them by inspectors of the Municipal Department induced the banks in practically all cases to make advances sufficient to meet the financial needs of the schools.

A LONELY SPOT

Innis Ewen and his wife, a bride of two months, have left Winnipeg for Fort Nelson, B. C., on the Fort Nelson River, one of the remotest Hudson's Bay company trading posts in Canada. They expect to spend the next four years there as the only white persons within a radius of hundreds of miles. Mr. Ewen has been appointed post manager for the company at that point being transferred from Wenusk, Ont. It is likely, Mr. Ewen said, that they will reach their destination, which is some 1,100 miles from Edmonton, about the end of July.

MUSKRAT FARMING

Muskrat farming is now a promising industry in British Columbia, according to reports reaching here. One of the pioneers of this industry has blocked out a "rat ranch" and is feeding several families of muskrats. He claims that within two years he will be able to get several thousand pelts.

NOT ENOUGH TRAFFIC TO PAY FOR CANAL LIGHTS

Kingston, May 28.—The Department of Canals has decided not to light the Rideau Canal this season owing to the small amount of traffic and the heavy expense incurred. This canal has been lighted with oil lamps, although electrical power could be supplied at this end.

For Flat Roofs

FLAT roofs of wooden or concrete construction require special treatment. For such, we advise laying Brantford Rubber Roofing or Brantford Asphalt Roofing according to what we term Brantford Specification.

The 60 lb. roll roofing is used and is laid into our special Branroco Cement. A top coat of superior Roof Coating is then applied. The completed job furnishes an absolutely watertight roof and one that is also unaffected by frost. It is a permanent form of construction the same as the walls of a building.

Brantford Specification Roofs are suitable for factories, stores, public buildings, apartment houses, warehouses—any class of building with a flat roof. Particulars and estimates of cost will be furnished on application to our local branch.

Can Make Alcohol At 50 Cts. A Gallon

BUT CHEMISTS PA[illegible] ELEVEN [illegible]OLLARS A GALLON [illegible] RUTTAN.

TORONTO, May [illegible]—Alcohol may yet prove a benefactor [illegible] a domestic blessing in the hands of th[illegible]chemist. At least, this is the [illegible]ion of Dr. R. [illegible], Chairman [illegible] the Advisory [illegible] Industrial [illegible]entific Re[illegible] [illegible] the problem[illegible] stand in the pa[illegible] of industrial and scientific progres[illegible] Canada.

Tax-free alcohol [illegible] industrial, chemical and hospital p[illegible]s is one of the first steps in the ma[illegible] progress, according to Dr. Ruttan. In an interview recently, the doctor declared that alcohol cou[illegible] to day for fifty cents a gallon, where[illegible] chemists had to pay eleven dollars a gallon at the present time, owing to the heavy Government tax and the large profits accruing to the distill[illegible]

DO AWAY WITH DISTILLER[illegible]

Distilleries would [illegible] aw[illegible] with under the new method [illegible]ducing alcohol. Dr. Ruttan says [illegible] the time will come when no foodstuffs will be used in its production. Pure alcohol can be produced from sawdust and pulp waste by treati[illegible] with acid at fifty cents a gallon.

Alcohol, says Dr. Ruttan, [illegible]one of the most important raw ma[illegible] in the industrial and chemical [illegible]. "From this commodity can b[illegible] manufactured a large number of [illegible]uable chemicals which Canada [illegible] the present time to procure [illegible] from [illegible] countries where alcohol [illegible] from tax," said Dr. Ruttan. "We can't compete with the United S[illegible] and the Continent in the production of these chemicals—such as ether, iodoform and many other valuable things—because the manufacturer has to pay the same price for alcohol as the man who uses it as a beverage. The Government has already allowed us to have free denatured alcohol, and this is going to help enormously, but what we want is tax-free ethyl alcohol for scientific purposes. This pure alcohol is indispensible in our universities and our hospitals. In some cases of high temperature, one of the best treatments is the bathing of the patient in ethyl alcohol, and at present only rich people can afford to use it, the poor have to suffer."

MANY BUILDINGS DOOMED

One of the other problems propounded by Dr. Ruttan conjured up before the lively imagination of The Paper man visions, of toppling sky-scrapers, distorted viaducts and dilapidated cities.

"We have discovered a gradual disintegration of all Portland cements in foundations, roadways and aqueducts, and the life of many of these [illegible]uctures is very limited," said the doctor.

"It is a very serious matter, involving millions of dollars, and it will [illegible]terfere with the work on high buildings[illegible] roads and bridges."

"Wh[illegible]t about our beautiful viaduct over th[illegible] Don—is that doomed?"

"Oh, [illegible]o," replied Dr. Ruttan, re[illegible]ingly. "It is due to the action of alka[illegible]e water in the Western soil on the cement, causing it to disintegrate and crumble. We claim that it is a chemical, not an engineering problem. [illegible]any of the large buildings in Win[illegible]eg and other Western cities are af[illegible]d. The aqueduct in Winnipeg ha[illegible] not a long life before it."

[illegible]he utilization of fish waste was another problem set forth by Dr. Ruttan. He said that three million dollars' worth of fish was lost every year in Canada which might be turned into foodstuffs for cattle and even for human beings, and also into fertilizers. He stated that in some instances there were three fish unmarketable for every one that was sold. In Norway, Germany and Scotland there was no waste as all kinds of fish were utilized very profitably.

Dr. Ruttan also stated that there were square miles of low-grade iron ores which may in the near future be developed, and that, if the present experiments were successful,, Canada would have an almost inexhaustible supply of iron for the future.

Zeppelins May Become Part Of Aerial Service Of U.S. Army

THREE GERMAN REPRESENTATIVES NOW AT WASHINGTON —DETROIT AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURER ALSO AFTER THE HUGE AIRSHIP PATENTS.

WASHINGTON May 31—Huge airships, modelled exactly after the famous Zeppelins used by Germany during the war, may become part of the aerial service of the United States Army as a result of conferences about to be held here between army officials and representatives of the German airship firm.

Alfred Calsman, Otto Milatz and William S. Dorr, representing the Zeppelin Airship Company, are in Washington and are understood to be ready to make proposals to the War Department whereby the United States either will acquire the Zeppelin patents or might purchase one or two of the air cruisers as models for future construction.

air service that attempts had been ari service that attempts had been made to secure one of the big Zeppelins for the army, but that the negotiations were broken off.

It is reported on high authority here that should the army Air Service fail to conclude arrangements for buying or building Zeppelins, several "civilian" companies are prepared to negotiate for the big ships, with a view to establishnig a commercial air line. One of the best-known Detroit automobile manufacturers is said already to have made proposals to the Zeppelin firm to purchase the use of their patents in case the army should find itself unable to acquire them.

Seek To [illegible]prove Te[illegible]perance Act

Twenty Member[illegible] the Legislature Appointed [illegible]mmittee

TOR[illegible]TO, Ma[illegible] 31.—Thr[illegible]ial [illegible]islature [illegible] named by Ho[illegible] E. C. [illegible] largest—that to [illegible] up after [illegible] close of the session [illegible] whole question of the Ontario Tempera[illegible] Act amendments and the [illegible]ssibility [illegible] improving the act an[illegible] its oper[illegible] almost a Legislat[illegible] in itself, numb[illegible]ing twenty mem[illegible], divided proportionately among the[illegible]arious groups in the House. The other committees are to deal with the question [illegible] proportional representation and the devis[illegible] of a more equita[illegible] of Hydr[illegible] distribution of power [illegible] able prices.

The O.T.A. Committee, through which, it is stated, the Labor members "have hopes" [illegible] cure some modific[illegible]ns in the act in the way of a more [illegible]table beer, is composed of the [illegible] members: Messrs. Drury, R[illegible], N[illegible] Watson McCreary, Sandy, L[illegible]idge, [illegible]elman, Hicks, Tolmi[illegible] Pi[illegible]ard, Godfrey, R[illegible] (Kingston), Hen[illegible]ry, Ecclestone, [illegible]hompson (Toronto), Warren, Curry, [illegible]ayze, Heenan, Dewart and Marshal[illegible] nine U.F.O., six Liberals, five Conser[illegible]tives and two Labor men.

MODERATES [illegible]

The Ontario L[illegible]islature vot[illegible] by over twelve to one for the submissi[illegible] of a referendum to the [illegible]ople on the question of prohibit[illegible] importation of liquor in[illegible] the Provin[illegible] in other words, for[illegible] vote that migh[illegible] result in "bone-d[illegible]" prohibition.

In view of tha[illegible] decisive result it is interesting to note [illegible] the special committee appointed to consider alterations and improvements in the O.T.A. are not advocates of "the limit" in prohibitory legislation. Of the twenty-four members it may with fairness be said that nine are recognized as favorable to modifications in the Act under proper safeguards—Messrs. Hay, Clarke, Pinard, Godfrey, Ross, Thompson (Toronto), Swayze, Heenan, and Dewart, while nine, Raney, Watson, McCreary, Sandy, Lethbridge, Casselman, Tolmie Warren and Currie, are considered out and out prohibitionists. The rest cannot be definitely placed, but all are believed to be inclined to favor moderation. Even the Prime Minister is said to be anything but an extremist on the subject.

The special committee on proportional representation is composed of Messrs. Drury, Raney, Doherty, Smith Watson, Tooms, Homuth, Marshall, O'Neill, Racine, Henry, Price, Hill and Mageau.

The committee to deal with Hydro distribution and prices is composed of Messrs. Lethbridge, Casselman, Greenlaw, Cook and O'Neill—three members whose ridnigs are far from source of supply and therefore inclined to favor the flat rate principle and two who will be opposed to any such change.

Profits Of Race Tracks Fixed By Government

PARI-MUTUEL BETTING PERMITTED, BUT PERCENTAGE OF TAKINGS IS GRADED ACCORDING TO THE SUM BET ON A RACE, VARYING FROM SEVEN TO THREE PER CENT.

OTTAWA, May 31—A series of important amendments to the Criminal Code were submitted to the House of Commons by the Minister of Justice. One deals with race-track betting. The law, as it stands, permits the carrying on of wagers and betting upon a race track. It is proposed to modify the present legislation by limiting permissable organized betting to the use of pari-mutuel machines and furthermore, to make it a condition of the permission of betting upon a race track that the profits derived from the betting operations shall be restricted to a limited percentage of the amount at stake, apportioned as follows:

When the amount bet on a race is under $20,000, percentage restricted to 7 per cent.

On all amounts over $20,000 and under $30,000 the percentage is restricted to 6 per cent.

Amounts over $30,000 and under $40,000 to 5 per cent.

[illegible] $40,000 and up to $50,000 to 4 [illegible]er cent.

"Break[illegible] Provided For

In each case the percentage of the racing club or association is to be gauged by the total amount of money bet on the race by the pari-mutuel system.

There is also a change in regard to the "breaks" which the association is allowed to retain. Provision is made for the racing association retaining the odd cents, which are less than any multiple of five cents.

Pari-mutuel machines, under the new amendments, are to be inspected, approved and operated under the supervision of Government officials appointed by Department of Agriculture. There will be an official at each track to see that no bets are accepted after the horses come to the post in each race, when the machines must be locked, and in that way it is aimed to check any attempt at fraud. Racing associations are to pay the cost of such supervision.

All the present conditions regarding the operation of betting on race tracks with regard to the number of days of racing, etc., are continued in force, and the provision that pari-mutuels alone shall be used, and that profits shall be restricted, as above, are added to the present regulations.

No definite date is set for the bill coming into effect, but it is anticipated that it will be made law immediately on receiving the Royal assent.

Mob In Windsor Gets Arrested Man Released

Smashes Windows In Police Station and Council Chamber

WINDSOR, May 30.—Incited, it is said, by a man recently convicted and heavily fined for illicit trafficking in liquor a mob of between four and five hundred men, made up of returned soldiers and civilians, surrounded police headquarters in the City Hall here at 9 o'clock last night, and after a number of threatening demonstrations forced the police to release Fred McLean, a returned man, who had been arrested a short time before for being drunk and disorderly. The order for the man's release emanated, it is said, from Chief of Police Wills.

SEVERE SHOCK TO CITY

The whole affair was apparently spontaneous, but the fact that a mob of such proportions could be sufficiently organized within a few minutes to at first defy, then completely upset constituted authority has given the whole city a severe shock.

REASON FOR "RESCUE"

McLean the casus belli, was taken into custody by Patrolman Murray in the downtown section, after a sharp fight, in which the officer is said to have been slapped in the face by his prisoner. Murray retaliated by using his club on McLean, and it was for this reason, according to some of those who made up the rescuing party that the attack on police headquarters was organized.

Bolsheviki Offensive Futile Poles Hold Line Intact

WARSAW REPORTS FAILURE OF SOVIET ARMY TO BREAK THROUGH POLISH LINE—REPULSED AT ALL POINTS —POLES CAPTURE ARMORED TRAINS.

Special Despatch to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WARSAW, May 31.—Bolsheviki attacks against the Polish line between Lake Narocz and the upper reaches of the Beresina River are weakening, while further south manouvres by the Polish forces have paralyzed the attempts of the Soviet army to break through, according to an official statement issued at army headquarters here.

Foiled on each end of the battlefront the Bolsheviki have again tried to force the line of the Beresina at several places, but have been repulsed at all points, the statement says, the battle being especially heavy around Borisov.

On the Ukrainian front Polish troops, by skillful manoeuvring have captured two Bolsheviki armored trains which were firing on Polish positions in the Kiev bridgehead. Reconnaisances have been made by both sides at various points along the front.

BOLSHEVIKI CLAIM SUCCESSES.

LONDON, May 31.—The Poles have thrown fresh troops into the fighting in the Tarashtcha region, sixty miles south of Kiev, but their heavy attacks on the Bolshevik lines have been repulsed, says Sunday's official statement from Moscow, received by wireless today. The communique reads:

In the Tarashtcha region our troops, developing their success, occupied a number of hamlets 27 miles from Tarashtcha. Northwest of Tarashtcha we are successfully repulsing furious enemy attacks, the latter having flung in new reinforcements. In this region the fighting is still proceeding.

Villages Swept By Fires Thousand Persons Homeless

ONE MILLION DOLLARS DAMAGE AT ST. QUENTIN, N.B., WHICH WAS ALMOST ENTIRELY WIPED OUT BY FIRE — LONDONDERRY MINES ALSO FIRE-SWEPT—FOREST FIRES SPREAD TO VILLAGES.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 31.—The little village of St. Quentin, in Restigouche county, N.B., on the line of the Canadian National Railways, about forty miles from St. Leonard's was almost entirely wiped out Friday as the result of forest fires, which have been raging in the Crown lands in Restigouche during the past ten days.

St. Quentin was a thriving village of about 2,000 population, and was a centre for the lumber and pulp operations.

Thousands Rendered Homeless.

The fire, which resulted in a monetary loss variously estimated from $750,000 to $1,000,000, started in the mill yard of J. E. Michaud, catching from burning embers carried by the winds from the forest blaze. Before it had spent its course 65 dwellings, three mills, two hotels, the Canadian National Railways station, the Provincial Bank, and many business places were wiped out. About 1,000 people, or half the population, were rendered homeless, and saved none of their personal property, except what they ha don their backs. Relief trains were sent out from Leonard's and Campbellton yesterday to convey the homeless to large centres, where they could be cared for. No lives were lost.

Lumber and Pulpwood Burned.

Besides the destruction to homes and places of business, much manufactured lumber, thousands of cords of pulpwood and thousands of railroad ties at nearby sidings awaiting shipment were burned. Seven carloads of lumber on the track were also consumed.

Sweeping Through Aroostook.

Houlton, Me., May 31.—Extensive areas of timber land and pulpwood forests have been devastated by fires which are sweeping through a large part of northern Aroostook county. Fire wardens said today that there was little hope of extinguishing them until a heavy rain fell. In Nashville plantation a pulpwood camp was caught in the path of the flames, and many shacks and a large quantity of supplies were burned.

Londonderry Mines Fire-Swept.

Halifax, May 31.—Londonderry Mines, 18 miles from Truro, was partly destroyed by fire today. Four churches, a schoolhouse, and hall, and about a dozen dwellings already have been burned. There was no loss of life.

Yesterday a fierce forest fire was burning at Hardwood Hill, a short distance from Londonderry Mines, and this was at first supposed to have been the origin of today's destructive blaze, which began at 9 o'clock. It was found, however, that the fire was started by sparks from the chimney of a house owned by Archie Lewis, and fanned by the high wind it spread rapidly. The fire swept a district three-quarters of a mile in length and half a mile wide.

The flames swept the main street of the village, consuming in a short time the Anglican Church, the Presbyterian Church, the Roman Catholic Church and Glebe House, St. Bridget's Hall, a school building and a number of houses. It crossed the stream which runs through the village, and destroyed the Baptist Church there and several buildings. Forty-seven buildings in all were destroyed. Some of them were old unoccupied houses, and several other barns and outbuildings. Very little household property was saved.

The forty odd families rendered homeless are being sheltered by their more fortunate neighbors. The loss is estimated to be between two and three hundred thousand dollars, with only small insurance.

FOR LIFE

WOMEN folks are particularly annoyed at the prospect of having to wear glasses for life once they are fitted with them. This does not prove to be the case at times where the cause of the eye defects are remedied at once. Often it is the case that the lenses prescribed will so correct the imperfect focusing-accommodation of the eye that the muscles become stronger and allow the wearer to discard glasses entirely.

WOMAN WINS HIGH POST.

Washington, May 31.—President Wilson nominated Mrs. Annette Abbott Adams, San Francisco, to be Assistant Attorney-General. She will be the first woman to hold that office.

G.T.R. Officials Chosen For Important Post

MR. HOWARD KELLEY

Mr. Howard Kelley, who has been President of the Grand Trunk System since 1917, has in addition to splendid scientific and practical training the qualities of mind that make for the successful handling of big tasks. He is a man, his associates say, who inspires the loyalty and affection that lead to efficiency and accomplishment. His capacity for work, in a business where hard and exacting labors are demanded of all, is widely recognized. Work, it is said, is his only hobby. He finds in the daily crop of problems relative to railway administration all the exhilaration that he needs. His first railway battles were fought and won in the wilderness. As a young engineer fresh from the university he took part from 1881 to 1884 in the location and construction of western railways, slept in the open and knew the hardships of the pioneer railway builders life. Mining lured him away from railway construction, but did not hold him long, and his engineering ability led to his holding positions of steadily increasing responsibilities with the railroads. In 1907 Mr. Kelley was appointed Chief Engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway System. Four years later he was promoted to the position of Vice-President in charge of operation, maintenance and construction, an office which he held to the date of his appointment as President of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways.

The Presidency of the Grand Trunk has been considered one of the most arduous positions in the railway world His jurisdiction extended over lines which stretched from the Atlantic to the Pacific in Canada, dipped down through five states in the Middle West and traversed practically the whole of New England. Scores of subsidiary enterprises associated with the railroad—steamships, car ferries, elevators, hotels, etc.—demanded attention. Mr. Kelley, in the opinion of those best fitted to judge, is one of the ablest men who have been associated with our Canadian railways. He is a Canadian citizen.

MR. FRANK SCOTT

Mr. Frank Scott, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Grand Trunk System, enjoys a somewhat unique honor in that during his forty-one years of service with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, he has risen from a junior clerkship to Vice-Presidency through the one department. He is a son of the late W. E. Scott, M. D., for many years Professor of Anatomy at McGill University. Entering the Grand Trunk service in 1879 he began work in the audit department but was very soon transferred to that of the treasurer. He became secretary of the Board of Audit and Purchasing Committee in 1891, and was appointed Assistant Treasurer in 1893. In 1901 he was appointed Treasurer of the company. In 1906 he became Treasurer also of the Grand Trunk Pacific and many of its subsidiary companies, and in 1914 was appointed to a vice-presidency of the Grand Trunk System. A keen student of financial problems Mr. Scott has had unusual opportunities for acquiring experience on a vast railway system that has gone through the evolutionary process that the Grand Trunk has during the past thirty-five years. In September 1909 the Society of Railway Financial officers of America elected Mr. Scott to the Presidency of the Society.

MR. W. D. ROBB

Mr. W. D. Robb has risen from an apprentice in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway to that of Vice-President in charge of Operation, Construction, Maintenance and Equipment. He is regarded as one of the most practical railway chiefs in the Dominion. His father was a railroad man before him and came to Canada from Scotland to join the Grand Trunk in its earliest days. Mr. Robb was born at Longueil, Que., sixty-one years ago, and received his early education at Sherbrooke Academy and St. Francis College, Richmond, Que. Entering the service of the Grand Trunk Railway as an apprentice at Hadlow Cove in 1871 he went to Montreal to finish his apprenticeship as a machinist in 1873. He was appointed night foreman at Pt St. Charles shops in 1883 and was promoted to the position of foreman at Belleville in charge of motive power and car departments the same year. In 1897 he was appointed Master Mechanic of the Middle Division with headquarters at London, Ont., and in 1901 was made Acting Superintendent of Motive Power at Montreal. Mr. Robb was promoted to the office of Superintendent of Motive Power in the following year, a position which he occupied until his appointment as Vice President in charge of Motive Power, Car Department and Machinery in 1917. His jurisdiction was increased in 1918 to take in the operating, maintenance and construction departments of the System. He is a man of great energy and holds the confidence of the whole of the large organization of which he is head.

WONDERFUL MENAGERIE WITH HAGENBECK-WALLACE CIRCUS

Billboards and store windows are now heralding the glad tiding of the coming of the majestic Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus on Wednesday, June 9. Advance Car No. 1 has already been here and according to the men in charge, the exhibition this year will mark an epoch in trained animal feats and equestian novelties.

The trained animal program has received much attention this season, as it is the prominent portion of the exhibition. Skilled trainers devoted the winter months to the teaching of new feats to the animals at winter headquarters in West Baden, Ind., and have perfected an astonishing program, which is promised to introduce feats never accomplished before.

In the three big rings features of European fame and headliner acts of America are billed. Leading clowns have been contracted and much overtime was consumed in preparing new pantomimic stunts assured to bring laughter from all. A jazz band composed of these mimics is only one of their many features.

A menagerie containing practically a specimen of every living animal today is being carried. It is said to be attracting wide-spread attention, being beneficial from an educational viewpoint, as well as interesting. The doors are opened one hour before every performance so that spectators may enjoy a thorough visit through the menagerie.

For the convenience of patrons a downtown ticket office will be open during the visit of the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus at Doyle's Drug Store, 221 Front street.

What Prominent Ontario Women Say

Tillsonburg, Ont.:—"I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription very beneficial during expectancy. I felt quite poorly, was nauseated and sick, could not eat anything and I was extremely nervous and weak. I took 'Favorite Prescription' and it soon stopped the nausea, my appetite returned, also my strength and I was soon feeling fine and strong. My baby was strong and healthy and has always been so. I consider 'Favorite Prescription' a great help to the expectant mother and am glad to recommend it."—MRS. AMOS MILLS, Box 238.

A HAMILTON WITNESS

Hamilton, Ont.:—"A few months ago I was stricken down and was confined to bed about ten days. My strength all left me. It was my first illness since a child. I lost five pounds and felt awfully weak afterward. I could hardly do my work. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in tablet form. I tried a couple of bottles and before I knew it, I was well and strong and had gained 9½ pounds. I can recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to build one up."—MRS. E. MARTIN, 397 Dundurn St.

After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged down by weaknesses of her sex—with eyes sunken, black circles and pale cheeks—such a woman is quickly restored to health by the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce. Changed, too, in looks, for after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the skin becomes clear, the eyes brighter, the cheeks plump. It is purely vegetable, contains no alcohol.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

BILL HART AS "JOHN PETTICOATS"

"John Petticoats" is not only the name of the picture which is being shown at Griffin's tonight to Wednesday; it's the name that Wm. S. Hart, who stars in the film, gave himself when he discovered that the modiste shop which he inherited from his deceased uncle was not a saloon, as he in his lumberjack fashion rather hoped, but was a dainty little establishment selling ladies' frocks and furbelows. According to the story, Bill is so put out by this knowledge that he poses as the store detective to hide his ownership of the place. But murder will out, and, after several exciting adventures and a tempestuous love affair, Bill admits his depravity and wins forgiveness and the girl. "John Petticoats" is declared to be a thoroughly enjoyable Hart picture that presents the star in an extremely novel role and gives him an opportunity to provide the audience with lots of laughter as well as thrills. Winnifred Westover is Mr. Hart's leading lady in this production. The 4th chapter of the popular wild animal serial, "The Lost City," and a highly amusing Mack Sennett comedy are also being shown on the same program.

COMMITTEE IS DIVIDED

Ottawa, May 29—The committee seeking to decide whether Indians shall be compulsory enfranchised or not is again in private session today and is expected to be ready to report early next week. It is understood that there is a division of opinion on the method of enfranchising the Indians, hence the necessity for several somewhat lengthy sittings.

MANY FEATURES PROMISED WITH SPARKS CIRCUS.

Features? There will be many of them in the performances of the Sparks Circus, due to appear in Belleville on Wednesday, June 2nd, and one of the principal things in features is to be that of the Captain Cassell Seals. Animal authorities give the seal precedence over all other animals of the acquatic family in natural intellect, and the Cassell group have been taught to do many astounding feats, such as the playing of musical instruments, object balancing and juggling—even acrobatic feats are among the many accomplishments of this famous group of deep sea actors.

However, the performing seals form only one of the many features with the Sparks Circus. There will be the Guice family of riders and the Riding Hollis, the Cornallas family of daring girl acrobats, the Flying Earls and Aerial Yorks in mid-air evolutions that are little short of marvellous, the Conners on a threadlike wire and the Ezuma troupe of Royal Japanese artists in oriental feats never before attempted by other performers.

Then there are the Sparks Dancing Horses, ridden by Minnie Thompson and her coterie of lady riders, and included in this display of equine wonders is Caesar, champion high-jumping horse of the world—his record being 7 ft. 4½ inches. Two herds of performing elephants are put through their paces by lady trainers. Of course a circus would not be a circus without a thriller and one fairly gasps when the daring Matoka ascends to the loftiest peak of the tent and does his front and backward slides to the ground, traversing a distance nearly the entire length of the large canvas. And there will be clowns and plenty of them.

Beyond that there will be a parade at 10.30 o'clock the morning of the performance with all cages open to view.

THREATENS MILK SUPPLY

St. John May 31—St. John is in a fair way to be cut off from about five-sixths of its milk supply if the Canadian National Railways management insists on running the suburban trains into this city on daylight schedule.

The milk producers between here and Apohaqule are now obliged to turn out one hour earlier than usual three o'clock in the morning in some sections, to get milk ready for shipment. This, they say, is an unnecessary hardship. They have petitioned the management to place the trains back on the old schedule. Their petition has not been heeded, and they now threaten to cease sending milk to St. John.

The farmers think they are entitled to as much consideration as suburbanites, for whom the daylight schedule was arranged, and their threat is one which will cause the city authorities to act, and that promptly.

Cloudburst Causes Death Of Twenty

Sudden Overflow of the River Lud in England

SOUTH LINCOLNSHIRE, Eng. May 30—Twenty deaths have resulted here so far from the sudden overflow of the small River Lud, running through this town, which is attributed to a cloudburst in the woods nearby on Saturday night. The water spread so rapidly that houses in the low-lying part of the town were immediately engulfed in a rush which carried away bridges, fences, trees and other obstacles.

Most of the people were in their homes taking shelter from the thunderstorm when there came a rush of water three feet deep through the town.

In many cases the weight of the water prevented the opening of doors, or otherwise many persons could have reached a place of safety. Within a short time the entire ground floors of houses were engulfed by the torrent, which was 200 yards wide.

The water swept on its crest portions of demolished cottages, automobiles, waggons, furniture, uprooted trees and the bodies of drowned animals. Bridges crumbled before the rushing floods. So sudden was the approach of the waters that a majority of the deaths occurred during the first moments of the flood, when the lower rooms of houses were swamped. This was particularly true in the lower parts of the town. In the higher parts of the town many persons escaped but only after wading waist-deep through the water.

Hundreds of persons are homeless and many householders have lost most of their belongings.

Tonight the flood victims are estimated at 50. One terrace containing houses was entirely swept away, there being only one survivor.

MARSH ENG. WORKS 22 GRAND TRUNK SHOPS 12

Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds, the Marsh Engineering Works handed the Grand Trunk Shops an unmerciful lacing to the tune of 22 to 12. The M.E.W. were on top nearly all the game and in the 5th, 6th and 8th innings broke loose and scored 18 runs. George Clapper and Atkins were the battery for Marsh and they were invincible. George Clapper was the bright shining star of the game. He struck out fifteen men and had five assists to his credit. At bat he was just as good. In seven times at bat George had seven hits, including a home run, a triple and five doubles. Atkins played a whale of a game, catching six men stealing second. He had the Shops sticking to their bases like they liked them. McEneke on first, Canning on second, Cornell on third and Knott at short completed a fast infield. Locke, Shiner and Rushlow were the outfield but they hadn't much to do. Fowell and Rainbird were the Shops battery and played good ball, especially Fowell. They were given very ragged support. W. Miles was the star of the Shops' team, drawing a home run and scoring four runs. Now that the Marsh team have returned to form, Manager Hickey promises to make it hot for the other teams in the Industrial League. Mr. Angus Buchanan umpired the game in his usual capable manner, being fair and impartial to both teams.

There was a large attendance of spectators at the game. The batteries were:

Pope Expresses Displeasure At Wave Of Crime

Made This Plain in Regard to The Conditions Prevailing in Ireland

LONDON, May 29—Anglo-Irish relations will not be affected by the visit of many prominent Irishmen to Rome in connection with the beatification of Oliver Plunket, first bishop of Armagh, says the Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail. Sean O'Ceallaigh, president of the Irish Parliament, was asked whether the visit of prominent Irishmen in Rome would result in any improvement in relations between their country and England. O'Ceallaigh replied: "None whatever."

Crime in Ireland

"While it would be wrong to say Pope Benedict has departed from his policy of non-interference in the national affairs of Europe," the correspondent writes, "information has been received that he has expressed his pain and displeasure over the continuance of crime in Ireland. If his words have been veiled in diplomatic language, they, nevertheless, have revealed a definite state of mind—that no solution can ever be reached by one party murdering another The Pope is keenly desirous of peace everywhere and if he can in any way bring his moral support into play he will do it. This was actually done in meeting Irish bishops and in receiving Irish civilian pilgrims."

Gave a Reception

president of the Irish Parliament, and president o fthe Irish Parliament, and diplomatic delegate extraordinary of the occasion of the beatification of Oliver Plunket, first bishop of Armagh. Attending the function were Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland; Irish bishops, prominent citizens of that country, students of the Irish College here; Archbishop Hanna, of San Francisco and Rev. Charles O'Hern rector of the American College.

Cardinal Logue in speaking evoked prolonged cheering when he said it was the first time the Irish present had attended a gathering of "the Irish republic." Irish patriotic airs were sung during the reception.

Pope Sends Message

Pope Benedict yesterday received and bade farewell to Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland. The Pontiff requested the cardinal to interpret his sentiments to the cardinal's flock and to convey to them personally the apostolic benediction.

Replying to an address from Cardinal Logue, Pope Benedict referred to the timeliness of the beatification of Oliver Plunket, the first primate of Ireland, and expressed his gratification at having been the instrument of God in the beatification. He wished the happiest future for Ireland and concluded by giving the benediction to Cardinal Logue as the successor to Oliver Plunket, to the Irish episcopacy and all those representing Ireland, "and particularly to my beloved Irish people."

HIGH COST OF GOVERNMENT.

The Drury Government has not shown any signs of burning the midnight oil in an effort to find methods of reducing the high and increasing cost of government of the people, for the people—by the politicians. Considerable time has been spent by the members figuring out a plan to boost their own salaries and draw an extra thousand dollars per session from the public treasury. Premier Drury, himself, has sponsored, against strong opposition, the measure making permanent the clutch on the treasury of all government employees by fixing up superannuation allowances for them. Evidences of economy in administration have been sadly lacking, but there has been great industry apparent in seeking new forms of taxing the people. The favorite form of increased taxation seems to be that of amusements—where it hits the most people least able to bear it. Theatre tickets are taxed up to twenty cents each, every movie ticket is taxed, and now additional taxes are to be levied on theatres, dances, races and all other forms of popular entertainment which will come out of the pockets of the people. Amusement taxes were all right during the war but they can be pushed too far in peace time, and some real move toward reducing the high cost of government would be a refreshing change.

Ontario's new government thus far has shown no signs of being any different from its predecessors.. It can spend money just as fast, or faster, and instead of decreasing expenses has increased them and placed new burdens of taxation on the people. No effort has been made to reduce the price of necessities, and the high hopes entertained by some that a change of rulers would be beneficial show no signs of fulfilment. The first session developed the usual conversational marathon and the weeks were dragged out with the usual pointless debates and time-wasting peculiar to any Government.

If the U. F. O.-Labor Government desires to live it will have to show some signs of progress, some indication of being different from other Governments—active, economical and path-finders, and not mere political blatherskites continually talking to a wearied press gallery.

Here's hoping they show something new and original and beneficial to the people.

A GIANT BATTLE-CRUISER.

The British battle-cruiser Hood, begun in September, 1916, launched in August, 1918, and recently completed, represents many of the latest advances in man-o'-war design and construction. A prominent feature is the "bulge" or "blister" which surrounds the main hull of the ship below the water line and protects it against torpedo attack. The Hood carries eight 15-inch guns, all on the middle line of the vessel, and there are twelve 5.5-inch guns, four 4-inch anti-aircraft guns, and six torpedo tubes. The propelling machinery consists of four distinct sets of turbines, each driving a separate shaft through gearing. Together they develop the huge total of 144,000 horse power. For various auxiliary purposes there are 360 electric motors, and some of the pumps are of the submersible type which operate under water. Nearly three thousand incandescent electric lamps are used on board, in addition to electric fires and cooking apparatus. On the trial trips the turbines developed 157,000 shaft horse power, and propelled the vessel at a speed of 32 knots.

Brantford Expositor

Rev. Dr. Sedgwick, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, in an address to the Board of Commerce campaign luncheon, said that there were citizens who just lived, some of who lived neutral, others who lived on the city, and those who lived for the city. That is a thought-provoking statement.

A LAUGH OR TWO

At the ample shrine of pleasure
You have worshipped well and long
On this day of so-called leisure,
Yet you feel there's something wrong.

Blase is your air and jaded;
Sabbath hours have lost their zest;
Utter ennui has invaded
Every corner of your chest.

Sport is shorn of all its glamor;
Motoring proves no more a lure;
So you come to me and clamor
For a speedy psychic cure.

Well, my friend, if fresh sensation
Is the object of your search,
And you want a consultation
My advice is, go to church.

THEPOET'S CORNER

THE PLOUGHMAN

Sorrow the Poughman goes his way,
Across, across my heart he drives,
And turns and breaks its stubborn clay,
And finds my soul that hidden lay,
And leaves it bare to take his knives,
To meet the tempest and the gleam
That falls, like blessing, after rain,
While Sorrow passed with his team
Whose names are Loneliness and Pain.
All clear and open to the sky
Receptive lies the broken sod,
I shall not count the cost too high,
Nor grudge the suffering, nor cry
For future reckonings with God,
Nor mourn the grass where flowers were found,
The small gay fieldflowers children find
And love, if from that harrowed ground
Some good grain springs to feed mankind.

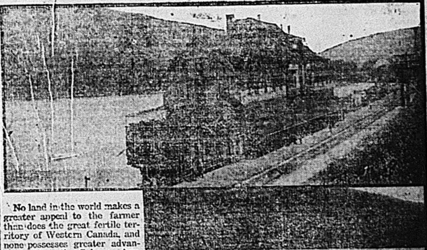
The Salmon Arm Valleys



(1) The Hotel Sicamous stands along the C. P. R. on Shuswap Lake. (2) Boating on Shuswap Lake.

No land in the world makes a greater appeal to the farmer than does the great fertile territory of Western Canada, and none possesses greater advantages than the Salmon Arm country in South Central British Columbia. Lovers of nature and her wonderful works, cannot resist the charm of the Salmon Arm valleys and the Shuswap Lake. The clear, glorious stretches of water, now smooth and tranquil, save for the occasional leap of the gamey salmon or trout, now dashed into a million wavelets as the breeze from the hills strikes down across its surface; the graceful, undulating regularity of the majestic green-clad mountains; the deep, fertile stretches of the rich valleys, broken by cultivated fields and peaceful meadows, combine to form a picture of contentment and prosperity that one does not forget. The floor of the valleys consists of a rich black soil, relic of the days when beaver dams transformed the valleys for miles into lakes. The rich, black soil is frequently varied by a light, sandy loam and offers unlimited possibilities in the growing of special products, such as celery, melons, corn, root crops. There are heavy cuttings of hay, large yields of wheat and oats. Dairying pays handsomely, the rich pastures affording excellent grazing all summer, while abundant forage crops provide the necessary food supply in winter. The railroad hotels and dining cars purchase much of the milk and cream.

Another phase of agriculture that is most profitable is market-gardening which can be carried on in the fields of the fertile valleys and on the table lands, to the best possible advantage. Potatoes yield as high as ten tons per acre. Tomatoes, cabbage, peas and all standard vegetables are largely grown, and the grower can depend upon quick shipment and prompt settlement through the farmers exchange. Another industry of importance is the poultry business, the section and climate being ideal for the purpose. There is an added attraction in the fact that grain and all food supplies for the flock may be grown on the home ground.

Amid soft scenic surroundings, the valleys look like a bit of Ontario, with their general air of settled prosperity and the face of nature has a kindly look with fertile forms and gardens.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Stacey Wallen, first mate of the bark Upolo, in the Java sea, is the sole survivor of the crew, all victims of yellow fever. Ting Wah, Chinese sailor, last man to die, tells Wallen he and five other Chinamen were sent aboard by "Drink-House Sam," notorious character of Singapore, to kill Wallen. The latter recalls an incident of his childhood which seems connected with the confession. While delirious, Wallen enters in the ship's log the announcement of his death and abandons the vessel in a small boat.

CHAPTER II.—Wallen's boat drifts to the island of Arru and a Scottish trader there, MacKnight, cares for him. Learning that a ship is in port on the other side of the island, twenty miles away, Wallen, though unfit for the task, determines to reach it. He sets out but falls exhausted on the trail. There he is found by a man and woman who are from the ship he was trying to reach, Mott, first mate, and Helen MacKay, a passenger. They convey him to the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—The ship proves to be a small tramp steamer, the Monleigh, Capt. Layton. Layton tells Wallen the vessel had been chartered by Wallen's father to find him, the father knowing his son to be in grave danger because of a long-standing feud between the elder Wallen and a notorious pirate, Ram Gulab Singh. Laynton also informs him of the death of his father, explaining that the fatality was believed to be an accident. Wallen instantly associates his father's death with the Chinaman's confession on the Upolo. He takes over the charter of the vessel.

"There was a bottle of oil, a cleaning rag, and a wire swabbing brush on the floor. And"—Laynton poured himself another glass from the bottle, gulped it down, and wiped his lips with the back of his hand—"well, I'm trying to give it to you in a few words—we buried him at sea of course."

Wallen turned his back and stared out of one of the forward portholes down onto the dirty foredeck. Was the man lying? Was he telling the truth? That his father had chartered the Monleigh and sailed with her—yes.

But that his death was accidental—the background of his father's life—the recent attempt upon his own life! His brain was working in flashes. This man Laynton repelled him.

An accident—never! There was no room for doubt—"never go to the East"—it was not an accident—his father had been murdered on this ship. And then suddenly he swallowed hard.

It was to save him that his father had chartered the Monleigh and come East; for, according to that list of ports, his father somehow had been in touch with his movements, somehow had known the danger he was in, and, trying to avert it, had been murdered himself.

A cold, merciless passion swept upon him. Someone on this ship was the murderer. Was it this man here? What was at the bottom of it all? It was a long arm of vengeance that reached to that gray stone house in California, that reached to Singapore, to this ship, to that sweltering, plague-stricken bark where, strangely enough, he alone had lived!

And now the score was a very heavy one to pay—his father's life! Well—his eyes narrowed—he would pay it!

"Did my father bring a native servant with him—a man named Gunga?" he asked dispassionately.

"No," the other replied. "He was alone."

Wallen nodded. "What else is there to tell me?"

"Not much—but what you can guess," Laynton said. "I ran down through the Makassar strait and made for the nearest port on that list—Pobi here. Your father had paid me for the three months, and if I say it myself, when I make a bargain I stick to it. If I could find you inside the three months I was going to do it.

"I don't know what your father was so anxious about, though I understood, of course, that he chartered me because out here, with you touching at those trading stations, he couldn't reach you by mail or cable; but I made sure it was something mighty important and I thought you'd know what it was."

It was almost an interrogation, put naturally, nonchalantly enough—save for a trace of eagerness in the man's tones that was not entirely disguised.

"I haven't the slightest idea," said Wallen smoothly.

"You haven't?" Laynton's eyes for once fixed steadfastly. "Well, that's queer! A man don't go to the expense of chartering a ship like this without a pretty good reason, and—"

"I dare say my father knew," suggested Wallen quietly. Then briskly: "The question now is: What are you going to do, captain?"

"Why?" said Captain Laynton, "I thought I'd made that plain enough. When I make a contract I keep it. It's up to you, Mr. Wallen. There's still say, a matter of two months before that charter expires, and the Monleigh's yours until it does—in your father's place. That's square, isn't it?"

Wallen hesitated thoughtfully.

On the face of it it was both square and honorable. He began to wonder if he had misjudged the man.

And yet, instinctively, in spite of that, there seemed something specious even in the honesty that appeared to underlie the other's motives. He had reason enough to distrust every soul on board a ship where he was morally certain his father had been murdered! Two months—if he accepted the captain's offer. If he had only something to work on!

Something! Yes, he had something. Drink-House Sam of Singapore!

Captain Laynton spoke again:

"Look here!" he said in almost hurt tones. "I can't make you any fairer proposition than that. Can I?"

"No," said Wallen instantly, his mind made up. "And I'll accept your offer, captain, and thank you heartily for it."

"Good!" returned Laynton promptly. "Well, with that settled, what's the sailing orders? We've got steam up and can get away any minute you say the word."

Wallen walked to the cabin door and opened it.

"Then by all means get away at once!" he laughed easily. "And"—he hesitated—"let's see! I guess you'd better shape up for Singapore. Yes, call it Singapore for a starter."

"Right!" answered Laynton. "Singapore it is! But here— Wait a minute, Mr. Wallen."

KINGSTON MAN'S BODY FOUND IN ANGLIN'S BAY

Kingston, May 28.—The body of William Lambert, who disappeared on the night of May 8th, was discovered floating in Anglin's Bay shortly after 12 o'clock by Horace Ward, and employe of S. Anglin and Company, who was paddling in a boat with some boys. They got the body from the water and telephoned to the Police Station and Constable Naylon responded. The latter identified the body as that of the missing man and sent for Coroner W. Sands, who decided that an inquest would not be necessary. The late William Lambert left his home, 443 Princess street at 8 p.m. Saturday, May 8, and was last seen at 11.30 p.m. He was 36 years of age and is survived by his wife and three small children.

EDITH GOULD ELOPES

Philadelphia, May 29—Edith C. Gould, daughter of George Jay Gould and Carol L. Wainwright, both of New York, were married at Elkton, the Maryland Gretna Green, by the town's Presbyterian minister. The bride gave her age at 18 and the groom said he was 21.

Young Wainwright is a son of Stuyvesant Wainwright and a direct descendant of Peter Stuyvesant, the founder of New York.

No Reason to Elope

New York, May 29—Confirmation of the marriage of Edith C. Gould and Carol L. Wainwright at Elkton, Md., today was given here at the Fifth avenue home of the young woman's parents. A telegram had been received telling of the marriage. The family said there was no particular reason for an elopement.

BY AEROPLANE TO PARIS.

A distinctly novel attraction has now been provided in the C.P.R. office windows at Charing Cross, an attraction which has been much admired by the crowds who have gathered to make inspection. The fine windows usually devoted to the exhibition of things Canadian is being occupied by an excellent model aerodrome of the Aircraft Transport and Travel, Limited, at Hendon, together with scientifically accurate models of various types of aeroplanes and airships.

Such a display in a railway and shipping office may seem rather unusual at first sight, but is really a sign of the times, also marking much enterprise on the part of the Dominion Express Company of Canada. Realising the importance of maintaining a really "Express" service, if its name is still to be justified, the Dominion Express Company, the premier Express Company in Canada, made arrangements to act as Passenger and Parcels Agents for the Aircraft Transport and Travel Limited on their London-Paris daily air service.

It is thus possible for either passengers or parcels to be booked for conveyance by aeroplane to or from London and Paris through any of the Dominion Express Company's offices in Europe, and these, in addition to London are to be found in important cities such as Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol and Paris.

The advantages of this arrangement are many, for the Dominion Express, holding as it does the exclusive right of shipping Express parcels over the entire C.P.R. system, as agents for the Aeroplane Service can ensure that an Express package scheduled to catch a certain ship actually reached its destination in Canada in the shortest possible space of time. As time is money nowadays, more than ever it was, it is easy to realise what an important adjunct an Air Service is to an Express Company.

The time-table shows that only 2¼ hours is occupied on the journey to or from London and Paris—urgent letters are carried at 2 shillings and 6 pence per ounce over the ordinary letter rate.

Parcels for delivery in Paris on the same day have to be handed in at the London office of the Dominion Express Company, 62-65, Charing Cross, London, S.W., before 10.30 a.m. The parcels rates range from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per lb. according to quantity, while special rates are quoted for large and regular consignments. The single fare for passengers is 15 guineas which includes a car to convey the passenger to Hounslow, the starting point. The Dominion Express Company's officials at Charing Cross have every reason to believe that a large proportion of Canadian visitors to Europe this year will take advantage of the ease with which it is now possible to book seats for a real flying visit to the Continent through their office. In fact, if they so wish, a motor car can pick them up in Trafalgar Square, and in under three hours they can be walking along the Champs Elysees.

CLEARS LAND TITLE CLOUDED 100 YEARS

St. Catharines, May 28—An interesting find has been made by the Welland County lawyer reminiscent of the last war between the United States and Canada, over a hundred years ago. During the war in December, 1813, the United States army captured Niagara-on-the-Lake, then the capital of Canada, it will be remembered and burned the town, but has something to do with the story.

A lawyer was in the Welland Registry office looking up the records of a certain farm in Stamford. This farm as given to its first owners by the British Crown over a century ago. The owner then twenty years later sold it to another party and the deed of the transfer disappeared and there has been a cloud on the title of the property for a century.

The lawyer, by means of his search, has been able to clear up the missing links in connection with the deed by producing the duplicate deed made April 9th, 1804, and registered two days later at the Niagara Court House with the signature of John Powell, registrar, who was registrar at that time.

After the war of 1912-14 was over the Canada Government, wishing to repair what damage the Americans had done, advertised that all parties who had registered deeds of property in this district should bring them in and have new copies made for registration the original copies having been burned with the court house and government buildings at Niagara. Evidently the owner of the Stamford farm had never seen the advertisement for there is no record of his deed in any registry office and now, after a hundred years, damage done in this one instance will be remedied and a clear title be given the present owner of the farm.

PREMIER DRURY DEFIES PROTESTS OF FARMERS

Toronto, May 28.—Emboldened by letters from home, and inspired by the militant challenges of U.F.O. headquarters, the opponents of the civil service superannuation bill girded up their loins and went forth to battle yesterday.

It was not much of a battle at that. The fight itself lasted but a few minutes. When it was all over the Drury Government was still in the field, the superannuation bill had received third reading, and the routed Opposition was nursing its wounds and trying to figure out how some three dozen U. F. O. members had managed to resist the siren song to which they had fallen victims.

That there would be a fight upon third reading was a foregone conclusion. From the outset there has been opposition in the U. F. O. ranks to the superannuation bill, and the action of J. J. Morrison, U.F.O. secretary, in sending out a circular letter to the local clubs urging them to bring pressure to bear upon their members to defeat the bill, fanned the flame. The Government, confident that it could depend upon the support of the majority of its followers, refused to yield an inch. Before the opening of the House yesterday, the Premier and his colleagues met the Coalition members in caucus and received a further assurance of support. Mr. Drury was not, therefore, greatly worried when he rose to move the third reading of the bill.

WHIG GETS JUDGMENT IN NEWSPRINT CASE

Kingston, May 29.—The British Whig has been awarded judgment for damages against the E. B. Eddy Co., paper manufacturers, based on a shortage of newsprint supplied under contract, the amount of shortage being about 142 tons. The Whig sued for $5,221.

The action was argued at the recent sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario here. The Whig was represented by Mr. A. B. Cunningham.

LUTHERAN MINISTER ALLEGED INDISCREET

Fond Du Lac, Wis., May 29—Rev. G. C. Gerlach, pastor of the Lutheran Church at Rosedale, a nearby village, branded as lies a score of sensational charges made by witnesses called in the $10,000 slander suit he has brought against Frank Gruett, president of the Rosedale Telephone Company.

The minister charged Gruett with writing letters about him which have damaged his reputation.

Witnesses for the defence charged that:

Rev. Mr. Gerlach had "acted up before three old maids in the Rosendale post office."

He had taken Laura Gransee, the village telephone operator, riding in his new Ford, during which time she sat on his knee.

When the minister and the girl alighted from a train after a trip and he was asked if she was then his wife and she had said "sh-h-h."

Miss Gransee gave witness an exhibition of how the minister held her on his knee, it was testified. He is married.

He advised Mrs. Herman Stindt, when she was ill to "take a drink of brandy."

He came to Fond Du Lac for the single purpose of having his fortune told.

The case has gone to the jury.

MAN AND WOMAN ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Guelph, May 28.—A young man named Colonel Loghrin, who resides in the Township of Maryborough and Mrs. Nellie Beisel from the same place are held by the local police, both facing a charge of murder. It is charged that in July 1917, they caused the death of a three-weeks'-old child by throwing it into a well at Loghrin's farm, in Maryborough Township. The murder charge was read out at the Police Court this morning, but as Acting Crown Attorney Jeffrey was not ready to proceed, the hearing was adjourned until Wednesday, June 2nd. Bail has been refused.

STOP AUTO SPEEDERS WITH NAIL PLANKS

Athens, May 29.—Policemen of this city have an effective and rather unique method of curbing speeding autoists. Officers posted along the principal streets carry planks studded with long sharp nails, and when they see a car approaching at a rate they believe is excessive, they drop the plank in front of the machine. If the car is speeding it cannot be stopped in time, and as a result its tires are punctured, but if the machine is proceeding at a reasonable pace it can be stopped before the plank is reached. The chief of police finds the system is cheaper than maintaining a motorcycle squad, and has the additional advantage of making the capture of speeders comparatively easy.

Montreal Woman Says Tanlac Did More for Her Than She Ever Dreamed It Could

It is of the first importance, after the drain of a severe illness on our physical resources, that the spent capital be replaced as soon as possible. The following statement shows how Tanlac accomplished just that in the case of Mrs Albert Gratton, residing at 607 Evelyn Street, Verdun, Montreal, when seen at her home by the Tanlac representative recently, Mrs Gratton said:

"After having the Spanish 'flu' I was in a very weak condition. I simply had no appetite and my digestion was so bad that I had difficulty in retaining what little I did eat. It was as much as I could do to prepare meals for my husband and the children and I just had to let everything else go. The housework suffered in consequence, but I could not help it. I had to spend most of the day lying down and often I used to think my heart would stop beating altogether. My feet and hands were continually cold and my complexion was sallow and poor. Rheumatic pains kept me from sleeping at night and I got into such a nervous condition that even the children worried me.

"I was in a truly deplorable state when I began taking Tanlac. I have taken five bottles altogether and it has done more for me than I ever thought possible. I soon had a good appetite and began to eat heartily. I rapidly got stronger and now I am able to do all my work without getting tired. I no longer suffer from cold hands or feet and my complexion is clear and rosy. The rheumatic pains have left me and I enjoy perfectly restful sleep. My nerves are all right again and in fact I am better in every way. I consider Tanlac a most excellent medicine and one that should be in every household."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's drug store and by the leading druggists in every town.

Many Attractions For Veterans Day

Thursday, June 3, Will Be a Big Day at Belleville—Horse Races and Other Strong Attractions.

A strong attraction at the annual celebration of the Great War Veterans at Belleville on Thursday, June 3, will be the horse races, for which purses aggregating $1500 have been hung up. Many fast horses are here already and more are on the way, ensuring close and exciting contests..

Baseball fans keenly anticipate the game which will be played between the Senators of Ottawa, a top-notch team, and the Belleville G.T.R. team, champions of Ontario. This promises to be the best game of ball ever witnessed in this district. In addition to the star attractions mentioned there will be a vaudeville program in front of the grand stand, which promises to be very entertaining. Morning events will include a monster street parade and the turning of the first sod for the new Soldiers' Memorial Home at Riverside Park by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes. In the evening a big variety show will be given at Griffin's Theatre followed by a grand ball at the Armouries which will fittingly close the interesting program of Belleville's Biggest Day?

HIGH PROFITS ON NEW YORK VEGETABLES

New York, May 29—The Department of Justice has promised that in the next twenty-four hours drastic action will be taken to end profiteering in perishable food by retailers.

Three squads from the office of Riley, chief of the "flying squadron," will round up merchants who have maintained high prices, despite the lowest wholesale market in months.

In the course of investigation made by Feedral agents yesterday, twenty stores in different sections of the city were visited. In seventeen of them it was found that the difference between the wholesale and retail price of cucumbers, cabbages, potatoes and onions ranged from 64 per cent. to 420 per cent.

The following table represents the retail situation as it was found in the majority of cases:

Cucumbers, each, wholesale price, 5 cents; retail price, 8 cents; gain of 420 per cent. Cabbage, per lb., wholesale price, 2.8 cents; retail price, 10 cents, gain of 275 per cent. Texas onions, lb., wholesale price 4.2 cents; retail price 12.5 cents; gain of 197 per cent. New potatoes, lb., wholesale price 3.4 cents; retail price 13.8 cents; gain of 64 per cent.

The above figures are based on yesterday's top market quotations for best grades of cucumbers, $1.50 a basket of seventy-five; cabbages, $2.50 a barrel of ninety pounds. Texas onions, $2 a crate of forty-eight pounds, and new potatoes, $14 a barrel of 165 lbs.

Ontario House Ends Its Labors

Longest Session of Legislature on Record Comes to a Close

TORONTO, May 31.—Preceded by a shower of compliments exchanged by the various parties in the Ontario House, the Legislature came to a close at ten minutes to midnight last night after one of the longest sessions on record. The spirit of the closing hours was more or less of a holiday nature, and it was quite evident from the compliments which were traded from party to party that the members will go back to their homes with a feeling that it has been a sort of a get-together session. Judging from the nature of the remarks of the Premier and of the leaders of the Opposition parties, all four parties are pretty well pleased with the work of the others, as the opinion was freely expressed that all had done their best to do the work of the Province with the least amount of battling.

Some of the private U.F.O. members gave short addresses expressing their appreciation of the assistance given by the other sides.

The last Act to receive the attention of the House was a bill introduced by Hon. Walter Rollo, Minister of Labor, covering up certain technical omissions which had been made in the amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act. The official prorogation will be held on Friday next.

TESTING MARRIAGE LAWS.

Montreal, May 29.—An important judgment dealing with the marriage laws of Quebec and the extent to which ecclesiastical annulments can govern civil cases will be delivered by Mr. Justice Bruneau on the petition of Simon Kaplan, a Priest of the tribe of Levi, who asks for the quashing of his marriage to Bessie Goldstein, on the ground that she was a divorced woman. According to the rules of the Hebrew Church, a priest of the tribe of Levi cannot marry a divorced woman.

The decision of Judge Bruneau is awaited with great interest in view of the fact that the Tremblay-Depatie case, in which the marriage of second cousins without a dispensation was annulled first by the ecclesiastical authorities and afterward by the courts, comes up before the Privy Council next month. The hearing of the appeal was postponed during the war.

BRUTAL MURDER BY CHICAGO GUNMAN

Chicago, May 29—Eugene Geary, alleged gunman and labor slugger, recently acquitted on a charge of murder, was sought today in connection with what police termed one of the most cold-blooded murders in recent years.

Harry J. Reckas, saloon keeper was shot and killed in a South Side saloon late last night as he was waiting with his lawyer to discuss with James O'Brien, another saloon keeper, the arrest of two men, who are alleged to have victimized them of thousands of dollars through sales of colored water represented as whiskey.

As Reckas was about to leave the saloon a man identified by witnesses as Geary, entered and, walking up to Reckas shot him through the body.

Three months ago when Geary was acquitted of the murder of Leonard Tripple, a taxicab driver, Maclay Hoyne, State's attorney, declared the verdict was "a gross miscarriage of justice," and said the death warrant of some other man had been signed.

Geary was an associate of "Moss" Enright, Labor leader and gunman, and Peter and "Dutch" Gentleman, all three of whom were killed as a result of gunmen's quarrels and labor feuds.
